THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
LIBRARY
780.5
MS
v.69

Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2016

https://archive.org/details/musicalcourierwe69unse

The pages which are missing were removed because they were advertisements

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 1 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 8, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1789

Photo copyright by B. Frank Puffer, New York.

PHILIP SPOONER

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

CLIFFORD DEMAREST, F. A. G. O.,
ORGANIST—COMPOSER.
Recitals—Instruction.
Church of The Messiah, 34th St. & Park Av., N.Y.C.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
BOICE
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y. Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq. || Pouch Gallery, B'klyn Tel. 6400 Prospect

---

EUGENIE PAPPENHEIM,
THE CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Culture in All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101 W. 78th St., New York City.
Telephone: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
68th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
'Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.
Special Summer Course.

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training. Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
Will teach during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano.
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1911. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West, Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York.
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet.
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th St.

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Street
Complete musical education given to students from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR.
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT.
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza.

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMOND,
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Correct Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MS
v.69

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 1. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 8, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1789.

FIRE DESTROYS SCENERY OF MOSCOW OPERA HOUSE.

Wagner Decorations and Other Sceneries Ruined by Real "Feuerzauber"—The Art of Russian Dance—Kurt Schindler Visits Moscow.

Moscow, May 20, 1914.

One of the most beautiful sights of Moscow always has been the Theatre Esplanade, with the large building around it and a lovely garden with fountains and flowers in the middle of it. The Imperial Opera House with its row of columns and a symbolic statue on its top appears in the full of its splendid beauty when viewed from the garden. The Imperial Theatre for drama, on the right, is of ordinary architecture belonging to former times. But the Moscow people like it, as Russian dramatic art found there its artistic development and rose to the heights it has attained at present.

On May 16 a fire broke out near the Esplanade. This was an event which stirred up the population of the town to tremendous excitement. Crowds hastened to witness the conflagration. The burning house was the Dramatic Theatre, on the right of the Imperial Opera House. In a few minutes the fire spread beyond the building in all directions. Thanks to the efforts of the firemen the stage and the hall of the Dramatic Theatre were saved, but the beautifully painted settings for operas and ballets of the Imperial Opera House, nearly 180 pieces of decorative art, were burned to ashes. The loss amounts to about a half million of roubles ($250,000). Among the paintings were works by illustrious artists.

For next season the repertoire of operas and ballets will have to be much curtailed, as the new stage scenery cannot be ready in so short a time. The Wagner decorations were among those lost. The Moscow public will feel deeply and for a long time the effects of the disaster caused by the fire.

Russian Dancing Art.

The love of dancing lives in the hearts of men. Every soul experience can be expressed by rhythmic movements of the body, by gestures and the measured steps of the dance. Today dancing must be placed in the same rank with other branches of art. While Prof. Jacques Dalcroze and Isadora Duncan started this renaissance of the dance, our Russian dancers really spread it all over the world and set the nations to posturing rhythmically and to twinkling their toes gracefully.

Russian Dancing Schools.

We have splendid dancing schools in St. Petersburg and Moscow. Besides the Imperial Ballet School there are several private institutions of the choreographic art, among them that of Lydia Richard-Nelidowa requires especial commendation. She was an eminent dancer at the Imperial Ballet herself, but now is retired and devotes herself entirely to teaching.

The great number of pupils at her school, and moreover a long list of those waiting their turn for admission, is the best proof of the satisfactory result Mme. Nelidowa has attained with her pedagogics. She has become more and more convinced that no scheme of teaching dancing can be approved which does not obey the laws that govern all good teaching. She possesses the qualities of patience and perseverance and is the moderate reformer, who continues steadily and modestly the search for a better way so as to help her pupils along the road in a kindly and sympathetic spirit.

In April Mme. Nelidowa organized a seance of dances by her pupils on the stage of the Theatre of Solodownikow. She illustrated the technical side of the training of dances, and showed step by step the artistic development of the gestures and manners of moving. The pretty young girls were dressed in light costumes of a delicate rose color and made a beautiful picture on the stage. The audience could easily follow the whole scale of the technics of dancing and understand that her pupils are on the right road to perfection.

As a wind up they had for the close of the evening a "Dionysian Festival" in the old Grecian style, a very interesting and beautiful spectacle.

Kurt Schindler in Russia.

The musical phenomenon of Americans seeking music in Russia is again represented in a visit by Kurt Schindler, director and conductor of the Schola Cantorum in New York. An astonishing thing is his intimate acquaintance with the music of such masters as Rimsky-Korsakoff, Borodin, Moussourgsky, Rachmaninoff, Gretshaninoff and others. His present visit resulted in Mr. Schindler's securing much new material. He attended church services of the Synodal Choir and of the famous choir of Alexander Archangelsky. Gretshaninoff's cantatas were sung, among other things.

Russian folksongs seemed to interest the visitor especially, and no wonder, for they are extremely beautiful. One feels the freshness of the fields and woods in them. The melancholy character of the Slavonian tribes enhances the beauty of Russian melodies. Many of us met Mr. Schindler and felt great satisfaction and happiness to find in him an enthusiastic adherent of Russian art and music.

Ellen von Tideböhl.

DIONYSIUS FESTIVAL PERFORMED BY PUPILS OF MME. NELIDOW'S DANCING SCHOOL.

THE FIRE AT THE IMPERIAL THEATRE IN MOSCOW.

THE THEATRE ESPLANADE. THE CORNER WHERE THE FIRE BROKE OUT IS MARKED (X) IN THE PHOTOGRAPH.

PUPILS OF MME. NELIDOW'S DANCING SCHOOL ON THE STAGE OF THE THEATRE SOLODOWNIKOW.

Another London problem of the moment is "Can the capital support two opera seasons?" The answer seems to be in the negative. The success of the "Lane" is clearly purchased at the expense of the "Garden"—and vice versa. —London Bystander.

There was some magnificent ensemble singing by the Sydney (Australia) Philharmonic Society choir at the Bach Passion Music concert on April 8. Mr. Bradley led his little army in triumph to the attack.—Sydney and Melbourne Theatre Magazine.

WELLINGTON NOTES.

Cherniavskys to Tour United States—Nordica Had Been in Wellington—Elman Also to Be Heard There.

Wellington, New Zealand, May 22, 1914.

Away down here in the Southern Pacific the people insist on taking the MUSICAL COURIER as their guide, philosopher and friend on all things appertaining to music. Our latest musical visitors were the Cherniavskys, a highly talented trio of young Russians. Six years ago they appeared in London and on the continent, and just before they left for Australia, New Zealand and the East for this tour, the Telegraph noted that they were among the few prodigies, who had made good as mature artists, and yet the youngest, Mischel, cellist, is now only twenty years of age. The other two are Leo, violinist, and Jan, pianist; each one is a complete artist, endowed with the rich Slavonic temperament, and finely equipped technically. To meet them they are still boys, boys of irrepressible high spirits, but with boundless ambition and tireless energy. They still practise four hours a day, and hate to be more than a ten minute walk from their instruments, as they are subject to new ideas as to the interpretations of the works comprised in their repertoire, and once they have that idea they cannot rest until they have tried it out.

This was true when they were engaged in watching the Masri children dive for pennies off the bridge at Whakarwarewa, near Rotorua, in this fair country. They had seen the burning earth, the boiling mud holes, and the hot rivers of that dreadful yet fascinating show place and were admiring the grace and dexterity of the girl divers, when Leo had a new idea respecting a reading of a certain passage in one of the Mendelssohn trios, which they play exquisitely. Without more ado he informed his brothers, and back they went to the hotel at Rotorua, and began practice on the trio.

The Cherniavsky boys are Jewish natives of Odessa, in southern Russia. They are touring the British colonies down this way with Maud Allan, the gifted American nature dancer. The combination is a thoroughly delightful one, and the box office receipts are large. I write you this because the Cherniavskys have received a very good offer to tour the United States next season, and will most likely accept. They have toured here, India and the East twice and South Africa once, and everywhere they have been hailed as artists of exceptional ability.

WELLINGTON MOURNS MME. NORDICA'S DEATH.

We were all grieved to hear of the death of Lillian Nordica at Manila. She had visited Wellington only a few weeks before she left for Australia and the East, and had made many friends. She was accompanied to Java by Romayne Simmons, accompanist, and Franklin Holding, violinist. Paul Dufault, the French-Canadian tenor, remained behind in Australia, and made good as a star in his own right under the management of Frederic Shipman.

ELMAN TO VISIT AUSTRALIA.

By the way, the latter manager is handling Mischa Elman, the wonder violinist, who is to visit Australia and New Zealand during the months of August and September.

HARCUS PLIMMER.

A GROUP OF RUSSIAN DANCERS (FROM THE THEATRE MAGAZINE).
(1) Mme. Vassilieva. (2) Mme. Sobolèva. (3) Mme. Vassilieva. (4) Mmes. Gontcharova and Vlassova. (5) Mmes. Fokina and Fedorova.

Thibaud's Next Visit.

Among Jacques Thibaud's most successful appearances on his American tour last season—a tour which led to an irresistible demand for his return—were his joint appearances with Harold Bauer. The French violinist has long counted Bauer among his warmest admirers, and the perfect sympathy with which the two great artists played made their joint engagements events of uncommon interest.

Shortly before Thibaud and Bauer sailed for America, a recital was given jointly in London, and the English critics were lavish in their praise.

Referring to Thibaud's playing on this occasion, the London Telegraph termed him "a violinist with few if any rivals," adding, "He plays inimitably as regards both tone and sentiment, his work revealing incomparable ease, purity and accuracy." The Star referred to the performance as "splendidly virile, with moments of extraordinary beauty," while the Westminster Gazette commended both performers in terms of unqualified praise.

The London Times was especially enthusiastic over Thibaud's interpretation of the great chaconne of Bach, stating: "It was wonderfully played, with a depth of tone and force of phrase which were truly enjoyable."

Bauer's limited visit to America this fall, and the fact that his tour is already practically booked, will preclude joint appearances with Thibaud, a fact which many admirers of the two artists will regret. The demand for Thibaud's individual appearances, however, is so pronounced that he, too, will be kept almost constantly employed during his American stay. He will be heard with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the Philharmonic Society and similar organizations in the East and West, and will be heard in recital the length and breadth of the country.

JUNE MUSIC IN FORT WORTH.

Harmony Club and Local Orchestra Give Final Concerts—Recitals of Interest—Local Pianist Composes New Songs.

Fort Worth, Texas, June 22, 1914.

One of the most brilliant musical affairs of the past season was the closing musicale of the Harmony Club, an annual event complimentary to the associate members and friends of the club. The spacious auditorium of the beautiful Majestic Theatre was filled to its capacity for the occasion and a most meritorious program was given. According to the established custom, only club members appear on these programs and the numbers given on this occasion proved that the membership includes sufficient talent to justify such a policy. The opening number, a sonata for violin and piano, by Carl Venth, the club's director, was enthusiastically received. Mr. Venth played the violin score, with Mrs. F. B. Lary at the piano. Mrs. Lary is a highly accomplished and pleasing pianist, having studied with Mrs. MacFarland, of New York, and later with Gabrilowitsch. Her work is always of a high order. Marion Douglas, appeared as piano soloist playing the "Rigoletto" paraphrase, Chopin waltz in E minor and "The Maiden's Wish," Chopin-Liszt. Miss Douglas has received favorable mention on so many occasions by the MUSICAL COURIER correspondent that it is only necessary to say that her playing was, as usual, excellent. It is a source of pride to Fort Worth that both Mrs. Lary and Miss Douglas received their fundamental training from the late Wilbur MacDonald, an honored teacher of this city. Mrs. Frank Morris, as contralto soloist, sang a Rossini aria from "La Donna del Lago." Her beautiful rich voice and gracious personality make her a pleasing singer. Much interest centered in the rendition of the cantata, "Myth Voices," by the Club chorus of fifty voices under the direction of Carl Venth. "Myth Voices" was written by Mr. Venth as a song cycle for four voices, but he has rearranged it for the Harmony Club as a cantata for ladies' voices with soprano and contralto solos. The chorus deserves great praise for the excellent singing of this rather difficult work. Under the able direction of Mr. Venth the balance of tone, clear enunciation, and beautiful shading were indeed commendable. The soloists were Mrs. W. C. Bryant and Mrs. W. D. Smith, sopranos, and Mrs. H. M. Brindley and Martha Lightfoot, contraltos. Without exception the solos were most capably handled, the club feeling a very justifiable pride in the work of its splendid singers.

This musicale marked the close of a most successful year's work during which the Harmony Club has proved its right to consideration as an important factor in the musical and civic life of Fort Worth. The Artists Concert Series, begun by this club several seasons past, has been placed on a broader and firmer basis, the artists presented this season including Frances Alda with La Forge and Casini, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Mischa Elman and Oscar Seagle. The three club concerts have been of high standard, while the regular work has made splendid progress. The active membership numbers seventy-five, with three departments, choral, piano and voice, while this season's associate membership has reached over five hundred. At the recent election of officers, Mrs. J. F. Lyons was made president for the eleventh consecutive term with associate officers as follows: first vice-president, Mrs. R. I. Merrill; second vice-president, Mrs. W. B. Tyer; recording secretary, Helen Bowman; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Frank Morris; treasurer, Mrs. E. Fechner; librarian, Mrs. H. L.

(Continued on page 19.)

JUNE RECITALS IN [illegible] CITY.

Many Interesting Recitals Indicate High Musical Standard—Organists Form Association.

Kansas City, Mo., June 19, 1914.

This is the season of pupils' recitals, and judging by the number and the high quality of programs presented, Kansas City must be very much of a musical city.

Ida Simmons presented Gertrude Shackelford in a piano recital, Saturday afternoon.

Sarah Ellen Barns presented Elizabeth Nisbet in a piano recital, Monday evening.

Anna St. John presented six pupils in a piano recital Tuesday evening.

Margaret Fowler Forbes presented her violin pupils Tuesday evening at All Souls' Church.

William H. Lieb, our veteran voice teacher and singer, gave two pupils' programs during the week at the Rockwell Home in Marlborough Heights. For more than thirty years Mr. Lieb has been an active musician, both as a singer and teacher.

Elizabeth Fry presented a long program by her piano pupils at the Y. W. C. A. Auditorium, Wednesday evening.

ASSOCIATION OF ORGANISTS FORMED.

Kansas City has a new organization called "The Kansas City Association of Organists." It promises much of pleasure and benefit to all members. Through its activity the public library has already added a library of organ music. Programs are to be given monthly in various churches by members of the club, after which informal discussions of interest to artists and musicians generally will follow.

Harriet Barse, Helen Kittle, Amy Winning, Hans C. Feil, Alfred G. Hubach and Edward Kreiser have contributed to programs during the past year.

The officers for the coming year are: Lawrence W. Robbins, president; Franklin P. Fish, vice-president; Harriet E. Barse, second vice-president; Alfred G. Hubach, secretary-treasurer; Edith Chapman, Hans Feil, committee.

GENEVE LICHTENWALTER.

The Festival at Cologne.

Under the direction of Gustav Brecher and with the cooperation of Conductors Hans and Otto Lohse, a number of festival performances are being given at Cologne Opera House. The series opened with a performance of "Der Freischütz," conducted and stage managed by Pfitzner.

EDYTH WALKER,
The star of the Cologne festival.

Then followed a special gala performance in honor of all the German burgomasters who had met for convention. This performance was conducted by Gustav Brecher, and had the first act of "Oberon," the first act of "Figaro" and the last act of "Meistersinger." The chorus for the "Meistersinger" numbered over three hundred people. The principal events of the series were the two performances of "Tannhäuser," which were given on the 19th and 21st inst. The cast included Urlus, Carl Braun, Braungeest, of the Berlin Royal Opera (who sang a glorious Wolfram), and the specially featured star of the whole festival, Edyth Walker, the unsurpassable Elizabeth. The pilgrims' chorus was sung (out of compliment to Miss Walker, who is persona grata at Cologne, and to Conductor Brecher) by that world famous choral organization, the Cologne Männergesangverein. Among the visitors at the festival was Maestro Cleofonte Campanini, who went especially to hear Miss Walker, the leading dramatic soprano of his next year's season in Chicago.

OPERA HOUSE AT COLOGNE.

Mme. Hudson-Alexander Narrates.

While in England, Caroline Hudson-Alexander became well acquainted with Mary Anderson Navarro, the well known American actress. "She is a delightful woman, whose beauty of character appeals to every one," says the soprano; "I remember a little story she told me of an incident which she cherishes among the events connected with her career in America. She was crossing the country and had left her train at some point in New Mexico to break the journey. At a florist's she bought a bunch of beautiful lilies and went to a little church established in pioneer days by the Franciscan Fathers, to lay the flowers on the altar of the Virgin. She was gowned in white, and as she knelt an old Spanish priest entered the church. He gave one look at the altar, then hurried outside to spread the glad tidings that a miracle had occurred and that the Blessed Virgin herself was paying the church a visit. The story was told the actress a few days later, the aged priest, in the meantime, having made the vision the subject of a sermon to his congregation."

"Oratorio and recital work offer an abundant field for the singer," declares Mme. Hudson-Alexander. "The organization of oratorio and recital clubs in even the smaller cities is elevating musical tastes and standards all over the country. No young singer who aspires to high achievement need hesitate to enter the recital field. The rewards, both financial and artistic, are ample."

Mme. Hudson-Alexander will devote all of next season to her concert work under the management of Loudon Charlton, who directed her tours for several seasons.

South America Likes Music Machines.

[From the South American, May, 1914.]

That the talking machine has proved to be a "real missionary of art" on the savage frontier line of Brazil and Bolivia is declared by Adolfo Bailiavian, Consul-General of Bolivia, who observes:

"Several years ago I served as one of the Commission of Demarcation of the boundary line between Bolivia and Brazil, and my official dutics as such took me into the heart of the district of the upper Amazon, which, as you know, derives certain of its important tributaries from the Cordilleras, within the confines of Bolivia. There my colleagues and I were brought into contact with the real savage life of the region, and one of the most cheerful reminders of home and civilization which I came across was the festive Gramophone. And the way in which the overseers and engineers and rubber operators and the native Indians, alike, responded to the records of Melba, Tetrazzini, Constantino, Bonci, Caruso and Scotti indeed impressed upon me the fact that 'music makes the whole world kin.' I do not exaggerate when I say that the records of the world's greatest artists are as much in favor among the elements of population one encounters in the Upper Amazonas country as among the cultivated circles of the average drawing room in any North or South American city. Those engaged in the industry of the Upper Amazonas region, whether white or Indian, literally will hesitate at no expenditure in the acquirement of a phonograph or a set of records wished for. Because the instruments—unlike pianos or players—are easily to be transported over the dense river country they are in great demand in that section, as, indeed, they are throughout the cities and the other and civilized interior districts of Bolivia.

"Pianos of every grade, and more especially of the higher grades, find an easy market in the larger cities of the Republic of Bolivia, and while American pianos have found their way into the homes of some of the wealthier residents of La Paz, the capital; Potosi, the great silver-mining centre; Cochabamba, Sucre and Oruro, the European makes have held the position established by them many years ago. Abundant opportunities, however, await in my country the American exporter of pianos."

Dan Beddoe as Acis.

A few press notices accorded Dan Beddoe after his splendid singing of the role of Acis in Handel's "Acis and Galatea," are herewith reproduced:

The work is planned mostly for the solo singers; the chorus has few opportunities. The solo singers need not only a sound and efficient technic, but also a special understanding of and familiarity with Handel's style. These were shown last evening in the fullest measure by Dan Beddoe, tenor.—New York Times.

Mr. Beddoe's singing and that of the chorus of three hundred well balanced, euphonious and admirably obedient voices were, in fact, the only inspiriting features of the concert.—New York Tribune.

Mr. Beddoe, past master of the art of oratorio singing, in splendid voice, was a delight from first to last as Acis.—New York Evening World.

Mr. Beddoe deserves commendation.—New York Evening Post.

Mr. Beddoe's rendering of "Love in Her Eyes" was admirable.—New York American.

Visanska to Return Early.

Daniel Visanska, the well known violinist and teacher of New York and Philadelphia, announces that he will return from his European trip September 30, on the steamship Vaterland, as a number of his pupils are desirous of beginning their studies the first of October.

Sara Heineman Sails.

Sara Heineman, the dramatic mezzo-soprano, sailed for England on the Vaterland yesterday, July 7. Mme. Heineman will remain abroad until late in September.

Discipline.

A talent for the violin
Must be a long time nursed;
And so you must, when you begin,
Play second fiddle first.

—Puck.

KATHARINE
COODSON
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
KNABE PIANO

CITIES MUSICALLY JEALOUS OF ONE ANOTHER.

Between Cologne and Düsseldorf—Threatened Extinction of the Famous Nether-Rhenish Music Festivals — Pomeranian Music Festival—The Swedish Chorus "Olympia" in Berlin—An Afternoon at George Hamlin's.

Jenaer St., 21,
Berlin, W., June 29, 1914.

For nearly a century Cologne, Düsseldorf and Aix-la-Chapelle worked together harmoniously in giving the annual Nether-Rhenish music festivals, which always have been justly counted among the most important events of the kind in Germany. Unfortunately, of late a rivalry has sprung up between Cologne and Düsseldorf—a rivalry which now bids fair to sound the death knell of these famous annual festivals. The public interest and patronage always has been great but the jealousy of the two cities, which started a few years ago, culminated in a complete break this year, with the result that Cologne did not participate at all in the recent festival held at Düsseldorf; and not only that—Cologne even went so far as to start an independent Beethoven festival of its own on the third day of the Nether-Rhenish festival at Düsseldorf. The old adage, " united we stand, divided we fall," applies to these rival towns, for there was a marked falling off in attendance and general interest as the result of the break. This is to be deplored, for these annual festivals have been of far raching influence and importance. The festivals were inaugurated ninety-seven years ago.

THE PROGRAM AT DUSSELDORF.

FIRST DAY, MAY 31.

Requiem ..... Verdi
Pathetic Symphony ..... Tschaikowsky

SECOND DAY, JUNE 1.

Coronation hymn, Zudok the Priest, for chorus, orchestra and organ ..... Handel
B flat major concerto for piano ..... Brahms
Soloist, Elly Ney.
Lieder with piano accompaniment ..... Brahms
Cantata, Nun ist das Heil ..... Bach
Eroica Symphony ..... Beethoven

THIRD DAY, JUNE 2.

G major symphony ..... Haydn
Violin concerto ..... Beethoven
150th Psalm ..... Bruckner
Ballet suite ..... Reger
Burlesque for piano and orchestra ..... Strauss
Finale from the Meistersinger ..... Wagner

These programs have been much criticized. The performance of the "Meistersinger" excerpt, in particular, has come in for a very large share of flaying. It is difficult to understand why the management should place this on their program, in view of the fact that the opera is so popular and so often given on the stage, where it belongs, all over Germany. There were also many protests against the rendition of Tschaikowsky's well worn symphony and many critics complained bitterly that the moderns were so sparingly represented; and as to novelties, there were none at all.

The performances themselves were all of a very superior order and called for the warmest words of praise only. Carl Panzner, the most important factor of the musical life of Düsseldorf, was the festival conductor and his local orchestra had been augmented to 123 musicians, the extra men having been recruited from other important towns. The chorus, 653 strong, also had been augmented with forces from Elberfeld and Barmen. Panzner is a temperamental and individual conductor and a man of strong personality. He lays stress on decided accents and powerful climaxes. One rarely hears better and more impressive readings of the "Pathetic" and "Eroica" symphonies. He was also splendid in the choral works and in the modern numbers. At the conclusion of the program on the third day a great ovation was tendered the popular conductor.

POMERANIAN MUSIC FESTIVAL.

A small town on the Baltic possessing only 26,000 souls also has aspired to have a music festival and with very flattering results. To be sure, the participators were all from Berlin. The Philharmonic Orchestra under Hildebrandt played on two consecutive days Wagner and Beethoven programs. The former comprised the overtures to the "Flying Dutchman," "Tannhäuser," "Meistersinger," "Tristan" and "Parsifal," also excerpts from "Siegfried," "Walkure" and "Parsifal." The Beethoven program consisted of the third "Leonore" overture, the violin concerto, played by Carl Klingler, of Berlin, and the "Eroica" symphony. A lecture on Wagner and his works, by Leopold Schmidt, the well known Berlin critic, preceded the Wagner concert. The festival was opened with a program of Loewe's ballads, which were to have been sung by that master singer, Johannes Messchaert, but he was taken ill at the last moment. A substitute was found in J. von Raatz-Brockmann. The latter found, to his cost, that it is not a grateful task to substitute for a Messchaert; however, he made on the whole an excellent showing. The second evening was given up to a performance of choral works, the services of the Berlin Cathedral Chorus under the leadership of Brüdel having been secured.

The program was of historical interest and was in three parts: first, the old Italian; second, Bach; third, the moderns. It was a well chosen program and calculated to give an excellent idea of the development of church music. It was, indeed, for a town of 26,000 inhabitants, a notable achievement.

ROYAL OPERA CLOSES.

The Berlin Royal Opera closed its doors for the season with a performance of Richard Strauss' "Rosenkavalier." The chief attraction of the evening was Fricda Hempel in the role of the Marshal's Wife. Hempel sang magnificently and was tendered an ovation. Lola Artôt da Padilla was a charming Octavian and Knüpfer was inimitable as Ochs von Lerchenau. The performance was conducted by Edmund von Strauss. On this occasion Therese Rothauser made her farewell appearance on the stage of the Royal Opera. For twenty-five years she has been a member of the personnel and a great favorite of the Berlin public. The role of Anina, which she sang, is not one that affords great vocal or dramatic possibilities but the artist gave a most individual and convincing delineation of it. At the close of the second act the stage was transformed into a veritable flower garden in honor of the popular singer. At the end of the performance Count von Hülsen, the Intendant of the Royal Opera, presented Frl. Rothauser with a signed photograph of the Kaiser and also one of himself.

A FAMOUS SWEDISH CHORUS.

The famous Swedish male chorus, "Olympia," has been singing in Berlin with great success. They spent several days in Berlin and during their stay sang before the Kaiser in the Marble Hall of the palace. The Emperor and Empress, the Crown Prince, the Swedish Ambassador, Count Taule, the Bavarian and Grecian Ambassadors and numerous other distinguished personages were invited to attend the concert. The program included the "Watch on the Rhine" [illegible] had studied especially for this occasion, and [illegible]rs by Swedish composers. By special request of the Kaiser several well known Swedish folksongs were also sung. After the concert the Swedish Ambassador introduced the conductor, Hulquist, and several prominent members of the court to the Emperor, who received them most cordially, declaring that he had rarely heard such a well drilled body of singers.

THE HAMLINS ENTERTAIN.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hamlin entertained their many friends in Berlin at an afternoon reception on Thursday. The American tenor, recently returned from his visit to London, where he sang with such remarkable success, was in the best of good humor and let himself be persuaded to sing a number of arias for the pleasure of his guests. His first selections were from "Butterfly," which he rendered with great dramatic power, and later he and Helen Stanley, who has just returned from America, were heard together in a duet from the "Jewels of the Madonna." The two artists, who appeared together in this opera on the Chicago stage, sang with electrifying effect, Hamlin's robust, perfectly controlled tenor voice being remarkably well offset by the beautiful, flutelike quality of Miss Stanley's organ and both entered into their work with such passion and abandon that the listeners were carried away in spontaneous enthusiasm.

NOTES.

It is rumored here in certain quarters that Dr. Muck is to go to Boston for only one season more and that he will then return to Europe for good and accept the position made vacant by the death of Von Schuch in Dresden. There also is a report abroad to the effect that Muck will go to Vienna as director of the Imperial Opera there. There is no proof thus far for either of these assertions. Certain it is, however, that a strong personality is needed in Dresden and it is also generally supposed here among those familiar with operatic conditions that Gregor's position in Vienna has become untenable. Muck will not conduct the Mozart performances at Salzburg as has been repeatedly announced. Weingartner has been engaged in his place.

Jean Sibelius has composed a pantomime entitled "Scaramouche." The opera houses of St. Petersburg, Christiania and Helsingfors will probably produce the work next season.

Eleanor Spencer is taking a four weeks' rest at Bad Nauheim in order to refresh herself after her American tour of last season and to be in the best of condition for the coming season's return tour.

Prof. Rudolph Schmalfeld has had a busy season of teaching with very satisfactory results. Of his pupils Frl. Schuffelhauer has been engaged as first youthful dramatic soprano at Bernburg; Freiherr Wolf von Stenglin as heroic tenor at Cottbus; Fritz Sturm, as lyric tenor in Neisse and a former pupil, Freiherr Hans von Stenglin, a brother of the tenor above mentioned, who has been singing for the past year at Dessau, has been reengaged for that stage at an increased salary. Fritz Sturm recently sang in a concert in Ludwigshauen bei Mannheim with decided success, when the local press praised his voice and his control of it in enthusiastic terms.

LURA E. ABELL.

Frieda Hempel Wins Praise in Germany.

Cable messages just received by Annie Friedberg, of New York, manager of Frieda Hempel, report the Metropolitan Opera soprano's latest triumphs at the special festival week at Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany.

Local German newspapers gave the following praise to Miss Hempel:

First of all must be named Frieda Hempel, who is known in our concert halls, where she gave memorable treats. Yesterday her performance as Rosine was a glorious triumph from beginning to end. The first aria, which she sang with admirable bravura, brought forth a veritable ovation, which was hardly surpassed after she sang "Il Baccio" in the second act—her intimate vocal art and charming acting brought storms of applause—in fact, it seemed as if the public wanted everything repeated. The house could have been sold out three times in spite of the high prices, and in consequence the whole performance had to be repeated during the week.—Kleine Presse.

Frieda Hempel, as one of the special guests, won veritable triumphs through the highest culture of art which is represented in Miss Hempel's beautiful singing.—Lokal Anzeiger.

It was a wonder that the prices were not three times as high, owing to the cast of such stars as Hempel, Jadlowker and Forsell. The success of the evening showed full appreciation of the public. One can safely say that Hempel was "the" star; her Rosine is a most fine and charming impersonation. Her bell-like coloratura tones came like fireworks, perling and stirring like the chirping of the bird. The climax was reached in the Arditi waltz, given in the second act.—General Anzeiger. (Advertisement.)

MAESTRO FRANZ EMERICH VOCAL INSTRUCTION
and MADAME TERESA EMERICH

PUPILS PREPARED FOR THE OPERATIC AND CONCERT STAGE

Some Distinguished PUPILS of MAESTRO and MME. EMERICH:

CHARLES DALMORES, tenor, Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden. Lohengrin of Bayreuth festival.
ADAM DIDUR, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
FRANCIS MACLENNAN, tenor, Berlin Royal Opera.
*HANS TANZLER, tenor, Royal Opera, Karlsruhe.
FLORENCE WICKHAM, mezzo-soprano.
CAVALLIERE MARIO SAMMARCO, baritone, Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden.
PUTNAM GRISWOLD, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
*MARGUERITA SYLVA, Carmen in the guest performance of Caruso at the Berlin Royal Opera.
MARGARETHE MATZENAUER, mezzo-soprano, Metropolitan Opera, New York.
*HELENA FORTI, soprano, Dresden Royal Opera.
MARY CAVAN, Soprano, Dippel Opera Co., Chicago.
MARCELLA LINDH, the famous concert singer.
HEINRICH HENSEL, Dramatic Tenor, Hamburg, Stadt Theater.

INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH AND ITALIAN

*The names marked * are those of pupils of Mme. Emerich.* Telephone Amt. Pfalzburg No. 2067 BERLIN, W. W. Nicelsbergerplatz 1

RUDOLF BERGER

KAMMER SAENGER
Berlin Royal Opera and
New York Metropolitan Opera
Soloist—Dallas Saengerfest, May, 1914
Soloist—Louisville Saengerfest, June, 1914
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson

THE WAGNER THEATRE AT BAYREUTH.

CARL PANZNER,
The conductor of the Ninetieth Nether-Rhenish Music Festival recently held at Düsseldorf.

THE ELBERFELD STRASSE,
One of the principal streets of Düsseldorf.

Spooner Likes Near-to-Nature Life.

Philip Spooner, the American tenor, is a great believer in out of door life for the singer. He is familiar not only with many of nature's attractive haunts in his own country, but has oft braved the difficulties of strenuous mountain climbing in the Swiss Alps. Mr. Spooner, although for eight years a resident of New York City, is in reality a Westerner and of an exploring disposition; he says that he likes to seek out unbeaten and unfrequented places, so this year he will follow out this plan, while in Switzerland, and avoid the more visited sections.

Although his present trip—he sailed for Europe on the Mauretania, July 7—will be for the most part one of rest and diversion in "climbing," after his busy season just closed, he will appear at several musicales in Paris and London.

Mr. Spooner will attend the Mozart celebration in Salzburg also, as he is an ardent admirer of the Austrian composer and includes many Mozart compositions in his repertoire.

The tenor expects to return to America about September 1, as his concert tour in the Middle West begins the last week in September.

LINDSBORG PLEASED WITH MUSICAL SEASON.

Foreign and Local Talent Has Provided Good Programs—Two Well Known Musicians Move to Kansas City—New Teachers at Bethany College.

Lindsborg, Kan., June 15, 1914.

The musical season is practically over. A series of graduating recitals at the Bethany Conservatory of Music were well attended and the performers showed good musicianship and training. The past year has been a very successful one. Not only have such artists as Alice Nielsen, Christine Miller, Gustaf Holmquist and many others appeared here, but the work of the local organizations has been par excellence and has given much pleasure. The Musical Art Society, E. Haesener, conductor, with the assistance of the Bethany Symphony Orchestra, has presented Spohr's "Last Judgment," MacFarlane's "The Message from the Cross," and programs of a miscellaneous character. The Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Forrest Schulz, has furnished some splendid concerts, at which the Schubert "Jupiter" symphony, "Rosamunde" overture and various modern works were performed. The Oratorio Society rendered Händel's "Messiah" three times during Easter week, and the well-known concerts of the Bethany Band, under the direction of Hjalmar Wetterstrom, have always met with favor.

Two Musicians Move to Kansas City.

Forrest Schulz, teacher of violin and conductor of the Bethany Symphony Orchestra, has resigned his position here and will locate in Kansas City. Mr. Schulz must be given credit for the good work the Symphony Orchestra has been doing the last few years, and it is with regret that his friends see him leave Bethany.

Floyd Robbins also resigned as teacher of piano at the Conservatory and will locate at Kansas City, Mo.

New Bethany College Instructors.

Arthur E. Uhe, of Winnetka, Ill., has been selected to succeed Mr. Schulz as teacher of violin at Bethany College. Mr. Uhe is a pupil of César Thompson, of Brussels, and won the first prize at the Brussels Conservatory. He was Thompson's assistant for two years. Mr. Uhe appeared here in recital last week and created an excellent impression. He possesses an unusual technic and played his numbers with deep musical insight, the most of which were played without accompaniment. Judging from the applause he received he has won already the good will of the public here. The program was as follows: Sonata, D major, Handel; aria, "Doloroso," Vivaldi; andantino, Martini; "Capriccio," Schindler; air for G string, Bach; adagio pathetique, Godard; prelude and allegro, Pugnani-Krei ler; three caprices, Locatelli-Paganini.

Thure Jäderborg has accepted the position as teacher of voice at Bethany College to succeed E. H. Malloy. Mr. Jäderborg taught here several years ago, but has been studying the last three years with Warren Shaw, the well-known singing teacher of Philadelphia. E. A. H.

Alberto JONAS
Jenaer St. 29, Berlin, W.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
KUFSTEINER, ST. 6 BERLIN W., GERMANY

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York City
Weetern Rep: James Devoe, 196 Blaine Ave., Detroit, Mich.

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher Moet modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE
FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 3

Summer Class for the Leschetizky Method under the instruction of Mrs. Potter-Frissell well known piano pedagogue, in Neu Schandau (Ostrau Plain), famous summer resort in charming Villa Colony, in grandest part of Saxon Switzerland. (Mountain Air), Address, until July 1st, Eisenstuckstr. 16, Pt., Dresden, A. After July 1st, Villa 17 Neu Schandau, Saxon Switzerland, Germany.

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent.
For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

MILAN MUSIC STOPPED BY SOCIALISTIC STRIFE.

Citizens and Soldiery War in the Streets—An Ancient Opera House Restored—Activity of American Singers in Italy—What the Galleria Gossips About.

Via Boccaccio,
Milan, Italy, June 16, 1914.

If two or three burly New York policemen should drop into Milan they would have an enjoyable chuckle at the way a socialistic disturbance is being handled by the police force and all of the royal army that is quartered in this city. At present and for two days past the city has been at the mercy of several bands of rowdies who call themselves socialists. In Ancon, last week, a soldier who was being stoned by a crowd of socialists, drew his gun and fired, killing two men. This present upheaval in all Italy is a demonstration of the indignation of the Socialists against such brutal action by the army. Therefore the great, busy Piazza del Duomo here in Milan has been the scene of several curious "mix ups" between the royal troops and a lot of tattered citizens who tore up the pavement to provide themselves with ammunition. When the soldiers charged, the stones flew, and then the crowd scattered to be "shooed" away by the cavalry. Few arrests have been made and no deaths or bad injuries reported in Milan, but the car lines and business houses are tied up and life artistic, life everything else, is at a standstill. Tomorrow, it is believed, the anger of the socialists will have been sufficiently appeased, and work by students and teachers may be resumed.

A Restored Opera House.

The most interesting musical event of the season has been the reopening of the celebrated Teatro Carcano as an opera house. This ancient theatre has been famous for its unequaled acoustics for more than two hundred years. It was the home of Italian opera in Milan long before the greater La Scala Theatre, which dates from 1778, was built, and even afterward it continued to be an opera house until ten years ago when it was converted into a moving picture show house. Recently, however, it has fallen into the hands of an energetic company which has entirely renovated the decoration on the auditorium and built a new facade on the street. Modern stage machinery and dressing rooms have been installed and on Saturday, June 6, the old theatre was reinaugurated as the home of a first class opera company.

The opera was Puccini's "Tosca" and the artists were Poli-Randaccio, Garbin and Viglione-Borghese, all old favorites at La Scala. The first interest of the audience was for the house. There were comments about the decoration and arrangement of the interior, but most of all were the architects congratulated on having practically rebuilt the old theatre without in any way destroying the celebrated acoustic qualities. It is an intimate sort of an opera house and if the "Tosca" performance is a sample of the offerings to come then seats will be hard to secure, for the demand will be great. All the artists felt that they were taking part in an important performance and played in an inspired fashion, the leading three singers being recalled time and again after each act.

The next opera will be "Rigoletto," for which fine singers are promised. This theatre was the scene of many tryout performances and among other operas which first were presented to the public at the Carcano was Bellini's "Norma."

Reading from left to right: (1) Left half of Teatro Carcano. (2) The rear of the Teatro Carcano. This joins the stage and has not been remodeled but remains as when originally built, over 200 years ago. It was occupied by the company and employees of the theatre. Today it is still inhabited by employees and used as a storage house for scenery. (3) Right half of Teatro Carcano. (4) The renovated facade of the ancient Teatro Carcano, which was the home of opera in Milan before La Scala was built in 1778. Even after the advent of La Scala many new operas had their premiere at the Carcano; among these was Bellini's "Norma."

Accompanying are two photographs which I took of the Carcano several days ago. One shows the new façade and the other the part adjoining the stage, which has been left as originally built. In it were the dressing rooms of artists and the lodgings of employees of the theatre. Now it is still inhabited by scene shifters, etc., and part of the old structure has been made into a storeroom for scenery not in use. Two other photographs are also shown.

Scala Concerts Close.

The last of the symphony concerts by the La Scala Orchestra were given on May 30 and 31, under the direction of Arthur Nikisch. In spite of excessively hot weather both concerts played to packed houses and the management felt more or less unhappy that the good work could not go on for a week longer at least.

Dolce Far Niente.

Milan is full of singers, composers and orchestra conductors now that the big seasons in America have closed. Some, to be sure, have gone to Buenos Aires and some to London, but the greater majority have arrived in Milan to work some, rest some and make a few records for phonograph companies. This is the dull season for the songsters, but it is a necessary one as well and so there is a crowd in the Galleria every afternoon chatting and talking of the past season and the one to come. And no one seems to worry because there is no work at hand.

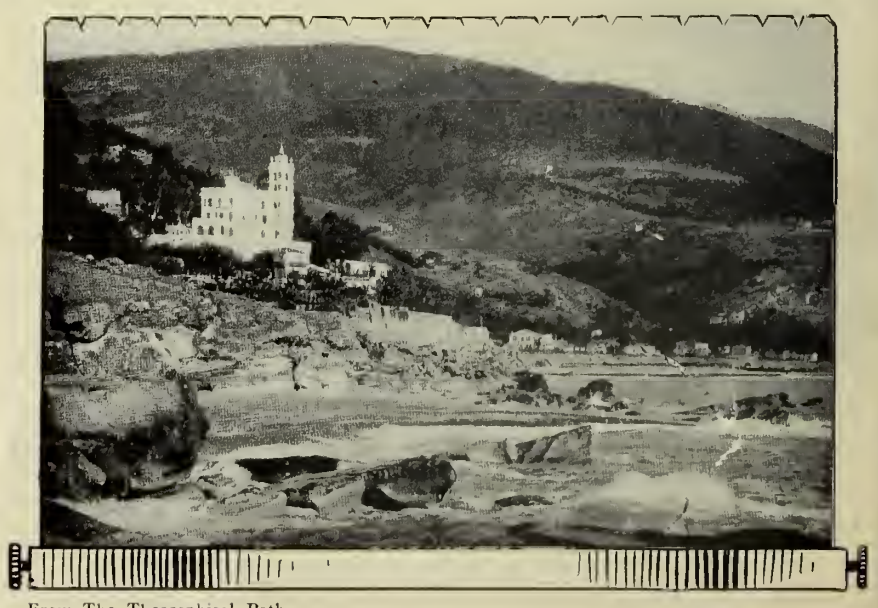
Notes and Comments.

At the Fossata Theatre on June 11 "The Queen of the Roses," by Leoncavallo, was given. This little operetta seems to be a favorite with Italian people but the writer can see no merit in either music or libretto.

Marie Mohler, of Omaha, Neb., who has been abroad for several years and has been preparing for grand opera under the lamented Lombardi in Florence, came to this city in the early part of the year. She has abandoned her musical ambition for the present as she will be married in the early autumn to Mario Sawna, a civil engineer and a descendant of the old Strozi family. They will make their home in Milan in a snug apartment on the Corso Venezia, and intend to spend their honeymoon motoring through Switzerland.

Signor Gatti-Casazza, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, was here on the 11th, and will return to Paris this week.

The operas that have been decided upon for next season at the Scala are: "Rigoletto," with Lydia Lipkowska as Gilda, Cesa-Bianchi, tenor, and Gileffi, baritone; "Gioconda," with Cecilia Gagliardi, Cesa-Bianchi and Galeffi; "Loreley" (by Catalini), sung by Salomea Krucenisky and tenor Di Giovanni (Johnson); "Notte di Leggenda," with Cecilia Gagliardi in the cast; also "Tre Maschere," by De Lara.



The opera, "Notte di Leggenda," is by Franchetti and the libretto by Forzano and it will be presented for the first time at the Scala. "Tre Maschere" also will be a novelty of the season. A number of artists have already been engaged, among them Lipkowska. It will be her first appearance at the Scala.

The Reale College for girls had its annual musical examination last week, in which Misses Rignani, Fanna and Giuscchio excelled. They were from the schools of Appiani, Anforx and Frugatta. Besides these there were contests for two, four and eight hands on the piano, clos-

From The Theosophical Path.

PALMS AT MADONNA DELLA ROTA, BORDIGHERA.

From The Theosophical Path.

AN HISTORIC CASTLE, BORDIGHERA.

ing with a good chorus. A piece, "Musical Impressions," by Maestro Aufossi (inspired by fragments of Pascoli) was a new composition that scored a success.

Marcella Kraft, of the Munich Opera, has postponed her visit to Milan for another month, in order to fill several engagements in Germany and Bavaria.

Lehar's "Merry Widow" was the attraction at the Fossata Theatre on June 15, and drew a good house, as this operetta always does in Italy.

The Italian delegates to the fifth International Congress of the Societies of Music at Paris were Valietti Barini and Fausto Torrefranco (of the University of Rome), who represented the Italian Government.

Lyric-scenic spectacles are becoming popular here. It is announced that in the latter half of July (and in the Arena at Milan), a large company will give "The Moors of Valenza," the posthumous opera of Ponchielli, whose most recent performance was at Monte Carlo. Maestro Mugnone will direct and Ansoldo, the mechanical head of the Scala, was asked to prepare the stage setting. He declined for reasons of health.

J. D. (Giovanni) Sample, tenor, began an engagement at Arona, on Lake Maggiore, in "Il Trovatore." Later he will be heard in other operas.

On June 2 the opera "Il Quatro Rusteghi," a musical comedy in three acts, by Wolf-Ferrari, was given at the Lyric Theatre for the first time in Italy to an audience of the representative music lovers of Milan. While the singing was not up to the standard, the parts taken by the four bassos were very well acted. The music was above the average found in comic opera. The text was not as amusing as many such works in English and could be improved on.

Reports from Florence state that Martin Richardson has made his debut as tenor in "Don Pasquale" and scored a success; also that Clarence Bird, pianist, has returned from several months' visit to the United States, where he will next season undertake a concert tour. Meanwhile he is to resume his classes at his studio here.

A large military review on June 7 caused all galleries, museums and places of amusement to be closed, so that every one could se the display of Italy's military strength, including bicycle regiments, aeroplanes, etc.

Fannie Cole has signed a contract for opera appearances at Finamarina (a seaside resort near Genoa in July. Her first role will be that of Margherita in "Faust." American singers are gaining in popularity steadily in Italy.

On June 7 at Teatro Verdi Ferrara, Fradeletto spoke an hour and a half on the work of Giuseppe Verdi and his influence on the art and culture of Italy. An ovation was accorded him at the end of his discourse. On the 18th, in the same town, a tablet will be erected to Temistock Solera, who was a friend of the composer and gave him assistance, and a monument to Verdi will be unveiled in the piazza. It was executed by Zillochi for Duchess Maria Waldmann Massari, who presents it to the city.

News from Parma states that May 31 closed the contest for the prize of 20,000 lira offered by Edith McCormick for the best new opera by an Italian composer. There was a total offering of thirty-nine operas. The committees appointed to award the money will not be able to make their report until after the middle of August. The committee on the music consists of G. Buelli, Bolzoni Orifici, Respighi, R. Ferrari, Agostini and Azzoni; on the libretto, of Buelli, Giuseppe Melli and di Renato Samoni.

Pietro Loredau gave a piano concert on June 6 at the Teatro del Popolo.

Maestro Campanini offers a contest, international in character, for young singers of all nations who have never appeared in opera. The committee to pass judgment in this contest are Maestros Azzoni, Garbellae Silva, Alessandro Bonci and Mario Ferrarini. They will select ten from among the contestants and their transportation and hotel bills will be paid. From those will be chosen singers for the opera next season at Teatro Reinach.

News has just come from Florence of the death, June 4, in that city, at the home of the father of Albert Spalding, of Juan Buitrago, of New York. Señor Buitrago taught young Spalding, and when the maestro got too old to teach he made his home with the Spalding family in their palace on the Arno. He was a famous teacher of the violin.

Pepito Arriola, the boy pianist, gave a recital at the Scala, in which he played with all his old skill.

Maestro Francesco Mottino, the well known teacher of acting, who has been so ill, is now well enough [illegible] his classes.

Ida H. Layman and her sister, Miss Mull[illegible], after studying here for about a year, have gone to Florence to continue their vocal preparation for concert or opera.

Earlier in the month Franz von Vecsey gave two violin concerts at the Scala to immense and enthusiastic audiences. Encores were called for until the lights in the opera house were turned out.

Maestro Guagni, instructor of Marcella Craft and other opera stars, is still teaching as energetically as in his younger days, nearly forty years ago.

Grace Cole, soprano, and her sister, Kathryn Cole, of Washington, D. C., who live in a charming apartment here, have just returned from Central and Southern Italy, where the former sang in opera. She goes later to sing in "Rigoletto" in Farrara. She has a pleasant voice and agreeable appearance.

A few days ago "A Japanese Evening" was given in Via Conservatorio by the Veloce Club. The feature of the evening was the singing from the little stage of the theatre of an aria from "Madame Butterfly," by Maria Castellazzi, which was done with so much grace and charm that every one was entranced.

Basil Crump is spending the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Cleather and Graham Cleather at Villa Duca at Brunate, on Lake Como, whence Mr. Crump and Mr. Graham Cleather come three times weekly to pursue their vocal studies and investigations. It will be remembered that Mr. Crump and Mrs. Cleather have written several very interesting books in English upon Wagner's operas, in which the motifs are given and analyzed. They are published by a London house. J. ALLEN.

MEMORIES OF PAGANINI.
(1) Medals presented to Nicolo Paganini, (2) his tomb at Parma, Italy, and (3) the traveling carriage in which the famous violinist went through Europe.

Bambrick's New Records.

Winifred Bambrick, the talented young harpist who made her New York debut this season, is unusually fortunate in having her talent recognized without the usual delays which so greatly hamper the progress of most young artists. Miss Bambrick possesses a brilliant clarity of tone which has a certain unusual quality which the harp rarely possesses, and Thomas A. Edison, recognizing this, has kept Miss Bambrick in New York throughout the past month, making harp records for the phonograph. According to Mr. Edison, harp records have so far made unsatisfactory reproductions and he has endeavored for a long time to secure really effective records which would properly represent the delicate tone and sonority of the instrument. Among other things, he has been using a new diamond disc, and this seems to have been effective, but Mr. Edison himself insists that Miss Bambrick's tone quality has been the necessary asset in producing these new records. She has played "Butterfly," morceau caracteristique, by Verdalle, the harpist of the Paris Opera, a prelude by Loukine, the harpist of the Moscow Opera, and four pieces by Pinto: "Paraphrase de Concert," "Norwegian Melody," Tarantella," and "Serenade Capriccioso"; as well as two popular numbers, arranged by special request of Mr. Edison for the harp by Mr. Pinto, a paraphrase of "Kathleen Mavourneen" and "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms." These records will soon be on the market. Miss Bambrick will be heard in concert in the fall under the management of M. H. Hanson.

LEIPSIC CONSERVATORY HOLDS ITS ANNUAL EXAMINATIONS.

The Programs, the Participants and How They Performed.

Leipsic, June 3, 1914.

The resumed public examination playing at Leipsic Conservatory required five additional programs, from May 1 to May 29. The last also served as the institution's annual Königsfeier, or birthday celebration for Friedrich August of Saxony, the conservatory's royal protector. At the time of reporting the first three of these examination evenings, it was observed that the several weeks needed for the new system of minor private examinations had prevented completion of the public Prüfungs before Easter. The circumstance has added greatly to the enjoyment of the five concerts which came after, because the city's public concert season was at an end, and these conservatory concerts constituted the very best musical entertainment that was to be had for the time. The five programs, with the name of the instructor each time in parenthesis, were as follows:

May 1.—Beethoven G major piano concerto, allegro, played by Edith Hartmann, of Leipsic (Pembaur); Goltermann A minor cello concerto, Romana Rosenband, of Lodz, Russia (Klengel); Bach C minor piano passacaglia, Basilius Alexeiev, of Charkov (Teichmüller); soprano aria from "Elijah," Lizzie Gebhardt, of Leipsic (Frau Baumann); Sinding E flat minor, variations for two pianos, Alexander and Anna Weprik, of Warsaw (Wendling); Volkmann A minor cello concerto, allegro, Marco Pyrot, of Turin (Klengel); Grieg piano concerto, allegro, Annie Marie Buller, of Rostock (Wendling).

May 8.—C. G. Müller, E flat trombone concerto, Alfred Günther, of Marklissa, Silesia (Bamberg); four soprano songs with piano, by Robt. Franz, Margarete Meyer, of Leipsic (Frau Baumann); Schumann piano concerto, allegro, Paula Kracke, of Hamburg (Teichmüller); Popper E minor cello concerto, allegro, Gertrud Diersch, of Leipsic (Klengel); four Strauss songs with piano, Elizabeth Müller, of Ronneburg (Frau Hedmondt); Tschaikowsky violin concerto, allegro, Otto Klinge, of Darmstadt (Havemann).

May 15.—Rietz F minor oboe concertstück, Johannes Wagner, of Frauenstein, Erzgebirge (Tamme); Schumann piano concerto, allegro, Johanna Haslinghuis, of Rotterdam (Pembaur); four Theodor Pfitzner, Weingartner and Van Eyken soprano songs, with piano, Anna Handschuh, of Annaberg (Frau Hedmondt); Chopin E minor concerto, allegro, Waclaw von Lewandowski, of Warsaw (Pembaur); Kjerulf, Thuille, Humperdinck, Goldmark, soprano songs, with piano, Lotte Knopf, of Altenburg (Frau Hedmondt); Dvorák cello concerto adagio and finale, Walther Grothaus, of Osnabrück (Klengel); Rimsky-Korsakoff C sharp minor piano concerto, Carl Doering, of Philadelphia (Teichmüller).

May 22.—Brahms D minor piano concerto, maestoso, Joseph Fischhaut, of Warsaw (Teichmüller); Bruch G minor violin concerto, vorspiel and adagio, Florica Pusch, of Folticeni, Roumania (Sitt); Grieg piano concerto, allegro, Zoe Enbaeff, of Moscow (Teichmüller); six Brahms Gypsy songs, with piano, Eirene Palli, of Athens (Frau Hedmondt); Lalo D minor cello concerto, Haidee Boyd, of Letterkenny, Ireland, (Klengel); Tschaikowsky B flat minor piano concerto, allegro, Edmund Skinner, of Sheffield (Teichmüller).

May 29.—In honor of the King's birthday (May 25). Weber's Jubilee overture, the student orchestra under Hans Sitt; Beethoven E flat piano concert, allegro, Ernst Schacht, of Braunschweig; Tschaikowsky, violin concerto, allegro, Willi Schauss, of Wiesbaden; Liapounow E major piano concerto, Charlotte Hempel, of Plauen; Bruch "Odysseus" aria for contralto, Marta Adam, of Leipsic; Liszt E flat piano concerto, Margit Meer, of Budapest. On this program the violinist was pupil of Sitt, the contralto of Frau Hedmondt, the three pianists pupils of Teichmüller. The piano accompanists for the various concert songs were Herbert Reichert, of Rothwasser; Johannes Clemens, of Löbau, and Julius von Kiss, of Nagybecskerek, Hungary.

PERFORMERS AND PERFORMANCES.

A high plane of excellence generally marked the performance of the above works, yet it was evident that, as far as possible, only heavy guns would be employed for the King's celebration. It was a strange coincidence that the concert of May 22 had not one German performer, while Bruch and Brahms were the only German composers represented. Of those heard for this report, Edith Hartmann's playing of a Beethoven allegro showed full musical energy, if not yet a complete maturity of style. Fräulein Rosenband has intensity above the average, she draws a tone of fine quality and volume, and only caused annoyance by persisting in long slides to the finger positions. Alexeiev, who had several compositions on the earlier programs, is also a musicianly pianist, who plays Bach clearly, with fair impulse. Fräulein Gebhardt has a useful voice, which she uses only moderately well, since it could be given much more easily, on continued study. The Wepriks, brother and sister, are of decidedly good talent, and they play as a real ensemble in very finely established taste. Peyrot is a cellist of extreme lyric intensity, and he is one of the most consummately musical persons of the entire eight programs. Fräulein Buller left a most favorable impression through poise, clear technic and a good deal of impulse.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

"A firm mastery of a remarkably smooth, clean, technic and a fine regard for tonal balance and musicianly phrasing were features of her performance."—The Berlin Continental Times.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Alfred Günther gave a very orderly rendition of the trombone concerto, with established ease and steady tone. Fräulein Meyer's light soprano is given in really "Italian" color and easy legato, her enunciation was so perfect as to need no printed text. Her singing is another of the many signs of Frau Baumann's great art, and the more regret that the venerable artist and master is permanently retiring. Paula Kracke is not nearly mature, yet her playing is orderly and agreeable, and time may bring much more character to her performance. Cellist Gertrud Diersch has a light, bouyant talent, with fair accomplishment and the technical means for creditable playing. Elizabeth Müller's mezzo-soprano sits easily and shows warmth, vitality and right giving in all the range. Violinist Klinge has left hand facility for clear giving of all passages, whatever the velocity, and his talent is such as to permit much enjoyment of his playing. Johannes Wagner has beautiful control over his oboe reed, so that the Rietz concertstück furnished real pleasure of a high order. Johanna Haslinghuis kept the Schumann piano concerto to commendable repose and delightful quality. Anna Handschuh controls her light, high voice very well, and shows especially attractive talent for delivery. Lewandowski played the Chopin movement in much breadth and musical quality, with all due regard for detail. Fräulein Knopf's voice has native warmth, but the tones are as yet of uneven placing and she needs more very careful study. Walter Grothaus is likewise not mature, either for his bow or finger technic, yet he will probably prove to be musical enough for fair enjoyment. Pianist Carl Doering, who has been writing some songs of extreme character and great musical value, is a performer of superb style and great intelligence, so that his appearance was among the most satisfying of the series. He had been for years under Constantin von Sternberg, upon whose advice he came to Teichmüller. The same distinguishing attributes of the musician were present in the work of Edmund Skinner, who played the Tschaikowsky movement a week later. Skinner is also a skilled composer and particularly useful instructor, and as pianist he has acquired most reliable and admirable technical facility. All of the passages in the difficulty concerto came out in utmost clarity, with still the desirable repose. A high stage of musicianship was shown in Fischhau.'s delivery of the Brahms D minor concerto, where energy, authority and well drawn interpretative lines prevailed. Violinist Fräulein Pursch is one of very pronounced talent and most admirable accomplishment for her beautiful tone, colorful, expressive delivery and great technical clarity. Zoe Enbaeff came to great brilliancy with her giving of the Grieg concerto, and as she is very young she gives fine promise. The soprano, Eirene Palli, is of animated temperament, yet her singing is still characterized by unquiet breathing and general lack of repose and control, so that much careful study will be necessary to make her a good artist. Cellist Miss Boyd draws only a small tone, yet she is undoubtedly musical and her taste is firmly and agreeably established. Since the Lalo concerto is also very brightly orchestrated, the work gave great pleasure on this occasion.

The concert in honor of the King was brilliantly begun by the student orchestra's finished rendition of the overture. Schacht's playing of the Beethoven concerto movement was characterized by the fine breadth which one associates with so heroic composition. Violinist Schauss suffered perceptibly from a nervousness that sometimes threatened to wreck the performance, yet as he played on he came to better control and one could observe his considerable facility and talent. Charlotte Hempel seemed mature as to temperament and style, so that hers was a creditable rendition of the attractive Liapounow concerto. Contralto Marta Adam's voice is one of heroic beauty through its entire range. She is in the highest possible degree musical and evidently born to sing. It is improbable that so much voice and real singing talent have been combined in one person within recent history of the conservatory. Since the conservatory concert above, she has sung in Berlin with most unusual success and a big career seems imminent. For the Liszt E flat concerto, which concluded the conservatory concert, another extreme talent had been held in reserve. And here it was the Hungarian girl, Margit Meer, whose work combined about everything that goes to make big piano art. Her delivery was of a stormy sort, yet everywhere guarded and gauged to the beautiful relief which characterizes every interpretation that has been under the Teichmüller guidance. For the entire series of concerts, the student orchestra under Sitt played superbly, and accompanied the soloists over many difficulties without losing the way.

EUGENE E. SIMPSON.

Warm Praise for Marguerite Melville.

The following tribute to the pianistic art of Marguerite Melville was written by Mrs. Potter-Frissell, of Dresden, correspondent of the MUSICAL COURIER:

That genial pianist, Marguerite Melville, again demonstrated how great is the difference between merely pianistic and purely musical talent. No one except such as is really endowed with the divine spark, or touched by that rare quality called "genius" could so imbue her work with all that which is included in the very idea of pure music.

Marguerite Melville unites intellect with emotion, keen penetration, depth, strong musical impulse, the power of clear delineation; and her versatility, her ability to seize the salient characteristics of every form and style were shown by the masterful way she passed from a great and lofty work like the F minor sonata of Brahms to the charming "Kinderscenen" of Schumann, where her light touch, ready wit, poetic fantasy and insight into child life in this miniature form reproduced in the most winning manner all the pictures from the child world. And this, too, after sounding depths and heights such as only the truly called and chosen Brahms player could do. In fact, her rendering of this great work was a model for the student and music lover. Lack of space forbids entering into further detail, as the foregoing applies as well to the remaining numbers of her program taken from Chopin, Debussy, Scott, Reger, Moszkowski, etc.

Real Thing at Last.

The Customer—"These grand opera phonograph records are no good. I can't get anything out of half of them.

The Salesman—"Yes, they are our finest achievement. You never can tell when they'll sing. They're so temperamental."—Puck.

HINSHAW

Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE

Berlin Wagner Ring Festival,
June 23rd to Aug. 21st

American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE

Management, R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

Germaine Schnitzer Delights Londoner

Excerpts of criticisms, which speak for themselves concerning the success attained by Germaine Schnitzer, the Austrian-American pianist, in London, during her European tour follow:

Germaine Schnitzer again arrested the attention of her audience by her fine piano playing. There are few lady pianists who have her breadth and virility of style, and she has few equals among her male contemporaries. There is a steel-like brilliancy about her technic, a very wide intellectual outlook, and a cultured style.—The Standard, April 27, 1912.

It is somewhat remarkable that a pianist of so much distinction as Germaine Schnitzer, who gave a recital at Steinway Hall last night, has not appeared in London before. She has already achieved considerable reputation on the continent and in America, and how well for once that reputation is justified she had no difficulty in showing. Every aspect of her playing is distinctive. At every point it meets the tests that indicate the great pianist. While the technical requirements are met completely, it is on the interpretive side that the great artist is revealed. The music is interpreted through a personal medium that has the rare power of seeing eye to eye and feeling heart to heart with the composer. Each example on her program was played in the style proper to the composer—the effect aimed at by the many and realized by the few. Under her hands Schumann's rarely heard but typical sonata in F sharp minor was made a living thing, with all the vigor and romance in being. The "Benediction de Dieu dans la Solitude" of Liszt was played with the curious mixture of sentiment and virtuosity that brought the figure of Liszt before the eye. In Beethoven, Chopin and Saint-Saëns, and in the arrangements of Schubert by Fischoff and Tausig, there was all the actuality the most critical could desire. The means to this end are a touch of ideal gentleness and firmness, with complete command of the intermediary stages, a technic of rare perfection, and, lastly, a musical mind that is of the highest rank. Mlle. Schnitzer, who was warmly received, is giving two further recitals. They should be the means of establishing her firmly in the esteem of the music loving public of England.—Morning Post, April 20, 1912.

Though she has won a big continental reputation, Germaine Schnitzer has been content to remain a stranger to London until last night, when she gave the first of three piano recitals at Steinway Hall, and at once established her claim to high rank among contemporary pianists. Her playing is remarkably intelligent, and its merit on the technical side is supreme. Fräulein Schnitzer made light of difficulties, and all she did had the effortless quality that comes from complete control of the instrument.—The Globe, April 20, 1912.

Her reading of the "Appassionata" sonata was decidedly romantic, the first movement being made to sound bright and impetuous, while the second was given a dreamy, tender character that no player deficient in imagination or out of sympathy with the music could have managed to suggest. Signs of even greater insight marked Mlle. Schnitzer's playing of Bach's great organ fugue in

GERMAINE SCHNITZER.

A minor. In this case the temptation to make the fugue a vehicle for display was wisely resisted. One felt how thoroughly the player had realized that Bach is not only amazingly ingenious, but also intensely beautiful and intensely poetic; and one accepted with gratitude a reading that had sufficient weight and solidity to suggest the massive organ tone, with sufficient restraint to banish all sense of exaggeration.—The Globe, April 27, 1912.

Germaine Schnitzer, by her playing of the "Appassionata" sonata and the "Carnaval" of Schumann, proved that one had not been mistaken in welcoming her as one of the most artistic female pianists of the day.—The World, April 30, 1912.

Germaine Schnitzer defied sex inequalities of mind and muscle in a truly remarkable manner. Her program was essentially one of big things, but Miss Schnitzer passed from Beethoven's variations in C minor, through Schumann's exacting sonata in F sharp minor, and other technicalities of Chopin, Liszt and Saint-Saëns, with the unflagging energy of a Carreño or Busoni. Her reception, like her playing, was immense.—Daily Express, April 20, 1912.

(Advertisement.)

Photo by Harry H. Hamm, Erie, Pa.

SNAPSHOT TAKEN ON THE STEPS OF THE LAWRENCE HOTEL, ERIE, PA., AT THE TIME OF THE RECENT ERIE MUSIC FESTIVAL.

Left to right: Franz Kohler, Dan Beddoe, Fritz Goerner (cellist), Theodore Rentz, Frederich Sapper, Marie Kaiser, J. Albert Riker, Morris Gabriel Williams, Eugene Heinrichs and John S. Curtis.

Hambourg Conservatory Activities.

There has been a decided influx recently of juvenile talent to the Hambourg Conservatory of Music in Toronto. As is usual, the most gifted pupils generally are to be found in the poorer classes who are unable to afford fees. In consequence, and desirous of cultivating these talents in the proper way, Professor Michael Hambourg now is working on a scheme whereby to give the young Canadian the possibility of the training needed for the artist career. His aim is to inaugurate a society with the object of helping these deserving young people and to supply them with means to pursue their studies. Professor Hambourg is forming a committee and has been fortunate in securing some influential and music loving people to help him carry out his plans.

Jan Hambourg, the head of the violin department of the Hambourg Conservatory of Music and one of the foremost representatives of the Ysaye school on the American continent, has been fortunate enough to gather round him a very interesting class. Several of the younger students show exceptional talent and bid fair to develop into genuine violin virtuosi. Among them can be mentioned Maxie Fleischman, Eileen Ferguson, Douglas Crowe and William Wilson. Among his assistants Jan Hambourg counts some of the ablest of the younger violinists of Toronto, who, in each case have taken a normal and artists' course with him so that a complete unanimity of method prevails in the whole department.

Music for Money.

[From the Newark, N. J., Sunday Call.]

To the Editor of the Sunday Call:

1. Is it more profitable in the end to buy your own music printing press and sell your own music? 2. It is necessary for a person to have a license to sell music from house to house? 3. How is international copyright secured? Is this copyright granted aside from the copyright for this country? INTERESTED.

1. Not unless you have facilities to put your works on the market and are willing to spend considerable in advertising. Even then you might not be successful. Better try to sell your music to some publishing house, either outright or on a royalty. 2. In Newark you would need a license, costing $5.50 a year. Other municipalities in this section, for the most part, have similar ordinances. 3. The United States is not a member of the International Copyright Union, but citizens of the United States have the right in most foreign countries to file copyright applications on the same footing as citizens of the respective countries. This usually requires simultaneous publications in each of the countries in which publication is desired.—Ed.

There Is a Difference.

He could dance it fairly well. His only trouble was that he wasn't sure of the pronunciation.

Finally, when the orchestra struck up "I Want To Be in Brazil," he mustered up courage to approach Miss Zathers, who was sitting in a sheltered nook of Paris greenery.

"Good evening, Miss Zathers," he said, "do you dance the maxixe?"

She shook her head puzzled like.

There was a pause.

"Perhaps," he ventured, "you do the maxeesh?"

"Rully, no," she told him. "Fact of the mattah, nevah heard of it."

There was a pause.

As the members of the orchestra had stopped at the first bar, but now the music was again in full swing.

"The maxick then—do you do that?" he asked.

Again she shook her head, this time yawning slightly at the same time.

There was a pause.

"Oh, well, come to think of it, I believe I had this dance engaged with Miss Slotters," he mumbled, and stumbled off.

For awhile she sat without thought amid the Paris greenery. Then suddenly she thought, "I wondah if he could have meant the matcheetchi?"—Louisville Times.

The Sibilant Art.

London has heard a good deal more of the "futurist" music of Schönberg, Stravinsky, Scriabine, Ornstein, etc., than New York has, but we are not jealous. The only noticeable result of the hearing of this sort of music, made up entirely of false notes, is that it has taught Londoners the art of hissing.—New York Evening Post.

The library of the British Museum contains upward of six hundred thousand playbills bound in three hundred and forty volumes.

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave. New York

LEWIS
SHAWE
Baritone
Recital, Concert, Oratorio Schiffman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 W. 67th St. Tel.: Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THF WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

Zoellner Quartet
Coast to Coast
Tour 1914-15
H. Culbertson, Fine Arts Bldg, Chicago

MINNESOTA MUSIC TEACHERS' ANNUAL MEETING.

The Entire Program of Unusual Interest and Benefit.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 26, 1914.

The thirteenth annual meeting of the music teachers of the State of Minnesota convened in Minneapolis, June 23, 24 and 25.

Association is Incorporated.

The first session was called to order by ex-President Heinrich Hoevel, at 10 a. m., June 23, in the ordinary of the West Hotel. A full hour was spent in transferring the association into a registered corporation. Last year, in Duluth, this move was approved and was put in legal form by Lawyer Walter Holsinger, who was present June 23. The articles of incorporation, read by Secretary Edward Towler, were all accepted.

Members Urged to Take State Examinations.

President Leopold Bruenner, of St. Paul, then took the chair. In his opening address he made a very spirited and strong appeal to members of the association to take the State examination for teachers, thus setting an example to teachers in the State.

Reports Prove Interesting.

The nine congressional districts of the State have been presided over by nine vice-presidents, whose duties were to get new members for the association and to further the cause of good music. The principal way that they found to help the cause, was to organize associations of music teachers in the small towns. They found, also, that music was not taught in all the country schools. The school boards were petitioned to hire music supervisors (where they could afford such an expense), and when the funds would not permit to engage grade teachers who could teach music, even if it were only a little. The great interest in music is percolating to the very smallest town in Minnesota. These reports were most interesting. The financial report of $395 in the treasury, likewise, was very gratifying.

"Minnesota Music" is Widely Read.

"Minnesota Music" is the bi-monthly, sixteen page magazine, published in the interest of the teachers of the State. The first issue appeared last fall; it and the subsequent issues have been paid for by advertising. An advertising solicitor was engaged who worked for a certain commission. The first editor was also the second vice-president, Wilma Anderson-Gilman. On account of the illness of Mrs. Gilman, the last issue was edited by Ruth Anderson.

The Violin Round Table.

The whole program of the annual meeting was one of great interest. At 11 a. m., June 23, the violin round table was conducted by Gustav Flaaten, of Duluth. After a few appropriate remarks, he read a most interesting paper that had been sent to the association by Francis McMillan, the well known violinist, on the method of Professor Auer, of St. Petersburg. Mr. McMillan claims that Professor Auer's first consideration is tone, and, second, technic. Professor Auer's method might be said to emphasize three points, i. e., the position of the violin, and of the right and left hand. His idea of holding the violin is to touch as little of the clothing as possible, because clothes mute a violin. The violin should touch near the chin rest; the weight should rest on the collar bone and left hand; this makes the Auer pupil hold his violin much higher than other masters' pupils. Then great pressure should be used in both hands. As Mr. McMillan has studied also under Joachim, Flesch, Halir and César Thompson, the paper was of especial value for the Auer method.

Talks on Amateur Orchestra Work.

Mr. MacPhail then gave an illuminating talk on amateur orchestra work. He cited the widespread movement in this city to have orchestras wherever possible. Besides the three large orchestras, the Amateur Symphony Orchestra, Heinrich Hoevel, conductor; the Art Orchestral, Wm. MacPhail, conductor, and the Y. M. C. A. Orchestra, Ruth Anderson, conductor, there are ten or twelve grade school and a number of night school ones, five in the street car stations and five in the five High Schools. Mr. MacPhail told in very convincing language of the good that ensemble playing does a pupil; he even asserted that a student who had studied six months could begin to play in an orchestra (easy music, of course), and be much benefited in keeping time and playing in tune. He gave examples which had come under his notice, and cited as a superlative example the concert given here April 28, by more than one hundred players, at the Auditorium, when a real artistic finish was obtained by these amateurs with only four rehearsals. This concert was given by the combined organizations, the Amateur Symphony, Art Orchestral and Y. M. C. A. Orchestras, and was divided into three parts, each part directed by one of the three conductors. He explained that he thought that such a large organization of amateurs could not be kept together permanently, because players are apt to skip rehearsals, for they figure that they will not be missed; such was found to be the case in the above concert. Mr. MacPhail called upon T. P. Giddings, supervisor of music in the public schools of Minneapolis, to speak on what is being done for grade school orchestras. Mr. Giddings cited the Maidstone movement in England, where thirty or more violinists play music in unison, later playing the harmony. Mr. Giddings told of the progress made in the grade schools now with no set time for orchestra practice, and said that the Board of Education is considering appointing an orchestra conductor on a salary next season, to go to the seventy-two grade schools of the city and organize orchestras. Objection was made by a member of the association on the ground that such a project would not thrive unless a proficient director were hired. Mr. Giddings said that he had recommended such a person.

Otto Meyer then read an excellent paper on "Silent Practice." He gave his experiences while studying abroad with Sevcik and Professor Eberhart in the Hartz Mountains. He told some incidences of Paganini and other great violinists who have done much silent practising. He showed a new invention by a firm in Lincoln, Neb., called the "Menusier," which seems to be a help for any one who would want to do silent practising.

The Voice Round Table.

At 2 p. m., Tuesday afternoon, J. Austin Williams conducted the voice round table. He asked many questions, calling on different ones present to answer. The distinctions found in enunciation, pronounciation and articulation were discussed; voluntary and involuntary breathing was another subject. Willard Patten propounded the theory that it is more desirable to listen to a poor voice used by a good interpreter than to hear a fine voice badly used. Dr. Caryl B. Storrs spoke on this subject; he mentioned the singers, Blanche Marchesi and Dr. Ludwig Wüllner, who handle their own voices so wonderfully well. He said that it was a joy to hear their scholarly renderings of songs, but that one could but wish that they had been blessed with great voices.

The Public School Music Round Table.

At 3 p. m., the Public School music round table was conducted by Agnes Fryberger, who is the assistant supervisor in the public schools of Minneapolis. She called upon Mae Kimberly to give a résumé of the proceedings at the national convention of music supervisors held here in April. A detailed account of this convention appeared in the Musical Courier. The discussions of this round table centered around this report and were very interesting.

In the evening an informal reception took place in the ballroom of the West Hotel. A program of "stunts" was given and the evening passed very enjoyably.

The Piano Round Table.

Wednesday, at 9 a. m., Gertrude Dobbyns presided at the piano round table. Miss Dobbyns had spent much time arranging this hour and it was one of the most instructive of the whole session. Her main point was to get at what constitutes a modern pianist's repertoire. Eloise Schryock was the first speaker; she gave, from her own experience in teaching, a complete list of what she considers to be best in all piano literature. She was followed by Eugene Skaaden, who told of the Breithaupt natural technical work. This paper was entirely satisfactory. Ethel Daugherty's paper on "Etudes," which to teach and which to eliminate, was most instructive, also Mary Peck gave an instructive talk on the Kate Chittenden School (of New York) method of teaching very young pupils. Then

Marie Meyer-Ten Broeck read a paper on the repertoire for the most advanced pupils, telling which sonatas to teach and what chamber music to practise. Donald Ferguson gave a résumé of his experiences in trying to teach Bach to Americans. He thinks it more advisable to give suites or movements from suites for a time, until the pupils will want to study Bach.

The Organ Round Table.

At 3 p. m., Edwina Wainman presided at the organ round table, given at the Parish House of St. Mark's Church; this well conducted discussion was followed by an organ recital in St. Mark's Church by Stanley Avery. He played this program with his accustomed artistry:

Choral, Es ist das Heil uns Kommen her..... Kirnberger
Pastoral ..... Cesar Franck
Absolute ..... Gigout
Toccata ..... Gigout
Toccata and fugue, C major..... J. S. Bach
Consolation, D flat..... Liszt
Spozalizio ..... Liszt
Chromatic Fantasie ..... Thiele

MacPhail String Quartet Heard.

At 8. 15 p. m., the MacPhail String Quartet, with Donald Ferguson, pianist; Marie Meyer-TenBroeck, pianist, and Otto Meyer, violinist, gave a program at the Unitarian Church. The personnel of the quartet is William MacPhail, first violinist; J. Rudolph Peterson, second violinist; Edward H. Towler, viola, and Oscar Koch, cellist. The E flat, op. 125, No. 1 Schubert string quartet was played with fidelity to the spirit and form of the work. Mr. MacPhail is the leader and was well supported by his players. Mr. Meyer and Mrs. TenBroeck gave a reading of the remarkable sonata in A, op. 100, for piano and violin, by Brahms. The program closed splendidly with the Schumann quintet in E flat, op. 44. Mr. Ferguson played the piano part. These competent and enthusiastic musicians played brilliantly and almost as if inspired.

The Picnic.

Thursday morning the association attended a picnic on the historic grounds at Minnehaha Falls. The late profuse rains made the falls more beautiful than they have been in many years.

The Annual Business Meeting.

In the afternoon the annual business meeting was held. William MacPhail was elected president; L. A. Bortel, first vice-president; Edwina Wainman, second vice-president; J. Austin Williams, secretary-treasurer; J. B. Vandergrift, of Albert Lea, auditor; the members of the program committee are George Fairclough, Gustav Flaaten, Elsie Shaw, John Jaeger and Gertrude Dobbyns; members of the examining board are Hamlin Hunt, James Lang, Roland Pease, Heinrich Hoevel and Mrs. Agnes Fryberger.

The next meeting will be held the last Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of June, 1915, in Albert Lea, Minn.

Residents of Minnesota Give Closing Program.

The interest of the convention culminated in the program given Thursday evening at the Unitarian Church, which consisted of music composed by residents of Minnesota. George Fairclough, of St. Paul, opened the program with a tasteful and skilfully composed organ solo called "Lead, Kindly Light." He accompanied Alfred Greenfield, a boy soprano, in a solo which had quite as much merit as his first composition. He played still another organ solo, which was not, however, up to the standard of the two other compositions.

Willard Patten's part songs for women's voices made a delightful number; they were sung by Martha Cook, first soprano; Mrs. Adrian Alice Pratt, second soprano; Mrs. Tenie Murphy-Sheehan, first alto, and Mrs. J. Robert Stites, second alto.

Kathleen Hart-Bibb sang four songs in her sweet soprano voice: "The Seal Mother's Lullaby," by Faith Helen Rogers, of Duluth; "Pierrot," by Helen Livingston, and two songs by Frank Bibb, "A Persian Love Song" and "Hymn to Apollo."

Gertrude Dobbyns played a scholarly "Second Prelude," by David Patterson, and "Melodic Invention," a rhapsodical piece of her own which showed real merit and was certainly original. Four very interesting songs were sung by Dr. Ray R. Moorhouse, who was accompanied by the composer, Stanley Avery. They were: "Cavalier's Song," "In Holyrood," "The Song of the Timber Trail" and "Song of the Street Sweep."

Giuseppe Fabrini was accepted as a Minnesota composer, though in all other advertising he is an Italian. The by-laws of the association accept one as a resident after one year. His composition for violin and piano is elaborate and scholarly and was well played by himself and Otto Meyer.

Ruth Anderson.

Felice Lyne and L. d'Aubigne.

On June 13, in Paris, at the Theatre des Champs Elysées, Felice Lyne added another triumph to her already long list, by her appearance with the Boston Opera Company as Rosina in the "Barber of Seville," winning an ovation in a cast which included McCormack, Amato and Marcoux.

She repeated her success as Rosina at a subsequent appearance, which was followed by an excellent performance of Oscar in the "Ballo in Maschera."

She appeared also in the second act of the "Barber," at the gala performance, which closed the Paris season, June 19.

Miss Lyne made her reappearance in London in a concert at the Royal Albert Hall, June 21. This young soprano became known by her tremendous success won at her debut as Gilda in "Rigoletto" at the London Opera House, in 1911, and she augmented this success throughout two operatic seasons in London.

Last season, Thomas Quinlan engaged her as leading coloratura soprano for his second world tour of the Quinlan Opera Company.

Miss Lyne appeared with this organization in the leading cities of South Africa, Australia and Canada.

At the conclusion of the tour this spring, she was engaged for a special performance of "Rigoletto" at the Boston Opera House the last week of the season, where she was received with tremendous enthusiasm and was immediately secured for twenty performances with that company during the coming season.

Her instantaneous success in Paris was a source of great gratification to one person, especially interested in her career, L. d'Aubigne, the distinguished teacher, who prepared Miss Lyne, himself formerly a well known operatic tenor.

His debut was made at the Metropolitan Opera House and he was the associate of all the great singers of that time, i. e., Melba, Calvé, Plançon, de Reszke and others there, at Covent Garden, and at many of the foremost opera houses in Europe.

For the past eight years, M. d'Aubigné has been one of the most successful teachers in Paris, taking particular interest in preparing pupils for the stage, for which he is especially fitted by reason of his own long and successful career.

Miss Lyne worked with him exclusively for about two seasons before beginning her career, and has regularly returned each season for further coaching, whenever her engagements permitted.

L. D'AUBIGNE BETWEEN LESSONS AT SEVRES.

Besides his studio in Paris, M. d'Aubigné has a large and attractive villa at Sèvres, just outside the city, where many of his pupils live "en pension."

(Advertisement.)

Louise Jansen Wylie at Mariners' Concerts.

Return engagements are among the best evidences of an artist's ability to please an audience. Louise Jansen Wylie fulfilled her third engagement with the Woman's Auxiliary of the New York Port Society last Thursday evening and an audience which taxed the capacity of the auditorium testified to her popularity.

Mme. Wylie has also been filling Florence Hinkle's position at the West End Collegiate Church, New York, while that ever increasingly popular artist is en tour.

The Chickering PIANO

The possession of a Chickering marks the limit of musical luxury. It not only brings to its owner absolute superiority of mechanical and tonal qualities, but that ideal and delicate individuality of design and finish which indicates highest musical taste and refinement.

"The Oldest in America—The Best in the World."

Sold Everywhere. Write for Catalog and full information.

Chickering & Sons

Div.—American Piano Co.

PIANOFORTE MAKERS

Boston, U S. A.

Serato Encomiums.

Arrigo Serato, the Italian violinist, is lauded as a Bach, Beethoven and Brahms interpreter in the following press notices which appeared in the Vienna, Graz and Karlsbad press:

VIENNA.

Arrigo Serato rendered Bach's violin concerto with great preciseness and variety of tone.—Deutsches Volkblatt.

The artist's technical command over his instrument is just as commendable as his perfect and beautiful tone.—Neue Freie Presse.

GRAZ.

Arrigo Serato has already made a distinct impression on the musical world by his perfect technic earlier in the year. Last night he heightened this impression by his performance of three concertos by Brahms, Beethoven and Bach, which he interpreted with perfect clarity. All these three compositions were performed with charm of a perfect singing tone and true poetry. Grazer Montags Zeitung.

Arrigo Serato performed brilliantly on this evening. He has a combination of the fire of the South and the calmness of the North. The cantilena in Bach's adagio was invested with a beautiful singing tone. In the performance of Beethoven's compositions he showed the volume of his tone and his true musical understanding. He seemed to understand Beethoven, the master, as well as Brahms, whose compositions he played with quality such as Brahms might have given to it. Serato's simplicity stands out in his art. It is the main thing in everything he does.—Grazer Tagespost.

Arrigo Serato performed the various compositions with delightful simplicity, plasticity and poetic feeling. He was the recipient of enthusiastic applause. The artist showed the zenith of his art in his splendid conception of Beethoven, Bach and Brahms.—Grazer Wochenblatt.

Serato possesses that rare combination of temperament and calmness. He interpreted Beethoven with a spirit that was worthy of the great master. At the conclusion of the performance the audience gave vent to great enthusiasm.—Neue Grazer Tagepost.

At yesterday's concert Serato proved himself to be a great artist. Serato plays Bach beautifully. He has a pure tone, sharply defined technic, plasticity and preciseness in his playing, and these are the requirements for the performance of Bach's violin compositions. Serato gives a true performance at all times, and his beautiful tonal quality stands out above everything else. He has a splendid instrument which aids him in obtaining wonderfully soft tonal effects. The Bach compositions showed Serato at his best, and particularly in the first and second movements did he display what a temperamental artist he is.—Grazer Volksblatt.

Serato can be considered as a master of the violin because of his marvelous technic. The Brahms violin concerto, op. 77, gave him a good opportunity to display the same. He has a pure tone and inspiring interpretation and this places him in the foremost ranks of violinists of the present day. He won the approval of the audience by his splendid performance.—Karlsbader Tageblatt.

There was a large audience at the fourth Philharmonic Concert of the Kurhaus, which took place on Monday, February 2. Arrigo Serato was the soloist. The artist played the violin concerto by Bach, and the Brahms concerto, op. 77, with a cadenza by Busoni accompanied by the orchestra. Serato's bowing is unusually light and graceful, and the artist possesses a beautiful and clear tone. The audience was very generous in its applause, and was not satisfied until it received the desired encore.—Karlsbader Zeitung.

(Advertisement.)

The new organist had received from his Vicar a pencilled note: "Mr. Summer has died; please play Dead March." The organist had no copy of the "Saul" march, and so played Tosti's "Good-bye" as the next nearest, with special emphasis on the phrase "Good-bye to Summer, good-bye, good-bye."—Monthly Musical Record.

Combination Recitals of Two of the Most Brilliant Young Artists of the Present Generation

ALICE EVERSMAN.

ALICE EVERSMAN

AMERICAN SOPRANO

Has achieved emphatic successes as a member of the Chicago, Montreal and Karlsruhe Grand Ducal Opera (Germany).

YELENA VON SAYN

RUSSIAN VIOLINIST

Her fame as a violinistic celebrity of the first magnitude is artistically established in Europe; likewise in America.

Programs Selected from the Greatest Operatic and Instrumental Composers

Under the exclusive Management of W. L. Radcliffe, 406 Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.

YELENA VON SAYN.

U. S. KERR

BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty

For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

GABRILÓWITSCH

THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST

AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915

Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.

MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

FLORENCE MULFORD

CONTRALTO

Of the Metropolitan Opera Company

HAENSEL & JONES

Aeolian Hall, 27 West 42d Street NEW YORK

Personal Address:

1104 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

Phone, 525 W-Market

MORE TRIBUTES TO THE SUPREME ART OF

EDMUND BURKE

The Irish Baritone, On His Coast-to-Coast Tour with Melba and Kubelik

"His Irish temperament with its irresistible buoyancy lends a remarkable charm to his beautiful voice."—Portland Oregonian.

"Burke sang with such fine intonation and perfect diction that the house went wild with enthusiasm."—Detroit Times.

"He has a manner that brings his auditors to him and his mood at once."—Cleveland Leader.

"A wonderful voice."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

"Mr. Burke succeeded not only in interesting his audience but in holding it until the last moment and securing a number of recalls."—Chicago Daily News.

"His voice is a magnificent baritone of great range, full of dramatic capacity, properly restrained to meet the demands of the concert stage."—Cincinnati Post.

EDMUND BURKE'S RETURN TO AMERICA NEXT SEASON FOR AN EXTENDED CONCERT TOUR PROMISES TO BE AN EVENT OF FIRST IMPORTANCE.

ORGANIZATIONS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY ARE EAGER TO SECURE AN APPEARANCE OF THIS SPLENDID IRISH SINGER WHO HAS WON SUCH OVERWHELMING POPULARITY.

For Terms and Dates, Application Should Be Made IMMEDIATELY to Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York.

Fanning's Seventh Season in Columbus.

Marking the seventh return engagement during the last five years in Columbus, Ohio, Cecil Fanning, the prominent young American baritone, appeared there on two consecutive evenings, June 15 and 16, as soloist with the Choral Union of the Ohio State University, in its splendid presentation of Smieton's "King Arthur." The artist was greeted on each occasion with an audience numbering over twenty-five hundred and his reception at the hands of so many of his old admirers proved surpassing, if anything, to that of any ever accorded him before in the Ohio State capital.

Fanning was heard in two of the leading roles comprised in "King Arthur," but even at that, as one of the leading local papers claimed, they were both far too small to grant sufficient appreciation for the many friends of this dramatic singer. The various notices from the Columbus critics expressed in terms of utmost favor their deep respect for young Fanning's art. Likewise they noted that all assertive fact which has always spoken so highly of this versatile baritone's work in recent years—that steady power which so prominently marks the ever increasing popularity and heightening element of maturity which apparently follows this artist through all his activities in the concert world.

Any intimation, even though it be the slightest, to the effect that Fanning has already reached the zenith of his artistic or public career, would be doing him a grave injustice and one which would be asserted presumably throughout the entire American musical world, for Fanning has long since risen into a position of widespread favor and much more is still to be expected from this true American talent.

Fanning was immediately reengaged for one of the Columbus Choral Union's concerts next season. He will also appear there in the Irish love sketch which was written and arranged by himself and H. B. Turpin, his successful accompanist and coach, at some future date, to be announced later.

John Finnegan's Best Season.

John Finnegan has closed the best season of his career. The tenor's next season is well booked with several tours and engagements all over the United States and Canada. He has begun his tenth year as solo tenor of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York.

Some recent press notices follow:

Mr. Finnegan's aria from "La Boheme," "Che Gelida Manina," was sung with musicianly timbre and interpretation. In "The Minstrel Boy," by Lover, and "Come Back to Erin," by Claribel, he was accompanied on the harp, which gave added interest to the rare old songs. The concert would have lacked something had Mr. Finnegan not sung for an encore "I Hear You Calling Me," which the audience struck fire over at the first bars of the prelude. That and "Mother Machree," which was another encore, beside "The Snowy Breasted Pearl," were sung with that rare emotional quality which John Finnegan ought to praise God for giving him. Those three songs held the palm for heart to heart eloquence. "Molly Bawn" and "The Low Backed Car" gave happy moments of humor to the audience.—Brooklyn Daily Eagle, May 13, 1914.

Mr. Finnegan was given pleasant receptions both by audience and chorus. His singing of the "Boheme" aria, "Che Gelida Manina," was one of the features of the matinee.--Columbus Dispatch, May 27, 1914.

Mr. Finnegan displayed his vocal equipment to the best advantage in this program. His singing disclosed a tenor voice of real beauty and in many instances it was used with unusual skill, a very lovely command of mezza-voce singing being one of Mr. Finnegan's chief assets. He was heard first in the familiar "Che Gelida Manina," from Puccini's "La Boheme," and later in a group of songs as well as in the duet from "Il Trovatore"—that warhorse—"Miserere." Mr. Finnegan's encores included Marshall's "I Hear You Calling Me," which is sung by every tenor, great and small, though few sing it as successfully as Mr. Finnegan.—Columbus Journal, May 27, 1914. (Advertisement.)

The Divine Art.

He was a lover of music who had just been to hear one of the great operas, and he was expatiating upon its beauties to an unresponsive friend, whom he observed to yawn. The music lover was hurt. "Look here, John," he protested, "don't you think music is of some practical benefit in life?"

"Oh, yes," said the unresponsive one. "Why, judging from the portraits I have seen of eminent musicians, especially pianists, I should say that music is great to keep the hair from falling out."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Newark's Schubert Orchestra.

The Schubert Orchestra, of Newark, N. J., and of which Philip Gordon, of 158 Bergen street, that city, is conductor, has proved quite popular with the young musicians there, and many have already signified their intention of joining its ranks. Mr. Gordon, who is a member of the Columbia University Orchestra, announces that the first work to be studied will be Schubert's Unfinished symphony in B minor.

MUSICAL NEWS IN OMAHA.

Omaha, Neb., June 29, 1914.

The Paulist Choir of Chicago, directed by Father Finn, gave two concerts in the Omaha Auditorium recently, and attracted good sized audiences on both occasions. The Paulist Choristers gave programs replete with variety and contrast, and well sustained their reputation for excellent part singing. Messrs. McGranahan and Dunford, and Masters Hartnett and Le Febore, all won honors as soloists. The concerts were promoted by the Letter Carriers' Association, and locally managed by Mrs. Shepherd, the well known impresaria from Milwaukee.

BOYD'S THEATRE TO BE RAZED.

Boyd's Theatre, a building with a history and of special interest to musicians because for many years it was the nearest approach to a studio building the city had, is to be torn down and will be replaced by a department store. This interesting building has housed many individuals who have since attained local and even national prominence, and its passing will be witnessed with regret.

KELLY ACCEPTS NEW POSITION.

Thomas J. Kelly, the well known voice teacher and conductor, has accepted a position as director of the music in St. Mary's Avenue Congregational Church. Mr. Kelly will assume his new duties in the fall. James E. Carnal, a prominent local musician, will succeed Mr. Kelly in the First Methodist Church.

LOUISE JANSEN-WYLIE TO RETURN.

Louise Jansen-Wylie, who has spent the past season in New York City, in the meantime making a good name for herself in the metropolis, will return to Omaha soon. Mrs. Wylie has accepted a position as soprano soloist in the First Presbyterian Church.

MARY MÜNCHHOFF ABROAD.

Mary Münchhoff, the popular soprano, left last week for England, in company with friends from this city. Miss Münchhoff will go later to Switzerland before returning to Omaha in the fall.

MISS HOPPER FAVORS SUNDAY CONCERTS.

Evelyn Hopper will continue in the managerial field next season, and will present practically all her attractions on Sunday afternoons at the Brandeis Theatre. Miss Hopper's series will include, among others, such well known names as Busoni, Kreisler, Gerville-Reache and George Hamlin.

RECITALS BY BORGLUM PUPILS.

August M. Borglum recently presented two of his pupils, Eleanor Lear and Florence Peterson, in individual piano recitals at the Borglum Piano School. Miss Lear was assisted by her sister, Emily Lear, a violin pupil of Henry Cox.

PUPILS HEARD IN OPERA SCENES.

Walter B. Graham presented a number of his pupils in an elaborate program of scenes from famous operas last Tuesday evening. The selections were given in costume and attracted a large audience.

MUSICAL COURIER'S BRUSSELS REPRESENTATIVE HERE.

Luella Anderson, the MUSICAL COURIER representative for the city of Brussels, is spending the summer with her parents in this city. Miss Anderson will return to Brussels in the fall.

MRS WELPTON PRESENTS PUPILS.

Mabelle Crawford Welpton brought out a number of her pupils in a closing recital on the evening of Tuesday, June 16, at the Y. W. C. A. Auditorium.

ADAH E. KLOPP TO LEAD.

Adah E. Klopp, who has maintained a voice studio in this city for the past year, has accepted a position as teacher of singing at Waterman Hall, in Sycamore, Ill., a few miles outside of Chicago, and will take up her duties there in the fall.

JEAN P. DUFFIELD.

Wagner's Music.

By the study of Wagner's masterpieces a glimpse of the eternal is had and once the vision of his truth fills the soul counterfeits are detected instinctively. The polyphony of Bach and the music of "Die Meistersinger" prove the spiritual kinship of Wagner with the founder of modern music. A Beethoven symphony and the "Tristan und Isolde" music demonstrate the common genealogy of the composer from Bonn and the maker of music dramas, but listen to the Strauss music from "Salome" when the prophet is being murdered in the well and then hear the mighty tone structure of the last scene from "Götterdämmerung" and observe that Strauss shrieks while Wagner chants.—San Francisco Call.

Ezerman Pupil Wins Soloist Diploma.

Anna Winnifred Atkinson has been awarded the soloist diploma in piano, in the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music. In the recent concert in Witherspoon Hall, Philadelphia, Miss Atkinson played with orchestra, Grieg's concerto, op. 16, second and third movements, receiving high praise for her work. Miss Atkinson is a pupil of D. Hendrik Ezerman.

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL H. Godfrey T... 1400 B'way, New York

JENNY DUFAU COLORATURA SOPRANO Concert Recital
CHICAGO-PHILADELPHIA GRAND OPERA COMPANY

VAN YORX THEO. ——— Tenor
Will teach throughout the Summer
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

BISPHAM
For Terms and dates Address All Communications to Private Address
44 West 44th Street, New York

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
Management: WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
Steinway Piano Used

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera
Management:
THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 West 34th Street, New York

A. CARBONE MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING
(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)
Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"
School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages
Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application
Thirty Years' Experience Highest References
Aeolian Hall, West 42nd Street :: :: :: New York City

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address - LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.

NELSON AND HIS ORCHESTRAL BAND
OF MINNEAPOLIS
Assisted by Celebrated Soloists, Will Make a Concert Tour During Months of October and November, 1914. For dates address
OTTO L. HEEGER, Mgr., Shiffman Building - St. Paul, Minn.

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

FLORYN OPERA PRODUCING CO., Inc.
1482 Broadway, Room 1105
Three Opera Bouffe Co's in repertoire
Applications in writing from Aspirants with good voices and talent will be considered

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 W. 34th St., New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

FLORENCE
TRUMBULL
PIANISTE
Vorbereiterin (ASSISTANT) to Theodor Leschetizky
VIII Laudongasse 22 - - - - Vienna, Austria

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE Coloratura Soprano
GRAND OPERA PRIMA DONNA
Season 1914-15 Now Booking Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals
European Address: - - - 68 rue de l'Aurore, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - - - - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana
GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

A Couple of Bispham Stories.

Amusing incidents are constantly happening to all people before the public, and David Bispham is no exception to the rule.

"The other day," says the baritone, "I had an instance of the linguistic performance of those who insist upon singing in foreign languages, without knowing anything about them, and with scarcely more knowledge of English, I fear. A fellow came up to me and asked me where he could get a certain duet he had read about my singing. He said he thought it would be fine for him and his 'fie-ann-cee,' as he called her, to sing at a concert they were engaged for. Upon inquiring more particularly, I found he wanted information in regard to the duet from Mozart's 'Don Giovanni'—'La, ci darem la mano'—only I had some difficulty in recognizing the familiar selection under the disguise of 'Lacey dare 'em lamono,' which was what he called it.

"On top of this he asked me to hear him sing, but as it was not convenient for me to do so at that time, I had a little talk with him instead. Often one can tell the character of the singing voice from the way the speaking voice sounds, but I was puzzled by the man's timbre and so asked him what his voice was. 'Well,' he said, 'I dunno 'zackly. It useter be a bass but my teacher says it's a tenner-a-bustum now.' And so it fell to my lot to give this lad his first lesson in a foreign language. To explain the meaning of tenore robusto."

Mr. Bispham tells another story on himself. Being a non-smoker, he does not even care about being near lighted tobacco, especially just before singing.

At his recent highly successful engagement in Toronto, where in his honor, the boxes each night were full of people in evening clothes, reminding one of the opera, he arrived at his dressing room at Shea's Theatre, only to find a man sitting there with the door closed, and smoking a big cigar. Mr. Bispham politely requested him to state his business, but pointedly added, "Smoke kills my throat, so please leave your cigar outside." The smoker did so, and then returned saying confidentially, "Don't tell anybody what salary you are getting. There's a lot of people about trying to find out a person's business." With which, he went away, leaving Mr. Bispham in astonishment. Turning to the stage manager, the singer asked who it was who forced his advice and cigar upon him in this unceremonious manner. He was more astonished still to learn that it was Jerry Shea himself, the proprietor and manager of the theatre.

Owner and artist did not meet until the last night of the engagement, when Mr. Shea brought an old friend around upon the stage to shake hands with the man who had filled his theatre all the week, but before admitting the stranger to Mr. Bispham's dressing room, he stopped him with a sly remark, of "Hold on there, Tim, just leave your cigar outside."

MME. C. DE RIGAUD TAKING A SPIN IN THE PARK
With one of her summer pupils in her Detroit Electric.

May Porter an Able Director.

May Porter should be congratulated upon the splendid work of the Cantaves Chorus, which gave its ninth annual concert in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, recently. Under the able direction of Miss Porter, this chorus was heard in Elgar's "The Snow" and "Fly, Singing Bird, Fly." In both of these numbers, the good interpretative ability of the Cantaves Chorus was shown to advantage. A new and interesting number was advanced in Kramer's "Mirage," in which an incidental contralto solo was beautifully rendered by Elizabeth Bonner. Another interesting feature of this number was the violin obligato by Dorothy Bible. The two other soloists were Edna Florence Smith, who sang the solo soprano part in "The Kisses," by Bemberg-Mathews, and Henri Merriken, who interpreted two groups of songs in excellent style. The concert was one of the most successful of the latter half of the season of 1913-1914.

Violinist—I want an E string, please.

Cockney Clerk—Would you mind picking one out yourself, sir? I 'ardly know the 'es from the shes.—Puck.

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street, New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST
TOURING EUROPE SEASON 1914-1915
Management. ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA
Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus
"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies.
MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mahel Wilhur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone, Bryant 8520

OSCAR SAENGER—Teacher of Singing
Teacher of Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto, Conried Grand Opera Co.; Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.; Lila Robeson, contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.; Rudolf Berger, tenor, Metropolitan Opera Co.; Heinrich Hensel, tenor, Metropolitan Opera Co.; Paul Althouse, tenor, Metropolitan Opera Co.; Austin Hughes, tenor, Metropolitan Opera Co.; Louis Kreidler, baritone, Metropolitan Opera Co.; Helen Warrum, soprano, Chicago Opera Co.; Agnes Berry, soprano, Chicago Opera Co.; Henri Scott, basso, Chicago Opera Co.; Allen Hinckley, basso, Chicago Opera Co.; Mabel Siemonn, soprano, Hammerstein Opera Co.; Orville Harrold, tenor, Hammerstein Opera Co.; Kathleen Howard, contralto, Century Opera Co.; Dr. Hugh Schussler, basso, Century Opera Co.; Florence Hinkle, soprano; Mildred Potter, contralto; Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Léon Rains, basso, Dresden Royal Opera; Mme. Sara Anderson, soprano, Grand Opera; Mme. Carolyn Ortman, soprano, Grand Opera; Irvin Myers, baritone, Grand Opera; Joseph Baernstein-Regneas, basso, Grand Opera; Marie Stoddart-Gayler, soprano; Alice Merritt-Cochran, soprano; Laura Combs, soprano; Bessie Bowman-Estey, contralto; Mae Jennings, mezzo-soprano; Louise Barnolt, contralto; John Young, tenor; George Murphy, tenor; Edwin Evans, baritone. Phone, 687 Lenox Studio: 6 East 81st St., New York

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG
Summer Course for Teachers, Amateurs and Professionals by these famous artists. TORONTO, CANADA.

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St., :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapolis, Minn.

The MEHAN Summer School for Teachers and Singers
July 7—Aug. 15. Appointments By Mail
Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 15
SUITE 70, CARNEGIE HALL, TEL. 5946 COLUMBUS

The Eminent Austrian Pianist
MME. MARIE VON UNSCHULD
Piano Recitals and Lectures on Technic by Motion Pictures
EUROPEAN CONCERT BUREAU, 1320 F St., Washington, D. C.

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
133 West 80th St. Tel. Schuyler 3786 New York City
Mr. Regneas will teach but 3 days weekly during July and August.
No interviews granted excepting by appointment.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

Alice PRESTON SOPRANO
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON 1451 Broadway, New York

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

JOHN McCORMACK
CELEBRATED IRISH TENOR
In America Entire Season 1914-15
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Personal Management: CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

JUNE MUSIC IN FORT WORTH.

(Continued from page 6.)

Rudmose; business manager, Mrs. T. H. Wear. Carl Venth will direct the chorus again.

The annual luncheon was held at the Westbrook Hotel the day after the final musicale. Mrs. R. I. Merrill and Mrs. M. D. Hansard were the committee in charge, and Mrs. O. F. Carlson served as toastmistress; this event proved a delightful close to the season's work.

Last Symphony Orchestra Concert.

The fourth and last of a series of concerts by the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra was given to an audience that packed the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, many people standing throughout the program. The orchestral numbers were well chosen and enthusiastically received, the players having made splendid progress under Conductor Venth. The soloists were Andrew Hemphill, tenor and Dot Echols, pianist. Mr. Hemphill is one of Fort Worth's prominent musicians and teachers. He has spent several years in Paris studying with Oscar Seagle and Jean de Reszke and is an authorized exponent of the de Reszke method. His numbers on this occasion were splendid examples of this famous method and the audience received them with enthusiasm. They were "Siegmund's Love Song" from "Die Walkure," recitative, "Comfort Ye" and aria, "Every Valley" from the "Messiah." Miss Echols, a young Fort Worth pianist of exceptional talent, played the Mendelssohn "Capriccio Brillante" in a thoroughly satisfying manner, displaying clean technic, good taste and artistic feeling. The interest manifested in these orchestral concerts has been extremely gratifying to those interested in the musical life of the city. It has shown a decided growth in appreciation on the part of the public, which augurs well for the future. The expenses have been guaranteed by subscriptions for season tickets at popular prices after which the concerts have been thrown open to the public. The same plan will be followed next year with the series of concerts extending throughout the season. An Orchestral Association has been formed with the following officers: Ben Tillar, president; Mrs. J. F. Lyons, vice-president; A. W. Grant, secretary and Ellison Harding, treasurer, with a board of directors chosen from the leading business men, musicians and club women of the city.

Three Recitals of Note.

Clarence A. Marshall presented his pupil, Grace Ray, in a pleasing recital, recently. Miss Ray's numbers included: aria, "More Regal" from "Queen of Sheba"; "I Will Extol Thee," Costa; song cycle, "An April Heart," Clough-Leighter; "Summer Rain," DeKoven, and "At the Making of the Hay," Lehmann. A beautifully clear, high soprano voice, good diction, and artistic interpretation with a pleasing stage presence made this a delightful program.

The graduate recitals of the piano department of Texas Christian University were exceedingly interesting. Pupils of Carl Beutel and Harold Techau were presented in these recitals and without exception gave evidence of capable work done under these splendid teachers.

It is also gratifying to report an interesting studio recital by the intermediate pupils of E. T. Croft. Four young girls, Emma Waller, Merle Waller, Rosa Rounsaville and Marion McKee gave evidence of splendid progress in a program which included "L'Harmonie des Anges," Bergmuller; valse brillante, Moszkowski; "Air de Ballet," Chaminade; etude in G minor, Heller and Polish dance, Scharwenka. Assisting on this program was Gertrude Gulledge, a young pupil of Sam S. Losh. The possessor of an unusually beautiful soprano voice, this young student gives promise of a career of much interest. She sang Rubinstein's "Asra," Grieg's "Ich Liebe Dich," "The Island of Gardens," by Coleridge-Taylor and "My Sweetheart," by Meyer-Helmund.

Pitner Songs.

G. Richardson Pitner, a local pianist and composer, whose songs were recently published by Clayton F. Summy, is in receipt of programs showing the use of these songs, "Two Roses," "A Song of Love" and "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes," by Paul W. Peavy, New York, June 1, and Mrs. Paul Betts, Athens, Ga., June 22.

L. M. L.

Pagliacci.

Child of those lovers, mortal Mirth and Woe,
Poor Pagliaccio, fool and lover both.
How often have I laughed, and left you loath.
Not dreaming that your play was mingled so
With prayers and creeping dread; or that the show
Of gaudy silks could hide so red a heart,
A mind so tantalized and torn apart,
A soul so taunted of the powers below,
And look! the laugh, the kiss, the sudden blow,
The flaring lights, and frightened faces round
A stained and sinking form! Oh, sure I know
That rising, ringing cry! The knife has found
A lovely sheath! Aha, Pagliaccio!
Your heart was breaking then; I know the sound.

—Century Magazine.

STEINWAY

THE owner of a Steinway never speaks of it as "a good piano"—the name means so much more than that. It signifies sweetness, purity and power of tone unexcelled.

Mechanically as well as artistically the Steinway is a world standard—the preferred piano of untold thousands of music lovers of all countries. It is the instrument by which all other pianos are judged and measured.

These facts are of the utmost value in the choice of a piano, and the purchase of a Steinway not only reflects the intelligent judgment of the buyer, but it puts the seal of supreme approval upon his musical taste. This should appeal to you.

We shall be glad to send you illustrated literature about the Steinway Piano and the name of the Steinway dealer nearest you.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
Subway Express Station at the Door.

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Pegujar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 8, 1914.

No. 1789

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building,
Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 7. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA.—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.— Katherine Whipple-Dohhs, 426 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO— Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.— Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS— Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES— Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY— Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA— Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyda Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.— Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.— William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES— Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER— Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.— John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.— Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
LONDON—
Mrs. Evelyn Kaesmann,
5 Portland Place, London W.
LEIPSIC—
Eugene E. Simpson, Nürnbergerstrasse 27.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenatuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY.—
Miss Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florianigasse 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
BRUSSELS, BELGIUM—
Luella Anderson, 52, rue de l'Ermitage.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roalagsgatan 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

Some operas, like some children, are better seen than heard.

Men who claim to be wedded to their art sometimes make but a sorry showing in the offspring from the union.

The Grand Duke of Weimar conferred upon Richard Strauss on his fiftieth birthday the golden medal for art and science.

"Can Fright Whiten Hair?" asks the Literary Digest. Try us with the announcement of another production of "Mona."

Now that Berlin is well on its way toward getting its new opera house we suggest respectfully that it produce a few new operas there occasionally.

Just two weeks to the opening of the Bayreuth Festival. There was a time when such an anticipation used to create more excitement than it does now.

The musical world will be vastly relieved to learn that a marble tablet has been placed on the house in Florence where Caccini died on December 10, 1618.

The letter S, as the London Daily Telegraph points out, is beginning to have much significance in modern music—Strauss, Schönberg, Scriabine and Stravinsky.

Once in a while painters who depict persons performing upon the flute, the viol, the harp, or the piano, ought to show the players handling those instruments correctly.

Vanni Marcoux's female admirers in America—and they numbered legion—will read with interest that in Paris last Saturday the handsome and popular baritone married Mlle. Madeleine Morlay, an actress.

For the position of concertmaster of the Chicago Opera Alexander Sébald has just been engaged abroad. He has held similar positions in European symphony orchestras under Mahler, Nikisch, Muck and Weingartner.

Last week marked the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Christoph Willibald Gluck, which led several bromidiotic commentators to repeat that the composer of "Orfeo" was the Wagner of his day. As a matter of truth Gluck had nothing in common with the fiery Richard except the fact that they both wrote music.

A new musical column in the New York Morning Telegraph is called "Chords and Dischords," and presents very well written and interesting comment on matters tonal here and abroad. The writer is Stanley Olmsted and he appears to be one of the few New York musical penmen who find something musical to write about outside of grand opera and the salaries of singers and players.

As to the forthcoming $10,000 prize opera competition in Los Angeles, told about in another column, it seems that the selection of judges by the National Federation of Musical Clubs should comprise none of the judges of the Metropolitan Opera House prize competition of a few seasons ago. It is possible that some of the same scores which were submitted to the Metropolitan Opera $10,000 contest may be among those that will go into the Los Angeles competition. Over twenty were submitted in the New York contest, and, judging by "Mona," which won, it is difficult to believe that all rejected works were inferior to the one that received the prize.

A staff member wishes to know whether a paraphrase of Tennyson's famous lines would not apply to success in music, as follows:

"'Tis better to have been and be a 'has been'
Than never to be 'it' at all."

Erie, Pa., now has joined the list of American cities which gave successful music festivals this spring. The two men directly responsible for the fine results achieved in the energetic Pennsylvania town are Franz Kohler, conductor of the Erie Symphony Orchestra, and Morris G. Williams, conductor of the Erie Oratorio Society.

Lord Howard De Walden's Celtic tragedy, "Dyland," with music by Josef Holbrooke, was produced by Thomas Beecham at the Drury Lane Theatre in London last week. The reception of the work, as private cables impart, left something to be desired, for the public applauded while the critics appeared to be half surprised, half apologetic.

The operatic festival of the Berlin Royal Opera, which came to a close recently with the performance of "Rosenkavalier," as described in our Berlin letter on another page, lasted two weeks and was a great success, both artistically and financially. The box office statistics showed that 30,000 marks' worth of tickets were sold to persons residing outside of Berlin, and this is considered a remarkable showing for so short a period.

The largest audiences ever gathered to hear music in Central Park were there last Saturday and Sunday night. The attractions were Conductor Nahan Franko and a particularly fine band, made up of the leading wind instrumentalists of the New York Philharmonic Society and the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra. Franko is conducting at the park every evening this week except Monday and will conduct also next Sunday.

In the New York Sunday Tribune there is a department called "At Music Studios," which contains some excellent contributions. They are excellent because they are lifted bodily from the columns of the MUSICAL COURIER, as the Tribune issue of June 28, 1914, and the MUSICAL COURIER issue of June 24, 1914, will testify. The fact that the Tribune items in question are not credited to the MUSICAL COURIER doubtless is merely an oversight.

It is reported by the Pacific Coast Musical Review that the latest musical plans in connection with the Panama-Pacific Exposition comprise the organization of a special symphony orchestra of eighty men, an official Exposition band of forty-five men, a series of choral festivals, including an Eisteddfod, soloists' concerts, one hundred organ recitals by Mr. Lemare, of London, and about two hundred more divided among American organists.

Henry T. Finck, of the New York Evening Post, has been poring over European opera statistics and as one result of his findings announces that in Paris last year "Carmen" had nearly twice as many performances as any other opera and that during the decade 1901-1910, Bizet's masterpiece was the favorite opera in Germany, having been heard there 3,956 times. At the Metropolitan Opera House "Carmen" was not given at all last season, while such a purely ephemeral composition as "Julien" had five or six performances.

HOW TO GET A START.

There is no problem in the world of music more difficult to solve than that which confronts the young artist in his or her efforts to get a start. After the days of education are over and the fledgling artist begins to feel his wings the question of ways and means arises and the difficulties stand before him like an insurmountable wall. He feels, often with justice, that, could he but be heard, his success would be assured, but he knows of no means by which this may be accomplished.

One way there is, of course, which costs but little and lies within reach of almost every young artist: to rent a hall, invite a few friends, and give a recital. And this means has been tried over and over again, and always with the same disastrous result. The young artist comes away from it disheartened and a prey to the most profound despair. He has risked generally his last penny on this venture only to learn, too late, that it has been absolutely thrown away. Only by rare good luck is he able to get the musical critics of any of the best papers to attend this maiden effort, and, if any representatives of the press appear at all, they are, only too often, assistant critics who believe that to criticise harshly is to show their own knowledge. And then it usually happens that if this writing of an unknown newspaper cub about an equally unknown artist should happen to be favorable, it is cut down to a few lines by the managing editor, whose duty it is to save valuable news space.

Then again it is equally impossible for the young artist under these circumstances to get a representative public. Those music lovers among the amateurs whose good opinion would be valuable do not go to hear the efforts of an unknown. The reason of this is easy to understand. These amateurs, filled though they often are with the desire to discover and aid budding genius, have learned through frequent painful and bitter disappointment that conceit and aggressiveness often take the place of talent in the givers of such small concerts.

The self indulgence of a recital proving futile, how about the managers? They, of course, seem, at first, the haven of hope for the aspirant, just as is the publisher for the author, the dealer for the maker of a picture. But the managers are not interested in art for art's sake. They very well know that the existence of art depends not upon its perfection but upon its earning capacity. And, after all, the best criticism of art is the box office, for that is a worthless art which knows no public. If you doubt that, ask yourself how much general usefulness the best production possible would have were it heard only by the performers. As a great philosopher has pointed out, beauty itself is non-existent unless there be an eye to see it or an ear to hear it.

And so, though the young artist may inveigh against the managers, they are, after all, acting in the best interests of art by obeying the dictates of self preservation. The large amount of money now spent in this country on musical art is due solely to the splendid constructive and pioneer work of the managers and far reaching influence of the MUSICAL COURIER. We must thank not the public but the managers for the musical showing of America today. Certainly, they work for the purpose of making money, but as their interests coincide with the best interests of art and of the artist, no general criticism is possible.

And the manager must be convinced. He takes nothing on faith and risks nothing on his own judgment as a critic. This being the case, the young artist will do well to accept conditions and to adopt the only possible means of bringing his claims to the notice of the managers by first of all doing something in a more or less public way, and then advertising these doings in the only musical paper which acts as an authoritative guide for the managers, the MUSICAL COURIER.

Do not sing or play for nothing, but on the other hand, do not ask exorbitant prices for your early appearances before you have established fame and a market value. Stilted pride and stupid conceit often prompt young artists to insist that they will not sing or play for less than a certain sum. Once you get a reputation you may demand a thousand dollars or more for the smallest effort, but until you have risen from the ranks the demand for large fees is nothing less than suicidal.

No good effort which remains hidden is worth anything in a practical way, and the good effort which is known to the largest public naturally will be the most profitable.

HELPING AMERICAN COMPOSERS.

It is gratifying to learn that while Prof. Edgar Stillman Kelley is receiving so much recognition in Europe, his countrymen are also showing him marked attention at home. The following circular letter which explains itself has just been received:

THE STILLMAN KELLEY PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
Honorary president, Carl Stoeckel, Norfolk, Conn.
President, Ella May Smith, Columbus, Ohio.
Vice-president, Mrs. John H. Boalt, San Francisco, Cal.
Treasurer, Heinrich Meyn, New York City.

Honorary Committee: Dr. Felix Adler, New York; Mrs. Walter D. Bliss, San Francisco; Walter Bogart, New York; Allen A. Brown, Boston; Mrs. Thomas J. Emery, Cincinnati; Henry T. Finck, New York; Hamlin Garland, Chicago; Rupert Hughes, New York; Sidney Homer, New York; Robert Underwood Johnston, New York; Hamilton Wright Mabie, New York; Lawrence Maxwell, Cincinnati; Mrs. Roderick MacLeod, London, England; Martha Remmert, Berlin, Germany; Mrs. Samuel Swift, New York; Dr. Robert Sattler, Cincinnati; Mrs. Robert Sattler, Cincinnati; Professor Xaver Scharwenka, Berlin, Germany; Mrs. Carl Stoeckel, Norfolk, Conn.; Mrs. Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati; Thomas Tapper, New York; Mrs. Georgine Holmes Thomas, Cincinnati; Brainard B. Thresher, Dayton, Ohio.

At the present time there is much discussion concerning the support of creative musical art in our country. Prizes are being offered, productions are being planned, and other means devised for furthering its development, but as yet nothing has been done toward solving the serious problem of the engraving and publishing of the larger orchestral scores of our American composers.

Certain music clubs and a number of individuals interested are now arranging to publish the works of Edgar Stillman Kelley, an American composer of international reputation, who has written extensively for the orchestra.

It is the earnest wish of Stillman Kelley, for whom this movement has been started, that an organization of a permanent character be formed for the purpose of rendering a similar service to other American composers, and the committee is now working toward that end.

The compositions of Stillman Kelley, which are to be printed, have been publicly performed by many of the large orchestras and seriously considered by both critics and public.

At present Stillman Kelley is in Europe, bringing out his compositions with marked success. He was recently invited to conduct his "New England" symphony at the Liszt Society Festival in Altenburg, Germany. The festival was under the protection of His Highness, the Duke of Altenburg, who on several occasions "commanded the presence" of the composer as a guest at his castle, and also requested that some of his compositions be given on the regular Court concert programs next season.

ELLA MAY SMITH,
President.

Accompanying the foregoing circular is a card, reading as follows:

The Stillman Kelley Publication Society

To Mr. Heinrich Meyn, Treasurer,
150 West Fifty-ninth Street, New York.
Sir—I desire to become a member of the Stillman Kelley Publication Society and enclose $..... for.....copies of this composer's orchestral scores.
Symphony No. 1—Gulliver.
Symphony No. 2—New England.
Symphonic Suite—Macbeth.
Symphonic Suite—Aladdin.

Said score or scores to be delivered to me as soon as printed, or retained by the committee for presentation to music libraries.

Date.....191.....

Name .....

Address .....

The price of scores will be Ten Dollars each.

The list of subscribers and library presentations will be given to members in the annual report.

SING IN ENGLISH.

Some days following John McCormack's appearance in Bridgeport, Conn., the following editorial appeared in the Evening Farmer, the oldest, most conservative and influential paper in the State of Connecticut. It is from the pen of Lynn Wilson, one of the ablest of the best school of journalists in America. The article was headed: "The Way to Sing to English Speaking People Is in English."

Culture in its earlier stages seems always to have been in the possession of an exclusive class, and this exclusive class seems always to have been ashamed of the native product. Dante is famous because he wrote his wonderful works in the Italian language, which is to say, in the daily language of the living men and women about him. Spenser gained fame in the same way, by writing in the English language, instead of some dead, or stilled foreign language, affected by the "best people" of his time.

America today, with respect to its music, is in much the same state as Italy and England were in the time of Spenser and Dante with respect to literature.

Having developed little music of our own, we, through the limited number of persons of musical training, affect an undue admiration for music that is foreign, and especially for song in other languages than our own.

The result is that the really great singers who come to this country, or who belong to this country, have not contributed their share to the musical education of the people. They have not done what they might have done, nor even what they ought to have done, to create interest in good music.

Most of the great singers who have occasionally come to Bridgeport have done precisely what the writers before Dante did, what those before Spenser did. They have chosen to sing most of their songs in foreign tongues, and the audience has expressed an enthusiasm which it was far from feeling, while seanty attendance has indicated the real lack of popular interest.

How different is it with John McCormack, the first really great singer who has deigned to sing in the English tongue.

There are no cold audienees when McCormack appears. There are no empty houses when his voice is heard. His audiences are not composed of a few exclusive persons devoted to an art that is not and never can be national. There come into the McCormack audiences all the really cultured men and women of the community, who listen spellbound while a great artist sings great songs which they can understand.

Art is but a means of delineating and imitating truth. It is a means of conveying high thoughts from one mind to another. To convey such thoughts it is necessary that a medium of conveyance shall exist.

So it happens, and must always remain true, that great literature in the French tongue, will not be great literature to him who does not understand French. Nor can great songs be sung to those who understand only the English language, so that they will understand, save in English.

John McCormack is entitled to this fair meed of praise. He has done for song in America what Dante did for literature in Italy and what Spenser did for literature in England. He has done and is doing more to make America a nation cultured in music than anybody has done before him.

That this should be so is the more to his credit, for his training was purely classical, and he was submitted to that rigorous culture which has made every great singer in America, before his time, so far as the art of song was concerned, a foreigner.

McCormack's Italian is perfect in pronunciation, and before an audience of cultured Italians he would be as much an artist as he is before an audience of Americans singing in the tongue which Americans understand.

That a community should know and love music is much to be desired. It is from this standpoint that these few thoughts are uttered respecting Mr. McCormack and his art.

Jennie Lind gave the American people their first impulse toward great music. John MccCormack is giving them a second inspiration.

The Bridgeport Evening Farmer could have mentioned other singers who do much of their work in English. A few who at once jump into the mind are Bispham, Francis Rogers, Reinald Werrenrath, Herbert Witherspoon, Evan Williams, Reed Miller, Christine Miller, and many others—too many, in fact, to be enumerated in this place and at this time. In the concert field, the advance toward singing in English is immeasurably more rapid than in the operatic realm.

A "concert in costume" is what the London Tatler calls grand opera.

LOS ANGELES $10,000 OPERA PRIZE.

Music has become a business asset of Los Angeles, for in connection with the securing of the convention of the National Federation of Musical Clubs which will be held in that city in the summer of 1915, Los Angeles also will bring permanent grand opera to the lovely and thriving city of the Southwest.

Already the announcement of the selection of Los Angeles as the meeting place of the N. F. M. C. convention has been advertised throughout the civilized world, and the fact that a $10,000 prize has been raised and offered for a three-act opera, not to exceed in performance three and one-fourth hours, including intermissions (with the libretto in English and the text either original or translated), has brought over forty compositions to the committees from the best composers of note in this country, which assures the success of the enterprise.

With the formation of the American Opera Association of Los Angeles and the raising of $40,000 for the production of the prize opera, music seems to be placed on a sound commercial basis in the City of the Angels. On April 25, 1913, in Chicago, at a meeting of the National Federation, this opportunity was given to Los Angeles. F. W. Blanchard, Mrs. W. H. Jamison, L. E. Behymer, Gertrude Parsons, Charles Farwell Edson, and J. P. Dupuy helped to bring it about, and Mrs. Jason Walker, of the National Federation, also did an important part of the planning.

No manuscripts will be received by the opera committee before July 1, 1914, and none after August 1, 1914. The committee of award has already been selected and numbers among the names some of the best authorities on music in this country. As the time is limited for submitting operas in this competition, the scenes and characters of the libretti were not limited, but where everything else is of equal value, the preference will be given to a work dealing with American characters.

The opera is to be the culminating event of a music festival week in Los Angeles, and Mrs. Jason Walker, in charge of programs, has just finished consulting with the executive board, which includes F. W Blanchard, president; Mrs. W. H. Jamison, secretary; L. E. Behymer, vice-president; Gertrude Parsons, Charles Farwell Edson and J. P. Dupuy.

The offerings of the week in the way of concerts and other musical performances of importance are to be arranged to open June 24, a reception night, music furnished by the leading vocalists and instrumentalists of Los Angeles. Friday, June 25, the entire day will be devoted to musical programs by the pupils of the public schools, orchestral and choral. Saturday, June 26, orchestra concerts by the symphony and similar organizations. Sunday, June 27, every church of prominence in the city has arranged for sacred concerts in the afternoon and evening, many organ recitals having been planned. Monday, June 28, the choral clubs and organizations of Southern California and the United States will meet in competitive rivalry. Tuesday, June 29, orchestral concerts will be heard both day and evening, the compositions being in competition for cash prizes. Wednesday, June 30, artists' concerts are to be held day and evening. Many prizes will be given for the various events.

Thursday evening, July 1, marks the first performance of the American prize opera, July 2 its second performance, July 3 (matinee) its third. These first three performances are to be devoted exclusively to the visiting delegates and members of the National Federation of Musical Clubs. The evening of July 3 brings also a pageant of California music, from the aborigines, followed by the early Spanish, the mission music of the padres, the later Spanish music, the coming of the Gringo down to the present time, accompanied by a parade of the visiting musical delegates. The prize opera will continue for one week longer given over to the public.

AMERICAN OPERA ASSOCIATION EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
Bottom, left to right: Mrs. Jason Walker, Mrs. W. H. Jamison, L. E. Behymer; top row, left to right: Charles Edson, Gertrude Parsons, Fred W. Blanchard.

This, in brief, is the work that the committee has in hand and those who are acquainted with the personnel of the local board feel confident that not only will a world-wide interest be manifested in the production of this new American opera and the work of the Biennial Federation be carried out successfully, but that a new musical section will arise on the Pacific Coast that should eventually become a force in itself and bring forward Western music to an independent and imposing position.

MEXICO, PAST AND PRESENT.

In the year 1325, so runs the story, the Aztecs traveled south from the extreme northwestern part of the American continent and took up their abode in Anahuac, where the vanished Toltecs had last been seen, some two centuries earlier. A good omen guided them in selecting the site of their new city. They beheld a royal eagle with his broad wings open to the morning sun, perched on a cactus by the shining waves of a lake. Such a heaven-sent injunction was not to be disobeyed. No doubt the pessimists and critics among the wandering Aztecs regretted that the eagle had not gone farther inland with his prey. But the true believers, in all ages of the world more numerous than the skeptics, were not to be turned aside by the counsels of the ungodly. They drove piles in the low marshes and laid the foundations of their city in the shallows, for which act of faith they were rewarded in the fulness of time; for the waters of the lake receded and left the town on dry land, where it still remains. The city was called Tenochtitlan, signifying its miraculous origin. In the year 1519 the city of Tenochtitlan had nearly 60,000 houses, and a population estimated as high as 500,000 souls. When the Spaniards under Cortez saw it they thought it "like a thing of fairy creation rather than the work of human hands." But the Spaniards never could conquer the original name of the town. They called it after the name of the Aztec god of war, Mexitli, and the name that got abroad to Europe and which was subsequently fastened to the city and the country was Mexico.

The eyes of all the world are now on Mexico, metaphorically speaking. Those who have not actually set eyes upon the ancient city of the Aztecs and the capital of modern Mexico have, however, a somewhat unjust opinion of the attractiveness of the place. The celebrated valley of Mexico, encircled by towering hills, lies 7,524 feet above the sea level of London and New York. In this valley is the city of Mexico, surrounded by natural scenery that is grand, almost terrible in its majesty. It has an equable climate resembling that of central Italy, for it is situated in the tierra fria, or cold region. Half way down the hill toward the sea level is to be found the tierra templada, or temperate region of perpetual moisture, where the mists and clouds from the Gulf of Mexico are forever settling. Down on the sea level are to be seen in all the luxuriant variety of tropical vegetation the gay colors of the vanilla, the indigo, and the flowering cocao trees.

In 1823, Spain acknowledged Mexican independence, but left the Mexicans ignorant and burdened with a city full of churches, convents, and other ecclesiastical estates. The war of reform ended in 1860, and great numbers of the churches were "sequestrated and converted into libraries, stores, warehouses, and even stables, or pulled down for civic improvements."

The most imposing building at present to be seen in Mexico City is the huge Palacio Nacional, which is 675 feet long, and projects on both sides of Plaza Mayor. As it is a purely civic building for the administration of city affairs, a detailed account of its many offices and rooms is not suitable for these columns. To the south of the Palacio Nacional is the chief market, Mercado Velador, which, however, does not cover as much ground as the Conservatorio de Musica standing beside it. Behind the Palacio Nacional is the well known National Museum, which is so rich in Mexican antiquities. Farther to the east again is the beautiful Academy of San Carlos, often said to be the finest picture gallery on the American continent, and well supplied with examples of the Florentine and Flemish schools of painting. To be on the safe side, let us say that the Academy of San Carlos is the finest in Latin America, at any rate. On the north side of the Plaza Mayor is the Cathedral, or Church of the Asuncion de Maria Santisima. It is built on the site of the Aztec temple, Teocalli, and was begun in 1573 and finished in 1667. There are probably no churches on the American continent larger than this cathedral, which is 425 feet long, 200 feet wide and 180 feet high. St. Patrick's Cathedral, of which New Yorkers are so proud, is 400 feet long, 125 feet wide and 112 feet high. If the towers were removed, St. Patrick's Cathedral would stand comfortably inside the Cathedral of Mexico City.

The Grand National Theatre is one of the largest and finest in the New World, and has a seating capacity for three thousand persons. It was designed by the Spanish architect, Don Lorenzo Hidalga, and opened in 1844. In stage mechanism it is now far behind the times, but its artistic decorations merit study.

In the concert hall of the Conservatory of Music the northern visitor feels more at home. Here he finds familiar names and faces on all sides. There are busts of Palestrina, Rameau, Handel, Bach, Gluck, Haydn, Méhul, Beethoven, Auber, Fétis, Rossini, Meyerbeer, Donizetti, Bellini, Verdi, Gounod, and three Mexican composers, Antonio Gomez, Bustamante and Beristain. These busts fill the right hand side. On the left are the dramatists, Æschylus, Sophocles, Plautus, Terence, Lope de Rueda, Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, Lope de Vega, Calderon, Corneille, Molière, Racine, Moreto, Soeur Ines de la Cruz, Moratin, Victor Hugo, Alfieri, Goethe, Schiller, and Breton de los Herreros. Of the Principal Theatre and the Iturbide Theatre, it is not now necessary to speak.

We may call attention, in passing, however, that London's Covent Garden Opera House and Mexico's Conservatory Concert Hall are both beside markets. Mexico's market occupies the old site of the Chateau-neuf of Motecuhzoma with all its ancient mire and dirt. Covent Garden market in London, on the other hand, is the property of the Duke of Bedford, and is one of the finest exhibitions of fruit and flowers in the world. "The Easter Eve flower market is especially brilliant," says Baedeker.

London and Mexico City have one advantage in common over New York City—namely, they are the seats of their respective governments. Of course, it is not necessary now to say anything about the kind of government Mexico has had. A certain London playwright, by name Shakespeare, once remarked that "there is no darkness but ignorance," but he could hardly have been thinking of Mexico when he uttered his wisdom. As it is our business now to describe Mexico as it is rather than to prescribe for whatever is the matter with it, we leave the subject of Mexican education in abeyance. Sitting at ease in the beautiful garden of Alameda by the fountains and statues or wandering under the vast shade of more than 1,500 sturdy ash trees, we can easily forget governments and revolutions. And the visitor with an artist's eye can find much to delight him in the marble and bronze of the Constitution Square, or Plaza Mayor, otherwise Plaza de la Constitucion. Such works as the bronze statues of Mercury and of Venus, by Canova, put to shame many of the artistic abominations of New York City, which the artist Borglum is reported to have condemned as unfit to be paper weights. Christopher Columbus has a superb memorial monument which we cannot do justice to in these few lines. Seven human figures, various marbles, bronzes, wrought iron, candelabras, make one of the most imposing monuments to be seen outside the capitals of Europe. The pride of the city, nevertheless, is the famous equestrian statue of Charles IV, which has no rival of its kind except that of Marcus Aurelius at Rome. And it was cast in Mexico, though designed by Don Manuel Tolsa abroad.

We cannot stop now to describe the magnificent libraries of Mexico. The National Library, opened in 1692, has more than 600,000 volumes.

In the pretty garden of Zocalo, situated in the center of the Plaza de la Constitucion, the band plays every evening. There, in the brilliant atmosphere, under the cloudless skies of these high altitudes, with the soaring peaks of Popocatepetl and Ixtaccihuatl standing like the sentinels of fairyland in the distance, one may recall the lines of Bishop Heber, of Calcutta, in his hymn about the charms of Ceylon's Isle, where "every prospect pleases and only man is vile." Be it understood that we do not use this word "man" as a sop to the Cerberus of female politics. We fear that on this occasion we must make use of the word to include the entire biped population of Mexico City, even if it sounds a little ungallant in this ungallant age.

ECHOES OF THE WAGNER SUIT.

The recent sensational lawsuit between Isolde Bülow-Beidler and her mother, Cosima Wagner, which called forth such severe censure on the part of sincere Wagner admirers all over the world, brought to light some interesting facts. Dr. Troll, one of the attorneys for the defendant (Cosima Wagner) declared at one of the final sessions of the court that the sensational character of the litigation was doing great material damage to the Bayreuth Wagner Festival, and as one of his proofs he pointed out that 400 tickets which had already been sold had been returned, because of the public indignation over this remarkable affair. He also declared that protests were now being heard on all sides to the effect that the Bayreuth Theatre was no longer a proper place in which to give the performances, and that the Prinzregenten Theatre at Munich was profiting from these rumors. Dr. Troll demanded that the public be excluded from the court proceedings, but the court refused to grant this request.

A sensation was produced by the reading of the affidavit of the principal witness, Anna Wrazek, who was for many years a maid in Wagner's house. This woman died at the age of eighty-two just before the opening of the proceedings. Her affidavit contains some very startling assertions concerning the relations between Wagner and Mme. Cosima, who was then Bülow's wife, but as they were not substantiated from any other source, they were not accepted as incontrovertible evidence. The upshot of the whole proceeding was, as all the world knows, that Mme. Beidler lost her suit against her mother, so that it seems, after all, she was a daughter of Hans von Bülow and not of Richard Wagner. At least, the courts have declared her to be legally the daughter of von Bülow.

Mme. Beidler, however, still insists that she is the daughter of Richard Wagner and refers to numerous letters of Wagner's in which he speaks of his "daughter Isolde." The whole action probably was prompted by mercenary motives, as the MUSICAL COURIER suggested from the first. Mme. Beidler hitherto had been drawing an annuity of 30,000 marks ($7,500), and this was recently reduced by Siegfried Wagner on the grounds that the family income no longer justified such a sum, since royalties had stopped. For this reason Siegfried's step-sister brought suit against her mother, not only with the hope of proving herself to be a daughter of Richard Wagner, but also with a view to making her own son a direct heir to the Wagner fortune.

The lawsuit, by the way, has caused considerable friction between the Munich Prinzregenten Theatre and the Bayreuth Wagner Theatre. Justizrat Troll (the defender of Mme. Wagner) mentioned before, declared that the whole controversy was in the last analysis nothing more or less than an agressive move of the Prinzregenten Opera House against the Bayreuth Theatre. He went so far as to say that the Prinzregenten Theater was a "real estate speculation" and that every person who bought tickets for the Wagner performances in Munich was helping to support this venture. Ernst von Possart, the builder of the Prinzregenten Theater, has replied to these attacks by saying among other things: "It is for Justizrat Troll to prove in what way the question as to whether Isolde Beidler is a daughter of Wagner or of von Bülow is connected with the building and the management of the Prinzregenten Theatre. It is grotesque and quite on a par with his assertion that those who attend the Prinzregenten Theater pay their money, not for the performances heard there, but for the real estate speculations connected with it."

A LILLIAN NORDICA MEMORIAL.

For the purpose of perpetuating the memory of Lillian Nordica, a committee has been formed to further the project of erecting a statue of the famous singer, in which she will be pictured as Isolde. The chairman of the committee is Albert Mildenberg, the well known composer and pianist. Among the prominent men and women who have consented to act in behalf of this undertaking are Mrs. George J. Gould, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, and David Bispham. The statue will be executed by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, and the site is to be in Central Park, as far as the present plan is concerned.

That opera in our vernacular is not valued by the New York Times does not change the fact that such art-loving countries as France, Spain, Italy and Bohemia all preferred recently to hear "Parsifal" in the language of those respective countries, to listening to it in the original German, which they could not understand and therefore did not care to hear. Why translate anything?

And Next?

When grandma toured in foreign parts,
Her letters were an education—
Twelve pages of impressions, sights,
Heights, distances and population.

Mother, doing Europe,
In four pages told
Whom she met and where the best
Gowns and hats were sold.

Maud, abroad,
Gets all she's able Upon two post cards
And one cable.

PRIZE FOR CHORAL WORK

A $2,000 prize contest for a choral composition is on at Los Angeles, where the Booster Club of Southern California offers that sum for the best musical setting to a poem called "California." These are the verses:

In the fertile, sunny Southland,
Where the sky is always blue,
Mountain sides and rolling valleys,
Blooming meadows fair to view,
Shelter homes of happy people,
In their lives supremely blest—
Days of sunshine, nights of coolness,
Bring activity—then rest.

CHORUS.

California—Land of Plenty!
California—Paradise!
From thy charms, O California,
Other climes may not entice.
Once at home in California,
Quite forgot are earthly ills.
Life is lived in California
With a joyousness that thrills.

In the fragrant, sunny Southland,
Where the trees are always green,
There are acres lying idle
Waiting thousands yet unseen.
Homes for them in peace and plenty
Wait the touch of human hand.
Orange groves and walnut orchards
Then will bloom o'er all the land.

In the golden, sunny Southland,
Where the year is always spring,
Nature, prodigal of blessings,
Makes the heart with rapture sing;
For beneath the ground lies hidden
Store of gems and yellow gold—
Of the wealth of California
Scarce the half hath yet been told!

In the joyous, sunny Southland,
By the ever rolling sea,
Men are building for the future
With the strength of unity.
Harbors, cities, smooth broad highways,
Sparkling water brought from hills—
Life is lived in California
With intensity that thrills!

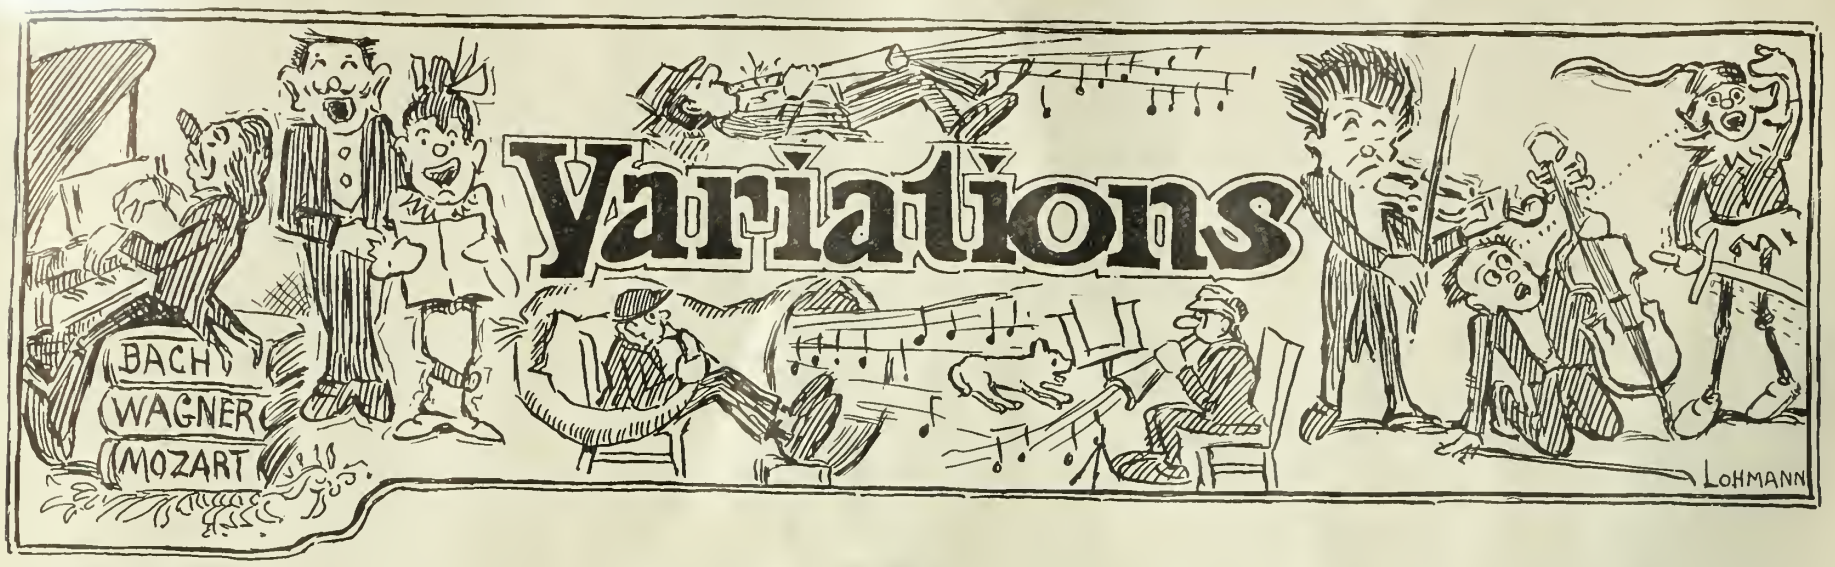
The rules for the competition are as follows:

The competition is open to the citizens of all countries.

Compositions must be arranged for voice and piano, in the usual song form, set to the words of this poem. Band and orchestra scores may also be submitted at the option of the composers. More than one composition may be submitted by a composer.

The poem complete must accompany each composition, with at least two verses and the chorus set to the music in the usual manner.

Composers must not sign their names to their work, but must affix a distinctive mark of identification, sending with the composition a sealed envelope containing full name and address, and bearing the same mark of identification. The award will be made on merit, without knowledge by the judges of the identity of the contestants.



The award and payment of the amount of the music prize, two thousand ($2,000) dollars, to the winning entrant, shall be full payment for the winning composition, and for all royalty rights of the composition in any form, either with or without words.

The right to reject any or all compositions is reserved. Satisfactory proof of authorship must be given if required. Music heretofore published will not be eligible. Contestants are advised to retain copies of their manuscripts. The Booster Club will conscientiously endeavor to return all unaccepted compositions, if accompanied by sufficient postage, and while all reasonable care will be given manuscripts, the Booster Club will not be responsible for their return.

The contest will close September 1, 1914. The award will be made by a board of disinterested judges appointed by the officers of the club.

No contestant's name, other than the winner, will be disclosed without authority. N. BANKS CRIEGER, Chairman Music Committee, Booster Club of Southern California, 609 Herman Hellman Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

Tent, bungalow, cottage and hotel—each is contributing its share, and sometimes a little more, toward the daily evening concerts at the summer resorts. Little folk and big folk all seem to be enjoying a good time musically.

The Assiduous Waiter.

An amusing Carl Flesch story is sent to this department by a friend of the famous violinist. It appears that when Flesch played in a small Dutch town not long ago, he was introduced to the local concert custom of arranging a "Kaffeepause" (coffee pause) in the middle of the program, in order to enable the auditors to indulge in a sandwich and a cup of the fragrant hot beverage which does not inebriate but keeps one awake at night. Flesch conformed so thoroughly to the habit of the place that when the Kaffeepause arrived he sent for refreshment to be brought to the artists' room for himself and his accompanist. A waiter soon appeared with the order and when given a gold piece by Flesch in payment, the man hurried away to procure the change. Without waiting for the man's return, the violinist went upon the stage after finishing his coffee, and continued his program. About half of his first number had been played, when, to the utter surprise of the audience and the huge amusement of Flesch the stage door opened, and the delayed waiter came into view, hurrying over to the player and holding out a plate containing the change due him. In the most nonchalant manner the virtuoso stopped his performance, picked up his money, left the proper tip on the plate, and signaling to the accompanist, went on with his reading as though nothing of the slightest moment had occurred. The report of the incident winds up: "Although Flesch has had many resounding triumphs, he told me that the applause he received after the waiter left the platform overshadowed any storm of handclapping he ever had experienced at any appearance of his own or of any other artist."

SIMPLIFIED SPELLING.

Is There Anything New?

The prophetic picture of the ladies' orchestra was published in a Düsseldorf, Germany, paper in 1853. It was called "Ladies' Orchestra á la Strauss." Of course the Strauss meant is Johann, and not Richard. And now comes Theodore Spiering, at present of Berlin, with his "Neues Berliner Tonkünstlerinnen Orchestra," membership female.

Paderewski's Past.

Opening an old book of music the other day, we came upon the Paderewski ops. 5 and 9, a collection of krakowiaks and mazureks, and were struck anew with the virility, freshness and originality of those compositions. They abound in piquancies of melody, harmony, and rhythm, and to our mind constitute the best of the Paderewski creative output, together with his A minor variations and his "Polish Fantasy," both for piano. It is a pity that he did not follow up the vein he struck in his ops. 5 and 9, idealized examples of Polish dance forms. Why does not Paderewski play them now in public? He has no need to be ashamed of them, or of his fascinating later "Cracovienne Fantastique," with its stirring finale. In all his earlier works Paderewski showed a distinctive style, but his opera and his symphony smack of imitativeness. For our part, we had rather hear the Polish keyboard hero in his krakowiaks and mazureks than in the Bach and Beethoven numbers which he plays so drily.

Simplified Spelling.

"What's in a name?" says Shakespere, otherwise Shakspere, otherwise Shakespeare.

On this page is a picture of an iron worker's shop, discovered and photographed by Clarence Lucas, giving a new version of a Russian composer's name—Tschaikowsky, otherwise Tschaikovsky, otherwise Chaikovsky. Mr. Lucas comments: "In Antonio Garcia Cubas' 'Etude du Mexique,' published in Mexico City in 1889, the name of Beethoven is given as Beethowen, which looks more formidable and awe inspiring to Spanish eyes, perhaps. Why not change Wagner to Vognur, for instance, so as to give a foreign tang to the name and differentiate it from the sleeping car man and the baseball player? And what is the sense of writing Chopin and calling it Shopäh?"

Leschetizky of Ragtime.

There no longer is any need for you to worry about the fact that you are a perfect performer of Beethoven, but a poor exponent of ragtime. Axel. W. Christensen, of Chicago, will fix you up in a jiffy, the jiffy consisting of twenty lessons of "The Christensen Course in Ragtime Piano Playing." If you should happen to see Axel's advertising and write to him you will receive the attached mimeographed reply:

MY DEAR FRIEND—Mr. Christensen is out of the city today and left on his desk your recent letter, telling me to write you.

You see, I am his private secretary, and before he left he felt that possibly he had not made plain to you just what he means.

As he said, this course is not simply a set of printed sheets—no indeed, it is personal, individual instruction, from his studio direct to you.

You have regular lessons to study from, lesson papers to fill out, which are personally corrected and returned to you. That is why you really learn how to play ragtime so splendidly, in twenty easy lessons, even if you can't play a single note now.

The reason Mr. Christensen made you this offer is because whenever he gets a pupil in a certain town, that pupil learns to play ragtime so grandly, and so quickly, that lots of others want to take the course, too.

So please write Mr. Christensen today, using the special enrollment blank and return envelope.

You will then soon be a fine Ragtime Player.

You know what Mr. Christensen values most is the friendship and esteem of his pupils. He knows that his course in Ragtime Piano Playing will make you his friend—will make you popular with everybody and it may even help you to independence—to the making of big money as a music teacher, or on the stage.

He wants you to be happy with ragtime. It has made him happy. It has made us all happy who are working for him. Let it make you happy, too.

Now, I am holding a special scholarship for you and I hope you won't delay sending in your enrollment.

Sincerely, MISS FRANCES MAE,
Private Secretary to Mr. Christensen.

A perusal of the Christensen method as revealed in a "Synopsis" accompanying the letter set forth above shows that Lesson 1 explains "the first ragtime movement"; Lesson 2, "the proper ragtime touch and the second ragtime movement—'Home, Sweet Home,' arranged in real ragtime"; Lesson 3, "the third ragtime movement, with exercise 'Ragology'"; Lesson 4, "playing two different chords in one movement"; Lesson 5, "playing three different chords in one ragtime movement, also Mendelssohn's 'Wedding March' in real ragtime"; Lesson 6, instructions for converting 'Suwanee River' into ragtime"; Lesson 10, "how to convert a waltz into ragtime"; Lesson 12, "'In My Mercer Racing Car,' a new popular song, with that snappy Tango movement that makes you want to dance"; Lessons 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, "playing the melody of any piece with the left hand, while playing arpeggio ragtime variations with the right hand." With Lesson 20 the pupil receives two of Mr. Christensen's greatest compositions, the 'Star and Garter Rag Waltz,' a sweet, dreamy waltz melody for the left hand, with ragtime variations like pearls for the right hand—also the 'Cauldron Rag,' a rag classic introducing 'triple rag.'"

IS THERE ANYTHING NEW?

A Wry Jest.

Siegfried O'Houlihan says that he has been reading about the threatened epidemic at New Orleans and wonders at the fright of the citizens. "I have suffered for years from the Bourbonic plague," he adds, "and found it a rather pleasant ailment."

Minnesnorers.

A correspondent writing to Don Marquis, of the New York Evening Sun, points out that the snore is a much maligned institution. "To a musical ear," the correspondent writes, "a snore is not merely a sound. It contains high notes as well as low; sharps as well as flats. . . . For myself, permit me to say that I am married to a lady who snores beautifully. For ten years of our marriage I have listened to and enjoyed the melodies of her snores." We have not heard the lady, of course, and can form no estimate of her prowess, but as a matter of sportsmanship, we are willing to back in a match with her, a gentleman in our family whose snoring we remember from our younger days with some degree of awe and respect. We suggest a catch-as-can contest, with no style of plain or fancy nocturnal music-making barred, the points to be scored as follows:

Snort	5
Trumpet	5
Coloratura	15
Sawmill	5
Buzz, with gurgle	10
Syncopated	10
Trill	15
Rumble ending in whistle	10
Chromatic	5
Vox humana	20
Total	100

Those Artist Invitations.

Mme. de Hegermann-Lindencrone relates in Harper's Magazine how Liszt used to be put upon by his hosts and hostesses at social occasions to entertain the guests with a piano solo or two. On one occasion, according to Mme. de Hegermann-Lindencrone, the Baroness K. invited the great pianist to an afternoon tea, and just before his appearance pushed her piano into the center of the room, where the great man could not possibly fail to see it. "Everyone was on the qui vive and breathless with anticipation when Liszt arrived," so runs the account, "but he had had many surprises of this sort, I imagine, and saw the situation at a glance. After several people had been presented to him, Liszt, with his most captivating smile, said to the hostess:

"'Madam, where is your piano?' and looked all about for the instrument, though it was within an inch of his nose.

"'Oh, monseigneur! Would you, really . . . ?' advancing toward the piano, triumphantly. 'You are too kind. I never should have dared to ask you.' And, waving her hand toward it, 'Here is the piano!'

"'Ah, yes,' said Liszt, who dearly loves a joke, 'I wished to put my hat on it.'

"Very crestfallen, but still undaunted, the tactless baroness cried, 'But, monseigneur, you will not refuse, if only to play a scale—merely to touch the piano!'

"But Liszt, as unkind as she was tactless, answered, coldly: 'Madam, I never play my scales in the afternoon,' and turned his back on her and talked with Madam Helbig."

A Pliocene Pleasantry.

And speaking of pianists, the press agent of one who will visit this country next season sends us a story which tells how the artist in question was about to step on the stage at a recent recital when a lady rushed up to him and said that she was one of his greatest admirers, had traveled a long way to hear him play, could not secure a seat because of the sold out house and refused to leave without being accommodated. "Madame," the concert giver is reported to have replied, "there is only one seat at my disposal, but I will gladly let you have it—the seat at the piano." It might interest the press agent to know that the origin of his anecdote is lost in the mists of antiquity, but the first recorded instance of its perpetration upon the public was during the pliocene age, when Boo-Be gave a recital upon the Alaskan stone flute and his publicity promoter sent the "have-my-seat" story to the MUSICAL COURIER. The next appearance of the story was shortly afterward at an African concert given by Oom-pah upon the marimba or gourd piano. Thence forward the springing of the narrative averaged about three per month and was used for great artists upon the bumble-twang, the tam-tam, rattles, Javanese galempong, Chinese ur-heen, the Welsh crwth, the Hebrew nebich, etc. Coming down to personages, Hans Sachs used to relate the happening as having occurred to himself at one of his early Meistersinger appearances about 1531, but an ancient member of the guild who did not laugh at Sachs' narrative, upon being pressed for an explanation, averred that the fiction was a favorite one with Antonius Wyngaerde when he gave his celebrated series of recitals at Utrecht in 1459. More recently the press agents of Clementi, Thalberg, Pixis, Weber, Chopin, Mendelssohn, Liszt and Rubinstein have used the humoresque with more or less success. It will continue to be employed for many generations of pianists as yet unborn.

Vital Organs.

Organists who are out of work for the summer and would like to earn a salary of $40 or $50 weekly by playing at moving picture theatres (ability to play piano also is required) should apply to this department by letter in order to be put into communication with the proper source. There are five or six such positions open. The organ, by the way, is fast superseding the orchestra at many of the moving picture houses. One of the leading managers told us a few days ago that he is unable to buy organs for several of his theatres, as the builders of the instruments are too busy to fill any further orders until September, 1915.

CARL FLESCH,
Violinist and tipster.

Who ever would have suspected that the prevalence of the "movies" would lead to a boom for organ manufacturers and organists?

The Uses of Art.

In the New York Times of July 6 one could read this advertisement:

Tetrazzini Has a Remarkable Range

You can only appreciate the wonder of her lower note when you hear the exquisite quality of the higher ones.
Likewise, you can only appreciate the full meaning of

Hart, Schaffner & Marx Summer Suits at $19.50

when you see for yourself what splendid values these same suits were at $25, $28 and $30.

Wallach Bros.

Every Note a Laugh.

"De Pachmann was as good fun as ever at the Queen's Hall on Saturday."—London Truth.

LEONARD LIEBLING.

"What's the matter?" a colleague asked of the advertisement manager.

"Matter enough. The fools have placed Mme. Soprano's testimonial for a cold cure on the same page with the announcement that she had a sore throat and couldn't sing."—Victoria (B. C.) Sunset.

"We're late; they're playing Beethoven's ninth symphony."

"There! what a pity we missed the other eight!"—Le Rire.

What Music Means to the Deaf

[From the Volta Review, Washington, D. C.]

[Extract from an article called "Veil of Silence," by Rena Albertyn Smith. The Volta Review is published monthly by the Volta Bureau, for the increase and diffusion of knowledge relating to the deaf.—ED.]

Melody has been all-conquering since Orpheus woke his lyre, but we of the silence cannot acquaint ourselves with music in its tangible form; cannot pretend to understand or appreciate it aright. But if it is not granted us to hear music to love, it is ours to love unheard music. It enchants by its very ethereality, and has about it the haunting loveliness of all distant, unattainable things.

The mere reading of the symbols of melody is a mechanical task devoid of pleasure unless the reader is familiar enough with music mentally to translate the notes into harmony, just as a printed page of Greek is meaningless to one who does not understand the language. However, the spirit of the most beautiful of languages may be sought, although its form must remain unknown. In the quest through the silence for the messages of music, beauty is preferably to be regarded as a combination of material form and spiritual significance, each of which is in itself beautiful, but which cannot exist alone—they are as body and soul.

If in music the corporeal is audible form, this bodily beauty, reaching the ears, excites pleasure. And when the quintessence goes beyond, soul meets with soul, resulting in a yet higher pleasure; the feeling aroused is depicted on the face of the listener. So through seeing the surrounding faces may be partially glimpsed the hidden spirit of music, and we, too, are entranced by siren strains; feel emotions now sensuous, now spiritual; find ourselves now smiling, now in tears. Facial expressions in the presence of music are always interesting to observe. The persons in the audience become so many interpreters of the spirit of melody, since music, being both catholic and subjective, appeals to each according to his temperament. But of course we can never be quite certain about the cause of the soulful expressions we see—perhaps the restless listeners are wearing discomforting apparel, whether of soul or of body! Yet the mood aroused by music seems to be one as a whole. And something inexplicable makes the audience applaud as one—possibly the mob spirit of man, purged of grossness, and rendered fine and subtile.

The spirit of music is also echoed by dancing. We of the silence have much reason to rejoice that the oldest of the arts is being rediscovered, although as yet the Russians alone nationally recognize its value. Dancers such as the Russian dancers, and the Misses Allan, Duncan and St Denis, through the poetry of action give us visions of all the emotions of men, for they are masters of the art of pantomimic acting. Not only do they bring the spirit of music, but the spirit of antiquity. Even when not dancing they convey moods, and by their plastic poses express emotion, as did the sculptured figures of Phidias and Praxiteles. And when they dance we live in dreamland, and for a fugitive moment are one with the ancient pagans.

The mystic lure of music makes a great orchestra a source of delight. In the Temple of Music a group of magicians sit in a semi-circle on the stage. The conductor stands before them, and wielding his baton as some fairy wand, in the silence calls forth his men to their work. Once more Brahms, Beethoven, or other of the immortal harmonists live in transient consonance. Fragments of melody, intertwining, weave a spell of dreams around the audience. And some of the rhythm holding the impalpable spirit of music can be seen gliding with the slender violin and cello bows, trembling across the harp strings, and falling on the drums.

Oratorios—"The Messiah," for example, as given by a famous choral society—are always inviting. When 300 voices take up the strains in harmony with an organ's pealing and the laughter and the sobs of violins, for all the echoes that startle the silence, the vast hall of music might be a lonely wilderness. The pipe organ, however, is not quite dumb: some of its swelling reverberations are felt, as if in the desert was felt the sweep of farawa waters. Yet though the Handelian chorus is hushed it is a small matter, for the spirit of the songs have borne us afar, and we are nearer to heaven's height and the Master Musician than to worlds of sound.

Grand opera in the silence loses its greatest appeal, but takes on a new fascination. It becomes dream-drama more poetical, more romantic, though less sincere and simple, than plays. Presenting pictures of the life and customs of olden as well as modern lands and times, opera has a historical interest not lost in the silence. Such an opera as "Aida," with its glittering panoply of ancient Egypt affords an admirable opportunity to take a peep at days long gone.

The grand opera stage, where are picturesquely assembled all the arts; the blithe, richly dressed audience; the lights smiling on a shimmering sea of iridescent color, all unite in making a splendid scene. Yet—perhaps because all is silent—a subtle artificiality creeps in before the evening

(Continued on page 31.)

PARIS HEARS SPLENDID CHORUS FROM BARCELONA.

Spanish Singers Astonish Paris in Ensemble Vocalism—Antoine Given a Benefit—Boston Opera Season Ends—Rosa Raisa and Felice Lyne Are Exceptionally Successful.

[All inquiries referring to American musicians and music as well as matters of interest to American visitors in Paris, or such as contemplate a visit to France, may be addressed to H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beauséjour, to whom tickets should also be sent by those who desire their recitals or concerts to be attended.]

Paris, June 23, 1914.

THE "ORFÉO CATALA."

There is a famous Spanish choral society called the "Orfeo Catala," which is native to Barcelona, and has built for itself the magnificent home called the Palace of Music in that city. Starting out very modestly in the winter of 1891-92 with a chorus of twenty-eight voices, it has, lead on by the energy of its founder and director, Lluis Millet, grown until it now numbers 260 voices, including men, women and boys and girls. It is the presence of these children which makes the work of this chorus of particular interest, and gives to its body of tone some extraordinary color effects.

This chorus came to Paris for the first time last week, giving two concerts, the first one at the Theatre des Champs Elysées and the second one at the Trocadero, the huge hall of which, seating some 6,000 people, was almost filled with an audience which, furthermore, had really paid for its tickets at very good prices. The first part of the program was made up of the "Hymne" of the society (six voices) composed by its director, a composition distinguished more for its loudness than its beauty. Then came a group of five popular Spanish songs, the first four of which were folksongs harmonized for five or six voices by the composers, Antoni Pérez, Francesco Pujol, Joan Manén and Josep Marraco. If all the Spanish folksongs are as beautiful as these, Spain must possess a wealth of music lore equal to that of any other musical nation in the world. In most of the arrangements the melody is carried by one voice or by the different voices alternately, the other voices often merely humming the accompaniment. The work of the chorus in these Spanish numbers was really extraordinary, exceeding in some ways anything I have ever heard from any other choral organization. The pianissimo, for instance, was particularly remarkable, the whole 260 voices dying away to a whisper as soft as that of the pianissimo of a string quartet. There were also some remarkable forzando effects. The composers, in making their arrangements, had very carefully taken into account the special tone color of the boys and girls' voices, and these were repeatedly used in gaining soft and beautiful effects. The concluding number of the first part, "The Childhood of the Virgin," a modern composition more or less in the manner of folksong, was the least effective. Each number of this first part was greeted with great enthusiasm by the audience, which included a large number of compatriots of the singers, and most of them had to be repeated. A short interlude was then provided by the Cobla "Pere-lada," one of the characteristic popular orchestras of Spain, made up as follows: one flubiol, a kind of a little wooden flute held in the left hand and played with the fingers of that hand alone. The player of this instrument has a small drum strapped to his left elbow and marks the time, beating upon it with a single stick in the right hand. Then there are two tibles which resemble in size and tone color the oboes of our military bands, and two tenors, practically the same instruments, only much larger, being some three or four feet in length and producing a reed tone of tremendous power.

Photo by Matzene, Chicago.
ROSA RAISA.

The brass section is made up of two cornetines, which is our ordinary cornet, and two fiscornes, or tenor bugles. The bass is provided by an ordinary contrabass. This orchestra is intended for playing for dances in the open air. The musicians rendered two of the popular "Sardanas." These are dances in 2/4 or 6/8 time, with strongly marked rhythm; they are of an exciting martial character which stirs the blood, and it is not to be wondered at that the Spaniard loves his "Colba." Each of these sardanas begin with a short introduction on the solo flute and then comes the dance itself, in which all of the various instruments take their turns at solo work, the effect being particularly striking when the big oboes have the melody. There is also clever use made of the contrast between the wood and brass choirs.

The second dance which they played, "Jovenivola," by Pujol, was really a most remarkable composition, both in melody and harmony. The orchestra received its share of the tumultuous applause as well, and was obliged to play a third dance before the audience was satisfied. Then the chorus returned to the stage and sung Richard Strauss' new "Hymne" for two choruses in sixteen parts, the first chorus divided into four voices, the second into twelve. It was the first hearing of this work in Paris, and it is impossible to give any detailed criticism of it without having heard it again and without having seen the score in advance as well. There are, of course, the usual Strauss dissonances, which sound still less pleasant when sung than in an orchestra work; the most effective part seems to be near the end where R. S. in a fortissimo passage has contented himself with some good old fashioned four or five part writing.

One was compelled to admire the work of a chorus of this number in singing "a capella" this tremendously complicated work, which lasted nearly a quarter of an hour, and coming out absolutely on pitch at the end. The applause was good but nothing like that which greeted the Spanish folksongs. The concert concluded with Bach's motet for eight voices, "Singet dem Herrn ein neues Lied," which was also very excellently rendered.

The work of this organization does great credit to the energy and musical ability to its founder and Director Louis Louis Millet. It would be better, however, if its efforts were devoted entirely to Spanish music. In the Strauss and Bach numbers the quality of the tone was many times not equal to that of some other choral organizations; one heard, particularly in the forte passages, that it is so unfortunate as to have several very "yellow" tenors.

BENEFIT FOR ANTOINE.

Saturday evening at the Opera there took place one of the most important theatrical events of the season, the great benefit for André Antoine, who has just retired from the direction of the Odéon. Needless to say there was a tremendous audience present, including nearly all the prominent names in artistic, literary, musical and political Paris, and it is reported that nearly one hundred thousand

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS
French and English Readings America, October to April Address, care Musical Courier | (especially for opera students) Courses Begin April 1, 1914 Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
9 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4. rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Seul professor de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi 151 Rue de Rome

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
. AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
Avenue Niel - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
Mme. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris

American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

DOCTEUR CONTA Cure and rejuvenescence of the voice by a special treatment of the mucous membranes of the nose and throat
OFFICE HOURS: 1 to 4 18 RUE DUPHOT, (Bd. Madeleine) PARIS

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Managament: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

CHARLES W. CLARK
AMERICAN TOUR SEASON 1914-15
Direction: Redpath Musical Bureau, Chicago
BARITONE
Dr. Frederick Clark, Personal Representative, 12 Rue Leonard de Vinci, Paris

francs were realized for M. Antoine, which is good if true. The program was very long and included the second act of "Otello," with artists of the Boston Opera Company. Ferrari-Fontana was the Otello and Rosa Raisa, as Desdemona, strengthened the fine impression which she had made at the Theatre des Champs-Elysees. Then followed the public dress rehearsal of a new ballet, "Hansli le Bossu," scenario by Henri Cain and Edouard Adenis, music by MM. Jean and Noel Gallon, a very pretty work which was heartily received by the audience. Edmond Rostand, the celebrated dramatist, read an address to Monsieur Antoine. This was followed by the presentation of two acts of "l'Arlésienne" and the program concluded with an amusing reproduction of the famous café in the Latin Quarter, the "Closérie des Lilas," as it looked in the time of 1830, which enlisted the services of many of the best known Parisian music halls and café concert artists. Needless to say that M. Antoine was the recipient of a tremendous ovation.

Boston Opera in Paris

This has been the last week of the Boston Opera season at Paris. The performances were "Barber of Seville" and "The Secret of Susanne," the latter followed by "Ballo in Maschera." Friday evening there was a grand gala, the program being made up of the first act of "Tristan," the second act of the "Barber of Seville" and the first act of "Pagliacci." Tuesday evening's performance of the "Barber" was given with the same capital cast as at the first performance, Saturday evening, reviewed in last week's letter. Felice Lyne, the Rosina, repeated her success of the previous occasion and her voice sounded even fresher and brighter, as she had succeeded in throwing off a cold which had been bothering her at her debut. Wednesday evening was the performance for the benefit of the "Empress of Ireland" fund. There was a good house and undoubtedly quite a sum was realized. President Poincaré showed his sympathy with the affair by taking a box which was, however, occupied by his friends, as he and Mme. Poincaré were prevented by previous engagements from being present. The list of boxholders included the following: President Poincaire; the American Ambassador, Myron T. Herrick; the British Ambassador, Sir Francis Bertie; the German Ambassador, Baron de Schoen; Mrs. John W. Stewart, Duchesse de Tallyrand, Mrs. Morton Mitchell, Mrs. W. E. Corey, Mrs. Henry Lowenfeld, Ernest Duveen, Phillipe Roy, Canadian Commissioner; Mrs. Kingsley Macomber, Mrs. J. W. Mackay, Walker Buckner, Col. Lankersohnin, Contesse de Rodellec de Porzic, Mme. Edgar Stern, Mme. Wiltsee, Princess de Faucigny-Lucinge. Other purchasers of seats included Baronne Leonino de Rothschild, Walter Behrens, John S. T. Audley, Mme. Georges Kohn, Mrs. W. J. Younger, Mme. Valsamachi, Mme. Ferrari, Mme. George Ostheimer, Mrs. Horwitz, Mrs. Key, Mrs. Heuston, Mrs. Spreckels, Mrs. Archibald Freeman, Mrs. Hilton, Mme. Nevada-Palmer, Mrs. Sanford Clark.

"The Secret of Susanne" came first. The cast of "Ballo in Maschera" was as follows:

Amalia	Rosa Raisa
Oscar	Felice Lyne
Ricardo	Martinelli
Renato	Amato
Ulrica	De Cisneros

Conductor, Moranzoni.

As will be seen at a glance this was a real "star" cast for Verdi's melodious work. Every member of the company was at his or her best and the result was one of the finest performances we have had this season. It was the Paris debut of Rosa Raisa and she made a genuine success. She has a powerful voice of excellent quality, especially in the upper register; she has got rid of most of that sharp cutting quality of tone, which was the only drawback to her work when she made her debut at Parma last September. Mlle. Raisa has the tremendous advantage of youth in her favor. She is only twenty-two years old, and if she continues to improve at the rate she has already done, in a few years she is bound to become one of the very big artists of the world. Eleonora de Cisneros was in capital voice and made the best of every opportunity afforded her in Ulrica's one scene. Felice Lyne's voice was in the best condition which I have heard it and she sung and acted the Page with just the proper touch. Martinelli, it goes without saying, was excellent, though he did not seem to be in best voice. Amato was a splendid Renato and his "Eri Tu" brought forth a tremendous storm of applause. Moranzoni conducted capitally, and taken all together, as has before been said, this was one of the most satisfactory evenings of the whole season.

ARTHUR HARTMANN AS SKETCHED BY ARTHUR SHATTUCK.
The pianist is as clever an artist with the pencil as he is upon the keyboard.

Friday evening's bill had Mme. Matzenauer as Isolde and her husband, Ferrari-Fontana, as Tristan, in the first act of that opera. Although well supported by Mme. de Cisneros as Brangaene and Amato as Kurvenal, neither of the two principal singers seemed to take any particularly enthusiastic interest in their parts. Mme. de Cisneros and Amato were both excellent.

Then came the second act of "Barber," with the same cast as in the previous performances except with Tanlango, the second tenor of the Boston Opera Company, who had his one chance of the Paris season to be heard in an important role, replacing John McCormack as Almaviva. The voice is a light soft tenor and he sang very acceptably. Felice Lyne, it was announced, was indisposed and only sung to make the performance possible, but that was hardly to be observed in her notes. The few lines which fall to Berta in this act were sung by Cecile Cunningham, who at least had the opportunity to show that her voice is of agreeable quality.

The concluding part of the program was the first act of "Pagliacci" with the following cast:

Nedda	Rosa Raisa
Canio	Ferrari-Fontana
Tonio	Amato
Silvio	Fornari

Amato sang the "Prologue" and then repeated it; judging by the applause the audience would have been perfectly willing to hear him a third time. His was the biggest ovation which has been tended any artist all the season and certainly his work well deserved it. Ferrari-Fontana was himself again as Canio and gave a capital rendition of the role.

Rosa Raisa sang Nedda for the first time on any stage and was obliged to do it at one day's notice without rehearsal of any sort. Her splendid singing of the role was an excellent example of what this extremely capable young artist is capable of doing under the most adverse circumstances. She had, too, the good fortune to follow Destinn here in two of that favorite artist's roles. Campanini certainly has a genuine find in her and Henry Russell was so pleased with her work that he immediately arranged to have her appear several times at Boston next season.

She was laboring against heavy odds in having to sing the big duet with so utterly incompetent a Silvio as Fornari. There was hearty applause at the end of the performance, but it was well after twelve when it was through and nobody seemed inclined to demand a speech from Henry Russell, telling what he thought about his own season here.

In next week's letter I shall devote some space to a general review of this season.

The American chorus, the mechanical staff and several of the artists left for Boston, the morning after the performance, on the steamship Cincinnati.

Notes.

The fortunate vocal teacher is he who possesses a good voice and is able himself to demonstrate personally the correctness and efficacy of his method. Henrico Bertram, who retired some time ago from professional operatic work to devote himself entirely to teaching, recently sang at two large private musicales, his selections being some of the old Italian arias of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, well suited to display his purity of tone and perfect diction and the "Credo" from Verdi's "Otello," delivered with great dramatic power. Mr. Bertram had only thought to render pleasure to some friends by his singing, but virtue is its own reward, for this practical demonstration of his method resulted in the immediate addition of three pupils to his vocal class and the booking of several more for next season.

The excellent impression made here at the Theatre des Champs Elysées by the young German tenor, Johannes Sembach, formerly of the Royal Opera at Dresden, as Walther in "Die Meistersinger" and as Parsifal, is sufficiently testified to by the fact that he was immediately offered a five years' contract with the Metropolitan by Giulio Gatti-Casazza. Sembach accepted and will begin his work as a member of the company in November next.

Cléo de Merode, who achieved fame throughout the world for three reasons, one of which was her dancing, another of which was wearing her hair over her ears, still dances and still wears her hair. All of which is merely apropos of the fact that she is to have some special appearances at the Opera-Comique next season. This is what may be described as hot weather news.

Margaret Huston, the well known American singer, gave a very pleasant tea and informal musicale to a few of her

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées), Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI.) Paris

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Studio: 10 Rue Herran, Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

The Famous Prima Donna of the Paris Grand Opera
MLLE. ALICE VERLET
"With the exception of Mmes. Patti and Melba, no voice of exactly the same quality has been in this country for a long period. . . ."
—London Morning Post, March 22, 1909.
Will Tour the Season 1914-15 in U.S.A. and Canada and is now being booked for Concerts and Recitals.
By Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave.
New York

Arrigo Serato

Italy's Greatest VIOLINIST

Called
The Caruso of the Violin

American Coast-to-Coast Tour
SEASON 1914-1915

Already Over Forty Dates Booked

For Few Remaining Open Dates, Address Exclusive Management:

Annie Friedberg, Metropolitan Opera House Building, 1425 Broadway, New York. KNABE PIANO USED

music loving friends last Friday afternoon at her apartment here. Miss Huston, accompanied by E. R. Schmitz, sang a number of songs by Debussy and some of the charming old Irish folksongs, in the interpretation of both of which she so particularly excels.

On Tuesday, June 9, Reinhold von Warlich, the excellent baritone, gave his concluding recital of the season at the Salle Beethoven. He had arranged a most interesting program, the first part of which was made up of German lieder by standard composers, ranging from a folksong of 1452 up to songs of Richard Strauss. The second part was devoted to ballads, in the rendition of which Mr. von Warlich's well known special abilities as an interpreter were prominently displayed. Among them was one entitled "A Mora," by the Swedish composer, Axel Wachtmeister, who resides at Paris. This was received with much favor. Mr. von Warlich was finely accompanied by the very distinguished French pianist, Edouard Risler. An especially interesting feature of the program was Gabriel Fauré's ballade for orchestra and piano, played, in an arrangement for two pianos, by Risler and the composer himself.

Arthur Alexander announces a recital of his pupils to take place at his studio next Thursday evening.

Louise Nikita Murray, whose musical soirees are a distinct feature of the Paris musical season, will leave soon to spend the summer at her villa at Schliersee, in the Bavarian highlands.

Pennsylvania State College Glee Club.

An idea of just what the men who make up the Pennsylvania State College Glee Club look like, can be obtained from a glance at the accompanying photograph. This Glee Club is under the able direction of Clarence C. Robinson.

PENN STATE GLEE CLUB.

Jenny Dufau Sails.

Jenny Dufau sailed for Paris, July 1, on the French steamship "La Savoie." She is to meet Director Russell there, and will arrange with him for her appearance with the Boston Opera Company. In Bad Gastein, she will meet the composer Puccini, who is interested in her work, and is of the opinion that she is suited to the role of the heroine in his new opera, "The Wandering Swallow."

Miss Dufau's summer activities include several special appearances in opera and concert in Europe. During August she will rest at her home in Alsace. Her concert season in America will open October 2.

It may prove of interest to know that Miss Dufau will sing her third return engaement withing eight months at Columbia, Mo.

Asbury's Orchestra Concerts.

An orchestra concert is the daily feature at the Arcade, Asbury Park, N. J., where an unusually large host of summer visitors are spending their vacation. During the past week the artists who assisted the Bostonia Orchestra, Belle Yeaton Renfrew, conductor, were Mae Sutton, soprano; Aldine Hoge, cornet; Alice McLaughlin, flute; Harriet Merrill, clarinet; Ardelle Dodge, horn; Velma Virgin, cornet; Marjorie Patten, cello.

On Sunday afternoon last, July 5, the writer heard a delightful program. Miss Sutton, Miss Hoge and Miss Renfrew, the conductor, all were warmly received; there was a large audience present on this occasion.

Victor Benham in Detroit.

Victor Benham is in Detroit for the summer, where he will hold a class. In September he returns to Europe to fulfill numerous engagements, which include the Lamoureux, Vienna Philharmonic, Warsaw Philharmonic, Albert Hall concerts in London, Manchester Orchestra, etc., besides starting a school of music in London.

Mr. Benham's renown as a teacher should prove a strong attraction for pupils wishing to have the advice of so experienced a musician.

Carl Friedberg

"THE POET AT THE PIANO"

A great authority on music in Munich says:

"To the few select artists belongs Carl Friedberg; his true poetic mastery of the great Beethoven and Brahms music and the nobility of his interpretation of Schumann makes him a real poet of the piano."

"Friedberg as Chopin interpreter has no equal. Who had ever heard the A flat ballad performed in such mastery—the magic spell of ancient Polish feasts seemed to be revealed in tones coming from the piano under the magic fingers of this wonderman."

First American Tour
SEASON 1914-15
October till January

Only Few Available Dates Left

For bookings address exclusive management:

MISS ANNIE FRIEDBERG,
Metropolitan Opera House,
1425 Broadway, New York

BALDWIN PIANO USED

GUSTAV BECKER'S CORRECTION.

STEINWAY HALL, New York, July 2, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

My attention is called to what you say in the MUSICAL COURIER, in your issue of June 24, regarding both the Standardization and Registration of Music Teachers within this State.

I find not only in your comment, but also in other news reports, erroneous impression as to the stand taken on these questions by the New York State Music Teachers' Association at its recent convention at Saratoga Springs.

The impression given is that our association desires to enforce its recently adopted standard of teaching through legislative act, while this is a step—if ever attempted—that we should rather delay until the standard which we exact from all new active members, and will urge upon the exempt founding members, will be generally acknowledged as being practicable as well as adequate and fair in plan and application.

It takes time and much perseverance, in holding to the right ideals, to bring about deep-reaching reforms, and certainly the moral influence of good example, as given by the Teachers' Association in their self-imposed standard, is at least as powerful a factor as the fear of exposure or punishment—the compelling power in another plan, proposed by one of the lecturers at our convention. This plan would require that all music teachers shall be legally registered and certificated, upon filing an affidavit in which they state their experience and source of knowledge.

In some of the news reports it was claimed that this latter proposition had been given the endorsement of the N. Y. S. M. T. A. by a "rising vote," while to my knowledge the aforesaid lecture was not given at one of the official business meetings of the association, but instead was delivered to a general audience, during the afternoon entertainment sessions, when only a small proportion of the active members formed a part of the audience. (Only the active members have a constitutional right to vote on matters of official importance.)

I regret that this proposition was not given a chance for thorough discussion, and a vote taken for or against its approval by the teachers themselves, for though with carefully planned and honest application of such a law—if it can be made immune from political favoritism—there might be achieved the elimination of some of the worst frauds and bluffers, there remains the question as to how such registration is to show that those who really make irrefutable statements as to their source of knowledge and experience have at all acquired the essential learning, or have adequately profited from their experience, to the degree of being fully or even safely competent as teachers. The so-called "Essential" Standard, officially adopted by the New York State Music Teachers' Association at its recent convention, does not recognize as of any value the fact that any one may have studied for any length of time with this or that famous teacher, or in any well known college or conservatory, unless the applicant can by testimonial, certificate or diploma show that he has fully complied with all the requirements as to completeness of course of studies and proficiency attained. Those who cannot satisfy the officers of the association, through some such credentials, or in some other sufficient manner, that they are eligible for active membership, are asked to submit to an examination as to essential knowledge and teaching ability, to the extent of our now adopted standard.

We thus aim at results rather than outward appearances or misleading, though possibly true, statements.

In conclusion I would suggest that much good might be achieved by some sort of combination of the two plans of action—that of exerting the moral force of a respectable standard of proficiency adopted by a representative body of professionals—planned out and approved of by some of the foremost members of the profession in this country and abroad—on one side, and the effective legal regulation of the cases of extreme offenders (fakes and frauds) among those who are supposed to impart a musical education in an adequate manner.

I hope that those now holding entirely to one side or the other of these two propositions will try to unite their efforts toward the common good of musical advancement in this country; for we are, as yet, by no means perfect in our musical achievement, even though we "spend more money" for music than any other nation.

We need not more music, but better music, and nothing else will work as potently to this end as would the "Raising of the Standard of Music Teaching."

Yours very truly,

GUSTAV L. BECKER.

Gertrude V. O'Hanlon Artists.

Elizabeth Rothwell Wolff, the brilliant young soprano, married her gifted husband, Mr. Rothwell, director of the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra, after the close of her first season in America, during which she sang the title role in Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" seventy-five times. Unfortunately for her operatic career, at this time, Mr. Rothwell abandoned operatic conducting to accept the post of conductor of the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra, which he has retained ever since, and the young couple did not wish to be separated. It was this that made Mme. Wolff turn her attention to concert work, in which she has made an enviable name for herself, even as her husband has done as a symphony conductor. Her repertoire includes an unusually long list of operatic arias (for she has a very large repertoire of operas, having sung forty roles during a single season in Mainz, Germany), a long list of songs, including a number of quaint little German songs seldom, if ever heard, in this country, which she sings charmingly. Her tour in the spring with the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra was highly successful, introducing her to a number of towns which she had not previously visited, and in all of which she made a host of friends and admirers. Her voice is a brilliant lyric soprano, and Jean de Reszke is said to have been so delighted with it that he tried hard to persuade her to return to the operatic stage.

Ridgely Hudson, who in addition to his work as tenor soloist of the First Presbyterian Church of Chicago, has won also a reputation as a highly artistic concert singer, will devote much time to this line of work next season, and has placed himself under the exclusive management of Gertrude V. O'Hanlon.

Mr. Hudson descends from one of the pre-Revolutionary American families, his great, great grandfather, Jonathan Huntington, being a nephew of Samuel Huntington, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and the first Governor of the State of Connecticut. This ancestor, Jonathan Huntington, was adopted by his uncle, who had no children of his own, and who planned to leave his fortune to the boy. But the latter disappointed him cruelly by developing a remarkable tenor voice, and by proposing to adopt music as a profession. When his horrified adopted parent positively refused his consent to this plan, young Jonathan ran away from home, and in time became one of the leading oratorio and recital singers of Boston, and one of the founders of its famous Handel and Haydn Society. He removed to St. Louis in 1930, and there his daughter, Jane, became the soprano soloist of a prominent church. She married the banker, Nicholas Ridgely, and they removed to the banker's home city, Springfield, Ill. He, the grandfather of the tenor, was a good amateur violinist, and both Mr. Hudson's parents, although not professional musicians, were musical.

Hammann Summering Abroad.

Ellis Clark Hammann, pianist and accompanist of Philadelphia, sailed Tuesday, June 30, on the steamship Hamburg for Naples. After a short visit in Naples and other Italian cities, Mr. Hammann will go to Munich for a few weeks. He is planning to visit Bayreuth and to attend the Mozart festival in Salzburg. During the summer, Mr. Hammann and his mother will enjoy a motor trip with John Braun, the well known tenor of Philadelphia, and his wife. In September, Mr. Hammann will return to this country to resume his many duties in Philadelphia and vicinity.

The month of June, kept Mr. Hammann busy, fulfilling engagements. On the second, he was the accompanist at a concert given by Thaddeus Rich, violinist; Nicholas Douty, tenor, and Susanna Dercum, contralto, in Philadelphia. June 4 found him at Hahnemann College, where he was the organist at the commencement exercises. He was the accompanist for Horatio Connell on the 8th and 9th at the latter's concerts at Hollidaysburg, Pa. Thaddeus Rich and Theodore Harrison were heard at a musicale on the 12th, where Mr. Hammann appeared also in the capacity of accompanist. On June 23, Mr. Hammann was the accompanist for Horatio Connell at the Normal School commencement.

The fourth of July proved a gala day for the vacationists. At the seashore resorts, many of the bathers, stretched lazily upon the sand, amused themselves as well as others, with strains of popular airs and in many cases arias from the well known operas. In the mountains, too, this pastime monopolized many precious moments, around the corner of the porch, or down beneath some favorite tree.

The Violinistic Event of the Coming Season

WILL BE THE VISIT OF

WILLY BURMESTER

Mr. Burmester is neither a King or Emperor or a God of the Violin, but simply

The MOST POPULAR OF GERMANY'S

VIOLINISTS

¶ Mr. Burmester will give his first recital at New York Aeolian Hall, November 21st, 1914. ¶ Engaged by Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. ¶ The Steinway Piano used.

For dates and terms apply to CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

CHICAGO NOTES.

Musical Items of Interest.

Chicago, July 5, 1914.

Charles L. Wagner, the well known New York manager, called at this office during the week with his brother. Mr. Wagner, who will leave toward the end of the month for Europe, where he is to hear John McCormack, at the Charlottesburg Mozart Festival, told some of his very funny stories to one of the representatives of the MUSICAL COURIER. Mr. Wagner is known for his wit and sense of humor and his coming to this office is always looked forward to with great pleasure. Mr. Wagner said that Alice Nielsen will remain in this country and will fill many dates during the summer months. Mr. Wagner will leave on July 22, and will be back in New York on August 28, staying away long enough only to be a witness to McCormack's expected success.

FANNIE BLOOMFIELD ZEISLER HONORED.

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler has been elected an honorary member of the Kansas City Musical Club recently, which is the thirteenth club to honor her thus, the others being the Chicago Woman's Club, Chicago Woman's Aid, Chicago Amateur Musical Club, Chicago North Side Art Club, Chicago Book and Play Club, Lakeview Musical Society, Peoria Woman's Club, Sacramento Saturday Club, Warren (Pa.), Philomel Piano Club, St. Paul Schubert Club, Burlington (Ia.) Musical Club and the Alpha Chi Omega Sorority.

GREETINGS FROM VIDA LLEWELLYN.

Vida Llewellyn sent this office her greetings via post card from Salzbrunn. Miss Llewellyn wrote "Best greetings to you from Salzbrunn. The mountain air is a delightful change from that in a big city. I wish the Chicagoans might be having some of it."

BIRDICE BLYE IN EUROPE.

Birdice Blye and her friends are traveling leisurely on the continent, enjoying every moment visiting famous art galleries, palaces and cathedrals and taking delightful drives round the beautiful cities and country. They spent twelve days in Geneva and some time in Brussels, Strassburg, Antwerp, Milan, Lake Como and three weeks in Florence. They will make lengthy visits in Rome and Venice and after visiting other cities in Italy will return to Switzerland. Miss Blye finds the Italians charming. She has been entertained very much by Americans and Italians. She was a guest at Villa Bragiotti and also at Mme. Barracchia's, where were Albert Spalding, the famous violinist, and his mother and Clarence Bird.

MACBURNEY STUDIOS.

On Monday evening, June 29, Margaret Allison, soprano, assisted by John Doane, accompanist, gave a program of songs by Ethelbert Nevin, in the MacBurney Studios, Fine Arts Building. An evening with Benjamin Whelpley will be given on Monday evening, July 6, by Lon Payne, tenor, assisted by George L. Clark, cellist, and John Doane, accompanist.

Drawn for the MUSICAL COURIER.

HOW WAGNER WORKED.

A snapshot showing for the benefit of young composers exactly how Wagner composed. The first note of his new composition is distinctly visible on the open manuscript book.

U. S. Kerr in Interesting Program.

Appended are some of the interesting press criticisms which followed the appearance in Elmira, N. Y., on June 30 last, of U. S. Kerr, the well known New York basso:

"Federation Hall was well occupied last night when U. S. Kerr, the famous basso from New York City, gave a concert recital, unassisted, save by Elmer Zolar, the very able accompanist, also from the metropolis. Mr. Zolar gave two delightful piano solos during parts one and two.

"This is the second time Mr. Kerr has sung in Elmira. Mr. Kerr is powerful enough physically and capable enough vocally to test completely the acoustics of the hall. His voice is delightful in range and beauty, and his skill and variety in entertaining his audience alone for almost two hours was remarkable.

"The first six songs were German classics and were enjoyed to the fullest. His rendition in English of 'Faith,' by Chadwick, evoked plenty of applause. Mr. Kerr certainly made the most of his composition; in fact, he fairly made the music live in the stirring sentiment brought out.

"'The Prologue,' by Leoncavallo, was given with masterful artistic interpretation. Federation Concert Hall never was favored with more engrossing solo work. As an encore later he sang the well known 'Absent,' by Metcalf, with perfect effect. The 'Toreador Song' displayed his commanding ability perhaps more than the other numbers could. That was the rarest treat of the evening to many, and possibly to all. Those who heard it will not forget it. In response to encore he gave a magnificent rendition of 'The Rosary.'" —Elmira Star-Gazette, July 1, 1914.

"U. S. Kerr, basso, of New York City, assisted by Elmer Zolar, of New York, pianist and accompanist, gave a concert of a very high order in Federation Hall last night.

"Mr. Kerr has a voice of most beautiful quality and wide range. There are no harsh or rough places in it. It seems smooth and flawless throughout, from softest tones to powerful, resonant ones. The first half of his program consisted mostly of songs by German composers, and his German diction was exquisitely refined and delightful."—Elmira Advertiser, July 1, 1914.

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Mrs. STACY WILLIAMS Voice Production :: Repertoire ::
In Europe June 15 to September 15
For information, prospectus, etc., address
Mrs. Williams, 405-406 Kimball Hall - Chicago, Ill

Lucille STEVENSON (TEWKSBURY) SOPRANO
Address: 4438 Berkeley Avenue Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
Consisting of
OPERA, LECTURE RECITALS AND MELODRAMES and
THE CHICAGO PIANO QUARTETTE
Henriette Weber, piano; Fritz Itte, violin;
Carl Klammsteiner, cello; A. Van Der Voort, viola.
Specializing in Opera Programs.
Arrangements with Distinguished American Singers as Soloists
FOR TERMS AND DATES ADDRESS MISS H. WEBER
Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill., Phone Harrison 4868-4869

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

MR. and MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
Registration for Summer Term Now Open
Summer Address: 1434 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill. Phone 1105 Evanston

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President
SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rive-King, Guy Herbert Woodard, Grace Stewart Potter, Mee Julia Riley, Herold von Mickwitz, Frank B. Webster, Eleanor Smith, Ernest O. Todd, Mme. Justine Wegener, Edgar A. Nelson, Edward Ovorak, Adelaide G. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

WHAT MUSIC MEANS TO THE DEAF.

(Continued from page 25.)

is over, and the atmosphere grows almost as heavy as if it was charged with the fragrance of many roses.

Singers charm, though their songs are unheard and unknown. Concert singing then imparts as much pleasure as opera. The audience communicates to us its feeling of suspense as Tetrazzini's voice soars higher and higher, and its delightful thrill as she triumphantly reaches the highest notes in the vocal blue. Mary Garden is interesting to us as merely Mary Garden, as well as a Thais, a Carmen, or a Melisande. As a concert singer she asserts her individuality at every opportunity, and has a host of little stage tricks at her command. It is worth noting that this woman of dynamic personality observes, "A mere voice bores them in Paris, and it is getting to be the same in America." She holds that the personalities of singers must be equal to their voices, however wonderful or well trained those voices may be.

We of the silence can enjoy an artist's personality—it speaks when words are dumb. Mysterious as unheard music is the language in which it voices itself. By this token it borrows enchantment. A thing that can be confined in a set mathematical definition is less captivating than something which evades us. So, too, with music. Is it not the more delightsome that it refuses to be held in the cold materialism of words, but soars above, the most psychic, the most ideal, the most synthetic of the arts?

Impossible to tell what music means in the silence. To phrase the beauty of the spirit of music, as it is faintly reflected from human faces, is like trying to find the mirage. Sufficient for us that a sonorously brilliant fire warms the world. Never may be touched this shadowy form, fainter than clouds of star-dust, but always as it is neared is felt a thrill as if we brushed against a dancing dream . . . then the vision vanishes.

No music—nor any discord! No music when poetry brings us its breath? As dear to dwellers in silence as mosaics wrought of precious stones are the harmonies woven of words. It is not only that in reading written songs we are reimpassioned, and our world filled anew with beauty, but also that, reading, the veil of silence lifts and we hear the music of rare dreamery. We may not hear poetry spoken by the musical voices of men, but our enjoyment is nevertheless exquisite, for our speakers are the voices of visions and our ears are spirit ears. Senses are intoxicated by rhythm, soul is set to singing by lovelier meaning within lovely form, and we know the soft touch of soundless symphonies.

Among the English singers the verbal melodies of the Jacobean and Elizabethan song writers, Shakespeare, Keats, Shelley, Tennyson, Swinburne and W. B. Yeats take us near the borderland of pure music. For instance, let the inner ear listen to the musical words which Yeats in "The Shadowy Waters" voices through Abric:

> "No man nor woman has loved otherwise
> Than in brief longing and deceiving hope
> And bodily tenderness; and he who longs
> For happier love but finds unhappiness
> And falls among the dreams the drowsy gods
> Breathe on the burnished mirror of the world
> And then smooth out with ivory hands and sigh."

And so the world is not a stilled lute. As comes a south wind, unheard, unseen, almost unfelt, but softly breathing with the spirit of spring, so is the spirit of sound wafted to us of the silence.

An Hour with Cadman.

[From the Los Angeles (Cal.) Graphic.]

Think of Liszt, with his long, flowing, white hair as he is usually pictured; think of Beethoven with his shaggy locks; think of Richard Wagner with his "old master" appearance; can you imagine them writing such music as "The Land of the Sky Blue Water" and the other Indian lyrics which have made famous Charles Wakefield Cadman within less than a decade? The old pictures do not harmonize. One of the principal pleasures of the interviewer of noted men is trying to draw their portraits in advance—you can never rely upon published photographs—and comparing them with the originals. Knowing Cadman principally through his earlier Indian compositions I had thought of a big, outdoor sort of man, affecting the red bandana around his neck and a sombrero type of costume. He would naturally be a bit slouchy in appearance because of overmuch association with the aborigines, though there naturally would be a touch of delicacy in the details, probably expressed in the hands and a sensitive mouth.

Everything was wrong. Charles Wakefield Cadman is just a young American, intensely human, not affecting to conceal his tremendous enthusiasm, not pretending modesty yet not boastful, but simply delighted with what success he has had. His hair is just the right length and his garments are just like those of every one else. Yet the divine fire is manifest every moment, but solely through the medium of his dynamic energy. He talks like a machine gun and is always on a hair trigger. Suggest the subject and he is off like a shot. You catch his point and interpose a remark that shows you understand.

"That's it, that's it," he sparkles, and with a flicking motion of his fingers intimates that the matter is settled.

Mr. Cadman is not thirty-three years old, yet already he has won a place as one of the foremost of the American composers, MacDowell alone of the better known musicians in this country having concentrated to the same degree upon producing music which would express, so far as melody and harmony may, the fundamentals of the spirit of the new world.

So much by way of introduction to a little journey to the present abiding place of Charles Wakefield Cadman, of Pittsburgh, Pa., Estes Park, Col., and Pasadena, Cal.

Mme. Rosa Olitzka
Celebrated Russian Contralto
ASSISTED BY
Kathleen Hart, Soprano
Exclusive Management West of Cleveland
By special arrangement R. E. Johnston
Elizabeth Rothwell Wolff, Soprano
From Royal Court Theatre Darmstadt.
Walter Henry Rothwell at the piano, condr.
St. Paul Symphony Orchestra
AND
Miss Edna Gunnar Peterson, Pianist
Mr. Albert Borroff, Basso-Cantante
Lecture Recitals, Oratorio
Mme. Cora Kempre, Soprano
Fresh from European Operatic Triumphs
Miss Esther May Plumb, Contralto
Recitals, Oratorio
Mr. Ridgley Hudson, Tenor
Recitals, Oratorio
Miss Clara Williams, Soprano
Oratorio
Miss Celene Loveland
Piano Lecture Recitals
AND
Metropolitan Grand Opera Quartette
Exclusive management:
GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON
Cable Building Chicago, Ill.

It was at the latter home I saw him, a roomy mansion on St. Johns avenue, where he and his mother are living until the middle of June. Here he is attending to the multifarious duties of chairman of the program committee of the convention of the National Federation of Musical Clubs, to be held in Los Angeles next year, and, musicians will be surprised to learn, completing an opera on which he has been at work since 1909.

I had called upon him to learn what was being done concerning the 1915 musical festival, but soon both of us forgot that in talking about this opera. Strictly speaking, the work has been completed about a year, and it is now only a piano arrangement of the score that is being transcribed.

One result of the delay, however, probably will be the submission of the work in the contest for the $10,000 prize at the Los Angeles Festival next year. Of course, this is something which cannot be announced, as strict anonymity is being enforced. The libretto is by Nellie Richmond Eberhart, from an Indian story by Francis la Flesche, son of the present hereditary chief of the Omaha tribe of Indians. The tale is true in all its essentials and [illegible] Mr. Cadman has made use of forty-six distinct Indian themes. He speaks of the composition thus:

"In this composition I have taken the Indian music and made use of it in a strictly logical manner. You must know, of course, my earlier Indian songs were the result of a purely academic study of aboriginal music. They have the native effect, but the treatment is purely academic. In the opera I have used the Indian scale, and have been consistent throughout. Of course I have not used the Indian scale all the time, but wherever the theme so demanded I have been true to the tradition. Now this does not mean that the minor keys predominate. It is a mistaken idea that all Indian music is minor. Many of their songs are in a robust major, but with their scale there is a plaintive effect or undertone, no matter whether the key is major or minor. We get something the same result from the key of G flat major in our own scale, and you always see the composers rush for that key when they want to get an effect of wistfulness, without being lugubrious."

These ideas Mr. Cadman illustrated by the use of a simple looking wooden instrument, a hybrid between the flute and the flageolet, having a tone something like the former but mellower, and played in a manner similar to the latter. With this instrument and a piano, Mr. Cadman demonstrated that the Indian melody could be harmonized into an operatic passage, without losing its folk value. From what I heard of the melodies and from what Mr. Cadman told of the orchestral treatment, I believe this opera will have all the tunefulness of the best Puccini works, together with a freshness that should make it the first great American grand opera.

Next week Mr. Cadman will have conferences with David Bispham, who will be playing an engagement at the Orpheum, Mr. Bispham being a member of the program committee for the coming festival also. The plans are progressing rapidly, and it is to be a wonderful event. In all accounts of the affair the opera contest has overshadowed the other features, but there are other contests almost equally attractive. For instance, a "Good Music Sunday" is to be held with the co-operation of the churches and nothing but sacred music by American composers will be given that day. A catalogue of compositions is being prepared, graded so that every one from the organist in the little chapel which does not even boast of a choir to the musical director in the biggest cathedral, will have no difficulty in finding something suitable for the occasion, regardless of denomination.

Then there will be the Brush Memorial Prize for the best anthem, a prize for the best symphonic or symphonic tone poem, for chamber music, for a cantata for children's voices, and so on. The Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Adolph Tandler, will be used to present the programs, each composer conducting his own work, although the preliminary rehearsals will be conducted by Mr. Tandler.

Mr. Cadman says he is methodical in his work, but in nothing else. He has set June 15 as the date for the completion of the piano score of his opera, and June 17 as the date for his departure from Pasadena for his cabin in the mountains near Estes Park, Col. This cabin has an interesting history, as I learned when we were speaking of the rewards of public recognition.

"Yes, the royalties are coming in with pleasing regularity now," the young composer said. "This cabin," producing a photograph, "was built from the royalties of 'At Dawning.'"

The photograph interested me. I had bought a copy of the song.

"Well, you may consider yourself possessor of a proprietary interest in that veranda post," said Mr. Cadman. "Your copy gave me five cents."

Considering that the entire cabin was built from these five-cent royalties, the popularity of the Cadman song may be imagined. But if Mr. Cadman is desirous of collecting homes, I venture to say that the one he will build from the royalties of his opera will, if he cares for that sort of thing, be an Oak Knoll mansion.

A Medicine Hat Wedding.

Theodore C. Fossum, director of the Medicine Hat Conservatory of Music, at Medicine Hat, Alberta, Canada, was married recently in that town to Olive Richards, of Vancouver Island. The couple are honeymooning at Banff and other Northwestern points.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR—SEASON 1914-15—NOW BOOKING
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

EDYTH WALKER

(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)

Dramatic Soprano

Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.

Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

THOMAS J. KELLY

Conductor Mendelssohn Choir.
VOCAL COACH
Lecture Recitals with Mrs. Kelly.
209 SOUTH 35th AVE., OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO

Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO

Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.

VOCAL STUDIO - 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST

In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC

128-130 East 58th Street

CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE

The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.

CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR
SHATTUCK

The Distinguished American
PIANIST

In America Season 1914-15

Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

Steinway Piano Used

GEORGE EVERETT AT WORK.

Sue Harvard in Europe.

Sue Harvard, the well known soprano of Pittsburgh, is now in Europe, where she will remain during next season, studying and coaching with Leon Rains, the eminent teacher of Dresden. The accompanying snapshot shows Miss Harvard on board the steamer Kronprinzessin Cecile on her way to Germany. By her side is the genial Captain Pollack of the Kronprinzessin Cecile. During the passage,

SUE HARVARD, THE POPULAR YOUNG SOPRANO, AND CAPTAIN POLLACK ON BOARD THE "KRONPRINZESSIN CECILIE."

Miss Harvard sang at a concert with Mme. Gadski, and scored her usual success.

George Everett's Versatility.

An unusually generous share of gifts has been given to George Everett, the young baritone of the Boston Opera Company, who has been taking part with great success in the present season of opera at Covent Garden. In addition to his vocal and histrionic ability, Mr. Everett is a sculptor of decided talent as may be seen by the accompanying picture in which the young artist is shown at work.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL

European Tour, July, 1914—Jan. 1915
American Tour, - after Feb. 1, 1915
Address THEODORE SEYDEL, 70 Westland Ave., Boston

GEORGE EVERETT

BARITONE—Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies
In London Until July 28,1914
Address Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST

Summer Classes June 8 to July 25'
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue - - - Boston

CLARA TIPPETT

TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

Not "The Lost Chord."

Verses whose plan as to rhythm and rhyme corresponds with those written by Adelaide Proctor under the title of "The Lost Chord," which is known best to musicians through Sir Arthur Sullivan's setting, recently appeared in the Boston Daily Advertiser over the signature of Louis C. Elson. I believe Mr. Elson calls his verses "The Discovered Chord," for by no possible chance could the combination of notes that Elson celebrates in song be the same one Sister Adelaide "lost." Here are the Elson lines:

Seated one day at the organ,
I was awfully ill at ease,
I was hard at work inventing
Unheard of harmonies.

I was heavily perspiring,
And in desperation, when
I struck a chord of music
Such as ne'er was heard by men.

It shivered the golden twilight,
Such a crash was never heard.
Not a chord of the ninth or thirteenth,
But a chord of the twenty-third!

It raised a tumultuous sorrow,
Like many cats in strife,
I can truly say that I never Hear such a sound in my life.

It was full of discordant meanings,
As it came at the end of the piece,
And I held it for thirty measures,
And then I was loth to cease.

The others will seek it vainly,
That dissonant chord of mine
It will stump both Strauss and Schonberg
And in envy they will pine.

I never may hope to hear it
In the symphonies of men
For it may be that only in Hades
I shall hear that chord again.
—Louis C. Edson in the Boston Daily Advertiser.

Serato a Beethoven Interpreter.

One of Berlin's severest critics in The Post says in a recent review about Serato's concert:

An artist who comes before a public with such works as the concertos of Bach, Beethoven and Brahms shows from the start that he not alone wishes to show his virtuosity, his intentions are to convince the hearer of his strong personality, his simplicity and imposing grandeur as a musician; he controls his temperament to such a degree that his striking personality gives evidence of his imposing art. . . .

THIS SILHOUETTE IS ARRIGO SERATO.
Made by an Italian artist friend of his.

Serato will most likely play the Beethoven concerto at his New York Orchestra debut with the Philharmonic Society.

Norah Drewett to Play New Works.

During her American tour next season, Norah Drewett, the Irish pianist, will play two new piano compositions which were written for and dedicated to her, a tone poem called "Claiques" (boats on the Bosphorus), by Emile R. Blanchet, and "Zwei Klavierstücke," by Egon Wellesz.

At the Opera.

First Girl (in the crush)—Mercy! What a dreadful crowd. I wish now I'd stayed at home, don't you?

Second Girl—Certainly not; but I wish to goodness those others had.—Boston Transcript.

Quite Musical.

"Is your daughter fond of music?"

"Terribly fond of it," replied Mr. Cumrox. "No matter how it sounds she seems to like it."—Washington Star.

Brown (to Dobbs, who produced the great sensational drama)—Well, old man, how did your piece go?

Dobbs—First class. I know several men who were present every night and who sat through the whole show.

Is that so? Who are they?

The musicians.—New York Globe.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Malda Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N.W.

OSTROVSKY INSTITUTE OF HAND DEVELOPMENT
The Ostrovsky Method solves the problems of technique and manual flexibility for violinists, pianists and 'cellists. It develops manual elasticity, stretch, speed, looseness, suppleness, strength and resistance by means of the Ostrovsky Apparatus and Appliances. It shortens the hours of technical practice, lessens the drudgery and makes progress under any method certain and rapid. For terms and circulars also the illustrated booklet, "Technique and Hand Development" by H. Ostrovsky, nine pence post free. Address Secretary OSTROVSKY MUSICIANS' HAND DEVELOPMENT CO., Ltd., 50 Leinster Gardens, London, W. Chicago Branch, Steinway Hall, 513-514, 64 E. Van Buren Street.

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
BECHSTEIN HALL STUDIOS, LONDON
Private address, 40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

FIRST AMERICAN APPEARANCE
BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO
Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.
"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914
First American Tour January-May, 1915
OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English
Sole Management:
Concert Direction, M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

The Sensation of the Year
CARL FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
January and February, 1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

ELEANOR SPENCER
PIANIST

Returns to America Season 1914-15
Management, Antonia Sawyer
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

EFREM ZIMBALIST
Celebrated Violinist
— Will return to —
AMERICA
Season 1914-1915
For Terms and Dates available
Apply
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th St., New York
STEINWAY PIANO

The Devries with Wisconsin Conservatory.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 2, 1914.

The Wisconsin Conservatory of Music announces with great pride and pleasure the engagement of Herman Devries as an addition to its vocal department. Mr. Devries has won marked distinction on two continents as a basso-cantante and later as one of the foremost American vocal teachers. He is the teacher under whom the following well known professionals have studied or coached: Mme. Schumann-Heink, Milka Ternina, Antonio Scotti, Marguerite Sylva, Allen Hinkley, Arthur Middleton, Kate Condon, Luella Chilson Ohrman, Ralph Errolle, Mary Ann Kaufmann, Leonora Allen, Helen Axe Brown, Alice Dovey, HERMAN DEVRIES.

Grace Ellsworth, Hazel Eden Mudge, Reginald Roberts, Maude Lambert, Grant Kimball, Mary Highsmith, and many others who are now appearing in opera or oratorio, concert and church work. Many who are teaching in leading institutions have had their vocal education solely with Herman Devries.

Herman Devries, the youngest son of Rosa Devries, who toured this country in the early sixties as the principal soprano in the leading opera company of those days, was born in New York City. He was educated in Paris, where he studied singing with Fauré, the author of "The Palms" and for twenty years the leading baritone with the Paris Grand Opera Company, with which Herman Devries made his debut in 1881. Later on Mr. Devries was called to the Opera-Comique, where he remained as first basso-cantante for eleven years, creating many important roles. He appeared in the leading opera houses in Europe as guest, including La Monnaie in Brussels and Covent Garden in London. Mr. Devries has sung under the baton of Charles Gounod, Charles Lamoureux, Edouard Colonne, Joseph Dupont, Leon Jehin, Jules Massenet, Hasselmans, Mancinelli, Dr. Muck, Bevignani, Schalk, Harrison Wild, César Franck, Raoul Pugno, Andre Messager, Professor Manstaedt, Alexander Lugini, Jules Danbe, Deldevez and Vianesi.

The French Government thrice honored the gifted artist, bestowing upon him the order of Officer of Nicham Iftikar, Officer d'Academie and Officer de l'Instruction Publique.

After Mr. Devries appeared in "Leporello" in Paris in 1898, Maurice Grau came to him and immediately secured him for the Metropolitan Opera House of New York, where Mr. Devries sang such important roles as Mephisto in "Faust," St. Bris in the "Huguenots," Capulet in "Romeo and Juliet," Basilio in the "Barber," Donner in "Das Rheingold," Sparafucile in "Rigoletto," Vulcan in "Philemon et Baucis," etc.

Mr. Devries' success in the operatic field did not, however, overshadow his success in oratorio and church work. For many years he was soloist at St. Eugene in Paris, when Raoul Pugno was the organist there. He sang in church under César Franck, Guilmant, Samuel Rousseau, Pickaert, Salome, Grisy, and sang often in the "Damnation of Faust," "Judas Maccabeus," "The Messiah," "Redemption," "Mors et Vita," "Elijah."

In concert and recital work Herman Devries appeared in Chatelet, Trocadero, Salle Erard, Salle Pleyel, Biarritz, Aix-les-Bains, Vichy, Spa, Ostende and Scheveningen.

Mr. Devries, who this year has been engaged to teach once a week at the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music, declined offers from three leading institutions in Chicago and one in New York City. In Chicago, Mr. Devries has given with pupils, operatic performances at the Auditorium, Illinois, Studebaker and Fine Arts Theatres.

Mrs. Herman Devries, who has also been secured by the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music, is well known in Chicago as a vocal teacher and has been particularly successful in the placing of voices and has made a name for herself also as an interpreter of German classics and modern lieder and French songs.

Mrs. Devries was born in New Orleans and was educated in Europe. Her musical education was accomplished in Berlin and Paris. In Germany her teachers were Richard Kugler for piano and Amalia Nicolay in singing. In Paris Mrs. Devries studied piano with Marmontel and Charles René and singing with Therese Duprez, and for many years was a pupil of her husband.

Mrs. Devries' linguistic powers have frequently been commented upon; she also includes German and French diction in her work.

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Amos Whipple Ellis, a seven year old violinist of West Roxbury, Mass., is attracting local musical attention.

Mrs. J. D. Tuning, a Huntington, Ohio, vocalist, sang at a recent dedicatory service in Proctorville, Ohio.

Josephine Forsyth was one of the singers participating in Rita Elandi's recital, Hotel Statler, Cleveland, Ohio, recently.

Frances Voshelle, soprano, of Chester, Pa., appeared in the Lansinger recital, Philadelphia, recently.

About forty names were on the recital program of piano and violin pupils of Bessie A. Pierce, held at the Town Hall, Woodbury, Conn.

Pupils of Phoebe Teufen, Milwaukee, Wis., gave a piano recital recently.

Florence J. Shortsleeve's violin pupils gave a recital at the Springfield Art Museum, Springfield, Mass., in June.

Prominent local musicians participated in the program given at the last meeting of the Westfield, Mass., Music Club. Works of Rubinstein, Rachmaninoff, Arensky, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Borodin, Scriabine, Moussorgsky and Tschaikowsky were presented. Frederic Goodwin, of the Columbia Graphophone Company, New York, was presented and gave a number of illustrative records on a music machine.

Twenty-three miscellaneous numbers were given by pupils of L. M. Collings in her annual recital at Trinity Hall, Halifax, N. S.

Elsie Marion Bowie, a young Lisbon, Me., musician, will teach violin and piano, at "Sea Pines," a private school for girls, Brewster, Mass., next year.

Five thousand lovers of music are said to have filled the Louisville, Ky., Armory at the last concert of the North American Saengerbund, when a male chorus of 3,500 voices was a feature of the program.

Clarice Marshall Bibb received the artist's medal; Grace Pettus, the scholarship medal, and Everett Stone the improvement medal from the Richmond, Va., Conservatory of Music, Frank E. Cosby, director. Miss Bibb is the first artist graduate from the school.

Pupils of Florence A. Wells, Lewiston, Me., appeared in recent musicales at Miss Wells' studio.

A light shower failed to dampen the interest of 2,500 Austin, Tex., residents, in the concert held at North East Avenue Park, by the Municipal band.

Kathryn Mary Cook, a member of the graduating class of the East Syracuse, N. Y., High School, composed the class song, which was sung at the commencement exercises.

Arthur Bienbar's pupils gave a concert at the Elks Club, St. Louis, Mo.

Seventeen of Margaret Grant's piano pupils, gave a program, which included works by Tschaikowsky, Beethoven, Rubinstein and Schubert in St. Matthew's Hall, Ottawa, Can.

Lazar S. Samoiloff, the New York singing teacher, will continue giving lessons during the summer. July 5, Mr. Samoiloff will begin a course of lectures on voice and vocal pedagogy for teachers.

The music loving public will, during the coming season, have an opportunity to hear Jean Barondess, daughter of school commissioner, Joseph Barondess. She studies with Lazar S. Samoiloff, has sung with the Zaro and National Opera Companies, and experts predict that she will be a favorite of operagoers. Critics have found her voice to be perfectly placed, her enunciation to be distinct, her phrasing full of understanding, and that her acting showed an artist of unusual abilities. This is the fifth pupil of Mr. Samoiloff to sing in grand opera. Isa Kramer, soprano, is another singing at an Imperial grand opera house in Russia, with great success.

John W. Nichols, the well known New York tenor, has been secured by the Chicago Apollo Club for the two performances of "The Messiah," to be given December 25 and 27 respectively.

Amy Fay's brilliant young pupil, Lemuel C. Goldstein, graduated at Morris High School, the Bronx, New York City, June 25. He also appeared as solo pianist in Beethoven's concerto in B flat, opus 15, with orchestra accompaniment. The lad, who has been studying with Miss Fay for six years past, played splendidly and had an overwhelming success. Unbroken applause obliged him to return to the stage and play an encore, namely, Moszkowski's "Etincelles." The big cadenza by Hummel is both noble and brilliant. He played this like a young master. Many people concur in the opinion that this young lad is born for the concert stage. He is a combination of refinement, poetry and brilliancy not often found. Lastly he possesses great fire and real magnetic control over the audience.

Max Jacobs, assisted by James Liebling, cellist; Rafael Tiaz, tenor; Ira Jacobs, pianist, and Edna Mampel, contralto, took part in a concert under the auspices of Tenafly Council, Staten Island, N. Y., June 26. Mr. Jacobs played solos by various modern composers including Drdla, Sarasate, Kreisler and Wieniawski.

Charles F. Hackett Returns.

Charles F. Hackett, who has been spending a year in Italy, arrived on the steamship Carpathia, of the Cunard Line, on Friday, July 3. Mr. Hackett intends to spend the summer in the United States, returning to Rome in the early fall. The well known tenor has just signed a contract covering a two years' engagement in the Rome Opera.

Mr. Hackett has returned to America for the summer for the express purpose of some preliminary coaching with

Photo by Matzene, Chicago.
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES.

Arthur J. Hubbard, of Boston, his teacher, prior to making his debut in Milan this fall.

Blumenschein Has Gone to Munich.

W. L. Blumenschein, of Dayton, Ohio, who was correspondent of the MUSICAL COURIER some years ago in Munich, left for that city last week on his annual summer visit.

NORAH DREWETT THE FAMOUS PIANIST
SEASON 1914-15
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

Borwick's Melbourne Programs.

Leonard Borwick, that mature and finely sensed piano arist, whose finished musicianship, lovely touch, and faultless technical equipment American audiences will have another chance to enjoy next season, now is undertaking his second successful tour in Australasia, and everywhere meeting with unstinted favor on the part of the public and the music scribes. One of the chief reasons for Borwick's universal popularity is his ability to please many different musical tastes, and this versatility is due to his tremendous repertoire, which includes all kinds and styles of recital compositions. A glance over the attached four programs, played recently by Borwick in Melbourne, Australia, will show the extent and diversity of the artist's knowledge:

FIRST RECITAL.

Organ prelude in E flat.....Bach
(Arranged for piano by L. Borwick.)
Sonata in C minor, op. 111.....Beethoven
Novelette in F, op. 21, No. 1.....Schumann
Intermezzo (from the Faschingsschwank, op. 26).....Schumann
Herberge (from Forest Scenes, op. 82).....Schumann
Vogel als Prophet (from Forest Scenes, op. 82).....Schumann
Study in Canon form, op. 56, No. 5, in B minor.....Schumann
Toccata, op. 7, C major.....Schumann
Polonaise in C minor, op. 40, No. 2.....Chopin
Nocturne in E flat, op. 9, No. 2.....Chopin
Scherzo in B flat minor, op. 32.....Chopin
Prelude and nocturne, op. 9, for left hand alone.....Scriabin
Soirée de Vienne.....Schubert-Liszt

SECOND RECITAL.

Air and variations, The Harmonious Blacksmith.....Handel
(Arranged for concert performance by L. Borwick.)
Le Coucou.....Daquin
Choral prelude, Rejoice and Be Exceeding Glad.....Bach
Arietta.....Leonardo Leo
Les Barricades Mysterieuses.....Couperin
Gigue.....Graun
Sonata in F minor, op. 5.....Brahms
Polonaise in A, op. 40, No. 1.....Chopin
Prelude in C sharp minor, op. 45.....Chopin
Impromptu in G flat, op. 59, No. 3.....Chopin
Mazurka in F sharp minor, op. 51.....Chopin
Mazurka in A flat, op. 50, No. 2.....Chopin
Waltz in F major, op. 34, No. 3.....Chopin
Etude in A minor, op. 25, No. 11.....Chopin

THIRD RECITAL.

Organ fugue in G minor.....Bach
(Arranged for piano by L. Borwick.)
Rondo in G, op. 51, No. 2.....Beethoven
Allegro in B minor.....Scarlatti
Tempi di Ballo in D.....Scarlatti
Allegrissimo in B flat.....Scarlatti
Sonata, op. 35, in B flat minor.....Chopin
Novelette in E, op. 21, No. 7.....Schumann
Nachtstück, No. 4, in F.....Schumann
Aufschwung, op. 12, No. 2.....Schumann
Lied ohne Worte (Spring Song), Book V, No. 6, op. 62, Mendelssohn
Andantino from Sonata, op. 164.....Schubert
Prelude in C sharp minor, op. 3, No. 2.....Rachmaninoff
Serenade, op. 3, No. 5.....Rachmaninoff
Menuetto Vecchio.....Sgambati
Hungarian Rhapsody, No. 12.....Liszt

FOURTH RECITAL.

Chromatic fantasie and fugue.....Bach
Andante and five variations.....Mozart
Intermezzo, op. 10, No. 4.....Brahms
Rhapsody No. 2, in G minor, op. 79.....Brahms
Sonata Appassionata, op. 57.....Beethoven
Prelude for orchestra, L'apres-midi d'un faune.....Debussy
(Arranged for piano solo by L. Borwick.)
Barcarolle, op. 60.....Chopin
Prelude in D minor, op. 28, No. 24.....Chopin
Nocturne in G, op. 37, No. 2.....Chopin
Etude in E minor, op. 25, No. 5.....Chopin
Waltz in A flat, op. 42.....Chopin

In the first program, as shown above, it is noteworthy that Borwick played a Bach transcription of his own, Beethoven's monumental op. 111 sonata, and a fine Schumann group, thus paying tribute to a composer who is beginning to be unduly neglected by pianists, except for his fantasie, "Carneval," and "Etudes Symphoniques." The second program again shows a Borwick modernized arrangement of a classic in the Handel number, a quintet of ancient works in small form, and Brahms' imperishable F minor sonata, truly a test piece of interpretation and pianistic skill. Another Borwick adaptation of Bach heads the third program, with Chopin's passionate "funeral march" sonata to follow, and a representative selection of romantic numbers as a conclusion. Classical in tone are the opening five numbers of the final list, with the startling Debussy-Borwick transcription (which made such a sensation in London last summer) as a middle section, and a representative Chopin assortment to wind up the series of recitals.

LEONARD BORWICK,
Artist virtuoso.

Mme. Merö to Europe.

Mme. Yolanda Merö will sail for Europe very shortly, in order to begin preparations there for her forthcoming tour, which will take her through England and most of the large Continental cities next season. One of the important engagements for which Mme. Merö already is secured is that with the London Philharmonic Society. The organization is to play under Safonoff at London in December and then travel through the principal English music centres, employing Mme. Merö as soloist at all the concerts. Later her engagements take her to Germany, France, Austria and Russia. One of the appearances to which Mme. Merö looks forward especially is that under Theodore Spiering's baton at Blüthner Hall, Berlin, November 5, for she is exceedingly anxious to test her mettle in the German capital, now the very Mecca of pianists and pianism.

YOLANDA MERO.

Auctioned for Dance.

The quaint custom of selling village girls as dancing partners to the highest bidder has been revived in a number of Rhenish villages in connection with Whitsuntide church dedications. The auctions take place in the public square and the village swains engage in a lively competition for the honor of securing the prettiest girls as partners for the festival. The older girls are "knocked down" at a price as low as 5 cents, while village beauties of a tender age go for $1 to $1.50. The highest prices are commanded by girls who are both pretty and rich, as the Whitsuntide dances traditionally lead to engagements and marriages. The proceeds of the auction are devoted to communal purposes.—Newark, N. J., Star.

Chittenden Pupil's Recital.

Mabel Besthoff, a pupil of Kate S. Chittenden, dean of the American Institute of Applied Music, New York, gave the folowing piano numbers at the school, Friday, July 3:

Sonata.....Beethoven
Etude.....Rogers
Melodie.....Neupert
Arabesque.....Schumann
Bolero.....Chopin
Introduction and waltz.....Sieveking
Romance.....Faure
Etude.....Kopiloff
Waldesrauschen.....Liszt
Allegro con fuoco.....Sinding

Thoroughly familiar with each one of her numbers, Miss Besthoff was able to give her full attention to their interpretation. This she accomplished with adequate technic, musical touch and intelligent insight.

Mme. Riheldaffer's Re-engagements.

May 7 and 8, Grace Hall Riheldaffer filled her second annual engagement as soloist at the May festival of the Central State Normal, at Mt. Pleasant, Mich., the other soloists being William Wade Hinshaw, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Frances Ingram, contralto of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company and the National Opera Company of Canada; and David Duggan, of the Duggan Grand Opera Company of Chicago. Mme. Riheldaffer will return to Mt. Pleasant next season.

This ever popular soprano appeared in recital in Detroit, Mich., May 5. Engagements for twelve recitals were offered her as the result of her success there.

Oscar Saenger Sails.

Oscar Saenger, the distinguished singing master, with Mrs. Saenger and their daughter, Eleanore Welles Saenger, sailed on the President Lincoln, July 2, going directly to Finland, where they will spend some weeks fishing in the beautiful lake regions. From there they will go on an extended tour through Russia, down the Volga to the Caspian Sea, and then spend some time in the Caucasian Mountains and the Crimea. Mr. Saenger will return to the United States on September 30, and will begin his studio activities immediately upon his arrival.

Mme. Cumming Studies Methods Abroad.

Shanna Cumming, the soprano, who sailed for Europe July 1, on the Aquitania, will review methods of famous vocal teachers during this trip.

Mme. Cumming was accompanied by her husband, M. B. Jones, of the New York Produce Exchange; Shanna Jones and Martin Jones.

The party will return September 1 to Brooklyn.

The Great Demand For
Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
For Recital and Concert
is shown by the fact that over fifty per cent of her entire season of 1914-1915 is now booked. For the remaining dates early application should be made to her sole managers
FOSTER & DAVID
500 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK CITY

Aline Kuhn Engaged by Gamble Party.

Most touring musical companies close their season about May 1, but the Ernest Gamble Concert Party continues until May 26, when it closes at Ashtabula, Ohio, the artists' series that includes Bloomfeld Zeisler, Christine Miller, and others. Then the Gamble party's summer season opens in Tennessee, on June 5, and extends until September 1.

ALINE KUHN,
Concert pianist, with the Ernest Gamble Concert Party, Pittsburgh, Pa.

A new pianist with the Gamble party is Aline Kuhn, a young artist of great promise. Miss Kuhn toured the West Indies with the Gambles and had such success that she was engaged for the coming season. Miss Kuhn has been called the "youthful Carreno," and she plays with a brilliancy and dash that are quite captivating.

Pilot Charles Gamble reports appointments for his artists at Charlottesville, Va.; Bridgewater College, Va., for the fifth time; Charlotte, N. C.; Raleigh, N. C., and Colorado Springs.

Marcella Craft's Varied Repertoire.

Much has been said and written about Marcella Craft's Madame Butterfly and her Salome; it is true that two such portrayals make a substantial foundation for fame, many a fine career having been built upon one such achievement. But Marcella Craft's dramatic talent by no means finds its complete expression in these two roles, splendid though they are. She has a score of others that are fully as original, and quite as finished artistically.

Her Traviata, vocally and dramatically, is at once compelling and persuasive. To this old-fashioned type of opera she gives an atmosphere of convincing actuality which pervades it from start to finish. Especially bewitching is her Boheme, redolent of the Latin Quarter. In "Der Rosenkavalier" she is a dainty and doll-like Sophie. As Marta of the Lowlands in d'Albert's "Tiefland," she achieves a Spanish peasant atmosphere. In "Faust" she depicts charmingly the simplicity of the maiden of the old German days, while her Antonia in "Tales of Hoffmann" is the purest Biedemeyer. Again, in "The Secret of Suzanne" her coquetry is so sprightly and so altogether captivating that one wishes that she might be heard oftener in comedy parts.

MARCELLA CRAFT AS BUTTERFLY.

It is indeed indicative of extraordinary talent when one individual can impersonate with equal success the sweet pathos of Butterfly, the barbaric tragedy of Salome, and the dainty comedy of Suzanne. But Marcella Craft possesses in an unusual degree the faculty of losing herself so completely in the character she portrays as to present another personality, wholly convincing and lifelike.

In fact, any one who has been privileged to witness her various impersonations can but be convinced of her exceptional versatility.

Engagements for Sulli Pupils.

Martha Mork, dramatic soprano, came from Christiania, Norway, to study with Giorgio M. Sulli, the well known New York vocal instructor. Lind Skaien, a prominent manager of Norway, was recently in New York and went to the Sulli studios to hear how the pupils of that master were progressing. While there, he heard Miss Mork sing and was so delighted with her voice that he immediately engaged her for a concert tour during the summer months in many important cities in the Scandinavian countries.

Another successful Sulli pupil is Anne Byrd, contralto,

MARTHA MORK,
Dramatic soprano, pupil of Maestro G. M. Sulli.

who is soloist at the Labor Temple, New York, where Mr. Sulli is the musical director. Miss Byrd is at present touring the South, where she is being heard in concert and recital.

Season 1914-1915

Antonia Sawyer
Has the Honor to Present
the Violinist

SPALDING

Accompanied at the piano
by
ANDRÉ BENOIST

The Verdict of Three Continents

HAMBURG.

A comet appeared in the musical firmament of Hamburg last evening. It was really a musical comet of great magnitude. After having heard Veczey, Elman, Zimbalist, Burmester and Marteau, we thought the cycle of violinists was ended for the season, but it was only yesterday that it was completed by Albert Spalding. It is an occasion of great pleasure to hear him when with triumphant, fervent and unique sonority, he plays with masterly precision on the violin.—Hamburger Fremdenblatt.

ALEXANDRIA.

From the first notes, full, liquid, pure and of rare beauty, the public was gripped. A master stood before us. All praise would seem superfluous by those who have not heard his diabolical trill and who cannot imagine the years of study necessary for the dazzling result of grace and strength which the artist gave us throughout the performance. — Le Phare d'Alexandrie.

ST. PETERSBURG.

Albert Spalding, an American, is an artist of serious ideals, who is not only a virtuoso, but to whom art is an honored goddess. —St. Petersburg Novoe Vrema.

NEW YORK.

He is an admirable artist. He has sincerity and simplicity of style, a technic that is adequate to the demands he makes upon it and a tone of uncommon loveliness, penetrating, full-bodied of insinuating sweetness. As for Spalding's own compositions, they were well worth bringing forward. Spalding's music reflects his own character. It is sincere, dignified and unpretentious. — New York Press.

MILAN.

Last evening Albert Spalding proved himself to be a worthy successor to the great luminaries of the violin art who had preceded him at the La Scala, headed by Pablo de Sarasate. His art is truly limpid, built on the rocks of truth and disdainful of those tricks which most violinists wish to impose upon the impressionable public. He does not carry the favor of the public with affectation nor with enticing effeminacy. With great interpretative mastery and an execution clear as crystal, he played the insiduously polyphonic adagio and fugue for violin alone by Bach.—Milan la Perseveranza.

Friends Await Mrs. King Clark's Homecoming.

In these days of excessive musical activity, an absence extending over a few years is dangerously apt to exert a detrimental effect on the popularity of a former favorite. Particularly is this the case in America, where, owing to the constant influx of distinguished new artists, even fairly vivid impressions risk obliteration unless their cause be quite steadily exploited. Hence it follows that numerous singers and players who, at one time or other, have earned a degree of approbation here, often find their vogue impaired and public interest in them considerably diminished after an interval of several seasons.

That an absence of as many as eight years should be no bar to the eagerness and expectancy with which the return of an artist is awaited seems, in truth, testimony eloquent enough of this one's exceptional distinction and striking powers. Just such pleasurable anticipation is at present manifest in the forthcoming return of Mrs. King Clark, who for that lengthy period has absented herself from America. Though American by birth (the singer is a native of Lincoln, Neb.), her art has ripened to its present maturity abroad. So enthusiastic have been the encomiums which it has everywhere called forth that it is small wonder that Mrs. King Clark's compatriots have become eager to hear and judge for themselves.

ANN IVINS,
The New York soprano, snapshotted in Central Park, New York.

Mrs. King Clark's name would, of course, have become familiar under ordinary circumstances through that of her husband, the eminent Berlin vocal teacher. It has, however, attained its present prominence fully as much by virtue of its own achievements in the field of concert singing. Mrs. King Clark is today one of the favorites of Berlin and London, and her popularity in most of the leading continental music centers is equally marked.

In the course of the past winter Mrs. King Clark has appeared with extraordinary success in a number of the most exclusive Berlin salons, while during the enormously busy London season of May and June she sang twice in Bechstein Hall before overflowing houses, and such houses are no more customary during the London season than they are in New York. The English critics were extravagant in their expressions of delight.

Versed in the secrets of the exacting art of song interpretation, Mrs. King Clark is furthermore endowed with a voice of lovely contraltolike quality, large in volume and extensive in range, and she handles it with infallible mastery. Her programs have been amply diversified and exacting to a marked degree from an interpretative standpoint. They have covered a wide range of musical ground and an extensive variety of schools. In Italian, French and English songs of the eighteenth century by Paradies, Rontani, Lully and Purcell, classic and modern lieder by Brahms, Strauss, Wolf and Sinding, modern French songs by Debussy and a number of Russian works, she has disclosed a perfect knowledge of their respective schools. Nor has she neglected the efforts of American writers and has introduced to Berlin audiences a number of songs by Cadman, Marion Bauer, Bruno Huhn and Campbell-Tipton.

Mrs. King Clark's enunciation is exemplary in whatever language she may sing. Her gracious personality, the beauty and marked individuality of her delivery, her skill, her authority in planning her interpretations and her temperamental assets have won her the place in the esteem of foreign critics which she now holds.

Mlle. Verlet's Varied Repertoire.

Although the coloratura artist's sphere of activites is known to be considerably more circumscribed today than it was several decades ago, and although the taste for operatic music of the dramatic order has resulted only too frequently in a deplorable negligence of those perfectly legitimate principles of vocalism upon which florid singing is based, it is manifestly erroneous to assume that the vogue of brilliant ornamental song is extant. On the contrary, the relative scarcity of its exponents today serves to lend signal interest to the appearance of every gifted one. And, as the love for dazzling vocal fireworks seems to be as inherent as ever in the public at large, the advent of a capable coloraturist is very often hailed with extravagent demonstrations of popular approval.

Such has been the case whenever Alice Verlet, the brilliant coloratura soprano of the Paris Grand Opera (National), Paris Opera Comique, Paris Gaiete Lyrique, Brussels Theatre de la Monnaie, Monte Carlo, Nice and Lyons, has been heard, although Mlle. Verlet is, so to speak, a coloratura singer, combining fluency, facility and brilliancy of the older school with the dramatic sense, the intelligence, the musicianship and the poetic feeling which is demanded today. By virtue of these qualities she imparts a degree of new life to many works widely regarded as old fashioned. Her repertoire is far more comprehensive than that of average coloratura singers today, few of whom are equal to the stringent exactions of many of the older operas, having neither the necessary flexibility, range, or knowledge of the distinctive style.

Mlle. Verlet is at home in operas that are little more than historic names to the present generation of music lovers. This repertoire comprises a number of modern dramatic works, as well as the older ones.

Musicians' Congress Recitals.

Ralfe Leech Sterner's direction of the Congress of American Musicians and Students includes the giving of several recitals in the Wanamaker Auditorium, New York. The program of the fourth recital in honor of this congress, June 18, included vocal numbers, with several piano and violin pieces. As usual with everything done under Mr. Sterner's management, much well performed, good music was heard, rendered by the following students, some of whom are budding young artists: Blanche M. Kelley, Frederic Maroc, Belle Rudolph, John J. Jackson, Emma M. Hamilton, Rocco Carcione, Eleanor L. Fields, Arline E. Felker, Rae H. Coelho, Marguerite Zacharias, Ramee Rivas, Lida Gedney, Muriel Guy and Harold A. Fix, pianist, member of the faculty. Marguerite Valentine was the accompanist.

Saar to Summer Abroad.

Louis Victor Saar, the well known composer, who is also one of the faculty of the Cincinnati College of Music, sailed on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie last Friday for Europe, where he intends to spend the greater part of his vacation. Mr. Saar will return on the Savoie, August 22, and will join his family in northern Michigan for the balance of his vacation, returning to Cincinnati on September 1.

A Virgil Pupil's Recital.

Modena Scovill, a young pupil of Mrs. A. M. Virgil, gave a recital at the Virgil Piano Conservatory, [illegible] Friday afternoon, June 26. Although she has but recently returned from a long recital tour, she played with much spontaneity and freshness of spirit. Her program was chosen from the works of a great variety of composers, covering widely diverse periods of musical literature, and her success is all the more remarkable, in that she was able to render each one with intelligence and sympathy.

To those who find Bach "dry" and purely "intellectual," her presentation of the "Preambule" must have been a delight. By means of careful phrasing and a proper subordination of elaborations to theme, she produced a clear, well balanced effect, not always associated with the polyphonic school of composers.

The difficult Liszt arrangement of Schubert's "Hark, Hark the Lark," she played with brilliancy of execution, and richness of tone.

A representative group of Chopin pieces always furnish a real test of musicianship. Miss Scovill distinguished herself by the skillful manner in which she brought out the subtleties and delicate fineness peculiar to Chopin.

Illustrative of the Virgil system, she inserted a few technical numbers performed principally with reference to speed, accuracy and clearness of tone. She has acquired a remarkable facility.

After rendering two MacDowell numbers in a most artistic style, she brought the program to a stirring, dramatic close with the twelfth rhapsodie of Liszt. It is to her credit that Miss Scovill gave this brilliant composition a significance of more than a showy, bravura character. Many pianists of the "muscular" type are tempted to use the rhapsodies and many other Liszt pieces primarily to display their personal technical accomplishments or to stun and overawe their hearers. Miss Scovill simply used her technical resources as a means toward an end, that end being a sincere musical interpretation of the piece, bringing out the dramatic and quieter passages to produce a coherent well balanced whole. The result was far more thrilling than it would have been had she merely left dents in the keyboard.

Dulcinea at the Music Studio.

Dulcinea called at my studio the other day just as a pianist finished playing the Grieg concerto. She didn't care for classical music, she said. There wasn't much tune to it. What she liked was a good lively tune. She thought "The Rosary" was awfully sad and just loved "Narcissus" and the "Flower Song." She liked to watch the pianist's fingers. It was wonderful how they could stretch, and was sure it must be hard to keep such a lot in one's head. She had heard that no person could play classic and be a good ragger at the same time. She knew of a girl that took of an old German professor and he made her practice with pennies on the back of her hand. She couldn't understand why musicians had long hair. Anybody could play just as well with their hair short, she thought. Anyhow she didn't claim to know anything about music, but she knew what she liked.—New York Tribune.

ETHEL LEGINSKA "UP A TREE."

Leginska in Three Cities.

Loudon Charlton, manager of Ethel Leginska, has arranged three recitals for this artist as follows: Boston, November 9, at Jordan Hall; New York, November 16, at Aeolian Hall, and a concert in Chicago the same month.

The accompanying snapshot shows this excellent artist enjoying herself in the country.

The first theatre built in London was erected on the site of what is now Holywell Lane, Shoreditch. The cost of the building was between six hundred and seven hundred pounds.

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

LOUISVILLE MOUNTED POLICE.
A fine body on Kentucky thoroughbreds leading the Sängerfest parade.

THE CHORUS OF 3,000 MEN, DIRECTED BY LOUIS EHRGOTT, OF CINCINNATI.

THE MASSING OF THE BANNERS AT THE OPENING CEREMONIES.

LOUISVILLE, KY., INVADED BY NORTH AMERICAN SAENGERBUND.

Thirty-fourth Saengerfest Draws Enthusiastic Music Lovers from Many States—Chicago Symphony Orchestra and the Louisville United Choruses Take Part—Noted Soloists Heard.

CONCERTS HELD ON JUNE 24, 25 AND 26.

Louisville, Ky., June 28, 1914.

The thirty-fourth Saengerfest of the North American Saengerbund, which took place in Louisville on June 24, 25 and 26, was the greatest musical event in the history of the city, and attracted immense audiences from all over Kentucky and adjacent States. The arrangement of stage and seats in the great armory—one of the largest buildings of its kind in America—was such that the acoustics were far superior to those of any previous festival, and the audiences were enabled to enjoy the concerts in every particular.

On the first night the Louisville United Choruses, under the able direction of Anthony Molengraft, were heard in "Festival Greeting," by Baldamus; Mendelssohn's setting of "Ode to Artists," and Niels Gade's "Crusaders." The chorus numbered seven hundred, and gave evidence of the most careful and judicious training. It compared favorably with any of the visiting choruses and proved that local singers could equal those of many a larger city.

Particularly was this manifest in the difficult music of "The Crusaders." The soloists for this evening were

CHRISTINE MILLER.

RUDOLF BERGER.

Christine Miller, Rudolf Berger, Clarence Whitehill and John G. Miller, the latter taking the place of George Sheffield at very short notice. Miss Miller's lovely voice has lost none of its beauty since it first charmed a Louisville audience, and has gained in breadth and power. Her rich, noble tones were heard from one end of the vast building to the other, and the hearty greeting extended her proved that she can never outwear her welcome here.

On the second night Miss Miller was the soloist again, singing Liszt's "Lorelei," Schubert's "Junge Nonne" and Hugo Wolf's "Er ist's." The dominating quality of her voice was again impressed upon her hearers and she was a popular figure with the visitors; she was serenaded by the Maennerchor of Indianapolis on the first night of her appearance, and by the Musikverein of the same city on the second night.

Clarence Whitehill as Peter was heard in Louisville for the first time, and won his audience at the very start. The power and sympathy of his voice, as well as his impressive stage presence and poise, won great favor, and his appearance as soloist on Friday afternoon attracted a crowd of admirers. His solos were the "Evening Star" aria and Wotan's "Farewell," both given with that mastery for which he is well known.

John Miller, although laboring under the disadvantage of inadequate preparation and no orchestral rehearsal, acquitted himself admirably. His voice is a tenor of delightful quality, and his handling of the part of Rinaldo revealed the artist.

Rudolf Berger's introductory solo was the "Prize Song" from the "Meistersingers," and naturally much interest had been aroused previously by the excellent reputation which had preceded him. His striking personality, heroic voice, and superb artistry more than fulfilled expectations, and he was accorded a reception such as a singer has seldom received in this city. His voice is specially adapted to such a building as the armory, and when he was congratulated, after the Thursday night concert, upon having been heard over the great chorus and orchestra, he said, "You don't know what a pleasure it is to be in a place where I can make all the noise I want to." In "Das Lied" he certainly had this opportunity, and the power of his voice seemed unlimited. On Friday night, in the "Lohengrin" duet with Madame Rappold, he was also immensely impressive, and his singing of the "Siegmund Love Song," which was substituted for the "Lohengrin Narrative," was a revelation of virile brilliancy in tone and treatment. Both he and Mme. Rappold were immensely admired by the visiting singers, and both were serenaded in the lobby of the Seelbach by the United Singers of Indianapolis and also by the Liederkranz of St. Louis. It is hoped that this is only the first of many visits our city will receive from this delightful pair.

CLARENCE WHITEHILL.

Marie Rappold was introduced at the first afternoon concert. Her selections were "Dich theure Halle," Puccini's "Vissi d'Arte," and the beautiful "Ave Maria" from SCENE IN FRONT OF COURT HOUSE. PRESENTATION OF FLAGS.

MASS CHORUS IN ARMORY, SAENGERFEST.

Bruch's "Cross of Fire." Mme. Rappold was recalled again and again.

On Friday night, with the Mass Chorus of three thousand voices, Mme. Rappold sang the Schubert-Liszt "Omnipotence," and was also heard in Isolde's "Liebestod."

Naturally the greatest interest centered in the Mass Chorus, whose appearance on Thursday night was greeted with cheers of enthusiasm. As the mighty volume of sound rolled out through the space of the immense auditorium the audience sat spellbound, only to awaken, at the conclusion of the first number, to an excitement that waxed almost to a frenzy. Like some great elemental force the waves of harmony carried all before it, and the great assembly was literally swept to its feet, with vociferous demonstrations of delight and admiration. That so great a body of singers could achieve such delicate gradations of shading, such thrilling tone coloring, and an enunciation so distinct, would seem incredible to one who had not heard these effects produced under the leadership of Louis Ehrgott, of Cincinnati. Mr. Ehrgott is dynamic, and seems to hurl some electric fluid into his singers, for they respond to his every mood as sensitively as if they numbered thirty instead of three thousand. It was an experience never to be forgotten, and the memory of it will always live with those who were so fortunate as to hear it.

On Thursday night the choral numbers were the march from "Tannhäuser"; "Wohin mit der Freud," Silcher; "Sonntag ist," Breu; "Waldmorgen," Koellner (sung by the United Singers of Chicago, directed by Karl Reckzeh); "Verlassen," Koschat; "Schwertlied," Weber; "Beim, Liebchen zu Haus," Pfell; "Dixie," and "Das Lied," with Mr. Berger as soloist.

On Friday night they sang the "Omnipotence" (with Mme. Rappold); "Aennchen vom Tharau," Silcher; "Im Wald," Leu; "Frühling am Rhein," Breu; "An die Heimath," Jungst; "My Old Kentucky Home"; "Das Deutsche Lied," Schneider, and "America" with the audience. Every number was a masterpiece of vocalization, and it is safe to say that no music of any description has ever inspired an audience to a higher pitch of appreciation. The Milwaukee Maennerchor, directed by A. S. Kramer, gave Zander's "Jubilate" and Hegar's "Morgen im Wald," on Thursday afternoon, with fine effect.

On Friday afternoon the Children's Chorus of two thousand, under the direction of Caroline Bourgard, supervisor of music in the public schools, made a delightful impression in several well chosen selections. The first of these was the Gloria from Mozart's "Twelfth Mass," and the smooth and intelligent rendition of this difficult number showed the conscientious and thorough training which the children had received. Particularly was the enunciation notable for its excellent clarity, every syllable coming distinctly to the audience. "Come, Ever Smiling Liberty," and "See the Conquering Hero Comes," from "Judas Maccabeus," were two ambitious numbers which again revealed the ability of the little folk to render music usually considered beyond their scope; their grasp of the phrases was most satisfactory. A group of American national airs completed the work of the Children's Chorus. This was one of the most important features of the series of concerts and Miss Bourgard was congratulated on all sides for the success of her numbers. The Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Frederick Stock, was heard at every concert, and it is only necessary to say that the work of these musicians was up to the high standard they have set for themselves. While much of the more delicate shading was lost in the vast building, the playing of the orchestra was a feature which attracted many, and it was thoroughly appreciated. Wagner, Beethoven, d'Albert, Tschaikowsky, Brahms, Saint-Saëns, Scheinpflug, George Schumann, Rimsky-Korsakow, Elgar, Bach, Humperdinck, Dvorák and Liszt were represented in the orchestral numbers, besides the accompaniments, and Mr. Stock never proved himself more truly the great conductor than in this series of concerts.

On the whole, the Saengerfest was a great success, the visitors professing themselves in every way pleased with their reception, and the local musicians enjoying this opportunity to participate in so great an event.

The officers elected for the coming year are: Charles G. Schmidt, president; Wilhelm Arens, first vice-president; Fred O. Neutzel (of Louisville), second vice-president; George Withum, secretary; John P. Frenzel, treasurer; Christian Saam, keeper of archives. The next place of meeting has not been decided upon as yet.

Berger's Success at Louisville.

At the thirty-fourth Saengerfest of the North American Saengerbund, held at Louisville, Ky., on June 24, 25 and 26, a full account of which appears in another part of this issue of the MUSICAL COURIER, one of the most prominent soloists was Rudolf Berger. His success is well related by the press critics, two of the comments being appended herewith:

The only solo in the first part of the program was Rudolf Berger's "Prize Song," from the "Meistersingers," and the many recalls insisted upon by the audience were sufficient proof of the impression he made upon it. His voice has the qualities necessary for so large a place as the Armory—it is robust and virile in character, and he was fully equal to the dramatic exigencies of Wagner's superb creation. Although he responded to no encores, it was evident that his hearers were profoundly pleased, and his appearance on Friday night will be anticipated with great interest. —Louisville, Ky., Times, June 25, 1914.

Rudolf Berger made his first appearance in Louisville in singing the "Prize Song," from "Die Meistersinger." He has a clear, rich tenor voice and an excellent presence. He showed his wisdom by avoiding delicate variety of tone color in so immense an auditorium. He depended upon rhythm for his variety—and where is the singer who has exhausted this source of expression? Rhythm is the fundamental element in all song, and the singer who has brought to his audience a feeling for the rhythm of that which he sings has achieved the first duty of the musician. It was because Mr. Berger made the audience feel that the rhythm of the songs was theirs that his singing was so impressive.—Louisville, Ky., Evening Post. June 25, 1914. (Advertisement.)

Marie Morrisey's Present Activities.

As a result of some successful phonograph records which she has made recently, several important summer engagements have come to Marie Morrisey. The young contralto is singing at present each Sunday at Elberon, N. J., in a quartet whose other members are Marie Stoddard, John Young and Grant Odell, and these appearances have led to a series of private engagements at the homes of members of the summer colony. July 4 the singer was heard in the afternoon at Jamaica, Long Island, and in the evening she took a prominent part in the exercises in New York City Hall. July 12 she will sing in Hackettstown, N. J., and later on in the month at the Allenhurst Club, Allenhurst, N. J.

Burmester's American Orchestral Debut.

Willy Burmester, the distinguished violinist, will make his orchestral debut in America, November 6, with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Emil Oberhoffer. He will play the Paganini concerto, No. 6, in D major.

FLAG PRESENTATION, SAENGERFEST.

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative

FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital. Oratorio. Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management:
LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management,
Iris Pendleton,
Philharmony Hall,
Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181 Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
in his last Liederabend met the same unqualified success which attended his first recital. There is a radiance and warmth in his artistic and intelligent delivery which affects his audience most happily.—Der Reichsanzeiger, Berlin.
Concert direction Wolff, Flottwellstr. 1, Berlin.
Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall, New York.
AVAILABLE FOR A LIMITED NUMBER OF ENGAGEMENTS, SPRING, 1915.

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

MME. ROSA OLITZKA
CELEBRATED RUSSIAN CONTRALTO
Engaged as Soloist, Great Texas Saengerfest, May 11 to 14, 1914
AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIOS and MUSICALES
Manager R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
For Terms, Dates, etc., Address temporarily, care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the U.S.

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Special SUMMER COURSE for Teachers and Professionals. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR, 51 W. 76th St. N. Y.

Are the Stars Dimming?

[From the Los Angeles, Cal., Herald.]

Is the time ripe for the abolishment of the "star system" in the grand opera field? Charles R. Baker, the Los Angeles manager who has just returned from a tour of the East with the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, says that the time has arrived. He goes even further, stating that already the so called "star trust" is on the toboggan and will soon slide into oblivion, as far as the managers are concerned.

To quote Mr. Baker: "The men who finance and guide opera tours are becoming wiser every day. They have learned their lesson and they have learned it well. The 'star system' has proven a most disastrous feature of the big opera management this season, not less than three of the big organizations ending their year with heavy financial deficits, to say nothing of the great loss of public prestige. Guarantees were held back, attachments issued and general turmoil prevailed in the operatic field.

"The 'star system' has had a severe jolt, and producers in the future will pay more attention to the general excellent makeup of their organizations—the orchestra, the chorus and the beautiful ensembles which in the past have been a secondary consideration. Of course, grand opera must necessarily have the great voices to thrill the auditors, or else it is not grand opera, but according to the Eastern impresarios with whom I have recently talked the managers will in the future manage the stars instead of the stars managing the managers."

Marie Kaiser at Saratoga.

One of the attractions at the New York State Music Teachers' Convention, held at Saratoga Springs, New York, was the popular soprano, Marie Kaiser, who did superior work in Sullivan's "Golden Legend." This was in substance, a repetition of her splendid rendition of this role a year ago under the direction of Walter Henry Hall, conductor of the Columbia University Choral Society.

MARIE KAISER LISTENING TO HER OWN RECORD.

The Saratoga Sun, commenting on her work, stated that "Marie Kaiser sang with a power and clearness of tone which made it possible for her to be heard in all parts of the hall. Her appearance, too, was charming and she was compelled to respond to an encore."

Miss Kaiser left for Europe, June 27; she will spend the summer in study and recreation.

Trouble for John Bull.

The suggestion in the Times that a return should be made to the original first line of the national anthem—"God save our Lord, the King"—recalls some unavailing efforts to adapt the song to William IV when he succeeded George IV. For more than a century previously, during the reigns of the four Georges, the first line ran "God save great George, our King," but that manifestly needed altering when a William came to the throne. Neither "William" nor any recognized abbreviation seemed possible, but versifiers put forth several ingenious solutions of the difficulty. One version was as follows:

God save our noble king,
William the Fourth we sing;

but it had a short innings, and was succeeded by:

God save our gracious king,
William, our noble king.

Finally, "William" was omitted altogether, its place being taken by "Long live," and thus came into existence the first two lines as they are sung today.—Westminster Gazette.

SOUSA AND HIS BAND
"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"
Office: 1 West 34th Street
Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH
CONCERT VIOLINIST
Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS
Hans Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory and is assisted by an able corps of teachers. Bendetson Metzorg has also been added to the Conservatory faculty. For catalog address
MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
38 West 56th Street, New York

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO
Concert-Recital-Oratorio
Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN
America's Violinist
Season 1914-1915 Now Booking
Address:
THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York
Phone Murray Hill, 2239

VOCAL STUDIO AND OPERA SCHOOL (Italian Method)
KARL SCHNEIDER
PHILADELPHIA: 1705 Chestnut St., October to May
MUENCHEN, Germany: 9 Friedrich Str., June to Sept. 15

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER
Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARY DENNISON GAILEY
VIOLINIST
Address, Russell Bridges, Empire Life Bldg., Atlanta, Ga

Yolanda MERÖ Hungarian Pianist
STEINWAY PIANO USED
Under the exclusive management of CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, New York City

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.
Assisted by Gutia Casini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist
SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City
Baldwin Piano Used

Baroness Evans
Von KLENNER
America's Representative of the
GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD
Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.
Tradition. Languages. Repertoire. Diction. Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY
of NEW YORK
1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915
JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor
SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.
TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South
Prospectus on application to
FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

NUMEROUS RECITALS GIVEN IN LOS ANGELES.

Music Clubs Hold Final Concerts of Season—Pupils Heard in Annual Spring Musicales.

1110 West Washington Street,
Los Angeles, Cal., June 26, 1914.

How it should happen that the Ellis Club, the Orpheus Club, the Los Angeles Conservatory graduation, and two piano recitals should all be scheduled for the same evening is one of the unexplainable coincidences that sometimes occur, but such was the case on Monday, June 22.

THE ORPHEUS CLUB.

Although the Orpheus Club tickets issued the first of the season read "The Auditorium, June 22," another unexplainable thing is that the Orpheus Club concert of that date was given in the First Congregational Church, and the Ellis Club concert, which should have been the following evening, according to the original plans, was given in the Auditorium.

Neither Mr. Poulin nor Mr. Dupuy is responsible for this condition; the only explanation that could be made would be from the powers which now control the Auditorium. It was an unfortunate circumstance, but nevertheless the young men comprising the Orpheus Club, under the direction of J. P. Dupuy, never did better work than on this occasion, and the church was crowded to hear them. Mr. Dupuy deserves great credit for the work he is doing with this club. Every one of the numbers for each concert is committed, no notes ever being in evidence.

The soloist on this occasion was Walter F. Skeele, organist, the director of the College of Music of the University of Southern California. Mr. Skeele is one of the best organists in the city, and his numbers on this occasion were most beautifully played. The balance of the program was as follows:

Pilgrims' Chorus (by request) ..... Wagner
Hush! ..... Neidlinger
The Banshee ..... McCray
Incidental tenor solo by Mr. Green.
Dithyramb (organ solo) ..... Basil Harwood
Walter F. Skeele.
A Song of Ancestry (bass solo and chorus) ..... Saint-Saëns
Mr. Campbell and Club.
De Coppah Moon ..... Harry Rowe Shelley
On the Road to Mandalay (baritone solo and chorus) ... Oley Speaks
Mr. Cheatham and Club.
The Land o' the Leal ..... Protheroe
Tri-quartet.
Kammenoi-Ostrow ..... Rubinstein-Lemare
Mr. Skeele.
Frontier Scenes ..... Henry Watson Ruffner
Four Sketches of Early Western Life—
Men of the Trail.
The Lights of Cowtown.
The Cattle Rustlers.
New Year's at Cactus Center.

THE ELLIS CLUB CONCERT.

The closing Ellis Club concert was a brilliant affair. The auditorium was crowded to its limit. The important part of the program was the second, which comprised the cantata by Dudley Buck, "The Voyage of Columbus." The cast was as follows: Columbus, William James Chick; Priest, Edgar H. Duke; First Officer, G. Hayden Jones; Second Officer, Edward Kendall.

The first part of the program I did not hear, but this number was greatly enjoyed. The chorus was accompanied by full orchestra, under Julius Bierlich, concertmaster, and was the most pretentious thing given by the club this year. It was splendidly received by the large audience, and was well rendered by the chorus. The numbers pleasing the audience most seemed to be the Vesper Hymn in the third scene and the love song, "In Distant Andalusia," sung by G. Hayden Jones. It seemed a perfect vehicle for Mr. Jones' really rare tenor voice, but every number was well rendered and showed the careful preparation and the months of work which must have been put upon it by Director Poulin and the chorus.

The part of Columbus was the most pretentious and difficult and was adequately conceived and rendered by Mr. Chick. I was sorry to miss the first part of the program, and Miss Lovewell's solos, which no doubt reached the usual high standard of the Ellis Club concerts.

The program in full follows: "Ossian," Beschnitt; "Eventide," Shephard; "Plainsman's Song," Bliss; aria from "Etienne Marcel" Saint-Saëns; Pastorale (old English), arranged by H. Lane Wilson; "Hunting Song of the Seonee Pack," Damrosch; "Drowsy Wood," Storch; "The Cherubic Hymn," Gretchaninoff; "The Voyage of Columbus," Dudley Buck, and "America."

THE WOMAN'S LYRIC CLUB'S FINAL CONCERT.

The final concert of the Woman's Lyric Club, under Mr. Poulin, was given in the First Congregational Church, June 19. This was another of the concerts scheduled for the auditorium, and which it was necessary to give in other quarters. Whether it was the room or my mental condition, for some reason this program did not seem quite up to the usual standard. I have said so many things in praise of this club, and all deserved, that perhaps we have expected the impossible. The smaller numbers were beautifully given, but the principal offering, which was the Hadley composition, "The Fate of Princess Kiyo," a legend of Japan, failed to impress me as a lyrical composition. I felt in this case as I have in some of the other ultra-modern choral works, that the really beautiful orchestration and instrumentation would be more effective if the text were recited by an excellent reader instead of being sung. The intervals are so peculiar, the harmony so involved, that it would be impossible, it seems to me, for any chorus to make it effective, or soloists either, for that matter. This, however, may be a purely personal impression, and there is no denying that the instrumentation is most beautiful and of course in the hands of an artist like Mrs. Robinson could not fail to be other than attractive.

The contralto solo by Kie Julie Christin, "The Invocation to Eros," was given with great feeling and beauty of tone. Miss Christin has a pure contralto of warm and velvety quality, which was shown to excellent advantage in this number. As an encore she sang "Mammy's Song," by Harriet Ware.

The Philharmonic Male Quartet—Leroy Jepson, first tenor; Sheldon Ballinger, second tenor; Harold Ostrom, baritone, and Dr. J. Lester Adams, bass, assisted, as did also Mrs. Stockwell, whose lyric soprano was splendidly fitted to Neidlinger's "The Maiden and the Birds." Mrs. Stringfellow, another member of the club, sang a mezzo-soprano solo, in "St. John's Eve," by Chaminade.

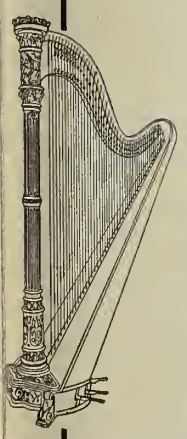
The soloists in the Hadley number were Helen Beatrice Cooper and Mary O. Groves, who did as well as it was possible to do with this music.

All this is not by way of criticism, because the Lyric Club could never do other than well; it is composed of too excellently trained a body of singers, but the members themselves have set so high a standard as to make it supercritical.

The complete program follows: "St. John's Eve," Chaminade; "Since You Went Away," Johnson-Harris; "The Maiden and the Birds," Neidlinger; "Invocation to Eros," Kürsteiner; "The Fate of Princess Kiyo," Hadley; "The Little Red Lark," Stanford-Rogers; "Onward March," Geibel; "Love, at Thy Window," Hawley; "Sigh No More, Ladies," Foote; "Blest Pair of Sirens," Huhn.

PUPILS OF CATHERINE SHANK, SOPRANO AND TEACHER HEARD.

No better loved singer than Catherine Shank has ever lived here. She has been identified with the music of Los Angeles all her life. She was born at Santa Monica, which is practically a part of this city, and with the exception of three years' residence in Buffalo, and several years spent abroad, she has spent her entire life here.



Blessed with an exceptionally beautiful voice, she has had the careful training that has made her the artistic singer that she is today. Her first lessons and her real voice placing, she claims, were received from Mme. Rubo, who for many years did excellent work here. In Paris she studied with Bouhy and others.

While in Buffalo she sang in one of the largest churches and did much concert and recital work. So well was she received in Europe that she might have remained there either in operatic or concert work, but home ties drew her back to this country and she came back to California and resumed her teaching and singing in this city. She has been soloist with many of the leading churches here; she sang at St. Vincent's for a long time, and later at Emmanuel Presbyterian and other of the larger churches; at present she is soloist at the Second Christian Science Church. She has also done much oratorio work here, having been identified with almost every large effort in that line in the history of the city. She has a very beautiful studio in the Majestic Building, where she works persistently and conscientiously with a large class of pupils, to whom she has endeared herself as she has to her numerous

Jaques URLUS
Great Wagnerian Tenor
METROPOLITAN OPERA COMPANY
Management:
Annie Friedberg 1425 Broadway New York

RICCARDO MARTIN
FAMOUS TENOR
Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
October, November, 1914. May, 1915
Management:
CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

—"Such purity of tone has never before been attained."
So writes Zamara, acknowledged Greatest Living Harpist—of the WURLITZER HARP

"Marvelous in Tone, Majestic in Appearance," says Marthage, Harpist of Sousa's Band.
The Wurlitzer Harp has the only spruce veneered Sounding Board, which gives it a pure, liquid, velvety tone all its own. Write for beautiful booklet.
THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY
121 E. FOURTH STREET, CINCINNATI, OHIO
Chicago - - 329-331 S. Wabash Street
New York - - 113-119 W. 40th Street

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano
SARA HEINEMAN
Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume
In Europe During Summer
Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

The Kranich & Bach grands have distinct differences that make them individual. No grand piano manufactured has the same touch, this through an improvement in the action that is of unusual advantage to the musician. A trial will demonstrate the differences and advantages.
KRANICH & BACH
New York
Ask for catalogue.

Articles of general musical interest, with or without pictures, will be examined by the Musical Courier if sent on approval, accompanied by stamped envelope for the return of the manuscript. In the event of its acceptance, such matter will be paid for at space rates. Address all manuscripts to The Musical Courier Company, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, Southeast corner of Thirty-ninth Street.

friends by her sweet sunny nature as well as her exquisite talent.

Mrs. Shank presented a large number of pupils in program on June 17 last. The program, which was entitled 'Songs of Spring," and was composed of the sunny, lilting songs which this season of the year seems to inspire, is appended:

To Welcome You.....Young-Thomas
Mrs. William Welch Stone.
Ruby Edgcombe, accompanist.
Down in the Forest.....Ronald Rothel Harcus.
Mrs. William Welch Stone, accompanist.
The Merry Brown Thrush.....Roy Lamont Smith
Lucile Atwater.
Grace Moore, accompanist.
Spring Morning.....Carey
Carlotta Comer.
In My Garden.....Liddle
Edith Conde.
Listen to the Voice of Love.....James Hook
Maybelle E. Lee.
The Passing Cloud.....F. Leoni
Anna Bell.
I Hear a Thrush at Eve.....Cadman
Ellen Latter.
Flower Rain.....Schneider
Leigh C. Shelton.
Song of Joy.....Douty
Laurie H. Johnson.
Titania.....A. R. Wachmeister
Florence Mead.
Sunbeams.....Ronald Dorothy Eaton Cahoone.
Her Rose.....Whitney Coombs
Oneta Buckley.
Sacrament.....James MacDermid
Mara Cone.
Two Bird Songs.....Lehman
Mrs. Gail H. Dimmitt.
Provincial Song.....Dell' Acqua
Bertha Rossiter.
The World Is Full of Sunshine.....Roy Lamont Smith
Mary Ostrander.
Five songs by local composers—
April Tide.....Julian Pascal
Longing.....Vernon Spencer
My Soul Shall Sing.....Roy Lamont Smith
Spring Twilight.....Morton F. Mason
Baby's Laughter.....Frieda Peycke
Catherine Shank.

NOTES.

I wish space permitted a review of the numerous and excellent pupils' recitals given recently. A few, however, are appended:

Mr. Grunn, on June 22, presented his advanced pupils in a piano recital, assisted by Leona Walton and Faye Gooch, violinist, pupils of Oscar Seiling.

The same night Christine Battell presented her pupil, Bertha McKay, in a piano recital, in the parlors of the Hotel Clark, assisted by Mrs. Norman Hassler, soprano; Barbara Taylor, harpist, and Mrs. Hugh Miller Bole, accompanist.

On June 20, Anna Yaw Thorpe gave a song recital with her pupils in the Young Women's Christian Association auditorium, and on June 24 Mrs. Norma Rockhold Robbins made somewhat of an innovation by a morning recital with her pupils. Mrs. Robbins is one of the teachers of voice in the College of Music of the University of Southern California. The program given on this latter occasion included the following numbers:

Trio, arr. of duet from Madame Butterfly.....Puccini
Margaret Atwater, Rachel Smith, Ruth Ahlswede.
Sunshine Song.....Grieg
Marie Deets.
The Waterlily.....Bullard
Blanche Fowler.
Phyllis Has Such Charming Graces.....Wilson
Persian Serenade.....Ware
Nina Ruth Robinson.
Unmindful of the Roses:.....Lohr
Peggy.....Brown
Rachel Smith.
Thy Beaming Eyes.....MacDowell
Blackeyed Suzan.....Schneider
Margaret Atwater.
From the Land of the Sky Blue Water.....Cadman
Where My Caravan Has Rested.....Lohr
Ruth Ahlswede.
Barcarolle, from Tales of Hoffmann.....Offenbach
Nina Ruth Robinson, Blanche Fowler.
At Dawning.....Cadman
Let Miss Lindy Pass.....Winthrop Rogers
Marie Deets.
Un bel di, from Madame Butterfly.....Puccini
Nina Ruth Robinson.
O Mio Fernando, from La Traviata.....Donizetti
Blanche Fowler.
Sunbeams.....Ronald
Margaret Atwater.
Chanson Provencal.....Dell' Acqua
Rachel Smith.

Saturday afternoon, June 20, Mrs. James Ogilvie gave a recital with her pupils at Cumnock Hall, assisted by Mrs. Charles G. Stivers, soprano. JANE CATHERWOOD.

Success of Haggerty-Snell Pupil.

Mme. Haggerty-Snell, the well known New York voice teacher, is continuing her work in this city throughout the summer, and has a large class of pupils who are taking advantage of the exceptionally cool sea breezes which have blown in this year. Among the most successful of her pupils is Mrs. Homer Fairmon. Mrs. Fairmon gave a recital recently in her home town, El Dorado, Ark., and the local press speaks of her beautiful voice and of her charming personality, and makes mention especially of her excellent vocal technic and the large fullness and beauty of her tone. Mrs. Fairmon was heard in New York in the studio of her teacher before leaving for the West, and gave genuine pleasure to a large audience. She was especially successful in Tschaikowsky's "Tell Me Why" and "Spirit Flower," by Campbell-Tipton. This "Spirit Flower" by one of the very best of American composers is a song unusually well suited to Mrs. Fairmon's voice, and its passion and intensity were well brought out by this talented artist.

Jewell Robb Visiting Chicago.

Jewell Robb, who recently made an exceptional debut at the Teatro Rossini in Venice as Mimi in Puccini's "La Boheme," arrived in New York Friday, July 3, on the steamship Carpathia. She intends to spend the summer in Chicago, returning to Italy in the early fall.

OBITUARY

William Dressler.

William Dressler, professor of music, died in New York, Thursday morning, July 2, in his eighty-eighth year.

Mr. Dressler, one of the last of the old school of American musicians, was born in Nottingham, England, of German parents, in 1826. He was graduated from the Cologne Conservatory of Music in 1847.

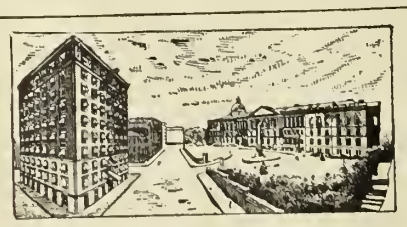
When a young man, William Dressler played first violin at the opera house Wiesbaden, where he was afterward conductor. Coming to America in the early fifties, he traveled through the United States and Canada as solo pianist and accompanist with Ole Bull. After traveling several seasons with concert companies, Mr. Dressler settled in New York, devoting his time to composing, playing church organs, accompanying well known artists and teaching.

His first important New York church position was as organist and choirmaster of the Fourth Avenue Presbyterian Church. Other churches where he played at different times were St. Charles Borromeo's and St. Peter's Roman Catholic, Brooklyn, and St. Peter's Roman Catholic, Jersey City, being at the last named for eighteen years. His work in the Catholic churches led him to compose and arrange much music for that service, which compositions have been used extensively. He was for many years musical editor for the then well known houses of Wm. Hall & Sons and J. L. Peters. Of late years he has devoted himself to composition.

Mr. Dressler was married to Mary Hyde, of Norwich, Conn., who died in 1899. He leaves three children—one son and two daughters, all of them accomplished musicians: Mrs. Theo J. Geisler, of Portland, Oregon; the well known cellist, Mathilde Dressler; and Louis R. Dressler, who is the organist and director of music at All Souls' Unitarian Church, New York.

Diplomacy.

"You persuaded your husband to join a glee club?"



"Yes," answered Mrs. Biggins; "when he starts to sing at home I can now advise him not to tire his voice, and when he sings in the club I can't hear him."—Washington Star.

WANTED

WANTED—Male vocal teacher who sings. For prominent Southern College. Address "A B C," care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth avenue, New York.

WANTED—There is a splendid opportunity for a good piano, violin or singing teacher to connect with a musical institution of the highest standing in one of the leading cities of the United States by investing moderate sum in the institution. Only men or women of superior ability, culture and refinement considered. Steady income assured to the proper persons. All communications confidential. Send photo, credentials, telephone number and complete particulars to "Cooperative Opportunity," care of MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

FRANK WALLER
Opera Coach — Concert Accompanist
Assistant Conductor Boston Opera Company and Theatre des Champs Elysees (Paris until October 1st)
Auditions Procured

Commonwealth Hotel
OPPOSITE STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, MASS.
Offers room with hot and cold water for $1.00 per day and up, which includes free use of public shower baths.
Nothing to equal this in New England
Rooms with private baths for $1.50 per day and up; suites of two rooms and bath for $4.00 per day and up.
ABSOLUTELY FIREPROOF
Strictly a Temperance Hotel. Send for Booklet
STORER F. CRAFTS - - Gen'l Mgr.

DAVID ROBINSON
Violin Virtuoso — Instruction
51 East 97th St., New York — Tel. 1470 Lenox

FORT LOUDOUN SEMINARY, Winchester, Virginia
For higher culture of young women. Delightful location in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Literary and Business Courses. Special advantages in Music, Art, Languages. Gymnasium and all outdoor exercises. Opens Sept. 17th. Terms $300. For catalogue, address MISS KATHERINE R. GLASS, Pres.

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING
(Lamperti Method)
COACHING IN GERMAN LIEDER
Studio I Rue Baulard, Paris

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC in LEIPSIC
Own building with one large concert hall and two small halls, also fifty teaching rooms. Founded by F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy in 1843. Yearly attendance, 950 students of all countries. Students received at Easter and Michaelmas each year, but foreigners received at any time, in accordance with page 9 of the regulations.
The course of tuition includes every branch of musical instruction, namely: Piano, all stringed and wind instruments, organ, solo singing and thorough training for the opera, chamber music, orchestra, and sacred music, theory, composition, history of music, literature and æsthetics.
Prospectus in English or German sent gratis on application.
Director of THE ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC DR. ROENTSCH

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

HOTEL POWHATAN
WASHINGTON D.C.
HOTEL OF AMERICAN IDEALS
The Hotel Powhatan is the best, at the same time the newest, hotel in Washington.
Famous Pennsylvania Avenue, at the junction of 18th and H Streets, affords the site for this most luxurious and modern hotel.
Write for booklet with map.
CLIFFORD M. LEWIS, Manager

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 2 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1790

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE

Singer by Appointment to the Court of Sweden

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK.
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

CLIFFORD DEMAREST, F. A. G. O.,
ORGANIST—COMPOSER.
Recitals—Instruction.
Church of The Messiah, 34th St. & Park Av., N.Y.C.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
BOICE
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y. Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq. || Pouch Gallery, B'klyn Tel. 6400 Prospect

---

EUGENIE PAPPENHEIM,
THE CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Culture in All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101 W. 78th St., New York City.
Telephone: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
68th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF [illegible]
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 415[illegible]
Special course for teachers and professional. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
'Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.
Special Summer Course.

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y. Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
Will teach during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano.
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West, Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York.
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet.
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th St.

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Street
Complete musical education given to students from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR.
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT.
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza

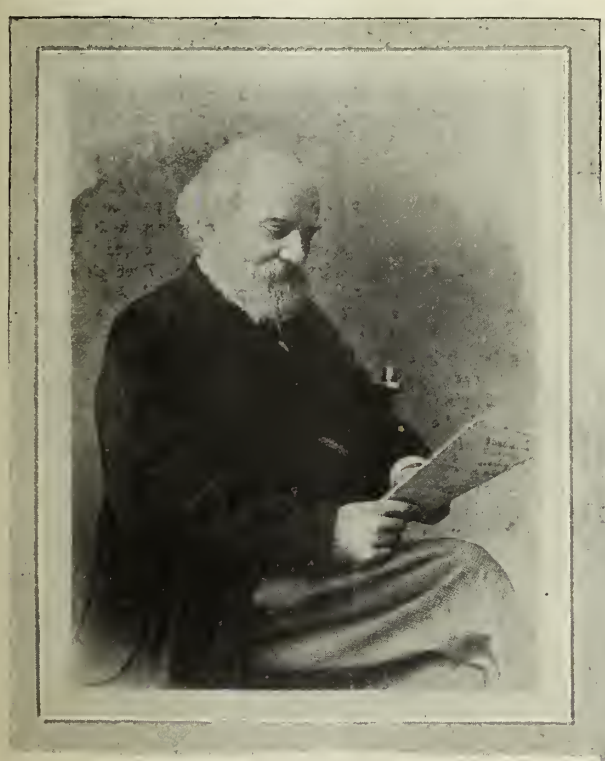
MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMOND,
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Correct Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 2. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1790.

VIENNA REGALED WITH QUEEN'S OPERA LIBRETTI.



Carmen Sylva's Works Produced, but Do Not Score Success—Wolf's "Corregidor" Revived—Vienna Views Itself in Historical Perspective—Shakespeare as an Inspiration to Pupils.

All inquiries referring to American musicians and music, as well as matters of interest to Anglo-American visitors in Vienna, or such as contemplate a visit to Austria, may be addressed to Frank Angold, VIII, Florianigasse 60, to whom tickets should also be sent by those who desire their recitals or concerts to be attended.

Vienna, June 28, 1914.

We have just been treated to an unqualified novelty—two of them, rather.

"Royal" opera at the Volksopera. From modesty? I don't know. The building presented a very dejected looking appearance a few weeks ago. The most cursory glance revealed the fact that the season was over and the song birds flown.

LATEST LESCHETIZKY PICTURE.

Suddenly, however, on June 6 and 7, the doors were thrown open and a company which, like Lohengrin, had wrapped itself in a mantle of the strictest incognito, appeared and regaled us with two Roumanian operas.

Whether we are indebted to the tentative efforts of Austrian diplomacy toward a closer political rapproachement with Roumania for the oddities served up is a question which will probably never be answered. In the meantime, let us conduct the autopsy on "Marioara" and "Am Bandusischen Quell"—a twin attempt at "proselytising" the Viennese musical palate into appreciation of Wallachian products.

Let us take "Marioara" first. The libretto is by the Queen of Roumania, Carmen Sylva. We are fully acquainted with royal dilettantism, bound, of course, in gilt and stamped leather, which should at least afford a fair margin of profit to the publishers.

From poet and playwright to operatic librettist is not, however, a far cry, and in justice to the versatile authoress it should be said that she has handled her task with sound dramatic sense and a good idea of curtain values. Farther than that our courage does not go.

I fear that several well meaning local reporters came perilously near an attack of heat apoplexy in trying to find things to say—sweet things, of course. Very charitable all round. The Roumanian faction in the audience was very much in evidence, and served at least to keep us others awake.

But the music. It is by a Mr. Cosmovici, who is a Roumanian engineer, and who composes presumably in his spare time. "Wagnerian influence?" It would be too cheap to say it. "Where is the Roumanian note?" would be equally idle.

"Am Bandusischen Quell" took up the second evening. A work of unspeakable monotony, in which the luckless Horace is exhumed for stage purposes. The hectic optimism of the rhymes must have made him roll uneasily in his grave, or are we to believe that "The sins of the fathers," etc.? The libretto is by a Mr. Alexandrie.

Mr. Cosmovici has a very fair knowledge of orchestration and his instruments converse with one another quite amicably. The second work is possibly a trifle riper, if anything, written in more compact form, than "Marioara," his first born. And, to be charitable, it is furthermore possible that the composer intended more than he has said.

RESURGAM.

After a lengthy interim, the Royal Opera recently attempted to "resurrect" Hugo Wolf's last work, "Der Corregidor," a comic opera. The attempt was entirely praiseworthy, but unfortunately the success of a production is not always commensurate with the amount of good will bestowed thereon. As in the present case.

OLD VIENNA—SCHUBERT'S HOUSE.

The management "spared neither pains," etc., and put on a very strong cast, but to little purpose. There were, it is true, bright hued touches here and there, but enthusiasm was below par, and the audience seldom got beyond a few showers of languid handclapping. The humor, to begin with, is sown with too niggardly a hand and the tragedy is broadcast. The tale drags heavily along, despite a liberal sprinkling of mondaine squibs and like condiments; jerks itself along as if on stilts. The stodginess of the libretto would seem to be infectious, for the score, too, is over grave and too portentous. The artists did their conscientious best and are not to be blamed. The auditorium was chiefly gaps.

VIENNA'S "PRATERFEST."

The soft collar has superseded the boiled one. Public interest has been translated from the concert hall to the open air garden fete, as witness the recent "Praterfest" of the Vienna theatres. It was a brilliant affair.

The occasion was the inauguration of the annual summer exhibition in the spacious "Kaisergarten" grounds in the Prater. Last year it was "Venice in Vienna." This year it is "Old Vienna." Really very artistic and charming all round. You pay your krone, pass the turnstiles, and are forthwith wafted into what is truly a realistic impression of how Vienna must have looked one hundred years ago.

All Vienna was there. The leading local artists, singers, actors, dancers, comedians and the like, gave of their best and delighted their audiences. The magnificent military bands for which Austria is justly famous were not wanting. Neither was Wagner, but he had to be content with a lowlier place than is his wont, in view of the fact that the four great idols of the operetta world—Lehar, Eysler, Ziehrer and Oscar Strauss—were present to conduct their own compositions, and the Viennese public very naturally wanted to do them honor. Truly, waltz music in Vienna is very compelling.

The exhibition is well worth a visit. The grounds, laid out in little winding lanes and musty alleys leading into public squares, dotted with quaint old-time shops, booths and pleasure haunts, form an arresting picture. It seemed to me, however, as the evening drew on, that the Brazilian "maxixe" and "400 rye" clashed rather harshly with the—but a critical faculty is a curse.

SELMA KURZ MOTORING IN THE TYROL. ON READER'S RIGHT.

SHAKESPEARE AT THE I. AND R. ACADEMY.

The first act of "Richard III," the third act of "Richard II," and the second act of "The Tempest"—flanked by Hebbel's "Herod and Mariamne." Four numbers of fearsome calibre.

They were not few who grumbled and said that the Academy might well have contented itself with less pretentious fare. But the Academy is right. In the first place, an institution of this kind should not squander its material on dilettantism and trash, more particularly in that it serves as a nursery from which our leading theatres are recruited. In the second place, the Academy vindicated the wisdom of the adventurous step taken by scoring an unquestionable triumph.

MacKAY EXPLOITING THE SCHUMANN SONATA, F SHARP MINOR. OUR VIENNA CORRESPONDENT ENDEAVORS TO UPHOLD THE BALANCE OF THE COMPOSITION.

Why does a pupil go to school? And where is a budding actor to find himself, to form and develop his latent proclivities, if not at the institution provided and equipped for that purpose?

Director Thimig, of the historic Burg Theatre, was so favorably impressed with the young Richard II that he engaged him on the spot. Ariel was very dainty, but Richard III was apparently carried away by the dazzling possibilities of the rolling periods at his disposal. "Visions were about" in good sooth, and he would do well to curb himself in future. A fine voice.

Altogether a very profitable and enjoyable evening. Next week I shall deal with the three final performances for the season, with which the I. and R. Academy brought its spring term program to a successful close.

ANOTHER WORD ON "PARSIFAL."

A malicious colleague says that senile eroticism is the propeller shaft of "Parsifal." An amusing idea.

Senility or not, "Parsifal" has proved a great "draw," and up to the end of the season has always commanded a well filled house. I like to think of the great scene in the Gralsburg, before the ear wearies of the incessant repetitions. The untutored Parsifal leans forward eagerly in the gloom, dimly outlined against the thin ray of light shining downward from the cupola of the dome. Like the clangor of great brazen bells goes the rampant fugal theme, in slow march time, gripping the senses.

By the way, news comes to me of a great "Parsifal" performance in Venice. The conductor was Commendatore Rodolfo Ferrari, and my informant tells me he gave by far the "most commanding performance heard in Italy." Curiously enough, Ferrari conducted absolutely the same cast as that which came to grief in Trieste. A fiasco in Trieste, a success in Venice. The difference must therefore have lain in the conductor, whose tempi were different from those of his colleague at Trieste, and afforded the singers a better opportunity of justifying themselves.

MME. LESCHETIZKY IN BERLIN.

Gabrielle Leschetizky is at present at Berlin. She has had a very successful season. The last few weeks have, of course, been spent in considerable anxiety at her husband's side during the difficult and dangerous operation performed on his sight. As I wrote, however, some time ago, the operation was completely successful, and Mme. Leschetizky now is returning to her beautiful summer retreat in Ischl, in the Salzkammergut, in the heart of the Austrian lake district, where she will be busy teaching until her return to Vienna next season.

VALETTE.

The Academy is closed for the summer. Professor Godowsky has left to join his family, assistants and pupils at Mittelkerque, near Ostend, Belgium. He returns in October.

William Newby Kenyon, Professor Godowsky's head assistant, writes to say that he would be happier in Mittelkerque if he knew enough of the local patois to be able to express his grievances to his landlady.

Roderick MacKay has gone to his home in Scotland. This distinguished young pianist will return in October after fulfilling several concert engagements in Scotland in September. Energy distinguishes Mr. MacKay's every action. He is, like every true Scotchman, a football enthusiast. An illustration: He was recently a guest at the house of a friend of his, a doctor, in Graz, in Styria. One afternoon he assembled the family on the tennis lawn and undertook to "proselytize." Football, of course—with such excellent results that two-thirds of the family failed to put in an appearance that evening at dinner.

FRANK ANGOLD.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

"A firm mastery of a remarkably smooth, clean, technic and a fine regard for tonal balance and musicianly phrasing were features of her performance."—The Berlin Continental Times.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Some Borwick Appreciations.

Speaking of one of the recent Leonard Borwick concerts in Melbourne, the Australian Musical News (June, 1914), says:

There are pieces which he plays perhaps better than they ever have been played by anyone else. Those old world reminiscences, for instance, Daquin's "Le Coucou," Couperin's "Barricades Mystérienses," or the "Arietta" of Leonardo Leo, where is the man who could unfold to us so delightfully the beauties of eighteenth century music like this as Leonard Borwick can—and does? In the same category, too, come the charming "Harpsichord Lessons" of Alessandro Scarlatti, three out of a series of thirty originally published (about 1746) under the title, "Esereizii per Gravicembalo"; the fine "old-time" flavor which hangs around these gracefully conceived works is admirably caught and faithfully reproduced by Mr. Borwick. As an interpreter of Bach, too, he is quite in his element, both the "Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue" and his own transcription for piano of the fugue in G minor for organ being object lessons in the art of presenting the intricacies of contrapuntal writing.

From Melbourne Table Talk (May 21, 1914), one gleans the following:

The charm and poetic conception of Leonard Borwick's interpretation of the great masters has once again taken the musical public of Melbourne by storm, and he has drawn full houses to the town hall. This is a big achievement to attain with a one man show, especially a piano recital, and it speaks volumes for the wonderful attraction and magnetism of Mr. Borwick's playing.

His programs at the three concerts have been well varied, and have included works of such different composers as Beethoven and Chopin, Bach and Schumann, for this artist is versatile, and seems to be able to interpret one and all with the same charm. Though some of his admirers hail him as an ideal exponent of Schumann, others again as emphatically claim him to be a Chopin interpreter par excellence and, again, some prefer his rendering of other composers.

Mr. Borwick's playing is distinguished by the "singing" touch, and by great delicacy, while at the same time there is no lack of strength and power when they are called for. At the same time its predominant feature is its artistry and its wonderful sympathetic insight, and it is this which constitutes its hig attraction. He has been very truly and aptly termed the "poet pianist."

Owing to the wonderful success achieved, two extra concerts have been arranged prior to his departure for Sydney.

(Advertisement.)

A Talented Detroit Musician.

Favorable comment on the general high standard and pleasure afforded by the work of Eleanor Hazzard Peocock, the well known soprano, appears in the following, referring to concerts of the artist at the Michigan State Normal College and at Ann Arbor, Mich.:

Even standing room was at a premium in Normal Hall Thursday evening, when Eleanor Hazzard Peocock gave her delightful monologue, "An Hour in the Land of Make Believe," and the audience enjoyed itself thoroughly every minute of the entertainment. . . .

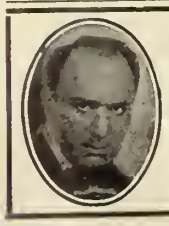
Mrs. Peocock threw herself so heartily into the spirit of the occasion that she carried her hearers with her into the land of make believe. Her versatility, already well known through her more serious artist recitals, was shown in many new lights; and before the evening was over she had swayed her audience through widely varied range of emotions, from joyous, careless happiness, through fear, . . . repentance, . . . tragedy, as in the doleful tale of the doll . . . whose woes nearly sent the audience into convulsions; loneliness and pathos, . . . to the last utter weariness of a tired child, as disclosed in the . . . lullaby.

Mrs. Peocock's facial expression as well as her voice—and her imitation of a childish trehle at times was not the least clever of her offering—added much to the realistic effect of the words of the songs or poems. One of the gems of the evening was her exquisite singing of the McDonald lullaby, "Where Did You Come From, Baby Dear?" Innumerable touches skillfully carried out the illusion, and the hour and a half passed all too quickly. Mrs. Peocock's sympathy with childhood amounts to positive genius and surely nothing can prove more fascinating than her interpretation of the moods and tenses of the little folks.—Normal College News, Ypsilanti, Mich.

Eleanor Peocock, who is well known and popular with the musical public of the city, again won her admirers with a unique program of child interpretations at the benefit concert for the choir of St. Andrew's Church last night. Mme. Peocock is unexcelled as a child impersonator, and her rendering of the role of a child of five or six on a visit to a farm was all that could be desired. "The Tragedies and Tattle Tales of Toyland" gave her ample scope for her whimsical humor and remarkable power of mimicry. After her first appearance in a short white frock with cap and ribbons sash and pinafore of pink, her audience was treated to a rare glimpse of the imagined trials and joys of childhood. With her arms full of dolls and teddy bears which later gave place to a tin curly dog, Mme. Peocock gave song after song in her beautiful rich voice and combined the song work with clever recitative and dialogue in a childish voice which completely won her listeners. Her capacity to arouse the imagination of her hearers is one of her principal charms and in listening to her irresistible interpretations her audience loses all count of time and wanders with her through the wonderful maze of toyland.

Her easy spontaneity of tone and full, rich notes, combined with a magnetic personality, make her easily one of the most popular soloists of the day, and the audience last night was enthusiastic in its applause, and seemed unwilling to let her leave the stage.—The Daily Times-News, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Mrs. Peocock relates the following amusing incident which occurred during the recital which she gave at the Michigan State Normal College, July 1:



"I sang two ante bellum songs, 'Steal Away' and 'Swing Low, Sweet Chariot.' The latter starts with no accompaniment, and the audience was absolutely silent, listening to the pianissimo sustained tones. I had just said: 'Swing low, sweet chariot, Comin' for to carry me home'—when a small boy scout on the grounds outside blew a double forte bugle call in exactly the same key. The effect was fairly electric, for it sounded so extremely like Gabriel's trumpet that it seemed the chariot must really be waiting outside."

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf Berger Sail for Europe

Rudolf Berger and Marie Rappold (Mrs. Rudolf Berger) sailed on the steamship Vaterland, July 7. They will go to Carlsbad. In the fall Mme. Rappold will return for a concert tour.

The Poor Musician.

"Say, have you forgotten you owe me 100 francs?"
"No, not yet. Give me time."—Pele Mele.

RUDOLF BERGER

FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

PROF. BERTRAND ROTH HONORED.

Echoes from the Altenburg Festival—Stillman Kelley at the Roth Musik-Salon in Dresden—Professor Roth's Performance of the Draeseke "Sonata Quasi Fantasia"—Salon for Contemporary Composition—Decoration of Professor Roth by the Duke of Altenburg.

Dresden, July 1, 1914.

When the works of Stillman Kelley were performed at the recent Liszt festival in Altenburg, Prof. Bertrand Roth, a well known pupil of Liszt, was one of the invited guests present, and one of the performers as well, playing the famous "Sonata quasi Fantasia" of Felix Draeseke, the latter a famous member of the Liszt circle and a favorite of Liszt.

Professor Roth having met Stillman Kelley at this festival, after hearing his beautiful symphony in B minor and the quartet in C, was so pleased by these works that he invited the American to be present at a coming Roth matinee, when he proposed to ask the celebrated Meyer Quartet of Berlin to perform the Kelley quartet. The composer accepted, and so at this latest salon in May (the 187th performance of contemporary compositions given at Roth's), a large and representative audience assembled to hear the output of a famous American composer.

In Stillman Kelley's music there is the indisputable stamp of great talent, and of that sort which may be called not of any distinctive type, but universal. This was at once recognized by the critics and musicians who assembled at this "salon." Indeed, I can remember but few occasions when such prolonged applause has been granted to any composer of later days at these matinees.

The German press almost universally acknowledges here that in this quartet Stillman Kelley has delivered a classic to the literature of chamber music. In short, in all my long experience abroad, I cannot remember a more unstinted or generous German tribute to any foreign composer, especially an American.

I wish now to revert to the Liszt festival at Altenburg and explain some important omission in the account written by the composer himself. Namely, at that time Stillman Kelley had not made the acquaintance of Prof. Bertrand Roth. Moreover, on the programs then in his possession the name of Professor Roth, as performer of the Draeseke sonata, was omitted, with that of some others, by an oversight. In the list of works which appears in Stillman Kelley's report, as given to the MUSICAL COURIER, Professor Roth was to have played a part of the Draeseke sonata and the concert etude of Liszt in F minor. This, as Eugene Simpson has correctly reported to you, was modified, and Professor Roth played the Draeseke "Sonata quasi Fantasia" entire, while the Liszt etude was dropped.

Of the Roth interpretation of the great Draeseke work the Altenburger Zeitung für Stadt und Land (April 28, 1914) writes:

> And again one had an opportunity to admire the inspired playing of another Liszt pupil, Prof. Bertrand Roth, of Dresden. In memory of his friend, the composer, Felix Draeseke, who died last year in Dresden, he performed this "Sonata Tragica" with all that depth of absorption which the contents of the master's work demand, yet not so much from the side of its many characteristic technical accessories as from the heart's outpouring which it requires. Such an artist, so highly endowed, has an adequate technical equipment at ready command, yet in this case he used his technic as means to an end, and not for its own sake, as is too often the case with the mere piano virtuoso. Thus all three movements had their wonderful properties fully revealed, and the artist, now in his sixtieth year, was made the recipient of a hearty ovation at the close of his performance.

In recognition of the long service of Professor Roth in the interest of art, the Duke of Altenburg on this occasion decorated him with the Gold Medal for Art and Science.

Another important omission in the account of Stillman Kelley, which undoubtedly arises from his lack of previous acquaintance with Roth, the honored Dresden master, led him to write that Martha Remmert is the "only Liszt pupil known to have made systematic efforts to organize a society to cultivate the spirit of enthusiasm, benevolence and brotherly interest among artists, making a special point of bringing out the unremunerative works of worthy contemporaneous composers," etc. Now while Professor Roth has not "organized a society," yet for the past thirteen years he has devoted time, money, effort and pains, in the most disinterested and benevolent fashion, in his biweekly matinees at his now justly celebrated Musik-Salon, toward the reproduction of contemporary compositions and chiefly in the interest of young, unknown, and struggling artists of merit and talent. In this salon, during this time, nearly every modern composer of Europe, famous or obscure, and innumerable artists have obtained a worthy hearing. Hence, Professor Roth has gone on continuing the noble and generous spirit of the great master at Weimar and Altenburg, whose works, in this sense, do follow him. During this time, the Roth Musik-Salon has taken rank and fame as one of the best of its kind, and Professor Roth has come to be looked upon somewhat as the Liszt of Dresden, to whom many an unknown composer and artist owes his first step forward in his career.

Many of the famous reproductive artists of Europe have contributed their services here (with no financial remuneration) to the works of the contemporary composers. It is therefore incumbent upon your Dresden representative to see that justice is done to these generous efforts of Professor Roth, and I am persuaded that the greatest prominence and recognition due may best be gained through the columns of the MUSICAL COURIER, since as the "welt-blatt" (world's journal) of Ludwig Hartmann's appellation, it is likely to give the widest circulation to facts that should not remain obscure or become forgotten.

Photo by Hahn, Dresden.
BERTRAND ROTH.

E. POTTER-FRISSELL.

A Bispham Appreciation.

David Bispham's summer represents a combination of work and play. "A long holiday bores me to death," says the busy baritone.

Mr. Bispham has just given one of his all English recitals at Middlebury College, Vermont, and on July 22 he will give the same at the Monteagle Assembly, Tennessee. August 15 he will sing in "Elijah" with Tali Esen Morgan's chorus at Ocean Grove, N. J.

Mr. Bispham contemplates a trip to Europe following these engagements. His early fall season will be devoted to recitals.

The following poem is an apt appreciation of the baritone's art:

To
DAVID BISPHAM,
Singing in English.

'Twas music when you spoke, but oh,
The music when you sang,
And through the home of twice-a-day
Such singing English rang!

The gum and candy chewers ceased,
A hush fell o'er the place,
All eyes were firmly fixed upon
Your splendid, mobile face.

Your stand for English earns our thanks!
English would have its dues
At once, if all our singers could
Such art and English use,

And Milton's, Shakespeare's tongue would thrill
Each operagoer's heart,
An English lover's tribute take,
Oh, master of your art!

—Clayton Crawford, Seattle.

Martyrdom.

Willie—Paw, what is a martyr?

Paw—A martyr is a man who helps his next door neighbor mend his phonograph, my son.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Alberto JONAS
Jenaer St. 29, Berlin, W.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
KUFSTEINER, ST. 6 BERLIN W., GERMANY

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York City
Western Rep: James Devoe, 196 Blaine Ave., Detroit, Mich.

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher. Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE
FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 3

Summer Class for the Leschetizky Method under the instruction of Mrs. Potter-Frissell well known piano pedagogue, in Neu Schandau (Ostrau Plain), famous summer resort in charming Villa Colony, in grandest part of Saxon Switzerland. (Mountain Air), Address, until July 1st, Eisenstuckstr. 16, Pt., Dresden A. After July 1st, Villa 17 Neu Schandau, Saxon Switzerland, Germany.

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent.
For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano
SARA HEINEMAN
Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume
In Europe During Summer
Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Combination Recitals of Two of the Most Brilliant Young Artists of the Present Generation

ALICE EVERSMAN
AMERICAN SOPRANO
Has achieved emphatic successes as a member of the Chicago, Montreal and Karlsruhe Grand Ducal Opera (Germany).

YELENA VON SAYN
RUSSIAN VIOLINIST
Her fame as a violinistic celebrity of the first magnitude is artistically established in Europe; likewise in America.

Programs Selected from the Greatest Operatic and Instrumental Composers

Under the exclusive Management of W. L. Radcliffe, 406 Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.

GEORGE
DOSTAL
DISTINGUISHED BOHEMIAN TENOR
First American Concert Tour Season 1914-1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, NEW YORK

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

THE MOST IMPORTANT VIOLINIST

Touring America This Coming Season
Will be the Distinguished Frenchman

JACQUES THIBAUD

Read What New York and Boston Critics Wrote of Thibaud Last Winter

"Since Thibaud was first here ten years ago he has grown in reputation in Europe, and has made himself one of the foremost violinists. Elegance and refinement are clearly among his characteristics."—New York Times.

"He has technical skill and brilliancy, and what may be designated as French chic, all of which he revealed yesterday. His Bach had a dignity which allowed no denial that he is to be considered among the most important violinists." New York Evening Mail.

"In the Bach Chaconne the plaintive, sustained air and bold staccato chords were contrasted as in no other violinist's performance recalled today."—New York Evening Sun.

"Thibaud showed elegance, grace and brilliancy. His playing of the Bach Chaconne for violin alone was proof of his amazing skill."—New York American.

"Thibaud plays the violin as a poet might sing, for the joy of creating; as a woman might lavish tenderness upon one adored. Nor does this imply that his art is effeminate. It is exquisitely feminine in its fineness of texture and grace of form, its tenderness, its spirituality; but there is a balance of masculinity, a quiet and searching strength, a nobility that lies deeper than rhetorical flourish or challenge."—Boston Globe.

"Mr. Thibaud gave the finest and noblest performance within our memory. Nor do we forget the names and deeds of Joachim, Sarasate, Wilhelmj, Ysaye and other masters of the violin. Beauty of tone, exquisite grace, purity of style and a peculiar elegance are characteristics of his playing."—Boston Herald.

Sole Management: LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

BOUND FOR EUROPE—LEFT TO RIGHT, THEODORE SEYDEL, CAPTAIN DIETRICH, IRMA SEYDEL AND FRIEND.

Irma Seydel En Route.

Pleasant weather and pleasant company made Irma Seydel's recent crossing of the Atlantic on the steamship Grosse Kurfurst thoroughly enjoyable. Miss Seydel in turn added greatly to the enjoyment of her fellow passengers by her participation in the ship's concert, when the charming violinist and Baroness O. Turk-Rohn, soprano, gave the entire evening's program.

The Summer Versus Music.

[From the Boston Evening Transcript.]

For three months in every year Boston suffers a music famine—from the closing of the Pops in June to the opening of the symphony concerts in October. Between stretches an arid tract unwatered of reputable performances except the municipal band concerts sown over our public parks with a sparseness due to the meagre appropriation. Even light opera of the warm weather variety has withered from our midst, concerts there are none, and as for those massive festivals which fill the musical public of European cities with the choicest and the best at the season when they have the leisure and the relaxation to appreciate it, such a thing is unheard of, preposterous. Imagine a Mozart festival or a Wagnerian cycle in an American city in summer. You cannot.

To reply that in warm weather the musical people are all out of town is as the remark of certain smart characters in society drama that "there is positively nobody in London now"—except a few millions of people. Summer no more empties Boston of its musical public than it empties Boston of baked beans. Those who remain are reduced, if they desire music, to make it themselves, if they are able; if not, to go without.

The slump is abrupt and painful. After a feast, the famine. For a month, or a fortnight, the absence, the very inaccessibility of the more complex kinds of music may be taken as a respite; after that, the mere sense that they are not to be had on any terms grows irksome. We are driven to comical shifts to fill the lack; we start pottering through scores for ourselves; we drag down volumes of songs and sonatas and read them; we drive a pianola to the limit of its axle grease; we descend on pianistic friends with the imperious command, "Play." Like the mob outside the gates at Versailles, we want bread and do not care how we get it.

The disparaging theory is still extant that the American public does not care for good music; that it must be given drivel as the only article it will accept. Eevn if this libelous notion were correct, which it certainly is not, as any one who has seen how we flock to the Wagner nights can attest, it is still very foolish, for the simple reason that by the operation of certain scientific laws the education of at least an elementary popular taste in good music is only a matter of a few months. Let a band start with one piece of reputable music and a dozen cheap and silly tunes, and in six weeks, or a month or two, the chaff has been winnowed off that single kernel of wheat by a process as inexorable as it is cheering. The ear, provided it is not tone deaf to start with, learns to select the unnatural interval of music, into the making of which thought and feeling have entered, and to reject the natural interval of the facile trash which is without distinction and without meaning.

For that beach or park management which will offer at popular prices something better than popular music during July, August and September there awaits a reward, large and merited.

Love's Sweet Song.

"Will you be my little chimpanzee?"

"Sir, you are extremely insulting!"

"Why, I thought that was the proper way to propose! It is according to all the popular songs."—Judge.

A Quaint Nordica Picture.

From the Canadian Journal of Music (Toronto) the USICAL COURIER reproduces the accompanying photograph or which the former paper gives credit to Mrs. A. J. rthurs, of Toronto, the owner of the rare picture. "In ll probability," says the Canadian Journal of Music, "this hotograph has never before been produced. Mme. Nordica erself had no copy of it."

NORDICA AFTER THE FIRST PARIS TRIUMPH.

Sweet Alice, 1914.

Oh, don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt, when her air was a beautiful brown? You never in the world would knew her as she looks today, with a cane and a rouserette gown. Her Paris made curls and the new purple tint; when I called I could scarce trust my eyes, for he wore a little nightcap, the latest Paris hint, with rose-uds and pink ribbon ties.

Sweet Alice is now on the stage, Ben Bolt; she began t the end of the row. She smiled with delight at the public each night, and now she's the hit of the show. She lances a tango that sets them awhirl, with a dip and a kick and a glide. You'd never believe 'twas the same little girl that the song wrongly stated had died.

She's a cigarette case on the end of a chain, where the old fashioned ones wore a fan; has a flat and a maid and Pomeranian pup; her motor is olive and tan. And down t the theatre place where she plays her pictures are hung by the score, and they've fitted a slab with about a thousand electric lights, and sweet Alice's name up over the door.—Life.

Bogert in Maine.

Walter L. Bogert sends greetings to the MUSICAL COURIER from Belgrade Lakes, Me. Mr. Bogert, who is spending the early part of July with his brother, Prof.

M. T. Bogert, at the above mentioned place, will return to New York about July 20.

The accompanying photograph shows the attractive view from the Bogert estate.

Dodging the Bricks.

"Why do those Highland bagpipers keep walking up and down while they are playing?"

"Because it makes them harder to hit."—New York World.

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

DUFAU COLORATURA SOPRANO Concert Recital
CHICAGO-PHILADELPHIA GRAND OPERA COMPANY

VAN YORX THEO. ——— Tenor
Will teach throughout the Summer
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

BISPHAM
For Terms and dates Address
All Communications to Private Address
44 West 44th Street, New York

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
Management:
WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York
Steinway Piano Used

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera
Management:
THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 West 34th Street, New York

A. CARBONE MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING
(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)
Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"
School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages
Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application
Thirty Years' Experience Highest References
Aeolian Hall, West 42nd Street :: :: :: New York City

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

After Nine Years in Leipsic

MRS. CARL ALVES

will resume residence in New York next August, beginning vocal instruction September 15

Applications may be made now with

C. WALDEMAR ALVES

48 West 90th Street -:- New York

The Sensation of the Year

CARL
FLESCH

The Great Hungarian Violinist

Second American Tour
January and February, 1915

Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

FIRST AMERICAN APPEARANCE

BARONESS
SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO

Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.

"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9. 1914

First American Tour January-May, 1915

OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English

Sole Management:
Concert Direction, M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y

EFREM
ZIMBALIST

Celebrated Violinist

— Will return to —
AMERICA
Season 1914-1915

For Terms and Dates available
Apply
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th St., New York

STEINWAY PIANO

BARONESS VON RAPPE FAMED FOR VERSATILITY.

Distinguished Swedish Soprano Is Equally at Home on Concert or Operatic Stage—She Will Spread Swedish Music.

So extensively do the fundamental elements involved in the making of the successful operatic star on the one hand, and of the concert artist on the other hand, diverge and differ from each other in their subtler aspects that the individuals in whom the two faculties are united to good purpose are rather rare.

The Baroness Signe von Rappe is one of these distinguished exceptions, inasmuch as the eminence which the noted Swedish soprano has attained has been achieved as completely in the latter sphere as in the former. In this respect her versatility and wide variety of artistic resource serve to place her beside the few prominent opera singers of recent years who have been able to establish themselves quite as securely in the concert hall as on the operatic stage and to command the unmitigated admiration of the most fastidious music lovers.

Baroness von Rappe has won for herself an enviable reputation in the leading opera houses of Germany; she delighted Richard Strauss by her skilful impersonation of Salome. At the Royal Opera of Stockholm her annual appearances are a feature. Only her determination not to bind herself for a long period of time prevents, at present, a protracted connection with any of the foremost European establishments. The Baroness has for some time, however, been honored with the position of court singer to the King and Queen of Sweden. Her extensive operatic repertoire proves her to be fully at home in widely different types of roles. It comprises Rezia in "Oberon," Pamina in "The Magic Flute," Aida, Desdemona, Marguerite, Elsa, Elizabeth, Venus, Senta, Eva, Gutrune, Sulamith in "The Queen of Sheba," Salome, Rosina in Walterhausen's "Colonel Chabert," and Maliella in "The Jewels of the Madonna."

It was in Vienna, Leipsic and Dresden that she achieved her first triumphs on the concert platform. Her concert activities led her into the field of oratorio as well as that of the pure song recital. In the cities just mentioned she won immediate recognition through her performance of the solo soprano part in the last movement of Beethoven's ninth symphony, in Pierne's "Children's Crusade" and in Wolf-Ferrari's "Vita Nuova." Even more notable was the profound impression she created at the Gewandhaus in Leipsic (where her great countrywoman Jenny Lind had also been heard many years before), singing the soprano part in Bach's "St. Matthew's Passion." So completely did she delight her auditors at the first hearing that she has since been called upon to participate four consecutive times in that oratorio.

From the interpretation of Bach to Hugo Wolf is a far cry, but the Baroness von Rappe has been able to cope with these apparent extremes. She can meet the requirements of the style of Bach and successfully fulfil the exigencies of the stressful modern school. For the first she has the requisite distinction of style, the vocal flexibility, the beauty of phrasing; for the second the emotional variety, the broad range of dramatic utterance, and the poetic perception and insight.

Baroness von Rappe has undertaken the mission of spreading the knowledge of Swedish music in Germany. In this connection she has been invited at sundry times to participate in the music festivals of Stuttgart, Dortmund and Vienna. Signe von Rappe has been the soprano soloist at these events, the other well known singers including Julia Claussen, contralto, and John Forsell, baritone.

It is a curious fact that many of the most significant names in the ranks of contemporary Scandinavian composers are practically unknown beyond the boundaries of their own country, though their work unquestionably entitles them to fuller recognition abroad than they have hitherto received. In addition to the songs of Sjögren and Lindblad, little is known outside of Sweden of those of Södermann, Alfven, Stenhammar, Hallen, Beckman, Ruben Liljefors, or the Finnish composer Melartin. Songs by these and others have been introduced to the music lovers of other European nations by Baroness von Rappe and they will form a substantial part of her repertoire on her American tour, which is to extend from January to May. She will introduce a number of Swedish ballads with orchestral accompaniment by Hugo Alfven, who has been called "the Brahms of Sweden," as well as some songs by Frans Berwald, the orchestral accompaniments of which have just been completed for her by the composer.

Miller-Shattuck at Rockford College.

Christine Miller, contralto, and Arthur Shattuck, pianist, have been booked by Haensel & Jones for the Rockford (Ill.) Women's College artist recital series next season.

A new Russian dancer performs to poems instead of music. Aha! A market at last for the glut of rejected spring poetry?—Newark (N. J.) Star.

EDYTH WALKER

(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)

Dramatic Soprano

Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.

Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

THOMAS J. KELLY

Conductor Mendelssohn Choir.
VOCAL COACH
Lecture Recitals with Mrs. Kelly.
209 SOUTH 35th AVE., OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO

Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO

Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.

VOCAL STUDIO - 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

NEW YORK
COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR
SHATTUCK

The Distinguished American
PIANIST

In America Season 1914-15

Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

Steinway Piano Used

MISSOURI TEACHERS IN ANNUAL CONVENTION.

Nineteenth Annual Gathering Proves to Be Beneficial and Enjoyable Event—Works of American Composers Conspicuous on Programs.

MEETINGS HELD AT ST. LOUIS, JUNE 23 TO 26 INCLUSIVE.

St. Louis, Mo., July 3, 1914.

The nineteenth annual convention of the Missouri Music Teachers' Association was held at St. Louis, June 23, 24, 25, 26. The meetings were held at the Sheldon Memorial, an excellent new hall, which contains a fine Kilgen organ. On account of the intense heat which prevailed all over the Middle West during the past week, the attendance was limited. The days were divided into the usual conferences, recitals, business meetings and evening concerts.

"Standardization" in teaching was the main feature brought up at all the conferences, and there was no doubt whatsoever that our best instructors are strongly in favor of this movement. The Missouri Association was the first State organization definitely to declare for a fixed standard, which should be used by candidates. This standard is by no means a difficult one and the average teacher ought to be able to pass it. Still, the number of candidates who have presented themselves for examination so far are very few. But the sentiment is constantly growing, and in a few years unquestionably a goodly number will present themselves every spring to the examining committee. Nathan Sacks, chairman of the program committee, issued twenty thousand copies of a pamphlet on standardizing music teaching by direction of the officers of the association. This pamphlet has been extensively mailed to teachers and students, and ought to be instrumental in influencing prospective candidates to try for the examination.

Homer Moore, the eminent critic and master of singing, wrote the requirements for a vocal standard, which was unanimously approved by the association. It is generally considered more difficult to get singing teachers to agree upon points which are necessary than instrumental teachers. However, the members of the association have such confidence in Moore's musicianship, learning and experience that his list was not materially altered.

Ernest Kroeger, chairman of the organ standard committee, submitted the requirements for an examination, which were accepted. The Missouri Association has not as yet progressed so far as the Minnesota Association, which not only has piano, organ and vocal standards, but also theory, history, violin and public school music.

The concerts and recitals brought out some of the best St. Louis talent. Charles Kunkel gave a wonderfully effective performance of Beethoven's "Moonlight" sonata. Mrs. David Kriegshahn displayed her extraordinary temperament and technic in the Liszt-Busoni "Spanish" rhapsody. Felix Heink made a success in his "Marche Militaire." Allen Bacon gave a beautiful interpretation of Mendelssohn's fantasia, opus 28. Vera Schlueter showed variety of expression as well as brilliancy in a group of pieces. Nathan Sacks was well received after playing Chopin's B flat minor sonata. Mrs. Carl Luyties and Tyrie Lyon rendered Huber's sonata for two pianos with precision and variety of shading. Harrison Williams played a Chopin group with his usual poetry and color. Georg Buddens and Elsie Stricker gave a splendid reading of Liszt's concerto for two pianos. Of the pianists from outside St. Louis, Nannie Louise Wright, of Fayette, displayed great finger dexterity and delicacy of touch in a group of modern pieces. Herbert Krumme, of St. Joseph, played with genuine sincerity pieces by Brahms, Schuett and Chopin. Opal Louise Hayes, of Fayette, showed breadth and style in Rubinstein's "Staccato" etude. She played five pieces by Nannie Louise Wright, which unfortunately the writer failed to hear. Harold Leake, of Aurora, rendered three pieces with intelligence and clarity. Helen Scoville, of Joplin, a pupil of the famous teacher, W. L. Calhoun, was the surprise of the convention. Her playing of a group of pieces by Chopin, Chopin-Godowsky, Rubinstein and Moszkowski was of such a nature that one can well prophesy a splendid future for one who is still very young. Ruth Johnson, of Carterville, did some nice work in a group of pieces.

Of the singers, Mrs. James M. Bradford did clean and artistic work on the first evening. Victor Lichtenstein sang a Cornelius song with repose and fine quality of voice. Mrs. Wallace Harker gave a miscellaneous group by modern American composers with great flexibility of vocalization. Mrs. Arthur Schutz sang a contralto group with good effect. Mrs. S. C. Black and T. F. Lassauer presented Cadman's Japanese song cycle, "Sayonara," with a fine comprehension of its beauties. Mrs. A. I. Epstein, one of the fine t sopranos in the West, sang a group of several songs to her gifted husband's accompaniment. She made a most pronounced success. Adah Black Holt sang two songs by a talented young St. Louis composer, Olive Ruby Hammon. Afterward she sang another carefully selected group by Americans. She is an artist in all that she does. Ben L. Easton was warmly applauded after singing some tenor songs. Mrs. Morris Skrainka, one of our rising singers and a Taussig pupil, sang a group of soprano solos most brilliantly. The organists all acquitted themselves with much credit: Arthur I. Davis, Oscar H. Jost, Carolyn A. Allen, Alfred G. Hubach and Rodney Saylor.

Of concerted music there were a sonata and a romance for violin and piano by Charles S. Skilton, dean of the music department at the Kansas University, played by Wort S. Morse and A. G. Hubach, of Kansas City. These compositions proved Dean Skilton to be a composer of ability, and a master of technical construction. They were excellently interpreted. A trio in E minor, by E. R. Kroeger, was played by the composer, I. L. Schoen and P. G. Anton. I. L. Schoen played three violin solos by Missouri composers, Kroeger, Busch and Pommer. Alice Pettingill, Agnes Gray and P. G. Anton played a beautiful trio by Schuett.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Wort S. Morse, president; Nannie Louise Wright, vice president; Alfred G. Hubach, secretary and treasurer. E. R. KROEGER.

Oscar Seagle in Bramber.

Oscar Seagle left America about a month ago, after completing his most successful season here. During his tour of America he was heard in the principal cities of the East and Middle West and in a very large number of the smaller cities of the Southwest. He was welcomed by the critics everywhere with the greatest enthusiasm, even in New York, where the critics are so hard to please.

His summer is being spent in Bramber, on the southern coast of England, where he has a country home. He has with him a number of pupils, many of them professionals, who are taking advantage of the noted baritone's free time; in this way they are profiting by his great knowledge and his talent as a teacher, which is no less than his talent as a performer.

OSCAR SEAGLE ON BOARD THE VATERLAND.

Mme. Preyer Is in Europe.

Carroll Badham Preyer, whose studios are located at 27 West Sixty-seventh street, New York, is at present in Paris. Later Mme. Preyer will go to Munich, where several of her pupils are to join her for study. Mme. Preyer, before returning to New York last year, was for several seasons a successful teacher of voice both in Paris and Berlin.

Indianapolis Concert Series.

For the Ona B. Talbot concerts, which are to take place in the Schubert Murat Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., during the season of 1914-15, the sixteenth annual announcement lists the following well known artists and orchestras, who will appear under the personal direction of Ona B. Talbot: John McCormack, Thursday evening, October 29; Philadelphia Orchestra, Leopold Stokowski, conductor, Thaddeus Rich, violin soloist, Monday evening, November 30; New York Symphony Orchestra, Josef Lhevinne, piano soloist, Wednesday evening, January 20; Fritz Kreisler, Wednesday evening, March 3; Frances Alda, Metropolitan Opera soprano, with Frank la Forge, pianist, and Gutia Casini, cellist, Thursday evening, April 15.

Alma Moodie's Success.

Alma Moodie, the fourteen year old violinist, has just scored a success at Max Reger's farewell concert in Meiningen, Germany. She was heard in the Brahms sonata in G, with Reger at the piano; also in the Bach prelude and fugue in G and Reger's sonata in B flat, for violin alone. An immediate engagement to play the Beethoven concerto, August 20, at Mainz, under Arthur Nikisch, followed little Miss Moodie's performance.

You may have an ideal accompanist in your home at all times.

One that never tires.

Plays to suit your temperament and with a touch and technique beyond compare.

The GULBRANSEN "Non-Visible Player of NO Effort" does all this for you.

Installed within your own piano without the slightest injury to tone or appearance of same.

We furnish you with a complete accompaniment repertoire, using special hand-played rolls, which may be recorded by any artist you may select.

Full information, special to musicians, upon request.

GULBRANSEN-DICKINSON COMPANY

505 FIFTH AVENUE,
AT 42nd STREET,
NEW YORK CITY

Factories New York :: Chicago

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées), Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI.) Paris

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Studio: 10 Rue Herran, Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

ELISABETH LECTURE—RECITALS MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
French and English Readings
America, October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
(especially for opera students)
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Seul professor de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi
151 Rue de Rome

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
Mme. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris
American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

Mme. Leschetizky's Successes.

As her successes this season have again proved, there can be little doubt that Marie Gabrielle Leschetizky is one of the most interesting pianists now before the public. Her personality is arresting, her playing strongly individual, and she varies her interpretations with vivid effects. Her pianissimo is exquisite, yet she can produce enormous tone at will.

Her most striking attribute is perhaps her extraordinary versatility. A well known critic once wrote about her: "When playing Brahms she seems eye to eye with the composer's meaning, Mozart she plays as he should be played, and Chopin she illuminates for us in a way few can rival."

Madame has had a very strenuous winter. Concerts in Berlin, Vienna, Munich, Dresden, Prague, Lemberg and other centres have imposed a very exacting test on her powers of endurance, but Mme. Leschetizky has no time for rest. She is leaving Berlin, where she has been at her husband's side during his trying operation, in the first week of July, when she will go to take up her teaching duties at Ischl, her charming summer home, in the Austrian lake district.

Teaching is one of Madame's special gifts. Professor Leschetizky often says to his pupils: "If my wife cannot show you that, nobody can."

The following are a few press encomiums on Mme. Leschetizky's concerts this season:

Marie Gabrielle Leschetizky honors the name she bears. Pearly cadence, effortless technic, a fine sense of melodic line and rare skill in bringing it out set the seal of consummate artistry on her play.—Berliner Volkszeitung.

GABRIELLE LESCHETIZKY, WIFE OF THE FAMOUS PROFESSOR, IN THE VILLA AT ISCHL, THEIR SUMMER RETREAT IN THE SALZKAMMERGUT, AUSTRIA.

She is a curious, intellectual personality. Her rhythm and tone coloring invest her play with peculiar charm.—Berliner Tagblatt.

A light, elegant touch, revealing a wealth of expression and possibilities of expression—that is Marie Gabrielle Leschetizky. Her renderings have insight.—Deutsche Tonkünstlerzeitung, Berlin.

Her playing is technically perfect, but not insistent, and is eloquent of the psychic meditation and honest joy of creation in this pianist—her piano is so delicate, so tender. Her whole art is so warm that the hearer is brought very near to the inner meaning of the piece thus interpreted.—Deutscher Reichsanzeiger, Berlin.

Marie Gabrielle Leschetizky was the object of lively interest. A Mozart concerto and Chopin's in F minor proved her to be a warm hearted pianist of towering technical attainments. The audience rewarded her with showers of well merited applause.—Neues Wiener Abendblatt, Vienna. (Advertisement.)

Flonzaley Quartet Encomium.

How firmly the Flonzaley Quartet has become established in Boston is indicated by the following interesting article which H. T. Parker, of the Transcript, wrote after the quartet's farewell concert a few weeks ago:

Thrice each season the Flonzaley Quartet assembles seven or eight hundred listeners in Jordan Hall to hear chamber music, "classic and modern." Behold, then, how it flourishes in Boston, even though by too many ominous signs for the future it depends upon white haired audiences. More truly behold how the Flonzaley Quartet—the four virtuosi—have won an established following here and become an established institution. "Seventh season," said the program, and in a footnote announced the eighth. So may four players with bow and strings and by no other means than their own merit gain an assured audience and do with it as they will. Of such are prowess and personality and the opportunity that they open.

It is just credit to "The Flonzaleys" that they have steadily used this opportunity wisely. Virtually they may play what they will, assured of an audience intent to hear. They might have ignored the intruding and debatable music of their own time and run a tranquil routine up and down "favorite classics." Yet they have done their service to Debussy, Ravel and Schoenberg; revived old pieces undeservedly overlooked, and picked their classics with both catholic and discriminating choice. If they are to be reproached at all with their repertoire, which at most may number only eight or nine pieces a year, it is with a natural liking for music that best suits the suavities of their voices and the fine felicities of their style.

The Flonzaleys are now at their summer home in Lausanne, Switzerland, preparing their repertoire for the season of 1914-15, which will extend from November to April. The organization has been seven years under the management of Loudon Charlton. (Advertisement.)

Huebner Pupils' Recital.

Mrs. F. L. Huebner gave an interesting recital on Tuesday evening, June 30, at her summer home at Nanuet, N. Y., at which a number of her violin pupils were heard. The whole entertainment was highly effective and the performance of the pupils was well spoken of by the local papers. They showed, without exception, the results of careful teaching and gave musicianly interpretations of the works performed.

Mrs. Huebner has been a successful teacher for many years and has classes in New York as well as in Nanuet.

Musical Salad.

He—How—aw—did you enjoy your tour in France?

She—Oh, immensely! It was so delightful to hear the French peasants singing the Mayonnaise!—London Sketch.

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

DOCTEUR CONTA Cure and rejuvenescence of the voice by a special treatment of the mucous membranes of the nose and throat
OFFICE HOURS: 1 to 4
18 RUE DUPHOT, (Bd. Madeleine) PARIS

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

CHARLES W. CLARK
AMERICAN TOUR SEASON 1914-15
Direction: Redpath Musical Bureau, Chicago
BARITONE
Dr. Frederick Clark, Personal Representative, 12 Rue Leonard de Vinci, Paris

A Talented Minneapolis Pianist.

The commencement exercises of the Minneapolis School of Music and Dramatic Art, Minneapolis, Minn., which took place Friday evening, June 12, brought out a young pianist of unusual talent in the person of Margaret Hicks, who has been a pupil of the school for the past six years, studying piano under Oda Birkenhauer, and harmony and composition under William H. Pontius.

MARGARET HICKS.

Miss Hicks gave the Saint-Saëns concertos in G minor, with orchestra accompaniment, conducted by William H. Pontius. She has a brilliant style and plays with a fine degree of musical intelligence. Thoroughly musical and possessing a remarkable poise and a very pleasing personality, her playing was alive with interest and she made a most successful appeal to the large audience, which accorded her a genuine ovation, several recalls, and finally demanded an encore. Miss Hicks has also a creative talent of a high order, and her teacher, Mr. Pontius, predicts that she will make a name for herself in this line. She already has composed a number of songs and pieces for the piano, some of which, it is reported, are to be issued soon by a prominent publisher.

Henry Weldon Engaged at the Century.

The list of native singers being brought back to this country from European successes to sing at the Century Opera House, New York, has been increased by the announcement that Milton and Sargent Aborn have just engaged Henry Weldon Hughes, the American basso, to appear at the Century next season. He is the son of the late Rear-Admiral Aaron K. Hughes, U. S. N., but in his professional career has been known as Henry Weldon. He studied with Pol Plancon in Paris, and has appeared in the leading opera houses of London, Paris, Lyons, Nantes and Brussels during the six years he has been abroad. He was a member of Hammerstein's company at the London Opera House. He was a leading member of the original cast of Lord Howard Walden's opera, "The Children of the Don," when that opera was produced in London, and while in that city he also appeared before King George and Queen Mary in the Garden Scene from "Faust," with Felice Lyne and Orville Harrold.

Helen Bixby Wetzel in Milan.

Helen Bixby Wetzel, the gifted young prima donna, in the Cathedral at Milan, forms the subject of the accompanying snapshot.

Miss Wetzel is one of the most successful and youngest prima donnas on the operatic stage. She sang the role of the Page in "The Masked Ball" at Fossano recently, where she appeared in nine performances of this opera before crowded houses. Immediately after her return from this engagement, she received an offer from another impresario to give ten performances of Gilda, which she did not accept on account of desiring a much needed rest.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL IN THE CATHEDRAL AT MILAN.

More Serato Praise.

Rome and Bologna, Italy, give their unqualified praise of the extraordinary talent of Arrigo Serato, the Italian violinist, as shown in the following:

ROME.

Serato has the best of all good qualities, clearness of tone, in the most difficult technical passages and refined interpretation. We have never seen an audience at the Augusteo give an artist such a hearty reception, and ask so vehemently a promise for another visit. —La Tribuna.

Serato is a magnificent Italian violinist, for he is Italian in every sense of the word. An Augusteo audience has heard almost every great artist and we must say that the Beethoven concerto has never been played as well as it was by Serato.—Giornale d'Italia.

Serato exercises a personal influence on his audience.—Courier d'Italia.

Serato draws from his instrument such beautiful and caressing tones that the listener must be drawn to the artist himself.—Il Messagero.

Together with a powerful tone, Serato unites a sweetness of expression and profoundness of interpretation.—Il Popolo.

BOLOGNA, ITALY.

Societe des Quartettes.—The playing of the Brahms concerto was the greatest triumph achieved by Arrigo Serato. He excelled in marvelous expression and noble passionate tone production. After the finale of each movement there was a veritable ovation. Serato's tone is of pure energetic quality and his technic must be called perfect.

Serato belongs to the few violinists who can undertake the difficult task of playing the great master's concertos and still maintain the style of virtuoso. No one excels him in the masterly interpretation of the exquisite compositions. He is rightly considered as one of the greatest interpreters of Brahms music. The cadenza was especially written for him by Busoni and introduced in public for the first time at that occasion.—Il Resto del Carlino.

(Advertisement.)

Not Musical.

"I can't stay long," said the chairman of the committee from the colored church. "I just come to see if you wouldn't join de mission band."

"Fo' de lan' sakes, honey," was the reply, "doan' come to me! I can't even play a mouf organ."—Newark (N. J.) Star.

PIANOS IN PARIS

Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos

We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.

Renting for Music Students a Specialty

THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Merrill Piano School Novel Event.

A novel event occurred in the High School Auditorium, Oklahoma City, Okla., Friday evening, June 5, when "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with Mendelssohn music, was presented by pupils of the Merrill Piano School.

Six grand pianos were arranged on the stage. John Jacobs Merrill, director of the school, conducted the ensemble numbers and the choruses of fairies.

An audience of over 800 listened to the program given below, and expressions of approval as well as plentiful applause proved the success of the production.

The program:

Overture.....Six pianos, twelve performers
Scherzo.....Two pianos, two performers
Incidental music.....Marie Vance
Fairies' March.....Six pianos, twelve performers
With chorus of fairies.
Intermezzo.....Six pianos, twelve performers
Incidental music.....
Nocturne.....Six pianos, twelve performers
Incidental music.....
Wedding march.....Six pianos, sixteen performers
Incidental music.....
Funeral March.....Six pianos, six performers
Dance of the Clowns.....Six pianos, six performers
Finale.....Six pianos, twelve performers
With chorus of fairies.

Christine Miller and Her Manager.

Christine Miller, the popular contralto, and her manager, W. Spencer Jones, of Haensel & Jones, appear in the accompanying snapshot, taken on board the steamship "Imperator," Saturday, June 27.

CHRISTINE MILLER AND W. SPENCER JONES EN ROUTE.

Notice that Miss Miller appears exceedingly anxious that Mr. Jones should take down a few important memorandums regarding this busy singer's tour next season.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL
European Tour, July, 1914—Jan. 1915
American Tour, - after Feb. 1, 1915
Address THEODORE SEYDEL, 70 Westland Ave., Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies
In London Until July 28,1914
Address Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - - BOSTON, MASS

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDN SOCIETY
146 Huntington Avenue - - - Boston

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
121 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

The Famous Prima Donna of the Paris Grand Opera

MLLE. ALICE VERLET

"With the exception of Mmes. Patti and Melba, no voice of exactly the same quality has been in this country for a long period. . . .
—London Morning Post, March 22, 1909.

Will Tour the Season 1914-15 in U.S.A. and Canada and is now being booked for Concerts and Recitals.

By Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave.
New York

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181 Street

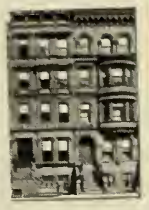
LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg. 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
in his last Liederabend met the same unqualified success which attended his first recital. There is a radiance and warmth in his artistic and intelligent delivery which affects his audience most happily.—Der Reichsanzeiger, Berlin.
Concert direction Wolff, Flottwellstr. 1, Berlin.
Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall, New York.
AVAILABLE FOR A LIMITED NUMBER OF ENGAGEMENTS, SPRING, 1915.

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.



MME. ROSA OLITZKA
CELEBRATED RUSSIAN CONTRALTO
Engaged as Soloist, Great Texas Saengerfest, May 11 to 14, 1914
AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIOS and MUSICALES
Manager R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
For Terms, Dates, etc., Address temporarily, care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the U.S.

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Special SUMMER COURSE for Teachers and Professionals. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR, 51 W. 76th St. N. Y.

Cincinnati College Faculty's Summer Exodus.

After an exceedingly strenuous year of artistic activity the commencement of the Cincinnati College of Music saw the departure not only of its hundreds of non-resident students to the various States they represented, but also of a number of the faculty to their favorite summer haunts.

Albino Gorno, dean and principal of the piano department, left with Mrs. Gorno on the steamship Europa, of the Italian Veloce line, for a cruise through the Mediterranean, and will go finally to Genoa. The painstaking and efficient master assumed many and arduous burdens during the school year, not only with his large class of advanced pianists, but also in the responsibilities which his position in musical direction also involved. The opera, the faculty concerts and the solo work of the chorus and orchestra events, all added to his labors, so his rest at this time is indeed well earned. Shortly after their arrival at Genoa, Signor and Mrs. Gorno will visit Lugano, Maggiore and other Italian lakes, there to find relaxation and inspiration in his endeavors to present additional material during the next musical season.

After bidding a fond "auf wiedersehen" to Mrs. Saar and the children, who will spend the summer at Portage Lake, Mich., Louis Victor Saar left Cincinnati recently for New York. After a short visit with his colleagues and friends, of whom he has a host in the metropolis, he will sail for Germany and will spend a few weeks with his mother on Lake Lucerne. Mr. Saar expects to return to the United States in August in order to join Mrs. Saar in Michigan.

Signor and Mrs. Mattioli have gone to Mt. Clemens, where in a short time they will be joined by Mme. Louis Dotti, Signor Mattioli and Mme Dotti having prolonged their work because of the needs of a number of their students who have been doing professional work and returned for the early summer term for special coaching. The plans for the party have not been fully decided upon, but it has been intimated that they will include a sail on the Great Lakes, followed by a visit in the East.

Johannes and Mrs. Miersch have not decided upon where to spend the summer, but they have already a number of cordial invitations for the mountains and the sea. They will probably leave for some exclusive point very shortly.

Emil Heermann, the popular concertmaster of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, is an enthusiastic motorist, and with Walter Gilewicz, another of the recent additions to the college faculty, indulges in daily spins through the country.

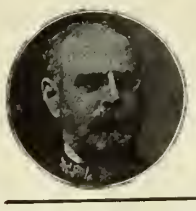
Adele Westfield, after the close of the summer term, will journey to New York, after which she will visit her sister and her family at their delightful cottage at Long Beach.

Lillian Arkell Rixford, to whom the mountains of Virginia have ever been alluring, will leave the early part of this week for White Sulphur Springs, where she intends to spend the remaining summer months.

Mary Venable returned to the college last week after having made a splendid impression with a soundly conceived and well delivered paper before the meeting of the New York Teachers' Association at Saratoga, and will probably go to the Great Lakes some time this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Werner left last week for their summer home at Detour, Mich., which is located on the extreme southeastern point of the upper peninsula of the State. They have taken their fine touring car with them, and as this will be a favorite spot with many local musicians and musical people, Mr. Werner will be the host for many happy parties.

Ottilie Dickerscheid expects to enjoy again the breezes of St. Ignace, where she recuperates to her entire satisfaction each year.



Romeo Gorno has had so much demand for special coaching from his numerous students who have been busily engaged in professional work, that he has generously agreed to sacrifice his well carned rest, and consequently will remain until August 1. After that he and his brother, Giacinto Gorno, who was also retained for the summer school, will take a trip on the Great Lakes.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Hoffmann have not made any special plans for the summer, as Mr. Hoffmann is another of the conscientious teachers of the institution who has remained over for the benefit of former students who are now teaching. Perhaps during August they may take a short trip East.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Meara will not leave until the end of the summer term because of Mr. O'Meara's large summer classes and incidental professional engagements, which will keep him busy until August 1.

Louise Church and Lillian Kreimer remained for the first half of the summer term, and will shortly leave for points of interest and entertainment, probably within the coming week.

Adolph Stadermann has a number of interesting organ pupils and does not expect to go away before August.

SOUSA AND HIS BAND
"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"
Office: 1 West 34th Street
Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH
CONCERT VIOLINIST
Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue. New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS
Hans Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory and is assisted by an able corps of teachers. Bendetson Netzorg has also been added to the Conservatory faculty. For catalog address
MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street, New York

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO
Concert—Recital—Oratorio
Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN
America's Violinist
Season 1914-1915 Now Booking
Address:
THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York
Phone Murray Hill. 2239

VOCAL STUDIO AND OPERA SCHOOL (Italian Method)
KARL SCHNEIDER
PHILADELPHIA: 1705 Chestnut St., October to May
MUENCHEN, Germany: 9 Friedrich Str., June to Sept. 15

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER
Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARY DENNISON GAILEY
VIOLINIST
Address, Russell Bridges, Empire Life Bldg., Atlanta, Ga

Yolanda MERÖ Hungarian Pianist
STEINWAY PIANO USED
Under the exclusive management of CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, New York City

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.
Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist
SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City
Baldwin Piano Used

Baroness Evans
Von KLENNER
America's Representative of the
GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD
Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.
Tradition. Languages. Repertoire. Diction. Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY
of NEW YORK
1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915
JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor
SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.
TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South
Prospectus on application to
FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

FLORYN OPERA PRODUCING CO., Inc.
1482 Broadway, Room 1105
Three Opera Bouffe Co's in repertoire
Applications in writing from Aspirants with good voices and talent will be considered

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 W. 34th St., New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music
Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

FLORENCE TRUMBULL
PIANISTE
Vorbereiterin (ASSISTANT) to Theodor Leschetizky
VIII Laudongasse 22 - - - - - Vienna, Austria

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE Coloratura Soprano
GRAND OPERA PRIMA DONNA
Season 1914-15 Now Booking Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals
European Address: - - - 68 rue de l'Aurore, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - - - - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

ECHOES OF MICHIGAN TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

Lack of Enthusiasm Seemed to Be Apparent at the Meetings.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 2, 1914.

Being unable to attend the Michigan Music Teachers' Convention, held in Muskegon, Mich., June 23, 24, 25, I can give only the echoes and program.

Several Grand Rapids people took part in the various programs, and the newspapers, with due courtesy, loyalty and honesty, stated in their stereotyped form: "Mrs. So and So gave a most interesting paper," and "Mr. Blank played in a most artistic manner."

The most decisive step reported was the firm demand for membership dues from each one before he had crossed the threshold; even if he were to take part in the program, the same demand was made. One participant said: "There were about twenty-five people present when I began; fewer when I got through." Another musical member said: "I had just a lovely time at the convention; my friend has a cottage on the lake and an automobile."

The evening concerts did not call forth large audiences, even after people had been told that they were free.

One thing, quite unheard of, was reported; the musicians seemed to have been all of the same mind and quite agreed, as no enthusiastic discussion on any of the subjects took place.

When the convention met in Grand Rapids a few years ago, its pulse was below normal, and not having the proper nourishment, it must have lapsed into a state of inertia.

As the people entered the portals of the sanctuary, they must have been impressed to do so with bowed head and reverent step: as to view the "remains" for the last time, "the mourners to remain seated."

Are there no musical missionaries in the field who will rise up and minister to this suffering child? And inspire health and vigor, that Michigan can boast of a strong and powerful offspring. One whose magnetic influence will be felt abroad.

Cannot the windows be thrown open and a little sunlight allowed to enter the darkened corners, and a breeze of fresh thoughts allowed to permeate the air, that the now gasping and stifled Music Teachers' Association may be "a thing worth while," awake, alive and doing things?

A. C. T.

Pianist and Manager.

Celéne Loveland, the gifted pianist, and her manager,

MISS LOVELAND AND MISS O'HANLON RUSTICATING.

Gertrude V. O'Hanlon, of Chicago, are shown in the accompanying snapshot.

Vittorino Moratti Pupils Engaged.

Victor Moratti has had a most successful season of teaching, and pupils of his have been engaged for the coming season for several leading stages.

Beth Young, who possesses a beautiful soprano voice, has been engaged for the Posen Opera, beginning September next. Her vocal education, which she started with Prof. G. B. Lamperti, has been completed exclusively with Signor Moratti, the former assistant and successor of the famous Italian pedagogue. Miss E. Schiller, who is now appearing in the Wagner Cycle at the Theater des Westens, Berlin, will go in September to Bremen, where she has a three-year engagement with the Opera. She is to create there leading roles in the premieres of French operas. Elsa Hirschberg, a remarkably gifted contralto, is also singing Wagner roles in the summer opera now being given at the Theater des Westens.

STEINWAY

THE owner of a Steinway never speaks of it as "a good piano"—the name means so much more than that. It signifies sweetness, purity and power of tone unexcelled.

Mechanically as well as artistically the Steinway is a world standard—the preferred piano of untold thousands of music lovers of all countries. It is the instrument by which all other pianos are judged and measured.

These facts are of the utmost value in the choice of a piano, and the purchase of a Steinway not only reflects the intelligent judgment of the buyer, but it puts the seal of supreme approval upon his musical taste. This should appeal to you.

We shall be glad to send you illustrated literature about the Steinway Piano and the name of the Steinway dealer nearest you.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
Subway Express Station at the Door.

LISZT'S MUSIC ROOM AT WEIMAR.

Carl Stasny Sails.

On the accompanying post card Carl Stasny, the Boston piano pedagogue, sent the MUSICAL COURIER a farewell greeting. He sailed for Europe on the steamship Amerika, June 30, and will return in time for the opening of his classes in the fall.

Fanning Is Very Active.

An announcement has just been received by the MUSICAL COURIER to the effect that Cecil Fanning, the well known American song recitalist, will be the principal artist at the Mont Eagle assembly, to be held at Toronto on August 11, 12, 13 and 14. Quite contrary to the usual routine of activities of most concert artists, Mr. Fanning's summer engagements will continue uninterrupted throughout the whole vacation period and grant him no cessation whatever from the public's demand made upon his services until the close of the 1914-1915 season.

CECIL FANNING AND H. B. TURPIN.

The following year will find him in England and on the Continent, where already many important engagements in London, Berlin and various other of the more influential musical centers have been booked.

H. B. Turpin, his accomplished accompanist and manager, displays an ever increasing amount of energy in his remarkable supervision over the successful career into which he has piloted this clever American artist.

Two ladies of the stage now welcome an unexpected volunteer press agent in the person of the Congressman who puts Secretary Bryan "in a class with Gaby Deslys and Evelyn Nesbit Thaw."—Newark (N. J.) Star.

Parent Piano Pupils' Program.

Miss L. Parent, of the Ursuline Academy, Youngstown, Ohio, will spend the greater part of her vacation in Newfoundland and the White Mountains.

Following is a program presented by Miss Parent at one of her June piano pupils' recitals, given on Monday evening, the 22d, at St. Columba's Auditorium, assisted by Frank Johns, tenor, and R. A. Slavin, accompanist:

La Dame Blanche (violin) ..... Boieldieu
Joseph Egan.

The Zephyr ..... Harmston
Warner Williams.

Impromptu ..... Schubert
Bessie Strickland.

The Bohemian Girl (violin) ..... Balfe-May John Hynes.

Study ..... Glazounow
Elizabeth Cossler.

Valse de Concert ..... Kowalski
Elizabeth Trigg.

Sonata, C major ..... Mozart
Mrs. Evan A. Jones.

Accompaniment (second piano) ..... Grieg
Lucy Cole.

Minuet (violin) ..... Paderewski
Bernard Chalk.

Rhapsody, III ..... Liszt
Helen Hodgkin.

Caprice Espagnol ..... Moszkowski
Elizabeth Trigg.

Study ..... Poldi i
La Neige Dance ..... Debussy
Kathleen Hodgkin.

Vocal selection ..... ———
Mr. Johns.

Allegro, sonata, D major (violin) ..... Mozart-Schradieck
Bernard Chalk.

Rhapsody, II ..... Liszt
Lucy Cole.

Scherzo, C sharp minor ..... Chopin
Kathleen Hodgkin.

Alice ..... Ascher
Thomas Farragher.

Ballala and Bizzaria ..... Pagnocelli
Misses Cole, Cossler, Hodgkin, Scheetz, Strickland, Trigg.

Vocal selection ..... ———
Mr. Johns.

Rondo (for two pianos) ..... Rummel
Willie Burke, James Dwyer; Thomas Farragher.

Inez Barbour at Ann Arbor.

Inez Barbour, the well known New York soprano, was one of the soloists at the recent Ann Arbor (Mich.) festival, with which organization she won instantaneous success. The following notice from the Daily Times-News of that city serves to show how the representatives of the press received her work:

MISS INEZ BARBOUR MADE HER FIRST APPEARANCE AT LOCAL FESTIVAL AND WON INSTANT RECOGNITION BY HER MAGNIFICENT WORK IN SOLO ROLES.

Inez Barbour, soprano, was received with the greatest enthusiasm, and her singing of the soprano arias was all that could be desired. She proved herself an artist in technic, and her clear, high soprano was a delight to her hearers. Miss Barbour's personal charm is one of her chief attractions, and adds weight to all her artistic renditions. Her mezzo voice was beautifully clear and full, and the coloratura passages were especially well done. She possesses a voice, clear, pure and true soprano, and exercises a perfect command of it.

Rosa Olitzka Seeks Poor Girl with Voice.

Rosa Olitzka, the grand opera contralto, has informed the public through the daily press that she was searching for some poor girl with a good voice, upon whom she could bestow a musical education. Mme. Olitzka is quoted as saying: "Chicago girls have the most wonderful voices in the world. The bell-like notes of the real voice can be heard here as nowhere else. One hears the voice attuned to music in the street cars, in the shops, along the streets and in the factories. Some day I will find the voice I am seeking for and then my task will be done."

Mme. Olitzka added also that she has never forgotten the kindness with which the American public first received her, or the happy days she has had in Chicago, for she calls herself a real Chicagoan.

"Chicago will always be my home. That is why I want to find my famous voice here. I have found plenty of wonderful voices, but the owner was able to pay for the requisite education. I want to find a poor girl, one unable to pay for her musical or other education. This girl I will take to my own home. While I am on concert tours she will be at school. When I am home, I will take charge of her voice. Then she will go to Europe to finish her education and then here in our own Auditorium, with our own Chicago Opera Company, she will make her debut, and the world of music will bow once more to a Chicago voice, as it has done before."

Three of a Kind.

These are the singing Beddoes, father, daughter and son, in their robes of office. The father's name is Dan, the daughter's is Gwladys, and the son's, Donald. Mr. Beddoe, Sr., is the genial tenor well known to the readers of the MUSICAL COURIER. They all sing in New York churches. Mr. Beddoe is soloist at Grace Episcopal Church. Miss Gwladys may be heard in the excellent choir of St. Paul's Chapel at Columbia University. Master Donald belongs to the noted choir of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

GWLADYS D. BEDDOE, DONALD T. BEDDOE, AND DAN BEDDOE.

Mrs. Beach, a Hanson Artist.

Mrs. H. H. A. Beach's tour in America next season will be managed by the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, who reports that all the bookings for this brilliant composer and pianist are numerous. Mrs. Beach will give her first concert in early January.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKING
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

VOCAL VS. INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

[Luigi Von Kunits, in The Canadian Journal of Music.]

One of the earlier biographers of Beethoven, Lenz, is responsible for the "legend" attached to the ninth symphony, that the master in employing the choral ending intended to show that instrumental music, left to its own resources, is insufficient and incapable to express the highest musical ideas; that he meant to proclaim and establish the superiority of the vocal. I call this a "legend" because a genius like Beethoven—and, for that matter, any true artist—does not work in an abstract and doctrinaire manner, nor ever creates for the mere sake of proving some favorite theory.

Yet there is no concealing the fact that instrumental music, from its earliest history, has kept a secondary role in the evolution of the art. Originally invented to accompany the voice, to give it a finer luster, or employed to emphasize the rhythmic beats of the dance or march, the imitative accompaniment has always been its proper function. Throughout the ages the superiority of the voice is apparent. The Greeks had a highly developed technical system of instrumental music; they even had a special notation for it, employing for it the enharmonic genus and its quarter tones, in addition to the diatonic and chromatic genuses to which vocal music was confined. But of all this highly ingenious instrumental system—of all Terpander's preludes for the lyre, of all Olympos' cadenzas for the flute—not a trace remains, while at least seven of the hymns of the Greeks are preserved to give us a fair idea of their vocal music. In the Middle Ages another ingenious instrumental system prevailed, the German "Tabulator"; how much of that is left? And how many musicians of our day take the trouble to decipher what there is left? It is gone with the curious instruments for which it was devised; whereas the Gregorian Chants, the à capella masses of Orlando Lasso, are as impressive today as they ever were. Vocal music, based on the division of the human voices, appears to be the only natural music, because exclusively governed by natural laws; while instrumental music is essentially artificial and imitative. The one is a constant factor, the other a variable.

For instrumental music, beyond marking the march and dance rhythms, has for its highest aim the imitation of the human voice. This is so true that it can be tested by any piece of music, ancient or modern. Every instrumental movement is either in the form of a march or a dance, and partaking of that character by embellishing chiefly rhythmical qualities—or it is in the form of a song and more or less imitative of the voice. For melody is the more genuine, the more it is singable. The natural raising and lowering of the voice, in pronouncing words according to their greater or lesser importance in the sentence, is the prototype of all musical phrasing.

It is therefore safe to say that those recent compositions which partake of neither character, but pretend to pictures, moods and tales, foreign (or at best secondary) to music proper, are, after all—no matter how ingeniously constructed—only passing curiosities in the kaleidoscope of instrumental music.

More than that. On the very account of this continuous change, master works like the symphonies of Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms are destined to become obsolete, to lose their meaning and interest for coming generations. What will survive of them is exactly what has survived from past epochs of instrumental music—here and there a soulful melody, or a striking rhythm of the dance or march. All that highly ingenious thematic development, all that consummate "scholasticism" of contrapuntal figuration and orchestral coloring, will one day have passed to the mere curiosities of the art. Even in our day the grand fugal constructions of Bach are beginning to be so considered. It is different, however, with their vocal writings, because there will always be sopranos, altos, tenors and basses, with the same possibilities and the same limitations. The vocal is the stable and conservative part of music.

Meanwhile it is every bit as true that the instrumental, by reason of its endless transformation, is the progressive and liberal part. In it we possess means of expression more various, more subtle and more intense as its evolution proceeds. Many shades of thought, sentiment, color and so on, which were denied to composers of a century ago, are now possible to us. A symphony by Beethoven contains more profound thought and a deeper expression than a symphony by Mozart; and Brahms shows a similar advance on Schumann and Mendelssohn. The evolution of instrumental music seems almost without limit, while the treatment of the voices is bound to remain very much the same.

For that reason amateurs, with even a minimum of instruction, may do justice to the vocal; whereas the instrumental demands scholarship, original thought, long practice, and a mind discriminatingly open to new modes. No player can brook disparagement of his art. He holds that although his medium may not in its present form endure to the end with vocal media, within its day it is nevertheless more exacting, more alert and vital, more individual, more responsive to the advancing requirements of life. That, in fact, it serves the vocal best by constantly renewing the contact between the voice and the needs of life.

If the vocal is liable to stagnation, the instrumental may often go wide on the wrong track. It may be that the best musical results are finally to be achieved by the happy union of the two. That "legend" about the ninth symphony might be corrected to mean that Beethoven pronounced himself converted to such a marriage.

The Celebrated American Baritone

WILLIAM
HINSHAW

(Metropolitan Opera Company)

Specially engaged to sing Wotan and Wanderer in the Berlin Wagner Ring Festival June 23rd to August 21st, 1914

In America December to June

Concert Direction R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

Leonora Allen's Successful Tour.

Leonora Allen, who has just returned from her tour with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, has been reengaged in a great many places. With her sister she sailed for Europe last Saturday, July 11, via the French Line, and will remain until the first of the year. She has been engaged by the Apollo Club, of Chicago, to sing in Wolf-Ferrari's "New Life" and Schmitt's "Forty-seventh Psalm," which has never been given in this country.

Photo by Matzene, Chicago.
LEONORA ALLEN.

Miss Allen's success on tour with the Minneapolis Orchestra was most successful as can be judged by the following notices:

Leonora Allen created a deep and decidedly favorable impression through the artistry of her vocalism in the mellifluous and coloratura aria from Gounod's now almost forgotten opera, "Mireille." Her voice is of considerable power, and as clear as a bell in tone. She phrases her passage work with the skill only to be acquired by long years of training in order to excel, and has such an extended range that once reached C above the staff lines. From this lady an encore was insisted upon and gracefully responded to.—Wi... Tribune.

Leonora Allen instantly won favor on account of he... personality, her lovely fresh voice with its power, range and sweetness of quality and her skillful singing. Her aria, Gounod, was given with such clarity and technical ease that it won her a double encore.—Omaha Bee.

Miss Allen proved herself not only a capable soprano, but one whom it was a pleasure to hear. Her voice is clear and pure, and of a peculiarly even quality in all its registers that marks the natural singer of very good training. There was no unsteadiness of the tremolo that is noticed in the work of many singers.—Indianapolis News.

The soprano, Leonora Allen, won a perfect ovation with the aria, "Wie Nahte Mir der Schlummer," and her fresh, wholly lovely voice rose and soared with fascinating ease. Beautiful English the Cadman song displayed, and "Maids of Cadiz," her second recall song, was a marvel of birdlike tone work. Regally gowned and poised, she was a picture to look upon.—Hutchinson Gazette.

Miss Allen, a rarely beautiful girl, also has a high soprano voice with a sweetness of tone unequalled by all except the most capable of singers.—Aberdeen Daily News.

Miss Allen's first number was Gounod's great aria, "Mon Coeur," from the opera "Mireille." It was sung with convincing passion and respect for correct interpretation. It served to reveal the bell-like quality of her tones and the wide range of her voice. Her first encore was Cadman's lovely "Land of the Sky Blue Water."—Decatur Review.

Leonora Allen, soprano, as Ruth, displayed a voice of youthful charm and considerable training. She sang her part candidly and with clear enunciation.—Minneapolis Journal.

In the aria from "Der Freischütz" Miss Allen excelled her work of the first day. She possesses good dramatic instinct and there is a pleasing freshness in her voice which made a great hit with the audience. In response to prolonged applause she sang exceptionally well the "Maids of Cadiz," by Delibes.—Grand Forks Herold.

Leonora Allen made her return to Streator a notable one. Her aria, "Mon Coeur," from "Mireille," by Gounod, was splendidly adapted to her beautiful voice. Such beauty of tone and flexibility of technic is possessed by a few young singers of the day, and added to these attainments are captivating charm of manner and intelligence of high order. Her encore, given in response to prolonged applause, was a perfect gem. Cadman's "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water" was interpreted exquisitely.—Streator, Ill., Free Press.

Leonora Allen, who has been winning laurels in many places all season, was heard in Weber's "Softly Sighing," from "Der Freischütz," a work which served well to show the brilliant and flexible qualities of her voice and dramatic art. Miss Allen's voice is of a fine, pure soprano quality and her presentation called for much response, to which she added "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water" (Cadman), giving this a sympathetic interpretation to which the beautiful orchestra accompaniment supplied a subtle color impossible in piano work.—Moline, Ill., Dispatch. (Advertisement.)

New Soprano to Tour America.

Cora Kempre has recently returned to this country after several years of success in opera in the leading cities of the Continent. Her original intention was to return to Europe after a short visit to her native land—she is a Californian—but a flattering offer to take up concert work, in which, young as she was, she had already made a name for herself before going to Europe, as well as a strong desire to remain in her own country for a time, decided her to postpone this return. In the appearances in concert that she has already made the wisdom of this decision has been proved by her success. She combines, with a full, rich, dramatic voice, fine style and interpretation, a distinct enunciation in whatever language she sings, which delights her hearers. Her stage presence is easy and unaffected, and she possesses the gift of at once carrying her audience with her.

Mme. Kempre will make an American tour under the direction of Gertrude V. O'Hanlon.

First Opera Glasses.

The single opera glass was first used in the time of Louis XIV. It became the rage, and everybody used one. The double opera glass (Jumelle) was invented in 1825, says the Meadville (Pa.) Tribune-Republican, but did not at first find favor with women. A treatise was written in the early part of the nineteenth century on l'art de lorgner, in which it was shown that a woman with fine arms would hold the glass with both hands; if she were blessed with fine hands she would take off her gloves; if her neck were long she would recline back in her chair, and so on. It was quite a treatise on coquetry.

Doesn't Appeal.

The Criterion Restaurant, we see, is advertising a "Souper Dansant." Personally we dislike the kind of supper which when eaten will not lie down and rest.—Punch.

NORAH DREWETT THE FAMOUS PIANIST

SEASON 1914-15

Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York

STEINWAY PIANO USED

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG
Summer Course for Teachers, Amateurs and Professionals by these famous artists. TORONTO, CANADA.

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapolis, Minn.

The MEHAN Summer School for Teachers and Singers
July 7—Aug. 15. Appointments By Mail
Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 15
SUITE 70, CARNEGIE HALL, TEL. 5946 COLUMBUS

The Eminent Austrian Pianist
MME. MARIE VON UNSCHULD
Piano Recitals and Lectures on Technic by Motion Pictures
EUROPEAN CONCERT BUREAU, 1320 F St., Washington, D. C.

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
133 West 80th St. Tel. Schuyler 3786 New York City
Mr. Regneas will teach but 3 days weekly during July and August.
No interviews granted excepting by appointment.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

Alice PRESTON
SOPRANO
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON 1451 Broadway, New York

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

JOHN McCORMACK
CELEBRATED IRISH TENOR
In America Entire Season 1914-15
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Personal Management: CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

Heinrich Hensel's Tristan.

Prof. Ferdinand Pfohl, of Hamburg, Germany, the well known Wagnerian authority, gives the following estimate of Heinrich Hensel:

"Royal concert singer, Heinrich Hensel, has added Tristan as a valuable acquisition to his repertoire, that strong role, which the pre-eminent Wagner singer has lacked until the present. And so we Hamburgers may abandon ourselves to the anticipation of Hensel's Tristan interpretation, which true to Wagner, great and significant, promises to compare favorably with the excellent Siegfried interpretations of this brilliant artist and dramatic actor, who delights in creating and who, always at work, is continually bringing himself to higher degrees of perfection.

"Heinrich Hensel, the tenor star of the Hamburg Stadttheater, is, by the way, one of the few singers of great renown who do not lounge in summer. 'All has long been favoring rest.' The 'Freischütz' words certainly do not apply to him, the indefatigable, whom his Odysseus nature drives continuously from his summer leisure in Taunus out again into various ways of the artistic life. He, a desired festival guest, adds to the task of an active and most successful winter season (during which Hensel understood how to include, with repeated mastery, his insinuating art and fascinating gifts in Hamburg, Brussels and London, in Paris, Antwerp and Berlin, in Lübeck, Hanover and Aix-la-Chapelle), the extra burden of an abundantly occupied summer. Burden? To Hensel it appears to be no burden, in addition to the regular opera season, to give his much desired assistance to numerous concerts and festival performances. To his participation in the music festivals in Danzig and Antwerp, the festival celebrations in Karlsruhe, Chemnitz and Mannheim, in addition to guest performances in opera and concert, which took him to Kassel, Basel, Nürnberg, Dortmund and Essen, may be added concerts in Marienbad, Karlsbad, Franzenbad, the famous Bohemian summer resorts, among whose healing powers music seems now to play a part. Indeed, it requires an iron constitution and an uninterrupted artist enthusiasm to assume such a number of engagements and to be equal to such fatiguing work. Increasing work! Some call it: The curse of celebrity; others, the blessing of celebrity. And to the latter Heinrich Hensel belongs."

HEINRICH HENSEL'S VILLA AT WIESBADEN.

Following is the list of Heinrich Hensel's engagements during the season of 1913 and 1914:

Hamburg, Stadttheater, forty performances; Brussels, Theatre de la Monnaie, fifteen performances; Brussels, concerts Ysaye, two performances; London, Covent Garden, two performances; Antwerp, concerts Ysaye; Antwerp, music festival; Paris, concerts Colonne; Berlin, Königliches Oper; Hanover, Hoftheater; Karlsruhe, Hoftheater, two performances; Chemnitz, festivals, two performances; Mannheim, festivals, two performances; Cologne, festivals; Aix-la-Chapelle, Stadttheater; Nürnberg, concert; Lübeck, Stadttheater; Essen, concert; Dortmund, Stadttheater, three performances; Kassel, concert; Basel, Stadttheater, three performances; Oynhausen, concert; Celle, concert; Danzig, music festival; Danzig, forest festivals, "Siegfried," three performances.

Bird Music.

For next week, by the way, Henderson's (at Coney Island) has booked an act called "The Mystic Bird," which seems to be more or less of a mystery. No one appears to know much about it, except that in it a canary renders songs called for by the audience.

If canaries can be trained to do this, why should the music publishers employ a whistling claque?—New York Morning Telegraph.

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN. 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau. 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street, New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST
TOURING EUROPE SEASON 1914-1915
Management. ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA
Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus
"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone, Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Léon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st. St., NEW YORK

LEWIS
SHAWE
Baritone
Recital, Concert, Oratorio — Schiffman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES — Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street — Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 W. 67th St. — Tel.: Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. — Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant — New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street — New York

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals — Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF
The Russian Violinist
In America 1914-15
Management
JOHANNA SHERRICK
Room 1007 — 200 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
DANIEL MAYER, London

In Praise of Ward Lewis.

This snapshot depicts David Bispham with his accompanist, Ward C. Lewis, and H. W. Hull and Bert French, en route from San Jose, Cal., to Los Angeles, during their recent tour. Mr. Lewis, who ranks high as an accompanist and pianist, is at present touring the South and Middle West with Grace Hall Riheldaffer, the well known soprano, whose home is in Pittsburgh, and Mary Dennison Gailey, the talented young violinist.

The following press notices were received by Mr. Lewis during his recent trip with Mr. Bispham:

His accompanist gave a very creditable reading of the Bergh score.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Ward C. Lewis aids the offering caterially by excellent work as accompanist.—Duluth (Minn.) News Tribune.

Ward C. Lewis is a most efficient accompanist.—Edmonton (Canada) Journal.

Mr. Lewis, who accompanies him, is in perfect accord and sympathy, and his playing is also much enjoyed.—Vancouver (B. C.) News Advertiser.

LEFT TO RIGHT: WARD LEWIS, DAVID BISPHAM, H. W. HULL, BERT FRENCH. EN ROUTE FROM SAN JOSE TO LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Ward Lewis, his accompanist, deserves a word of praise for his sympathetic work, which is in entire accord with the fine work of Bispham.—San Francisco News Letter.

Ward Lewis, the pianist, who played the accompaniments, is an artist of exceptional attainments.—Sacramento (Cal.) Bee.

Mr. Bispham was accompanied with taste and sympathy by Ward C. Lewis.—Stockton (Cal.) Evening Mail.

David Bispham, the great American baritone, assisted by his excellent pianist, Ward Lewis, presented a program of fourteen numbers.—Charleston (Mo.) Republican.

Ward Lewis is a worthy companion for the famous baritone, and in no small way contributed to the pleasure of the audience by his delightful interpretation of three piano solos, "Pastorale," by Scarlatti-Taussig; "Tocatta," by Hocck, and for an encore a Chopin nocturne.—Charleston (Mo.) Enterprise. (Advertisement.)

Home Made Musical Fun.

[From the Baltimore News.]

Every boy with a spark of music in him loves to try his skill at making strange musical instruments, says a writer in Farm and Home.

Flutes are made by cutting a stem from a pumpkin or squash leaf, leaving one end closed. A lengthwise slit is cut near the closed end and this end is to be inserted in the mouth so as to include the whole of the slit. Keys to be covered by the fingers are then cut by making notches in the stem.

A cornstalk fiddle is an old instrument which our great grandparents used to make. Cut a joint off a large cornstalk. Slip the knife under the tough bark, loosening it for a few inches near one end, but do not cut the ends. Now remove about half the stalk beneath the loosened bark. Cut the bark into strips an eighth of an inch in width, and cut away every other or alternate one. These strips are your strings, and you may, by doing your work neatly, have quite a creditable looking instrument.

Steinert Series of Concerts.

The Steinert series of four concerts at popular prices will be given at Infantry Hall, Providence, R. I., during next season. The first concert will occur on November 10, with John McCormack, Donald McBeath and Edwin Schneider; the second concert, December 8, by Alice Nielsen and Rudolph Ganz; the third, December 31, with Evelyn Scotney, Jeska Swartz, Umberto Sorrentino and Howard White; and the fourth, January 26, with Julia Culp and Albert Spalding. This same series will be given in Mechanics' Hall, Worcester, on November 4, December 11, December 30 and January 27; and another series with the same artists will be held in Portland, Me., on the evenings of November 3, December 9, December 28 and January 25. The series is unusually attractive, and offers an excellent opportunity to hear famous artists at reasonable prices.

The pre-eminence of
The
Knabe
The World's Best
Piano
is everywhere acknowledged. The greatest pianists and composers of the day as well as the foremost families of the world refer with pride to the possession of a Knabe Piano.

The numerous types of Player Mechanisms incorporated in enable anyone to play with all the finesse of a skilled pianist.
KNABE PLAYER-PIANOS

Representatives throughout the world. Catalogs and information forwarded upon request. New York prices universal, with freight and expenses added to outside points.

THE KNABE
The World's Best Piano

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC, ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Pegujar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1914.

No. 1790

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 7. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dobbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Lace, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
LONDON—
Mrs. Evelyn Kaesmann,
5 Portland Place, London W.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY—
Miss Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florianigasse 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
BRUSSELS, BELGIUM—
Lucila Anderson, 52 rue de l'Ermitage.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

Another much needed institution is a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Schönberg.

We are among those who belong to the amused onlookers when musical historians quarrel about the exact birthday of a composer.

"Music teachers cannot be made proficient by law," says the Albany, N. Y., Knickerbocker Press, and that sums up the situation neatly and truthfully.

Milwaukee reports that its grand opera performances (without costume) in the parks is a success. The smallest attendance at any of the twelve performances was 7,000.

Louis Blumenberg, president of the Musical Courier Company, sailed Tuesday evening on the steamship Lusitania. Mr. Blumenberg will make one of his regular visits to the European offices of this paper.

Much interest is being shown in the plan to erect a monument to the late Lillian Nordica in Central Park. President McAneny, of the Board of Aldermen, is one of the enthusiastic sponsors of the movement.

Opera to be given in cooperation by Toronto and Montreal is being discussed in Canada. The plan is entirely feasible, for the cities are closer together than Chicago and Philadelphia, which divide an opera season between them with very satisfactory results.

Debussy denies to the Musical Courier that he intends to give up composing temporarily "because he finds that he is repeating himself," as has been alleged in daily newspaper accounts. "I never made such a statement to any one," says Debussy, "and its publication is a piece of unwarrantable journalistic impudence."

In a recent issue of the Milan Corriere della Sera one reads that La Scala is preparing "Fedra," a tragedy by D'Annunzio, with music by Ildebrando Pizzetti. The tenor part will be sung by an American, Edoardo Di Giovanni (Edward Johnson). "Fedra" will be heard next season also at the San Carlo, Naples, and the Costanzi, Rome.

At his new theatre on Lexington avenue, Oscar Hammerstein intends to give excerpts from grand opera with musical moving pictures. A syndicate which controls vaudeville on the East Side objects to the venture on the grounds that its monopoly is being threatened. Hammerstein retorts that his scheme is not vaudeville. If it is grand opera, what will the Metropolitan magnates do?

While the lessees of the Paris Grand Opera will step out on August 31, that does not mean the closing of the institution, as some misinformed persons seem to think. Other lessees will simply step in. The Musical Courier long ago predicted that a complete reorganization of the Paris Opera would come, owing to its lax business methods and its subjection to the "deadhead" system, which in Paris is more tyrannical than anywhere else in the world.

For those who think Strauss's "Heldenleben" abstruse or even complicated, there is this simple explanation in Baughan's "Music and Musicians":

To begin with, no symphonic poem, except perhaps Richard Strauss' own "Tod und Verklärung," has seemed so clear in its meaning. This is caused, no doubt, by the nature of the subject. In many symphonic poems—in Richard Strauss' own "Don Juan" fantasia and "Till Eulenspiegel," for instance, and in Dvorák's series—music has attempted the impossible: it has pictured events and things; it has been realistic, in short. In "A Hero's Life" there is no such realism. The composer has taken the inner, emotional life of a man for expression, and consequently there is no difficulty in grasping his meaning; it is all well within the psychological power of music, and is set forth legitimately. Strauss' hero is no swaggerer in the full sunshine of material heroism, but a man who makes a fight for his soul. In the very opening of the first section the hero's theme is heard. It is noble and tender, but not in any degree martial or aggressive.

In the Monthly Musical Record, Dr. A. Eaglefield Hull has been writing a series of articles called "Schönberg Explained," in which the author's chief conclusion seems to be that "we are much too close to Schönberg's music to be able to assess it at all properly." He quotes Charles Macpherson's apt witticism: "The new styles are like late comers in an already crowded railway compartment. It takes some time before we can assess them at their proper value."

Xaver Scharwenka has permanently severed his connection with the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory of Berlin, of which he has been the principal instructor for many years. Applications for private lessons have become so numerous that the famous pianist has decided to establish a master school of piano playing of his own. In connection with this he also will maintain a seminary for the purpose of preparing professional piano teachers. In his new venture Scharwenka will be assisted by Walter Petzet, Marta Siebold and his daughter, Isolde Scharwenka, all well known pianists and experienced teachers.

Some extracts from the recent annual report of Mrs. C. P. Taft, president of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra:

"In offering my report of the nineteenth year in the life of the C. S. O., I am happy to be able to say that it covers the brightest period of its existence. At the beginning of the season we were rejoiced by the best sale of season tickets we ever had. . . . The sale of tickets for single concerts more than covered the cost of all the soloists. . . . We played in Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Springfield, Jackson, Mich.; South Bend, Ind.; Anderson, Ind.; Urbana, Ill.; with the usual series of three concerts in Dayton, Ohio. These tours brought us a substantial financial gain, many encomiums from the press, and re-engagements for next season.

"The success last year of the popular concerts was more than duplicated this season. In one week we sold all the season tickets we desired, and could have sold out the entire house, but that we considered it best to reserve the gallery for single sales. It is a cause of gratification that Music Hall has proved to be too small to accommodate the Sunday afternoon audiences eager for good music at a nominal cost.

"The story of the wonderful success of the May Festival is perhaps too recent to need any retelling. . . . Above all it was in every sense a Cincinnati Festival. The methods employed during the season by Dr. Kunwald could not fail to produce the finest results.

"In the coming season the orchestra will consist of eighty-two men and will give sixteen pairs of concerts during a period of twenty-eight weeks. This is a great step forward, as it will make it possible to give Cincinnati the variety of music that is necessary to its musical development and that has heretofore been impossible on account of the shortness of our season.

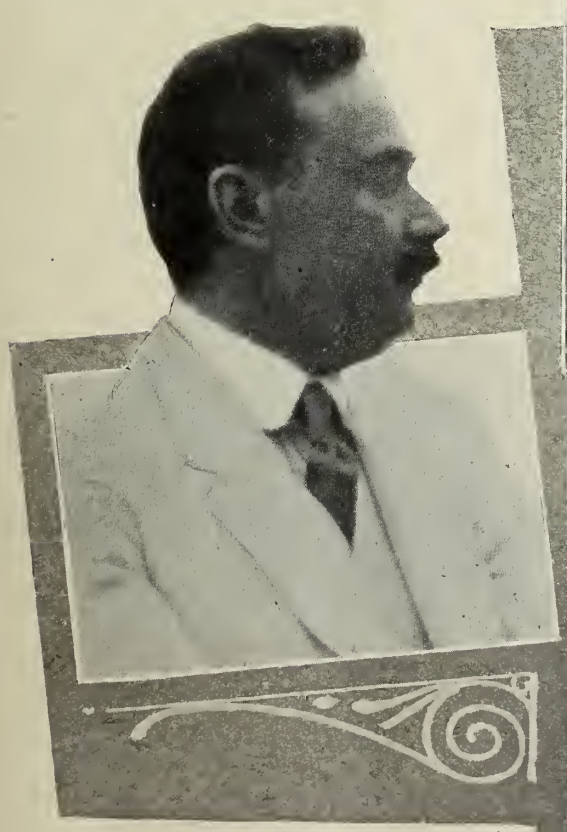
"That Dr. Kunwald has renewed his contract with us for four years is a cause of much congratulation. He is eminently fitted to carry on the intention of the association of raising to the highest possible point the standard of music in Cincinnati and is thoroughly in sympathy with this purpose."

A CONCERT TOUR OF THE VOLGA.

By Arthur M. Abell, Special Representative of the Musical Courier on the Tour of the Volga Made by Sergei Kussewitzky and His Symphony Orchestra.

Before the advent of Sergei Kussewitzky the musical life of Russia was concentrated chiefly in those two great centers, St. Petersburg and Moscow, and it remained for this high priest of art to set flowing with his magic wand sources that bid fair to fructify tonally a district nearly three times as large as France.

Kussewitzky's bi-annual concert tours of the Volga have already become important factors in the development of music in provincial Russia. With his genius for organizing and conducting, with his unlimited enthusiasm for the cause and with his great wealth, which he is spending almost entirely in the interest of his beloved art, Kussewitzky is the one man of our day adapted to the mission of awakening the slumbering talent of the Russian provinces. His orchestra of seventy-five picked musicians now is one of the finest in Europe, and as the question of box-office receipts in no way influences his mode of reckoning, he is wholly unhampered in this great undertaking.



Astonishingly little is known in western Europe of that mighty waterway which the Russians affectionately call Mother Volga. The river rises in the marshy districts above Tver, about 300 miles to the south of St. Petersburg, and after winding a tortuous course of 2,325 miles, it enters the Caspian Sea below Astrakhan by some 200 mouths. The basin of the Volga covers 563,000 square miles, with a population of over 40,000,000. Long before reaching Astrakhan we realized that the term "Mother Volga" was quite appropriate, for the people who gain their living from the river number into the hundreds of thousands. Astrakhan alone sends annually more than half a million tons of fish to all parts of the country. In this one city some 75,000 people are engaged in the fisheries. Astrakhan is the greatest source of caviar in the world. More than 2,000 steamers ply on the Volga, but traffic is limited to six months of the year, for during the rest of the time the river is frozen over. The amount of traffic in merchandise up river is curiously enough fifteen times as great as it is down river. Enormous quantities of fish, salt, naphtha, grain and other produce reach St. Petersburg by way of the Volga and the canals. A vast amount of merchandise also comes to Nijni Novgorod each summer for the great fair held in that famous old city. In Astrakhan we saw one dealer, for instance, who sends annually fifteen carloads of Persian carpets to be sold at Nijni Novgorod.

We arrived at Jaroslav towards evening of April 30, after an eight hours' railway journey due north from Moscow. At Jaroslav was our first concert. A concert had taken place at Rybinsk, some distance further up, the previous evening, but owing to the immense amount of ice between Jaroslav and Nijni Novgorod, our special steamer chartered by Kussewitzky was unable to make the journey up river in time to meet the party at Rybinsk; for this reason Kussewitzky and the orchestra went on by train, while Mme. Kussewitzky and her guests, who included Mrs. Abell and myself, waited in Moscow until we got telegraph news that the steamer would meet us at Jaroslav on May 1. It was deemed inadvisable for the ladies to undergo the hardship of spending a night at Rybinsk, where the hotel accommodations were of the most primitive kind.

Jaroslav is one of the most beautiful cities on the Volga, its churches, in particular, being wonderful. Their blue, green, white, gold and silver domes glittering in the evening sun were picturesque in the extreme and reminded us of scenes from the "Arabian Nights." From the top of a high tower which Mrs. Abell and I climbed we counted forty-eight of these beautiful structures, but I was informed that the town contained no less than eighty-four of them, although it has only 100,000 inhabitants. An idea of the exterior of these churches, which are all built in the form of a Greek cross, may be gained from the accompanying photographs. But we found these edifices highly interesting not only in their exterior aspects, but also in their interior decorations. Some of them have wonderful life-size frescoes of Biblical scenes completely covering in many cases the walls and the ceiling of the entire structure. Some of these frescoes date from the thirteenth century and are astonishing in point of accuracy of drawing and coloring. Prof. Carl Sterl, the celebrated painter of Dresden, who was one of our party, went into raptures over the work of these pre-Raphaelite Russian painters. The works themselves are there, but not a single name of their creators has been handed down to posterity, although some old records exist proving their age.

In many respects the town of Jaroslav, like all the cities on the Volga, is at least 100 years behind the times. The paving of the streets, for instance, is wretchedly bad, but then again one is surprised

MR. AND MME. KUSSEWITZKY WITH THEIR GUESTS AND PART OF THE ORCHESTRA ON THE DECK OF THEIR SPECIAL STEAMER ON THE VOLGA.

SERGEI KUSSEWITZKY, THE BRILLIANT CONDUCTOR, WHOSE PRIVATE ORCHESTRA OF SEVENTY-FIVE MEN IS ONE OF THE FINEST IN EUROPE.

KUSSEWITZKY AND HIS ORCHESTRA.

EDUARD RISLER, THE CELEBRATED FRENCH PIANIST, WHO WAS THE PRINCIPAL SOLOIST ON THE VOLGA TOUR, AND WHOSE PLAYING AROUSED GREAT ENTHUSIASM ALONG THE ENTIRE ROUTE.

at the excellent modern buildings. That note so typical of all Russia—contrast—is everywhere apparent. Fortunately the town has an excellent modern hotel, so that we were well cared for until our steamer arrived the following day. I was surprised at the theatre. The accompanying photograph shows its exterior, and the auditorium itself was quite in keeping with this. It is built after the pattern of the theatres in western Europe with a parquet, boxes and three tiers of balconies. It seats about 1,000 people and has fairly good acoustic properties.

It was in this theatre that I first heard Kussewitzky's orchestra, and this was also my first acquaintance with him as a full fledged conductor. I well remember the great ability he displayed at the beginning of his career as an orchestra leader some six years ago, when he gave concerts with the Philharmonic in Berlin, but I was not prepared for the discovery that he had developed during these few years into one of the greatest conductors of our time. What was offered on that evening of April 30 before that naive audience of this far away provincial Russian town would have aroused the public of Berlin, London or New York to a high pitch of enthusiasm. Although the Jaroslav audience could not possibly appreciate such music to the full, it at least made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in experience and judgment, for the brilliant conductor and his band were applauded to the echo.

THE VOLGA AT JAROSLAV, WITH THE LANDING WHERE KUSSEWITZKY AND HIS PARTY EMBARKED FOR THE 2,000 MILE SAIL DOWN THE RIVER.

It is not the purpose of Kussewitzky in his concert tours of the Volga to tickle the musical palates of these provincial Russians by offering them a light and pleasing fare; it is his purpose, rather, to arouse in them a love for the serious side of the musical art. His programs this time were mostly of heavy calibre, but there was a large element of Russian music, which, even when complicated, seems to be intelligible to the Russian provincials. On his first tour of these towns four years ago and also on his second, two years ago, Kussewitzky presented lighter works. This was the program at Jaroslav:

Overture, Easter Festival.....Rimsky-Korsakoff
Second symphony in C minor .....Rachmaninoff
Prelude to Parsifal .....Wagner
Concerto for piano and orchestra in E flat.....Beethoven
Soloist, Eduard Risler, of Paris.
Francesca da Rimini .....Tschaikowsky

This certainly was a program that would have been a credit to any of our foremost European symphony societies. The Rimsky-Korsakoff overture, which is so full of strong Russian national coloring, was given a magnificent performance. It made a powerful appeal and established the genial conductor's contact with his public at the very start. As to the Rachmaninoff symphony, I count it as one of the most impressive performances that I ever heard of any symphony. Kussewitzky, who is an intimate friend of the composer, has an appreciation and understanding of this symphony such as is vouchsafed probably to no other living conductor. It is a most interesting work. Severity and solemnity ar[illegible] prevailing moods of the opening. A beautiful English horn solo dispels the gloom, and then comes a lovely lyric episode, slightly suggestive of Tschaikowsky. Then there is a beautiful theme for the strings, followed by some fine polyphonic writing in the working out; the spirit of gloom that pervades the first movement suggests hidden fires and these flame up to great dramatic intensity in the climax. It is all beautifully written for the strings. The second movement, which takes the place of a scherzo, although it is really too heavy to be called a scherzo, starts with an energetic theme played by the strings, which is answered by the flute. Then comes a lovely clarinet solo and a beautiful second theme by the strings with some clever counterpoint in the horns. Of great interest is a fugue for the

THE CHURCH AT JAROSLAV THAT CONTAINS THE WONDERFUL THIRTEENTH CENTURY FRESCOES.
THE PRINCIPAL BUSINESS STREET OF JAROSLAV.
THE MUNICIPAL THEATRE AT JAROSLAV, WHERE THE KUSSEWITZKY CONCERT WAS GIVEN.
A VIEW OF THE RESIDENTIAL PART OF JAROSLAV, WITH THE VOLGA IN THE BACKGROUND.

strings. The third movement, an adagio, begins with a haunting theme, which is followed by a beautiful long flute solo, after which the whole body of strings repeats the first theme to a charming counterpoint in the horns, a favorite proceeding with Rachmaninoff, it seems. Delightful is a short, complaining duet between the oboe and English horn, which is interrupted by the strings. There is a beautiful, all-pervading sense of melancholy throughout this movement, which ends with a most impressive pianissimo. The finale is a masterly and powerful piece of writing for orchestra. It is stormy and agitated, with strong rhythmic motives; the handling of the woodwinds here is admirable. There are some reminiscences of the themes of the former movements. If Kussewitzky were to present the Rachmaninoff symphony in Berlin or New York as he did at Jaroslav, his everlasting fame as a conductor would be established.

After the brilliant, modern Rachmaninoff symphony, the prelude to "Parsifal" did not seem wholly in place. However, it was beautifully played and well received. Then came a magnificent performance of the "Emperor" concerto by Eduard Risler, the famous Parisian pianist, who was the chief soloist of the Volga tour. Risler played the concerto with wonderful breadth and authority; his conception was big and healthy and his interpretation was inspiring. In point of execution his playing was absolutely flawless, while he produced at all times a big, luscious singing tone. Kussewitzky accompanied him with remarkable fidelity. All in all, it was one of the greatest performances of the many that I have heard of this greatest of all piano concertos. Risler's success was enormous. He was recalled again and again, and the concert could not proceed until he had granted three encores. In the matter of encores Risler revealed an astonishing versatility. Throughout the entire tour from Jaroslav to Astrakhan he never once repeated an encore, and he played from three to four every evening. His repertoire during the tour, by special request of Kussewitzky, embraced only the three Beethoven concertos in C minor, G major and E flat major. He played chiefly the E flat, as it was found to be the most effective. And in this again I was astonished at his versatility as an artist; he never played it twice alike, but revealed each time such freedom and individuality that it seemed more like an improvisation than a repetition of the same work. Risler, like Kussewitzky, has established for himself enduring fame in all of those towns along the Volga where he was heard, and justly so, for he is one of the greatest pianists of our times.

THE PUBLIC GREEN AT JAROSLAV, WITH A TYPICAL GREEK CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE BACKGROUND.

Tschaikowsky's "Francesca da Rimini," with its brilliant coloring and masterful instrumentation, suits Kussewitzky's individuality to perfection. He gave a rousing performance of it and brought the program to a most effective close. It was already midnight, for the concerts did not begin until nine o'clock, but the audience remained en masse, applauding like mad and calling the conductor out again and again. It was a veritable triumph and a most propitious beginning of the notable tour.

That night, as I said before, we stayed at a hotel in Jaroslav, but the next morning we embarked on the magnificent new steamer, Imperator, which Kussewitzky had chartered for the tour. These Volga steamers are modeled, in a way, after the Mississippi steamers, although the paddle wheels are for the most part in the middle of the boat, instead of at the stern. However, we passed a few of the old stern-wheelers, just as one sees them on the Mississippi. The Imperator was a new, clean, spacious steamer with excellent accommodations. The orchestra, numbering seventy-five men, and the numerous people connected with the management of the tour, were quartered in the stern in the second class, while Mr. and Mrs. Kussewitzky with their guests, some ten in number, occupied the first class forward. All told we were more than 100 persons, aside from the officers and crew of the steamer.

The transport of the orchestral instruments from the boat to the concert hall was always a matter of considerable concern, for the transportation facilities in these towns along the Volga are somewhat primitive. It required twelve men to handle Risler's Bechstein grand piano, which was furnished by Andree Dietrichs, the Bechstein representative for Russia. In moving the piano the deck hands always sang at their work, and their themes were found to be very characteristic and interesting. A noted savant has written a book entitled, "Work and Rhythm," in which some of these motives sung by these Volga workmen have been noted down. Aside from the full concert grand, which was used at all the concerts, Dietrichs had also supplied Risler with a parlor grand and an upright, both of which were stationed in the salon of the steamer.

The life itself on the Volga is an interesting and strenuous one, and in my next article I shall have more to say on this subject.

BOSTON OPERA SEASON IN PARIS—A REVIEW.

Now that the first season of opera in Paris under American management has been terminated it may be interesting to give a short general review of it.

The season began on April 25 and ended June 19. There were in all twenty-eight performances divided among eleven different operas, including the one benefit performance of "Boheme" with Melba at the Opera-Comique. The schedule was this:

"L'Amore dei Tre Re" (Montemezzi), two times.
"Un Ballo in Maschera" (Verdi), three times.
"Il Barbiere di Siviglia" (Rossini), two times, and second act in gala.
"Manon Lescaut" (Puccini), three times.
"Die Meistersinger" (Wagner), three times.
"Otello" (Verdi), four times, and second act in gala.
"Pagliacci" (Leoncavallo), two times, and first act in gala.
"Parsifal" (Wagner), four times.
"Tristan und Isolde" (Wagner), three times, and first act in gala.
"Il Segreto di Susanna" (Wolf-Ferrari), three times.
"La Boheme" (Puccini), one time (benefit Opéra-Comique).

The artists who appeared during the season were as follows: Franziska Bender-Schaefer, Emmy Destinn, Louise Edvina, Maria Kousnezoff, Elvira Leveroni, Julia Claussen, Margarete Matzenauer, Nellie Melba, Felice Lyne, Claudia Muzio, Rosina Raisa, Myrna Sharlow, Eleonora de Cisneros, Maggie Teyte, Eva Van der Osten, Lucille Weingartner, Cecil Cunningham, Pasquale Amato, Paul Bender, Francesco Cigada, Peter Cornelius, Guilio Crimi, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, John McCormack, Vanni Marcoux, Lorenzo Fusco, Alban Grand, Giovanni Martinelli, Johannes Sembach, Carel Van Hulst, Johannes Fönss, August Kiess, Jacques Urlus, Vincenzo Tanlongo, Mario Ancona, A. de Segurola. The conductors were: Albert Coates, Roberto Moranzoni, Arthur Nikisch, Etorre Panizza, Egon Pollak, Felix Weingartner.

It may be said with absolute truth that the season was a brilliant artistic success, and the standard of performance on the whole was very high. The most emphatic success, as our Paris office reports, undoubtedly was the "Tristan und Isolde" performance conducted by Nikisch. Then came the "Otello" performance with Mme. Melba. "Ballo in Maschera," the "Barber of Seville" and "Meistersinger" also were excellent and scored legitimate successes. The other productions, so the same source informs us, were not up to the standard set by those already mentioned.

Now to look at the financial side of the matter for a moment. The gentlemen who backed the venture knew very well in advance that it was not going to pay and it did not. We hear all sorts of reports as to the total amount of the deficit and no figures need be mentioned here, for no accurate statement can be obtained. It may be said, however, that the single seat sale averaged throughout better than that in Boston, whereas, on the other hand, the subscriptions were not so large. The Theatre des Champs-Elysées seats 2,000 people. The best sale was for the premiere of "Ballo in Maschera," amounting to about 23,000 francs. The first and second performances of "Otello" were also very well sold, showing that the name of Melba is still one to draw big audiences. The best subscription was that for Saturday evening. The worst house was for the last performance of "Parsifal," though the terrible storm which took place that evening, caving in many Paris streets and causing considerable loss of life undoubtedly operated to prevent many people from attending. A second Paris season for the Boston Opera Company next year is absolutely assured, so says the MUSICAL COURIER representative in that city, and the theatre is already rented and the rent paid. In fact, subscriptions are being solicited for next year. It is claimed that if a sufficiently large subscription list is obtained the season will be run without any deficit, but it is to be doubted very much if it is possible to produce grand opera on the proper scale in Paris, or any other city, without meeting with a deficit. This is a problem which is absolutely unsolved up to the present time. All the European opera houses are subventioned either by the state, by the city, or by some ruling prince. It is reported as regards next season that the repertoire will probably include the Puccini works, and that some new French works will be produced as well, which was not the case this year.

The great question which interests most persons in connection with this season of the Boston Opera Company at Paris just ended is, "Why did it take place?" If it was simply in order to give the French public—or rather the Paris public—an idea of the quality of opera which we have in America it was certainly a most laudable attempt which failed for the simple reason that the French public is perfectly satisfied with the very inferior grade of opera which it has and did not bother to go and see the Boston Opera Company, especially as the prices asked were much higher than those paid at the Opera or the Opera-Comique. "It really made one proud," says H. O. Osgood, "to see how well things were done on the whole at the Theatre des Champs-Elysées in comparison with the French national institutions, not on account of the artists, who were nearly all Europeans, but on account of the stage and business management. As for us Americans here, we all are thankful that we have been able to enjoy this season of excellent opera, and we are not inquiring too closely into the whys or wherefores of the undertaking."

NAME AND FAME.

Making a name and fame for an artist is one of the most difficult propositions a manager has to face. A well known New York manager, who has introduced young artists who have eventually become famous, said that while the task is profitable it entails much mental anguish, and he added: "When an unknown talent comes to me, he generally is, metaphorically speaking, upon his knees; but after I have helped to make him famous, I have to get on my knees."

ROSA NEWMARCH'S VIEWS.

E. P. Dutton & Company publish "The Russian Opera," by Rosa Newmarch, a four hundred page volume of history, narrative and analysis.

Rosa Newmarch has made her name known to the modern English speaking readers of musical literature by her long and earnest exposition of Russia's music and musicians. For nearly twenty years she has studied, lectured upon, and written about the merits of that great northern empire's music, which is only now beginning to be known to the vast general public of the world's concert halls. In this volume on Russian opera she begins with the dawn of music in Russia, devotes a chapter to opera in Russia prior to Glinka, and then takes each of the prominent opera composers in turn—Glinka, Dargomijsky, Serov, Rubinstein, Balakirev, Moussorgsky, Borodin, Cui, Rimsky-Korsakov, Tschaikowsky, Napravnik, Blaramberg, Arensky, Rachmaninov, Grechyaninov, Kalinnikov, Taneiev, Rebikov, Kazachenko, Korestchenko, Kochetov, Stravinsky, and a number of singers and actors with equally barbaric and repellent names.

In our opinion it does not add to the attractiveness of these fierce names to change the customary —off to—ov. But Rosa Newmarch is an enthusiast, and it ever has been the custom of enthusiasts to go to extremes. Fortunately for the renown of Russian music in the English speaking world there is such an enthusiastic champion as Rosa Newmarch to reconcile us to the unattractive names that give such a nightmare appearance to Russian programs. She takes us by the hand and leads us safely past the bristling exterior to the genial interior, and we find that those uncouth and dismaying names are nothing more than the masks such as the Grecian actors wore to hide their human faces. We must express our gratitude to Rosa Newmarch for not losing her sense of perspective and confusing the apparent greatness of a composer near at hand with the magnitude of one who appears small only because he is more remote. She compares and contrasts one Russian operatic composer with another; but we do not find her committing the absurdity of talking about Russian operas and the great instrumental works of Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms in the same breath. No Russian composer has yet scaled the heights where those three deities of music inhale rarefied air of the clouds and mountain-tops.

But in the busy haunts of men, in the camp, and field, in the factory, cottage and prison, these Russian operatic composers have depicted human life with startling force and compelling truth. Much of their work is repellent to the more cultured nations of Europe because of its brutal strength and wild, unbridled passion.

Many rumors have reached our ears from time to time of the high pace at which Russian artists run through their span of life. We should be very sorry to cast a slur on a musician's life; but what is one to think when he reads that Moussorgsky had a "series of terrible nervous attacks," and that he died of paralysis of the heart and spinal marrow on his forty-second birthday? The only conclusion is, that, either he was a diseased physical degenerate, or he was dissipated.

We cannot altogether approve of the photographs of actors in the costumes of certain characters in some of the operas. We feel the same resentment when we open a volume of Shakespeare to find a Bond street or Fifth avenue photograph of Smith or Jones as "Hamlet." But these are personal feelings on our part and in no way detract from the solid merit of the book as an authoritative work of reference on Russian opera. If we are permitted to express our personal feelings, why should not Rosa Newmarch's personal feeling for the singer Shaliapin be sufficient reason that his rugged and physical face should be the first to decorate her book?

The composers of the operas get a portrait now and then. Rubinstein, however, has no picture. Rosa Newmarch says: "It is with a sense of relief that we turn from him with his reactionary views and bigoted adherence to pre-Wagnerian conventions, to that group of enthusiastic and inspired workers," etc.

We are told that "the atmosphere and tone-color which Shaliapin imparts to his singing are of such remarkable quality that one feels his interpretation of Schubert's 'Doppelgänger' must of necessity be a thing of genius, unapproachable by other contemporary singers."

Of course we cannot agree with a judgment that denies a portrait to Rubinstein because he was "a bigot," and puts the uninteresting face of a favorite singer on the first page because he is "a genius," but we by no means resent this display of feminine instinct and predilection for a personal friend.

Femininity in a woman is a delightful quality. At the same time, we believe that the name of Rubinstein in Russian and world music will outlive and long outshine the cognomenation Feodor Ivanovich Shaliapin.

MENDELSSOHN CHOIR TOUR.

According to Musical Canada, the following arrangements now are in contemplation for the European tour of the Mendelssohn choir: The organization will leave Toronto on either April 19 or 20, 1915, and will sail from Boston, giving en route concerts in Boston and Montreal, the dates of which will be arranged later. The party will land at Liverpool and will reach London on Saturday, May 1. There will be a rest until the night of Tuesday, May 4, when the opening concert of the tour is to be given in Queen's Hall, London, under the patronage of their Majesties the King and Queen. On the night of May 5, the choir sings in Liverpool, on May 6 in Manchester, on May 7 in Glasgow, and on Saturday, May 8, afternoon and evening concerts in Edinburgh. Sunday and part of Monday will be spent in this historic Scottish city. On May 10 the choir appears in Leeds and on May 11 in Birmingham. Then follows a return to London, with two more concerts there, a matinee and an evening performance, on May 12 and 13. Altogether, six days are to be spent in the British metropolis. The choir will next cross to Holland, and sing there on the night of May 14. Berlin occupies from the 15th to the 18th, with concerts on the 17th and 18th, which fall on Monday and Tuesday. On the 19th a concert is scheduled for Frankfort. Then the two other concerts will be given in cities to be decided upon later. One of them is likely to be at Wiesbaden. The last concert takes place in Paris, where two or three days will be spent. The choir will return to Toronto June 1. The tour occupies six weeks, with twenty-two days on land, fifteen concerts, and seven days when the choir will not sing.

RIGHT, OH!

On June 15, Paderewski played his piano concerto in London, under Nikisch, and the Pall Mall Gazette, backing up the oft expressed opinion of the Musical Courier, says of the artist's performance:

To be quite candid, we cannot admire the interpretations of the great Polish pianist to the same extent that we have in the past. His tone has become rather hard, his phrasing has lost much of its magic, and even his use of the pedal is not always effective. The cause is easy to find. Mr. Paderewski was normally a pianist of the romantic school who used his instrument in the lyric manner; in this style he made his name. Unfortunately in these latter years he has admired the pianists of the modern school, who treat the piano in an orchestral manner, and in striving to do these he has neglected his own peculiar talents.

WEINGARTNER'S THANKS.

The Musical Courier is in receipt of a letter from Felix Weingartner, which is herewith translated:

To the Musical Courier:

The latest issue of the Musical Courier, which has just been received by me, has afforded me great pleasure. Permit me to extend to you my heartiest thanks for the great interest which you have shown in behalf of my art activity, and in which you have in such a remarkable manner proclaimed such distinguished opinion.

As "Cain and Abel" will be given in Boston next season, I hope to have the pleasure of making your personal acquaintance and beg of you in advance to honor the performance with your presence on that occasion. The production of the opera will take place in January.

With highest esteem, I beg to remain, dear sirs,

Yours,

June 30.

PURITAN AMENITIES.

In a recent letter from the Pacific Coast, William Geppert, editor of the Musical Courier Extra, refers to a class of persons who are opposed to instrumental music in churches. Far be it from us to revile any person's religious convictions, though of course, as musicians, we are in favor of as much good music as possible—except, perhaps, well, let us say, in restaurants, for instance. But as restaurant music is seldom good it may be superfluous on our part to mention it.

Speaking of church music, however, reminds us of an amusing incident that we were told happened in Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto, Canada, about twenty-five years ago. For several seasons the friends and foes of church music had waged a war of wordy argument for and against the introduction of an organ. The old school wanted the precentor and the new school wanted the instrument. In time the modern school triumphed, as it usually does, and the organ was duly installed. On the appointed Sunday when the organ was expected to be heard it stood mute and inglorious in the gallery, to the joy of the foes and the consternation of the friends. On the preceding Saturday night one of the supporters of the ancient and honorable precentor system had climbed into the organ loft and poured a pot of hot and liquid glue into the action. During the night this mess "that sticketh closer than a brother" had hardened into a cement which postponed the first appearance of the organ for two or three weeks.

We need not enter now into the causes which made the Puritans look with suspicion on all instrumental music. It is enough to know that they opposed it, and that their chilling influence is not altogether extinct today in England and America. They had a very high opinion of themselves as the salt of the earth, the Lord's chosen champions. In the memoirs of the life of Colonel Hutchinson, written by his widow Lucy, we continually find the Puritans referred to as the "godly," and all others as the "ungodly."

The Puritans who landed in New England in 1620 were all of the same spirit. The only difference was that those who remained in England contributed to the overthrow of the Stuarts and helped to bring about the revolution of 1688. Those who left old England because it was too ungodly for their exalted company were able to carry their notions of right and wrong to a greater height or depth of absurdity, because in New England they had little or no opposition except from the heathen and savage Indians, who were easily shot.

One of the most interesting and amazing books dealing with the Puritans of New England is the quaint and curious volume of never-to-be-forgotten lore, pompously titled: "Magnalia Christi Americana, or the Ecclesiastical History of New England, from its first planting in the year 1620 unto the year of our Lord, 1698. In seven Books, by the Reverend and Learned Cotton Mather, D. D., F. R. S., and Pastor of the North Church in Boston, New England." This is the work which Washington Irving put into the hands of the superstitious and psalm-singing Ichabod Crane in his "Legend of Sleepy Hollow." In that book, which was published in London in 1702, and reprinted for the first time in America at Hartford, Conn., in 1820, are to be found the Puritan arguments against instrumental music in churches. We quote from the first American edition of 1820, and give the words of the Reverend and Learned Cotton Mather exactly as they stand in the American edition:

I. The instrumental musick used in the old church of Israel, was an institution of God: it was (2 Chron. 29, 25,) the commandment of the Lord by the prophets. And the instruments are called God's instruments, (1 Chron. 16, 42,) and instruments of the Lord, (2 Chron. 7, 6). Now there is not one word of institution in the New Testament, for instrumental musick in the worship of God. And because the holy God rejects all he does not command in his worship, he now therefore in effect says unto us, "I will not hear the melody of thy organs." But, on the other side, the rule given doth abundantly intimate, that no voice is now to be heard in the church, but what is significant and edifying, by signification; which the voice of instruments is not.

II. Tho' instrumental musick were admitted and appointed in the worship of God under the Old Testament, yet we do not find it practised in the synagogue of the Jews, but only in the temple. It thence appears to have been a part of the ceremonial pedagogy, which is now abolished; nor can any say it was a part of moral worship. And, whereas the common usage now hath confined instrumental musick to cathedrals, it seems therein too much to Judaize; which to do is a part of the Anti-Christian apostasy, as well as to Paganize.

III. In our asserting, a matter of the Old Testament, to have been typical, 'tis not needful, that we be always able to particularize any future mysteries of the New Testament therein referred unto; truths which were then of a present consideration, were sometimes represented in the types then used among the people of God, which helps to understand the case of instrumental musick.

IV. Instrumental musick in the worship of God, is but a very late invention and corruption in the church of the New Testament. The writings that go under the name of Justin Martyr deny it and decry it. Chrysostom speaks meanly of it. Even Aquinas himself, about 400 years ago, determines against it, as Jewish and carnal. Bellarmine himself confesses, that it was but late received in the church.

V. If we admit instrumental musick in the worship of God, how can we resist the imposition of all the instruments used among the ancient Jews? yea, dancing as well as playing, and several other Judaic actions? or, how can we decline a whole rabble of church-officers, necessary to be introduced for instrumental musick, whereof our Lord Jesus Christ hath left us, no manner of direction? (Vol. II, page 228.)

We do not profess to know what is taking place in every church today; but in so far as we are able to judge we see no tendency to introduce any of the ancient Jewish instruments into the churches which have adopted those ungodly organs which the Reverend and Learned Cotton Mather condemns as anti-Christian. Nor have we heard of an ecclesiastical tango or a religious hesitation in any church where the demoralizing influence of instrumental music has been felt for generations. What Cotton would say if he heard of the goings on of the Reverend H. R. Haweis we do not know. That well known musical enthusiast and amateur used to illustrate his sermons from time to time by playing bits of unaccompanied violin solos from the pulpit. We have seen and heard him do it, some years ago, when he was one of the sights of London. We forgive the old Puritan for referring to musicians as a "whole rabble of church officers."

Need we point out the weakness of the argument of paragraph I, particularly at the end, where the learned divine simply makes the bald statement that instrumental music is not edifying? It all amounts to an expression of personal feeling. Cotton Mather did not like instrumental music, therefore he brought scriptural texts to prove it was unholy. That school of critics is still in existence.

Why license all music teachers? Many of them have sufficient license now.

CALIFORNIA SAENGERBUND FESTIVAL.

As has been announced previously, the German singing societies of the Pacific coast will hold a festival on July 29, 30, 31 and August 1, 1915. They will contest for the Kaiser Wilhelm cup and the Franz Josef prize, together with many other trophies which are being offered by the local management.

The MUSICAL COURIER has already reproduced the design of the illuminated invitation which has been sent out to the singing societies throughout America, Canada and Europe; and we now learn from Manager L. E. Behymer, of Los Angeles, who is one of the committee and is in New York, that the favorable replies received show that Los Angeles expects to have its hands full to take care of the organizations which have accepted. The committee has raised $50,000 for the entertainment of the musical guests. The new Trinity auditorium and the Shrine auditorium, both of them very large, have been secured for the contests. Mme. Schumann-Heink and Mme. Gadski are among the singers engaged.

Plans have been made by which the entire organization will give one day of music at the San Diego Exposition and another at the Exposition in San Francisco.

FOR BETTER CHURCH HYMNS.

Rev. John Thompson, speaking before the Ministers' Forum at the 55th annual camp meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Chicago, on July 9, said:

The time has come when more attention should be paid to the hymns sung in our churches. We are singing a good many hymns which are nothing more than doggerel. They would be just as good sung backward. Many of them are full of theological untruths. If a preacher preached the heresies sung in many of these hymns he would be rushed to trial and theologically decapitated.

All great religious leaders, such as John Wesley, Martin Luther and others, knew the value of good hymns. They put true religion into their hymns. Our church hymns should be sublime sentiment instead of doggerel. It is time to drop empty sentimentality and return to the gospel in our music.

Rev. Thompson is to be congratulated upon his courage and deserves the strongest praise for his suggestion. Most of the music sung in our churches is unadorned trash and cannot be conducive to elevating the mind. If only good music were sung in places of worship, more people would attend [illegible] that would help to make our nation more musical. Music in our public schools needs reforming also. It is in the churches and schools that the noblest music only should be heard.

MUSICAL SPORTING NOTES.

Jan Kubelik wins a bet. His sixth child was born last week and is a son. The loser of the wager is Howard E. Potter, the New York musical manager.

Beethoven ran in a five horse race at Acqueduct, L. I., last Wednesday and came in fourth.

John McCormack attended the Welsh-Ritchie fight for the lightweight championship in London last week.

The betting is nine to five that the Century Opera Company will not appear in London next season.

PONCHIELLI OPERA TO BE HEARD.

At the famous annual Milan Arena performances, the work to be heard this year is a posthumous unfinished opera by Ponchielli, orchestrated by Arthur Cadore, composer of "Natale," who also completed the fourth act of which Ponchielli had written only one romanza.

CALIFORNIA SAENGERBUND COMMITTEE.

FIRST ROW, LEFT TO RIGHT: JOHN LUCKENBACH, CARL ENTERMANN, JOSEPH BLUNT, CARL RICHTER, MAX SACHA, SIEGFRIED HAGAN, EMIL LESSER. SECOND ROW, LEFT TO RIGHT: CURT BROESEL, ERNST VIERCKE, L. E. BEHYMER, FRANK DORNER, RICHARD BAUER, Q. F. H. LAST, HUGO HOEFER, THEO. BRATTY, THIRD ROW, LEFT TO RIGHT: J. GEREZ, KARL MILLER, ADOLF DUBBER, WALTER F. HAAS.

CHICAGO BREVITIES.

Paragraphs About Summer Activities in the Middle West Metropolis.

Chicago, Ill., July 11, 1914.

Ravinia Park, well styled the Bayreuth of the West, is more popular this year with the music lovers and laymen than ever before. The transportation is even better than in years gone by, and now not only the Chicago Northwestern trains and the Chicago and Milwaukee surface cars stop at the entrance to the park, but even the Northwestern elevated runs express trains through, thus making the trip a most enjoyable one for all concerned.

Chicago boasts of many summer parks, beer gardens such as White City, the Midway Gardens, Riverview, Forest Park, Bismarck Garden, the Rienzi and the Green Mill, but all those places have not the natural beauty that is to be found at Ravinia Park. On the hottest summer day one finds in this lovely summer garden a cool atmosphere, which enables the music lovers to listen, under the most agreeable conditions, to the music furnished by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra conducted by Frederick Stock.

For those who prefer terpsichorean art they may delight in watching the dances performed during the first three weeks by Ruth St. Denis and her associates, and later during the season some special modern dance steppers will demonstrate free of charge the latest tango, maxixe, hesitation, etc. At the other parks the layman can spend his money not only at the refreshment tables, but also at the chutes, coasters, shooting galleries and other amusements.

At Ravinia Park only a restaurant is to be found, the balance of the amusements being given to nature's beautiful summer display. As far as the music is concerned, Ravinia Park management employs the best that money can buy, and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra supplies music so well arranged as to please the taste of every one. Other parks have tried to compete with Ravinia by engaging orchestras where heretofore a band appeared. The new venture will probably not prove successful, however, as patrons of beer gardens prefer the glamour of band music to the soothing music of a symphony orchestra. Ravinia Park has a right to be called the Bayreuth of the West. It stands alone in this part of the country as the summer garden par excellence.

James G. MacDermid's Song Heard in London.

This office acknowledges receipt from London of a program given by Ernest W. Gilchrist at Aeolian Hall on Tuesday, June 9. Glancing over the program this department wondered why it was sent to Chicago when the Musical Courier has an excellent representative in London. After a quick perusal the problem was solved, as Jeanne Jomelli had included in the program "Sacrament," from the pen of the ever popular James G. MacDermid, of Chicago. Mme. Jomelli, who has sung many of Mr. MacDermid's output not only in Europe but in this country as well, has, at least in Chicago, won as much success with the MacDermid songs as with the Debussy, Holbrooke and Respighi numbers, the only other composers inscribed on her London program.

Louise Gartrell Returns to America.

Louise Gartrell, who has just returned to this country after three years of study in Paris with Jean de Reszke and Gabriel Lapierre, and who had the honor of remaining two months at the home of Sbriglia, will be heard next season in Chicago both in concert and recital and probably in oratorio work also.

MacBurney Studio Recital.

The twenty-first program of the third season presented in the MacBurney studio was devoted to an "Evening with Benjamin Whelpley." The large studios were overcrowded and a representative of the Musical Courier was obliged to listen to part of the program from the hallway, as every chair was occupied and every inch of available space was used by the standees in the studio, and the "overflow" contented themselves to listening to Lon Payne, tenor, who, assisted by George L. Clark, cellist, and John Doane, accompanist, furnished the program in the hall.

Thomas N. MacBurney is a serious teacher who does not ask prospective pupils to come to hear him in his studios even though he has demonstrated in public recital on many occasions that he is the possessor of an uncommonly good baritone voice and that he sings with consummate art, but he shows the result of good training through his pupils—the best criterion for others to go by. In Mr. Payne he has a splendid exponent of the MacBurney method. Mr. Payne not only possesses a good tenor voice, which has been well placed and trained, but he sings with great intelligence and his diction is above reproach.

John Doane, who is acting as accompanist coach in the MacBurney studios, gave new proof of his ability as an artistic accompanist, furnishing the soloist with splendid support. The recital was pronounced a huge success and brought new laurels for the studios under whose auspices the affair took place.

Sherwood and Walter Spry Schools to Change Location.

The Walter Spry School of Music, which is located on the sixth floor of the Fine Arts Building, will, in the fall, move into the suite now occupied by the Sherwood School. The Sherwood School will move next door into the Thurber Building, which is owned by the Fine Arts Building Association.

Speaking of the Sherwood School, it is reported that a Sherwood extension school is now being formed all over the country. Prospective teachers, who do not know anything about the Sherwood method, are nevertheless engaged to teach in their own town, the affiliation being effected to bring a percentage of the money received in his or her town from pupils to the Sherwood School. The idea is a good one, but it has worked poorly with other schools who have tried this method. It might meet with success in the case of the Sherwood School, especially that now one of the men formerly employed by a correspondence school has taken charge of the extension department—a field in which he is said to be a past master.

American Conservatory Recitals.

The American Conservatory has arranged a series of five recitals during the summer session at Kimball Hall. The first one was given Friday morning, July 3, by Mrs. Butler's ensemble class. The program consisted of four pieces for four violins and piano by Bohn, suite for two violins and piano by Moszkowski, and the quartet in A minor by Schumann. The remaining four recitals will take place on Wednesday mornings, July 8, 15, 22 and 29. That of Wednesday, July 8, had as soloists Charles La Berge, baritone, and Mabel Woodworth, violinist.

Henriette Weber Popular.

Last week two young New Yorkers called at Henriette Weber's studios and registered for the summer course in her harmony class. Miss Weber's popularity extends from coast to coast, and indeed so seldom do New Yorkers come to Chicago for instruction that such an event is to be recorded.

Kansas City Managers in Chicago.

Myrtle Irene Mitchell, the well known Kansas City manager, visited this office last week. Unfortunately the writer was out, but as Miss Mitchell informed the assistant of this department that she is to remain in Chicago for two months, the acquaintance will again be renewed.

Hanna Butler in Paris.

Herewith is pictured Hanna Butler, soprano, of Chicago, on board the steamer New Amsterdam, on which she sailed for Paris, arriving there on June 19.

Mrs. Butler writes from the French capital that she was so tired when she left New York that she fully decided not to sing a note while on shipboard, but after four days' travel and rest she was persuaded to sing one evening. The result was most gratifying, as one of the professors

HANNA BUTLER EN ROUTE TO PARIS.

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Mrs. STACY WILLIAMS Voice Production :: Repertoire ::
In Europe June 15 to September 15
For information, prospectus, etc., address
Mrs. Williams, 405-406 Kimball Hall - Chicago, Ill

Lucille STEVENSON (TEWKSBURY) SOPRANO
Address: 4438 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
Consisting of
OPERA, LECTURE RECITALS AND MELODRAMES and
THE CHICAGO PIANO QUARTETTE
Henriette Weber, piano; Fritz Itte, violin;
Carl Klammsteiner, cello; A. Van Der Voort, viola.
Specializing in Opera Programs.
Arrangements with Distinguished American Singers as Soloists
FOR TERMS AND DATES ADDRESS MISS H. WEBER
Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill., Phone Harrison 4868-4869

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

MR. and MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
Registration for Summer Term Now Open
Summer Address: 1434 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill. Phone 1105 Evanston

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President
SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rivs-King, Guy Herbert Woodard, Grace Stewart Potter, Mae Julia Riley, Herold von Mickwitz, Frank B. Webster, Eleanor Smith, Ernest O. Todd, Mme. Justine Wegener, Edgar A. Nelson, Edward Dvorak, Adelaide G. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

from Harvard heard Mrs. Butler and engaged her at once to sing for one of the illustrated lectures to be given early in the autumn in the new Harvard Music Hall. A dramatic teacher at a summer school in Washington, D. C., who was on her way to Italy to study, begged Mrs. Butler to allow her to go with her to Paris for a month and study, and another young lady from New York is also going to work with Mrs. Butler.

Fritz W. Itte with Chicago Piano Quartet.

Fritz William Itte, one of the popular first violins of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, scored a decided success in June when he appeared as soloist with the orchestra at Willow Grove, Philadelphia. Mr. Itte will also appear at one of the Ravinia Park concerts.

In addition to his many duties with the orchestra, Mr. Itte, in response to many requests will devote more time to solo appearances next season, and again will be the violinist of the Chicago Piano Quartet in the series of popular "Opera Concerts" to be given at the Art Institute as during the past season. Henriette Weber is also booking the quartet for a limited number of engagements in other cities.

Following are some characteristic press notices of Mr. Itte's playing:

(Translation.)

The fifteenth symphonic concert offered the audience a most agreeable surprise—a violin player by name Fritz Itte. He played Sarasate's "Ziegeunerweisen," and the way he played it produced an undoubted sensation. The writer had the opportunity to hear the "Meister" Sarasate himself in this great composition of his, and can positively assert that Mr. Itte fully mastered this great work and displayed the fascinating power of the composition.

Especially to be admired in his playing is the purity of his tone and the excellently finished technic. In the second part of the work he carried the audience to such a pitch of stormy applause that we may call the appearance of this young artist a triumph, and he positively was forced to repeat the second movement.—Teplitz, Bohemia.

Mr. Itte scored an emphatic success by his masterly performance of the Wieniawski concerto. He produced a tone of wonderful strength and warmth, and his technic was shown in all its perfection.—Minneapolis Tribune.

FRITZ WILLIAM ITTE.

The Vieuxtemps concerto as played by Fritz Itte, the young violinist, was a rare treat. His great technic and fine staccato bowing were shown to great advantage.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat. (Advertisement.)

Luisa Villani En Route to Italy.

Luisa Villani, the well known soprano, sailed today (July 15) for her native Italy on the steamer Moltke by way of Naples and Genoa. She will spend the summer resting and visiting friends. During the months of January and February, 1915, Mme. Villani will be heard at the leading opera house in Turin, where she will sing the role of Fiora, in "L'Amore dei Tre Re," a role which was originally created by her. The audiences at the opera house at Palermo will have the pleasure of listening to Mme. Villani's beautiful voice, for she is engaged to appear there during the months of March and April, 1915. At Palermo she will sing the leading soprano roles in "Tales of Hoffmann" and "Tosca."

THE HIGHEST STANDARD IN MUSICAL EDUCATION IN AMERICA HAS BEEN INAUGURATED BY

The von Ende School of Music

OF NEW YORK CITY

As the Schedule of Work and the Final Tests for Certificates and Diplomas Testify

The von Ende School of Music discourages the turning out of innumerable unprepared students and foisting incapable young professionals upon the public.

The indiscriminate manner in which certificates and diplomas have been issued by all sorts of musical institutions in the past has reduced their value to a minimum. By adhering strictly to the schedule of work and the final tests for certificates and diplomas the von Ende School of Music begs to assure the musical profession and public that no student will receive a certificate or diploma from this institution without meeting the full requirements.

For Further Information and Fall Catalog Address the Secretary, Box 7, 44 W. 85th St. New York City

Mrs. Potter Frissell's Activity.

It was a pleasure to hear in a public function two pupils of Mrs. Potter-Frissell, the sisters Alice and Ethel Glade, whose playing we have often before had occasion to admire in the pupils soirées of their teacher. On this occasion they played at a matinee in the well known Musik-Salon of Professor Roth before a distinguished audience composed of the higher circles of Dresden's society and prominent professional musicians. They performed the fantasie (tableaux) of Rachmaninoff for two pianos. It was admirable how well and harmoniously these two young ladies united in a perfect ensemble. They have a mellow, full, sweet tone, sympathetic musical touch, and their conception was an excellent evidence of their artistic education, personal talent and individuality. We hope to hear more of these young artists this winter. The performance made an excellent impression upon the audience, who listened with marked attention and applauded warmly.—Frau Prof. Gabriele Fuchs, in Dresden Guide and Advertiser.

In the Musik-Salon of Bertrand Roth took place the seventy-eighth performance of contemporary compositions. Frau Milanollo and Mrs. Potter-Frissell played skillfully and with tonal beauty the sonata for piano and violin of Grieg in G in three movements. —Dresdner Nachrichten, March 19, 1906.

Rachmaninoff's fantasie for two pianos was skillfully performed by Frau Kraul-Glade and Ethel Glade; it is noble, effective salon music, and of much originality.—Dresdner Neueste Nachrichten, November 19, 1912.

Last Sunday's performance was extraordinarily well visited. The program was opened by a fantasie for two pianos of Rachmaninoff, played by Frau Kraul-Glade and Ethel Glade. The work of this promising talent was performed with temperament and achieved especially in its second movement, "La Nuit"—"L'Amour," the most lasting success.—Elbtal Abendpost, November 19, 1912.

The 165th performance of contemporaneous compositions in the Musik-Salon of Professor Roth brought some works to a worthy hearing. A fantasie of Rachmaninoff for two pianos was interesting, especially in the third part, "Les Larmes" (Tears), which in its finely felt monotone of "melancholy" was well interpreted by the two pianists, Glade.—Dresdner Volkszeitung, November 19, 1912.

The pianist, Mrs. Potter-Frissell, gave on Thursday in her Musik-Salon a soirée musicale, which was very largely attended. The program was opened by Frau Prof. Witting-Seebass and Mrs. Potter-Frissell with the sonata in D of Mozart for two pianos, which received an excellent rendition, rich in every detail of tonal beauty. As a well known Mozart player, Frau Witting-Seebass won the appreciation of her hearers in a performance full of delicacy and fine feeling, of the seldom heard "Andante favori" of this master. Highly finished artistic enjoyment was given by Professor Scholtz by his execution of two of his own compositions, "Gedenk-Blatt" and "Liebeslied." Frl. Weber, the young alto of our Royal Opera, sang with warmth of tone color and very expressive interpretation three songs of Leland Cossart, who himself accompanied.—Dresdner Journal, June 20, 1914.

In the American Church rooms a recitation and reading of Tennyson's "Enoch Arden" was given by Mrs. Wm. John Watson, the accompanying melodramatic music of Richard Strauss being played by Mrs. Potter-Frissell. The evening was in every way eminently successful, and was attended by a large and appreciative audience. A delightful partnership existed between Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Potter-Frissell, and it was clearly manifest that much thought and care had been expended on the preparation of the masterpiece, and that no effort had been spared to insure an entirely satisfying representation. Mrs. Potter-Frissell commented briefly upon the accompanying music, explaining the leit-motif system upon which it is planned, and her remarks were of the utmost value in following the exquisite music which now has come to be identified almost as an integral part of Tennyson's great work, and which it is hoped may continue to be so regarded in the same way that Mendelssohn's music has become almost inseparable from Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

At the conclusion both ladies were warmly congratulated upon the success of their joint venture.—Dresden Guide and Advertiser, May 2, 1914.

At the afternoon tea at the Frauen Club on Wednesday last an interesting musical program was arranged by Mrs. Potter-Frissell, of which, with one exception, herself and her pupils were the only performers. Mrs. Potter-Frissell is well known in Dresden, where she has for many years been a highly successful teacher of music of the Leschetizky method. She is also known in literary circles as the musical correspondent of the New York MUSICAL COURIER.

The program began and ended by duets played by Mrs. Potter-Frissell and pupils on two pianos, the first a fantasia by Mozart with Josefine Wessel, and the last a Hungarian fantasia by Liszt, in conjunction with Ethel Glade; the former was executed with the precision and delicacy demanded by the old master, and the latter with the spirit and temperament that the theme requires; in both was to be noted that sure and finished technic which is the result of much careful and patient work on the part of both teacher and pupil. Ethel Glade played also a prelude and fugue by Bach and a scherzo by Chopin; in the latter she was especially successful, her delicacy of touch and sympathetic interpretation making her rendering an artistic enjoyment. Elise Ottermann, whose beautiful voice was at its best, sang, accompanied by Dr. Tangel Strik, some lieder, which were much applauded. The concert was well attended by an audience representative of the best class socially and intellectually, who did not fail to testify their appreciation.—Dresden Guide and Advertiser, May 2, 1914.

Sokoloff Engagements.

Manager Johanna Sherrick sends word that Nikolai Sokoloff is being engaged for a number of concerts and recitals during his coming season in America. Among other engagements, he will play at one of the Metropolitan Opera House concerts. Mr. Sokoloff has been spending several winters in Paris, and has been heard a number of times on the Continent and in London. His London press notices show that his art was greatly appreciated. The Times, for instance, speaks of him as "a very fine player, with a technic which is interesting in itself and a feeling for musical beauty which is particularly strong." This is high praise from one of the most conservative of papers. The Daily Express speaks of Mr. Sokoloff as being "an artist who possesses a musical temperament and a refined style." And the Sunday Times also speaks of his "suave tone and refined style."

The praise given this young Russian violinist by the London Daily Chronicle is no less enthusiastic, and that paper, like the others, especially praises his excellent tone and technic, and makes a further mention of his excellent style of interpretation. He seems to have been particularly successful in London with a sonata by Guillaume Lekeu, which, the Daily Chronicle remarks, "is a clever and picturesque work, the music of which somewhat reflects the influence of the composer's teacher, César Franck." And the Chronicle also mentions especially Mr. Sokoloff's poetic feeling in the interpretation of this music. The Chronicle further makes mention of his playing of the Bach sonata in D minor, saying that it was "played with an excellent technical finish and dignity of style."

On the whole, it is safe to say that very few violinists make their bow to London under more propitious circumstances than Mr. Sokoloff, nor do many receive a more favorable reception in that city, where the critics are notoriously hard to please.

Marcella Craft Under Hanson Management.

The Concert Direction M. H. Hanson has arranged to handle the forthcoming concert tour of Marcella Craft, the young American soprano, who has been such a sensational success in the various opera houses of Germany. Miss Craft's tour of her native land will begin in the fall.

Washington, D. C., to Hear Flesch and Slezak.

Carl Flesch and Leo Slezak will be heard in recitals next season in Washington, D. C.

Vera Barstow Down South.

Vera Barstow, the talented young violinist, does not always play her beloved instrument; occasionally she takes the time to engage in other pursuits. In the accompanying pictures she is shown picking violets and comfortably perched on the fence in order that she may "view the landscape o'er" and catch inspiration for her work. These pictures were taken in March at Hartesville, S. C., where she played at Coker College, a school for girls.

Miss Barstow scored a decided success in Pittsburgh, where she was heard at Mrs. Litchfield's chamber music concerts. She will be heard as one of the artists at the twentieth annual musical entertainment for the benefit of the Norfolk Home Missionary Society, at Norfolk, Conn., which will be held on Wednesday evening, July 29. Miss Barstow's principal number will be a duet with Annie Louise David, the well known harpist. This number will be the "Meditation," from "Thais." Miss Barstow and Mrs. David will be accompanying artists also in "Panis Angelicus," by Cesar Franck, and "Agnus Dei," by Bizet, as well as the chorus numbers, consisting of "Sanctus," from the "St. Cecilia" mass, by Gounod, and "Harold Harfager," by Horatio Parker.

Jeanne Gerville-Reache, contralto, and Evan Williams, tenor, are among the well known artists who will also appear on the program.

American Institute Joint Recital.

At the regular weekly recital given by pupils of the American Institute of Applied Music, New York, on Friday afternoon, July 10, Cornelius Estell, of Mr. Sherman's piano class, and Master George Raudenbush, a pupil of Schradieck, the well known violin pedagogue, joined in presenting the following interesting program:

Suite in D minor	D'Albert
Romance	Vieuxtemps
Canzonetta	D'Amhrosio
Ballade	Debussy
Tarantelle	Schumann
Andante from concerto	Mendelssohn
Shadow Dance	MacDowell
Hungarian	MacDowell

Mr. Estell, a very young man, displayed some splendid traits as a pianist of attainments and is possessed with a strong interpretative ability.

Young Raudenbush, who is but fourteen years of age, played especially well in the andante movements of the Mendelssohn concerto. The boy undoubtedly has marked talent and time alone can seal the verdict for his public career.

Tenor Finnegan Suits Brooklyn.

That John Finnegan, the tenor, pleases Brooklyn audiences is evident from the appended comments from two leading papers:

Mr. Finnegan's voice is naturally beautiful. His encores included "I Hear You Calling Me" and "Mother Machree." His programmed songs were "The Snowy Breasted Pearl," "Molly Bawn," "The Minstrel Boy," "Come Back to Erin" and the "La Boheme" aria.—Brooklyn Standard-Union, May 13, 1914.

Mr. Finnegan was in splendid voice. There is no question of Mr. Finnegan's standing among the leading vocalists. He has range, depth, clarity and sweetness; his selections are sung with a full measure of appreciation and with depth of feeling. Mr. Finnegan sang "Che Gelida Manina," from "La Boheme," with charming technic and in spirited fashion. His encores began just here, and he had to respond frequently during the evening.—Brooklyn Citizen, May 13, 1914. (Advertisement.)

Von Ende School Summer Session.

Lawrence Goodman is giving a number of piano recitals at the Von Ende School of Music, New York, this summer, before an audience composed largely of students of the summer course. While not attempting a chronological succession of the composers represented on the programs, the recitals give a very fair illustration of the development of piano music from Bach to Dohnanyi. Mr. Goodman's playing is interesting not only from the point of technical mastery, but especially from that of musicianly interpretation. His playing of the Beethoven minuet, the Brahms rhapsody, the Schumann carnival and the Rachmaninoff prelude in C sharp minor, on his last program, were especially delightful.

Mme. Ohrman Returns to America.

Luella Chilson Ohrman, the soprano, sailed from Bremen, on the steamship Berlin, July 5. Mme. Ohrman has been abroad for several months studying.

VERA BARSTOW RUSTICATING AT HARTSVILLE, S. C.

Work and Play at Merriewold.

Laura Maverick (Mrs. Carl Hahn), the mezzo-contralto, and Carl Hahn, pianist and teacher, are now at their lovely summer home at Merriewold Park, N. Y. Mme. Maverick is resting and, incidentally, is working on her new repertoire, which includes many ultra-modern songs in English, German and French. An idea of what Mr. Hahn is doing may be obtained from a glance at the accompanying picture, taken on the veranda of their home, in which he is shown, with Mme. Maverick, looking over a new composition which he had just completed. The other picture was taken in a path leading to their charming little home.

CARL HAHN AND LAURA MAVERICK HAHN AT THEIR SUMMER HOME IN MERRIEWOLD PARK, N. J.

Both Mme. Maverick and Mr. Hahn are enthusiastic about Merriewold, as may be seen from the following, which is quoted from a letter recently received from Mme. Maverick:

"Merriewold is a most interesting place, being the summer home of many celebrities in the musical as well as literary world. We have many delightful musical evenings during the summer, not to forget dancing, golf, tennis, boating and bathing. It is a privilege to sit under the trees and listen to the first reading of a new play by a well known dramatist, or to have the latest inspiration of one of our composers."

It is indeed a lovely spot and an ideal place in which to catch the fleeting moments of inspiration, as well as to recuperate after a strenuous season.

Albert Borroff to Concertize Again.

Referring to Albert Borroff, who is under the management of Gertrude V. O'Hanlon, the Chicago Evening Post states as follows:

Albert Borroff's career has been a steady development to prominence equaled by few of his colleagues of the Middle West, and a hasty glance of memory over his recitals of the last half dozen years shows plainly that our local bass has builded upon a solid foundation of musical scholarship. This season his success has been especially marked. His interpretation of the two bass parts in Goring Thomas' "Swan and Skylark" and Elgar's "Light of Life," a few evenings ago, were briefly noted in admiring testimony, and his recital of last evening at the Fine Arts Theatre convinced others that Mr. Borroff's mission in life is not only to sing classics well, but to revive the fainted spirit of cheerfulness in art. Here is a basso who is also a humorist with tone.

Mr. Borroff has always chosen programs of worth. His attention to the classical, his rare good luck in finding striking novelties, and his stern refusal of tricky flubdub have distinguished his offerings. So have the gravity and the utter sincerity of his interpretations—until last evening, when that gravity (not the sincerity) modified itself eloquently to suit the mood. Wherefore came rollicking fun with Bell's "Barrack Ballad" and Moss' "Floral Dance," and the rich, unctuous humor of a Scottish ditty. Enunciation of a remarkable clarity assisted not a little.

With each season's recital have come changes. The range has broadened until he might style himself a "bass-baritone" were he possessed of a hyphen demon. Dynamic variation has a rich significance for him, and niceties of tone color have enriched the voice. There is gratitude also in recollection of breezy and musical humor in the last group of English songs. These perceptions are granted a singer too rarely, and to a basso especially rarely. But the whole matter comes back to the original comment—the sterling worth of Mr. Borroff's study, and the enduring power scholarship gives.

(Advertisement.)

Kern Will Return to Germany.

Prof. F. A. Kern, the musical director, who has been with the Belleville Liederkranz, of Belleville, Ill., for the past five years, has resigned his position and will return to his home and family in Germany for permanent residence.

Music of Nature.

Suburbs—It is simply great to wake up in the morning and hear the leaves whispering outside of your window.

Cityman—It is all right to hear the leaves whisper, but I never could stand hearing the grass mown.—Exchange.

Myrtle ELVYN

RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE

Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915

Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago

KIMBALL PIANO USED

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Helen and Constance Hulsmann, both known as young pianists of unusual merit, are studying voice this summer with Adelaide Gescheidt.

The annual commencement of Norwich (N. Y.) High School, June 23, had several musical numbers of importance on the program, under the direction of Sophia Tefft. Of the music and this department, the Norwich Sun stated as follows the next day:

Noteworthy addition to the program was the instrumental music by the pupils of Sophia Tefft, in charge of this department in Norwich High School. An innovation was the playing of the processional march by Mrs. Tefft's pupil, Lloyd Winnell, who has a good firm touch and marked rhythm. The following trio, Clark's "Torchlight March," played on the piano by Esther Murphy, Dorothy Miner and Lloyd Winnell, was one of the best numbers of the evening. It was marked by incisive march time and variety of expression.

Bessie Fairchild made a very good showing in the difficult "Heroic Polonaise," by Liszt. She has a well developed technic, and is evidently a hard worker and of ambitious musical nature. All the music did great credit to Mrs. Tefft and was received with applause.

Jennie Margaret Hawley's pupils gave a recital in Bridgeport, Conn. Florence Klein Bishop, soprano, assisted.

Mary Louise Peck, another Bridgeport (Conn.) teacher, gave pupils' recitals recently. Lena Mason Barnsley assisted.

Florence A. Wells gave an evening devoted to Indian music at her Lewiston (Me.) studio. Works of Cadman, Lieurance and Loomis comprised the program.

Gertrude B. Howland's pupils gave a recital in Chester, Pa., recently.

Milwaukee's Park Band of fifty-two members, Hugo Bach, director, assisted by the grand opera singers, Louis la Valle, Florence Hensel, Ole Holm and Charlotte Puge, gave a concert in Lake Park, of that city, last week.

The twenty-second recital at the Joliet Conservatory of Music, Joliet, Ill., during the month of June, was given by the older pupils of Rosetta Korzilius Adams, assisted by pupils of Clara Mae McCloud and Mary Shepherd.

Meadville, Pa., has a Moose Band.

Thirteen of Ethel Davidson's pupils appeared in a piano recital in Canton, Ohio.

Frances J. Kortheuer's Canton (Ohio) pupils were presented in a recent recital.

Pupils of Sarah Lavin, Canton, Ohio, gave a musicale recently.

On the occasion of the grand annual powwow at White Earth, Minn., Clarence Beauleau arranged for a concert to be given by Otto Meyer, violinist, and Marie Ten Broeck, pianist. Mr. Beauleau is an Indian violinist who studies with Mr. Meyer.

McKeesport (Pa.) pupils of Morris Stephens gave a vocal recital in High School Hall, McKeesport, the middle of June.

Winifred L. Pincott presented fifteen piano pupils in recital, Buffalo, N. Y.

Marvin Grodzinsky is devoting two days a week to Buffalo (N. Y.) piano pupils, and half a day to East Aurora (N. Y.) pupils, during the summer.

Harry Clyde Brooks' pupils gave a vocal recital at the Auditorium, Painesville, Ohio, recently.

May Anderson Trestrail has joined the Canadian Academy of Music, Toronto. She will give instruction in elocution and dramatic art in all its branches.

Edna Dunham, soprano; Elsie Baker, contralto; George Carré, tenor; Frederick Wheeler, bass, and Blanche Barbot, pianist, are the oratorio artists booked for the fourth day of Redpath Chautauqua, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Seven of Herbert Oswald Malloy's advanced pupils appeared in a Bach-Schumann-Chopin recital program, the twelfth recital given by Malloy pupils since September last, at his studio, Seattle, Wash., on a recent afternoon.

Archibald T. Davison, organist and choirmaster at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., has been reappointed and made instructor of music without limit of time, by the university directors. It was Mr. Davison who inaugurated the morning organ recitals in Appleton Chapel during the examination periods, which drew unusual numbers of students to chapel. This is practically an assurance of the position for life.

Ruth Mann has been engaged by Marx E. Oberndorfer, of Chicago, as his assistant teacher in his Chicago studio in the Fine Arts Building.

At the Johannesburg, South Africa, Musical Society's monthly concert in June, O. Elias, violinist; Ethel Wardle, pianist; R. Kofsky, violoncellist; Mrs. W. Dalrymple, soprano, and Mr. Wilcox, tenor, furnished a program consisting of compositions by Dvorák, Landon Ronald, Luzzi, Boëlmann, Schubert, Gounod, Massenet, Schumann and Popper.

Among those who were successful in the yearly examinations of McGill Conservatorium of Music, Montreal, Can., were the following pupils of J. Q. Borland: Alice Smith, St. Johns; Beatrice Pugh, Irene Chapman, St. Johns; Ruthie Saur, Mary Bracken, Edna Boon, Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Burr presented a number of their pupils in song recitals in Sibley Hall, Rochester, N. Y.

Students at the Rochester, N. Y., Conservatory of Music gave a program made up of works by Chopin, Nevin, Godard, Mozart, Schytte, Henselt, MacDowell, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Schutt, Beethoven and Liszt recently.

At the Concerto Society's last concert of the season, at Johannesburg, South Africa, a string quartet (M. Wilder, E. Locwenherz, S. Finger and S. Rosenberg), J. van Lier and Mrs. Colbeck, vocalists, and Mrs. R. A. Lehfeldt furnished Beethoven, César Franck, Von Fielitz and Tschaikowsky numbers.

The "Edelweiss" male chorus, under the direction of Josef Moser, sang at the German Benevolent Society concert in Trinity Hall, Winnipeg, Can. Mrs. Herber-Mayer, A. Mayer, George Lehr, bass; Freda Simonson, pianist; Milan Sokoloff, pianist; Edwina Higginson, violoncellist, appeared on the same program.

The Durban, South Africa, Musical Association gave a concert in the Town Hall, in which the following participated: Bertha Feinhols, pianist; an orchestra directed by John Obdam; Myrtle Borland, soprano; Richard Walker, baritone; Clifford Foster, violoncellist, and Mr. Proudman, conductor of the concert.

A first chamber music concert was held in the Municipal Art Gallery, Durban, South Africa, the artists being Mrs. Wallis Short, solo pianist; Florence Perry, vocalist; and L. Mancini's string quartet, consisting of Mr. Mancini, violin; Mrs. Proudman, 2d violin; C. C. Proctor, viola; and Mr. Brandt, violoncellist, with Mrs. Short at the piano.

A violin and piano recital was given by Mr. and Mrs. William Wrigley, at Bedford, Ohio, the occasion being patroness night of the Bedford Ladies' Musical Club. Their program included the Beethoven "Kreutzer" sonata and other numbers by German and French composers.

A program of numbers by Beethoven, Rachmaninoff, Liszt, Weber, Schubert, Smith and others was given by the advanced pupils of Frederick A. Williams, Cleveland, Ohio. Names appearing upon the program were Mrs. G. W. Osborn, Madeleine Hoff, Ruth Hunter, Wilma Steffen, Florence Egger and Etta Mullings.

A program was given at the residence of Mrs. John Pascal Sawyer, Cleveland, Ohio, for about sixty guests. Mrs. J. F. Kemmerling and Walter Logan were the artists secured for the occasion. A Grieg sonata for piano and violin, and groups of shorter numbers made up the program. Mr. Logan played as an encore a "Romance" of his own.

Mary C. Fairchild's annual pupils' musicale was held in Stratford, Conn., in June.

The students' recital given by Imogen Harding Brodie at the Masonic Temple Auditorium, Portland, Ore., was participated in by Mrs. Henry W. Metzzer and Margaret Haussman, sopranos; Mrs. Russel G. Hammond, mezzo-soprano; Mrs. Bardi G. Skulason and Mamie Mullan, contraltos, and William R. Boone, piano accompanist.

Helen Reader, contralto; Ernest Crosby, tenor, and Florence Westengard, pianist, were presented in recital by Robert Boice Carson at Portland, Ore. Mis Reader rendered numbers from Hahn, Martini, Paisiello, Coleridge Taylor, Cadman, Ronald and other composers. Mr. Crosby sang songs by Coates, MacDermid and Tate. Miss Westengard was heard in compositions by Schubert and Mendelssohn.

The Portland, Ore., Senior Music Study Club, under the direction of Lena W. Chambers, closed the year's work with a piano recital at 646 East Ash street. The personnel was: Miss O'Keane, Miss Markell, Marcella Catto, Katherine Neill, Jennette McLaren, Mildred Woodruff, Ruth Ralston, Margaret Mansfield, Gladys Holgate, Margaret Cook, Franklin Fowler and Stanley Mansfield.

Selections from works of Balfe, Puccini, Jacobowski, DeKoven, Leoncavallo and Sullivan made up the program at the annual concert of the Troy (N. Y.) Madrigal Society, S. Grahame Nobbes, musical director. Edmund D. Northup, Mrs. William T. Lawrence, Thomas E. Dunham, Kalin Hager, John E. Tashjian and Belmont Magil were assigned the principal solos.

Susan Tompkins Medrow, violinist, of Rochester, N. Y., has been selected by John Philip Sousa to accompany his band on its summer tour.

Two vocal numbers were contributed by Kathryn Ensey and Howard M. Black on "Ladies' Night" at the monthly dinner of the Portland Association of Credit Men, held at the Multnomah Hotel, Portland, Ore. The glee club of the association made its first appearance with Victor Herbert's "Dreaming," "Mandalay" and "Clover Blossoms." Mrs. Edward Drake furnished the piano accompaniments.

Henri Scott, basso of the Philadelphia-Chicago Opera Company; Paul Volkmann, tenor; Gertrude Hutchinson, of Boston; Marie Nassau, Helen McNamee Bentz, Kathryn McGinley, Edna Harwood Baugher, sopranos; Marie Langstone List and Mabelle Addison, contraltos; Frank M. Conly and Franklin L. Wood, bassos, are among the list of singers who appear with Wassili Leps and his symphony orchestra during a two wecks' engagement at Willow Grove, Pa.

Lillian Story's music class gave an afternoon recital in the Woman's Club rooms, San Angelo, Tex.

Louis Gomberg, of Duluth, Minn., a seven year old pianist, gave a recital in St. Paul, Minn., at the studio of Mrs. Gardner Moore.

Negotiations are said to be pending whereby the city council is trying to obtain the Bellini house at Catania, Sicily, now occupied by a tailor. The council is also endeavoring to buy from the Astor family a number of Bellini relics to serve as nucleus for a Bellini museum.

Tandy MacKenzie, the Hawaiian tenor, uses the ukalele, the Hawaiian instrument, for playing his accompaniments.

Four hundred convicts in Maidstone prison, London, England, were given a concert by the Maidstone Choral Union Competitive Choir, F. Wilson Parish, director, recently.

Elizabeth Treen Hosmer, directress of St. Cecilia School of Music, Central square, Lynn, Mass., is spending the summer in Europe.

G. Valdemar Olsen's pupils gave a program of orchestral, violin and piano numbers in Presser Hall, Philadelphia, recently.

Late June recitals at Chester, Pa., included one by pupils of Bessie Hawthorne's class and one conducted by the members of the Clara D. Innis School of Music. Harriet Kelly and Louis Rosenberg assisted at the latter.

Joseph K. Dustin's pupils' piano recital occurred in Gloucester, Mass., recently.

Adele Lewing sailed on July 4 for Europe, with her daughter Senta. She will return to New York the end of September. Mme. Lewing composed a series of children's songs for Kitty Cheatham recently.

THUEL BURNHAM PIANIST
American Tour November to April 1914-15

"Unchained a veritable furore of enthusiasm."
—Gil Blas, Paris

"He is an artist of the kind one would hear often with the greatest pleasure."
—Comoedia, Paris

Management:
Harry Culbertson - - Fine Arts Building, Chicago
STEINWAY PIANO USED

The Great Demand For
Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
For Recital and Concert
is shown by the fact that over fifty per cent of her entire season of 1914-1915 is now booked. For the remaining dates early application should be made to her sole managers
FOSTER & DAVID
500 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK CITY

RICHARD STRAUSS CONDUCTS LONDON QUEEN'S HALL ORCHESTRA.

Distinguished Composer Wins Warm Approval of English Audience by His Baton Mastery—Opera at Covent Garden and Drury Lane—Tetrazzini Sings with London Symphony Orchestra Under Nikisch—Amato Soloist with Same Orchestra—Thibaud, Alma Gluck, Zimbalist and Max Pauer Among Noted Artists Heard of Late.

5 Portland Place, W.,
London, England, June 26, 1914.

Among the many interesting musical events of the week was the Strauss concert given at Queen's Hall, June 26, when, under the baton of the famous musician—Richard Strauss—who conducted in person, the following program was given:

Tone poem, Don Juan ..... Richard Strauss
Cavatina, Heilige Quelle reiner Triebe (Figaro's Hochzeit). Mozart
Symphony No. 40, in G minor ..... Mozart
Tone poem, Tod und Verklärung ..... Richard Strauss
Songs with orchestra, Morgen, Wiegenlied, Cäcilie, Richard Strauss
Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks ..... Richard Strauss

Elena Gerhardt was the soloist in the group of Strauss songs. As an interpreter of his own works Richard Strauss stands preeminent among contemporary composer-conductors. It is hardly necessary to go into detailed analyses of his readings of the four works heard at the concert June 26, suffice it to say that he presented them one and all with all the art of the accomplished conductor who knows what he wants to say and how to say it—not the easiest thing in the world to do, though sometimes found to be the most difficult, by conductors of their own works, particularly the how to say it part. But from the opening measures of the "Don Juan"—measures eloquent in their expression of ardor and exultation; through the lovely G minor symphony by Mozart, Richard Strauss invariably conducts con amore; and again in his own tone poems "Tod und Verklärung" and "Till Eulenspiegel," there were ever dominated in his readings the poetic thought, the dramatic sense and the intense musical feeling.

Richard Strauss is the personification of vitality, and conducts with an energy of spirit that is tremendous in effect, though the conservation of physical means used in the obtaining of the desired end is no less remarkable. He possesses all the repose and dignity that invariably accompany great strength, and he brings the atmosphere of the great man; in all he does there is always present the concomitant of the great, towering intellectual musician.

A PICTURE OF FLORIZEL VON REUTER TAKEN IN THE ORIENT.

Richard Strauss and the Queen's Hall Orchestra.

"No one musical organization can claim to be more than the fly on the wheel in the onward career of a great musician like Richard Strauss," to quote from some remarks by Robert Newmann, manager of the Queen's Hall

SCHLOSS WIESENBURG I. MARK,

Where Florizel von Reuter and his mother are visiting for a few weeks as the guests of Her Excellency the Countess of Fierstenstein. The castle is situated in some 25,000 acres of forest land, and though part of the castle was built in the tenth century, it has been kept in perfect order, as its picture proves.

Orchestra, "but his reappearance after an interval of four years as conductor of the Queen's Hall Orchestra, inevitably recalls other famous visits when several of his most important symphonic works were produced for the first time in England by this orchestra. Foremost among these was the performance of 'Heldenleben,' on December 6, 1902, conducted by the composer, the solo violinist being Herr Zimmermann, of Amsterdam. It was repeated on New Year's Day, 1903, under the direction of Sir (then Mr.) Henry J. Wood, with Prof. Carl Halir as the soloist. A third performance took place 'by request' on March 28 of the same year. To the Queen's Hall Orchestra belongs also the credit of producing the 'Domestic' symphony for the first time in England. On February 25, 1905, the work was conducted by Sir Henry J. Wood; but on April 1 following the public was given an opportunity of hearing the symphony interpreted by the composer himself. April 9, 1910. Dr. Strauss conducted the Queen's Hall Orchestra in a memorable performance of Mozart's 'Jupiter' symphony and of his own symphonic poems, 'Don Juan' and 'Tod und Verklärung.' Other outstanding performances of Richard Strauss's works, under Sir Henry J. Wood, were the 'Don Quixote' variations given both with Herr Becker and with Pablo Casals as soloists; and the very fine rendering of 'Thus Spake Zarathustra,' heard at the London Musical Festival, May 28, 1911. On this occasion Aino Ackté gave a wonderful concert performance of the closing scene from 'Salome,' preceded by the orchestra's playing of the 'Dance of the Seven Veils.' All of these occasions have been red letter days in the annals of the Queen's Hall Orchestra, and it is only natural that the Strauss concert June 26, given by the orchestra to celebrate his return to their midst, should have taken on a certain festival proportion."

London Symphony Orchestra.

The twelfth and last concert in this, the tenth, series of symphony concerts by the London Symphony Orchestra was conducted by Arthur Nikisch. The program was constructed of the Weber "Euryanthe" overture, the Handel G minor concerto, Richard Strauss' symphony poem "Don Juan" and the Brahms No. 1, C minor symphony. For the eleventh series of annual concerts by the London Symphony Orchestra the directors announce the engagements of the following conductors:

Monday, October 26, 1914, at 8 p. m. Conductor, Fritz Steinbach.
Monday, November 9, 1914, at 8 p. m. Conductor, Wassili Safonoff.
Monday, November 23, 1914, at 8 p. m. Conductor, Fritz Steinbach.
Monday, December 7, 1914, at 8 p. m. Conductor, Henri Verbrugghen.
Monday, January 25, 1915, at 8 p. m. Conductor, Emil Mlynarski.
Monday, February 8, 1915, 8 p. m. Conductor, Fritz Steinbach.
Monday, March 22, 1915, at 8 p m. Conductor, Wassili Safonoff.
Monday, April 12, 1915, at 8 p. m. Conductor, Fritz Steinbach.
Monday, May 10, 1915, at 8 p. m. Conductor, Fritz Steinbach.
Monday, May 17, 1915, at 8 p. m. Conductor, Arthur Nikisch.
Monday, May 31, 1915, at 8 p. m. Conductor, Arthur Nikisch.
Monday, June 7, 1915, at 8 p. m. Conductor, Arthur Nikisch.

London Opera.

A graceful and delightful performance of Debussy's "Pelléas et Mélisande" was given at Covent Garden, June 24, which was the first performance this season. The cast was well chosen and brought forward Louise Edvina as Mélisande; M. Maguenat as Pelléas and Hector Dufranne as Golaud. The Mélisande of Mme. Edvina is a very beautifully conceived impersonation. She lost none of the poetry of the role as created by its author, Maurice Maeterlinck, but rather enhanced this, its strong note, by the infusion of her own delightful personality.

The atmosphere of mystery in which the character of Mélisande is cast, Mme. Edvina suggested with unfailing grace; and her every pose, gesture and movement were eloquent with unfailing charm and expressive refinement. Never once did she lose control of the elusive mood of the dreamlike, pathetic and poetic character of the study, and the music she sang with equal distinction. Mélisande is one of Mme. Edvina's finest roles.

The opera was conducted by Signor Polacco with tact and discretion, and he kept his forces together in his usual masterly manner.

At Drury Lane.

Richard Strauss' "La Legende de Joseph" was given for the first time in England, June 23. As the work was fully reviewed in the Musical Courier on the occasion of its recent Paris première, nothing more need be said of it. Other new works that have been staged at Drury Lane include "Coq d'Or," "Nuit de Mai" and Joseph Holbrooke's

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N.W

OSTROVSKY INSTITUTE OF HAND DEVELOPMENT
The Ostrovsky Method solves the problems of technique and manual flexibility for violinists, pianists and 'cellists. It develops manual elasticity, stretch, speed, looseness, suppleness, strength and resistance by means of the Ostrovsky Apparatus and Appliances. It shortens the hours of techical practice, lessens the drudgery and makes progress under any method certain and rapid. For terms and circulars also the illustrated booklet, "Technique and Hand Development" by H. Ostrovsky, nine pence post free. Address Secretary OSTROVSKY MUSICIANS' HAND DEVELOPMENT CO., Ltd., 50 Leinster Gardens, London, W. Chicago Branch, Steinway Hall, 513-514, 64 E. Van Buren Street.

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
BECHSTEIN HALL STUDIOS, LONDON
Private address, 40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

"Dylan," which latter work will be given for the first time tomorrow evening, in English and with an all English cast, among which are the following named artists: Doris Woodall, Edmund Burke, Robert Radford, Frederick Austin, Robert Maitland, Robert Ranolow and Frank Mullings.

Tetrazzini-Nikisch Concert.

At Albert Hall, June 30, Luisa Tetrazzini was heard in concert with the London Symphony Orchestra under Arthur Nikisch. Mme. Tetrazzini sang as only she can sing such well known numbers as "Caro Nome," the polonaise from "Mignon," the "Voi che Sapete," and the little known "La Canzon quest è ch'ogni," from Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord." Mme. Tetrazzini was in particularly excellent form and was repeatedly recalled, adding several extra numbers to those already programed.

The orchestra was heard to excellent advantage and came in for a major share of the applause.

Camilieri-Amato Concert.

At the second orchestral concert given by Signor Camilieri and the London Symphony Orchestra, the soloist was Pasquale Amato, the distinguished baritone, who contributed two numbers to the program, namely, the prologue from "Pagliacci" and the "Largo el factotum" from the "Barbiere." After his first number he received a veritable oration from his audience. Rarely is an English audience so demonstrative as it was on this occasion, and again when the selection from the "Barbiere" was finished, which latter the singer was compelled to give it over again. It was a great triumph for Signor Amato and one justly deserved.

An interesting orchestral program was given by the orchestra, among the numbers heard being the Beethoven fifth symphony, the Weber "Euryanthe" overture, and, as stated in a little note, "by general request," a repetition of the overture on three Greek popular themes by Glazounow, all of which were presented with taste and good musical feeling.

Thibaud's Second Concert.

At Bechstein Hall, June 24, Jacques Thibaud, assisted by Georges de Lausnay, pianist, gave his second recital. The opening number of the program was the Beethoven sonata in F major, op. 24, for piano and violin. Needless to record, great delicacy marked its entire conception and delineation, as was well expressed in the playing of both artists. As an unaccompanied solo number, M. Thibaud played the Bach grave and fugue in A minor, in which selection his distinction of style and fine technical command brought out the full musical value of the work in a most interesting manner. Some well chosen piano solos by M. de Lausnay followed, and then the violinist gave the beautiful Chausson poem. This composition found a most sympathetic interpreter in M. Thibaud, who presented it with deep musical feeling and exquisite taste.

Some three miscellaneous numbers played by M. Thibaud brought the afternoon's work to a close, and many expressions of regret were heard that this was the artist's last concert of the season.

A Slavonic Concert.

The last in the series of three orchestral concerts given at Queen's Hall this season by Emil Mlynarski occurred June 24, when Paul Kochanski was the soloist and the composers represented on the program were Stojowski, Tschaikowsky, Borodin, Szymanowski, Stratkowski and Dvorak. The first named composer's suite in E flat opened the concert and proved to be a very delightful, though perhaps a more entertaining than thoughtful composition, but one very characteristic from a national point of view. It is constructed of théme varie, intermède polonaise and Rêverie et cracovienne. The latter movement has a splendid "go" and the opening theme is quite lovely. Mr. Kochanski was heard in the Tschaikowsky concerto, which he played with great brilliancy. There is no questioning his talent, he is a very gifted violinist, and more must be heard of him in the future. His tone is of exceptionally attractive timbre, mellow in quality and produced in sustained passages with a strong, steady bow. He invests all his playing with a certain distinction of style, which was noticeable, in particular, in the group A and B, played later in the evening with Hamilton Harty at the piano. These two numbers were romance by Szymanowski and Polish dance by Stratkowski.

HELEN BLAIN, THE SCOTTISH CONTRALTO.

Mr. Kochanski was enthusiastically received by his audience, in fact he received quite an ovation. Emil Mlynarski has succeeded in establishing himself among the recognized conductors of the day and invariably succeeds in interesting his audiences. He gave a delightful reading of Dvorak's "New World" symphony, a reading voicing all the romance of the work and one that kept well within the bounds of a certain grateful dignity of utterance. This last of the Slavonic concerts was a thoroughly interesting program of Slavonic music.

Alma Gluck and Efrem Zimbalist.

At her first song recital this season, given at Queen's Hall, June 20, Alma Gluck sang four groups of songs, some twenty-one numbers in all, accompanied at the piano by

THE SUBURBAN RETREAT OF T. ARTHUR RUSSELL, THE LONDON IMPRESARIO.

Efrem Zimbalist. Miss Gluck's first group was made up of four lovely songs, namely, "O Serpina Penserete," from "La Serva Padrona," by Pergolesi; two numbers by Handel, "Lusinghe piu Care" and "Oh! Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?"; and "Fingo per mio Diletto," arranged by Pauline Viardot. In these old Italian songs, for the Handel songs are as essentially Italian as the Pergolesi, Miss Gluck reached a very high degree of perfection vocally as well as in style and delivery. The timbre of her voice and its lyric quality are essentially adapted to the graceful and appropriate delivery of the old Italian school of song with its many phrases of sustained effects as well as demands for the lyric and coloratura.

In her second group Miss Gluck sang in a very finished manner "Du bist die Ruh," by Schubert; "Der Sandman," by Schumann, and "Feldeinsamkeit," by Brahms. Her diction is clear and distinct, and she has good [illegible] the character of the above mentioned examples [illegible] lieder. A very attractive song was Zimbalist's "Peasant Song," which had to be repeated. It formed the first number of the third group, among which group of six songs were three by Charpentier, viz., "Les trois Sorcières," "Prière" and "Les Chevaux de Vois." These were given with naive grace and charm. A miscellaneous group was the fourth, among which number of five songs was Sinding's "Sylvelin," a lovely and vocal number, delivered with much effect and good style.

At her second concert the following week, at the same hall, Miss Gluck was assisted by Efrem Zimbalist as solo violinist and Charlton Keith, accompanist. And in the opening number of the program, the violin concerto in A minor, by Vivaldi-Nachez, both piano and organ were utilized for the accompaniments, F. B. Kiddle acting as organist. After a group of songs by Mahler and Strauss, which formed the second number of the program's arrangement, Zimbalist played the Bach "Chaconne." This wonderful solo for unaccompanied violin brought out all the beautiful smoothness of Zimbalist's bowing, always a marked feature of his playing. He gave an exceptionally refined reading of the work, as well as one that never failed of interest. Later he played, among other numbers, the Paganini "Herentanz," with great brio and skill in his mastery of its great difficulties, and, as a pleasing contrast, the lovely Chopin nocturne arranged by Sarasate. He has a charm and individuality wholly his own and he was received with enthusiasm by his audience.

Miss Gluck sang once again the "Peasant Song" by Zimbalist as a request number, and it made the same appeal as on its first being sung by her, and, as before, had to be repeated. Some French songs were exceptionally well sung by Miss Gluck, the Chanson "Les Papillons" and Ravel's "Tout gai" calling for special mention. Both artists were repeatedly recalled after their various numbers and Miss Gluck was presented with a number of lovely bouquets.

A Recital for Students.

Devoting an extra recital to the interests of students, a recital that owing to the great success of his three previous recitals he was persuaded by his manager to give at

CONSIDER THE

Krakauer Piano

Made for almost fifty years; used in over 1,000 musical conservatories and public institutions, as well as by thousands of music teachers and musicians.

A beautiful art catalogue, showing the styles of the Krakauer pianos, will be sent upon request.

KRAKAUER BROS., 195 Cypress Ave., NEW YORK

ADA SODER-HUECK

THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Metbod taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryan

MME. MARIE RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

Mme. GUERCIAS
OPERATIC SOPRANO
Spanish, Russian, French, German, Italian
AT PRESENT IN EUROPE
SEASON 1914-1915 IN AMERICA

HARRISON WALL JOHNSON
CONCERT PIANIST
Minneapolis

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist

ALBERT SPALDING

Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST
Steinway Piano

popular prices. Max Pauer constructed his program of a most interesting list of compositions, compositions all popular in the repertory of the well schooled piano student. It is hardly necessary to go into detail concerning each number listed, but it will interest no doubt to reproduce the program in its arrangement as presented by Mr. Pauer. It was as follows:

Pastorale	Scarlatti-Tausig
Capriccioso	Scarlatti-Tausig
Sonata, op. 27, No. 2 (Moonlight)	Beethoven
Rondo Capriccioso	Mendelssohn
Papillons	Schumann
Toccata	Schumann
Ballade, G minor	Chopin
Prelude, F sharp major	Chopin
Valse, A flat	Chopin
Capriccioso, B minor, op. 76	Brahms
Intermezzo, A major, op. 118	Brahms
Scherzo, E flat minor	Brahms
Invitation to the Waltz	Weber-Tausig

And as a last encore number the pianist played the Mendelssohn "Spinning Song" in a manner truly astonishing in its perfection. Veritably, magic song it was, its fairylike swiftness no sooner come than gone, its mood of the most delicate lightness, grace and charm suggesting a kind of exquisite after glow, following as it did in its delicate gradation of nuance, the splendidly performed listed numbers which had ranged through every variety of tonal coloring. It was a concert that in its entirety was worthy of every serious student's attention.

The Promenade Concerts.

For the twentieth season of the Queen's Hall Promenade Concerts sixty vocalists and fifty solo instrumentalists have been engaged. Of the fifty vocalists, thirty-four will make their first appearance at these concerts, and of the instrumentalists twenty-four. The names of these young artists are as follows:

Vocalists—Juanita Aitken, Mariska Aldrich, Elna de Prado, Mary Fielding, Florence Fleming, May Huxley, Rosetta Key, Florence Ludwig, Elsa Oswald, Madeline M. Rickwood, Sybil Vane, Evelyn Althaus, Lillie D. Chipp, Viola Damory, R. Le Dain de Kerolyr, Ida Drummond, M. Hayward-Webb, Doris Manuelle, Marie Vulliemoz, Wilfrid Abor, Sydney Coltham, Ben Morgan, Norman Allin, Paul Draper, Darrell Fancourt, Joseph Farrington, Dawson Freer, Fraser Gange, Vivian Gosnell, Herbert Langley, Samuel Mann, Allen Reid, Allen Turner, Hess van der Wyk.

Instrumentalists—Edith Abraham, Leila Doubleday, Elsie Dudding, Nora Ford, Albert Geloso, Jessie Grimson, Fery Lórant, Gladys Raymond, Beatrice Spence, Maud L. Arnold, Felix Salmond, Emma Boynet, Kathleen Bruckshaw, Carl Budden-Morrs, Katherine Ruth Heyman, Allison Jeffrey, Vivian Langrish, Marie Levinskaja, Benno Moiseiwitsch, Frederick Morley, Alexander Raab, Walter M. Rummel, Jascha Spiwakowski, Una Truman.

Arthur Catterall will be the principal and solo violinist over the Promenade season, and Albert Fransella the principal and solo flute. The series of concerts is given as usual under the conductorship of Sir Henry J. Wood and the management of Robert Newman. The opening concert will occur Saturday evening, August 15, and the season will last ten weeks, the final concert to be given October 24.

NEXT, PLEASE.
By Starr Wood. From the London Tatler.
"The factory over the way sends their compliments, and will you switch off on to another note 'cos a lot of the 'ands 'ave mistook the dinner hour."

Fauré-Lortat Concerts.

The three concerts given under the auspices of Gabriel Fauré and Robert Lortat aroused no little interest in musical circles in London. M. Lortat played the whole of Gabriel Fauré's piano compositions, which were preceded by a short lecture on them at the first of the series, given June 16. The artists who assisted Gabriel Fauré and Robert Lortat at the three concerts were Sady Speyer, violin; Germaine Sanderson, vocalist; Frank Bridge, viola; Mme. Caponsachi-Jeisler, cellist; Ivor James, cellist.

Miscellaneous Concerts and Notes.

One of the most interesting concerts given this season was that of the Swedish National Choir of 100 selected male voices from the various choirs throughout Sweden and under the direction of G. Hultquist. Two soloists were heard in conjunction with the choir, viz., A. Wallgren, baritone, from the Royal Opera, Stockholm, and Dr. S. Hybbinette, tenor. A program of fifteen numbers was given, in the interpretation of which nothing but the highest praise is due. For pure beauty of timbre the standard of the Swedish National Choir comes near to the acme of tonal perfection. And there was absolute command of forte and pianissimo, and a very beautiful pianissimo, in all the work offered the London audience at Queen's Hall, June 23. The shading of tone was remarkable in many of the well chosen numbers, as, for example, "Orpheus With His Lute," by O. Lindblad, and "Little One," by S. Wennerberg Reuter. And again in the strikingly beautiful song, "Balder is Fallen," by W. Pison Berger.

Another interesting choir concert was that given at Albert Hall, June 20, by the Orfeó Català, of Barcelona, under the direction of Señor Don Lluis Millet, and assisted by Maria Barrientos, soprano; Señor Manén, violinist, and the New Symphony Orchestra under Signor Camilieri. The choir, which is one of the mixed order of voices, gave many well chosen Spanish songs, among which were some Cathalan popular songs, in one of which Mme. Barrientos sang the solo part. Her lovely voice rang true and clear above the chorus and she received an ovation from the audience. Later she gave the "Mad Scene" from "Hamlet" and proved her right to claim standing with the few other great coloratura singers of the day. Señor Manén played the Mendelssohn concerto with fine appreciation of its demands. The artist's own innate refinement of musical feeling placed him in perfect accord with the essential note of the Mendelssohn concerto.

Signor Camilieri was in excellent form and conducted with taste and dignity. A second concert was given by the same organization the Tuesday following.

Mischa Elman, who is now touring in Australia, is everywhere meeting with the greatest of success, as all reports confirm. He recently played five concerts in one week at Sydney. His tour will consist of not less than forty concerts. Mr. Morgan, manager of Yert's Musical Agency, which controls Mischa Elman's London business, tells the following little anecdote of the famous violinist and some Australian friends: "On arriving at his hotel after the first concert Mischa Elman found a letter awaiting him from an Australian lady inviting him and his friends to a luncheon to be given the following day at one, 'in the key of G.' The Elman party, of course, arrived the next day at one sharp!"

At the concert given at Queen's Hall, June 26, in aid of the Italian Hospital, and arranged under the direction of Signori Maestri Baraldi, Panizza and Polacco, a long list of the noted singers now filling engagements at Covent Garden were heard in songs and arias. Among them were Martinelli, Caruso, Dinh Gilly, Crimi Cigada, and Signora Zeppilli. A number of instrumentalists also contributed to the program, among whom were Maria Carreras, pianist, and Paul Kochanski, violinist.

The last of the special Sunday afternoon concerts at the Albert Hall will be given July 5, with Alma Gluck and Ffrem Zimbalist as the soloists. Other Sunday afternoon concerts given at the Albert Hall in June were the Clara Butt and Kennerley Rumford concert, with Bronislaw Huberman, violinist; the concert with Mme. D'Alvarez, Signor Ciccolini and Arnold Trowell as soloists.

Many concerts of exceptional merit have been presented during the last fortnight, of which the four by Yvette Guilbert are worthy of special mentioning for the supreme artistry of Mme. Guilbert and the unique and interesting arrangement of her programs. Then there was Mme. Esty's song recital at Bechstein Hall, June 27; Percy Grainger piano recital at the Aeolian Hall, June 30; the joint recital of Wladimir Cernikoff and Mme. D'Alvarez at Aeolian Hall, June 26, and several others, all very much above the ordinary standard, but to which time and space prohibit detailed attention.

Evelyn Kaesmann.

Mme. Rappold Has Concluded Season.

Marie Rappold's concert season closed June 26 at the National Saengerfest in Louisville, Ky. The Concert Direction M. H. Hanson announces that they have terminated their contract with Mme. Rappold.

DETAILS REGARDING THE ESSENTIAL STANDARD FOR MUSIC TEACHING.

Adopted by the New York State Music Teachers' Association on June 19, 1914—The Requirements, Formulated Especially for the Piano Department by Gustav L. Becker (Chairman) and Henry Holden Huss, with Approval of the Other Members of the Standardization Committee (Walter L. Bogert, Walter Damrosch, Herwegh von Ende and Oscar Saenger), Made Applicable as Well to the Other Branches of Music Teaching.

I. (As to technic). A thorough knowledge of the theory and practical application of the principles of muscular relaxation or poise as an underlying condition for action and control in artistic tone production.

(It is to be counted in an applicant's favor, if he can show that his method of teaching tone production is such as will, in the end, produce the desired artistic results without resorting to premeditated or conscious muscular activity; it being considered more desirable that the tone concepts as to pitch, quality, etc., should precede and give the impulse to the already well conditioned muscles toward the requisite action-producing tone).

II. The ability to apply artistically the various methods of tone enunciation and grouping, including legato, staccato, non-legato, sforzato, portamente, pizzicato, spiccato, etc., and in piano playing—not to be neglected—the elastic "pressure touch" in melody playing. Furthermore to make use of these effects and all needed dynamic inflections and gradations with particular regard to bringing out the inner meaning or mood of a composition.

III. Knowledge of the diffcrent kinds of musical metre and their normal subdivisions and accentuation or stress, as also the ability to analyze and compare the musical values of various rhythmical groupings. Singers and violinists or cellists should be able thus to analyze the accompaniments as well as the solo parts of their repertoire.

IV. An adequate knowledge of the structure of music, including notation, intervals, scales, elementary harmony and musical form, with the ability to apply such knowledge in an illuminative analysis, including phrasing (or breathing, bowing, touch) indications of at least the simpler classical compositions; thereby to aid the pupil in sight reading and memorizing, as well as towards gaining a better comprehension of the musical content. The piano teacher should know how to apply such knowledge toward a correct and musically effective usc of the damper pedal.

V. The ability to detect and correct obvious mistakes in printed music; also in piano and violin music to supply a practicable fingering.

VI. A sufficiently well trained ear for the elements of tone, i. e., pitch, time, quality and force, with also enough general musical "apperception" readily to discover and call attcntion to obvious faults in the pupil's delivcry or performance. In piano playing, especially regarding accuracy in keyboard work and pedaling; in singing correctness of diction and appropriate utilization of resonance or quality of tone; in violin playing the artistic bowing effects, and of course in both of these accuracy of pitch.

VII. Sufficient ability as a singer or performer to adequately illustrate for the pupil any required portions of the latter's repertoire.. The applicant will here be asked to play or sing for the examiners at least two classical compositions and one romantic one, of the applicant's own choosing, of at least the fourth grade of difficulty (counting seven grades). He must also be able to read at sight, fairly correctly and coherently, if not at full tempo, short, selected portions of compositions of varying metre, key and style, of about the third grade of difficulty. Singers and violinists or cellists should possess sufficient pianistic ability to play simply accompaniments.

VIII. An ample knowledge of the best methods of teaching and studying, aiming not only at a most helpful and inspiring lesson period, but also at the efficient utilization of the pupil's practice time.

IX. Familiarity with a variety of such general practical points of music tcaching that have a more or less direct bearing upon the pupils' health, comfort and success.

X. A sufficient acquaintance with the standard instructive musical literaturc of his department, so that a suitablc selection may be made, that shall best conduce to the pupil's esthetic, mental and technical growth.

XI. The ability, on occasion, to tell the pupil something of intcrest and instructive value from out of the pages of the history of music.

XII. It is understood, of course, that all these requirements will not suffice unless the teachcr brings to his tasks real enthusiasm, and the ability to get at the idiosyncrasies, that is, personal traits and needs of each individual pupil. Applicants will be accepted who can comply with these requirements to the extent of gaining 70 points of credit out of a possible 100; these points being differently apportioned, partly according to the relative importance of the various requirements, and partly considering what, under existing conditions, could reasonably be expected of the average young teacher, who may need such an examination to prove his eligibility. These points of credit will be awarded about as follows: 12 points for requirements I, VI and VIII; 10 points for requirements IV; 8 points each for requirements II, III, VII and XII; 6 points each for requirements IX and X; and 5 points each for requirements V and XI, total 100.

The rating will be based upon carefully considered questions and tests, as also upon voluntary demonstration and verbal exposition of the candidate, i. e., he will, during a certain limitcd period of time be allowed to tell and show, in his own way, what he knows and can do. For this the examiners may give points of credit, according to the evident value of what is thus revealed.

A fair provision is made for those who comply satisfactorily wi.h certain requiremcnts, and yet fail in others to the extent of gaining less than the needed 70 points in the total rating by permitting them, after a reasonable lapse of time—of not more than a ycar—to submit to another examination in only those requircments which were deficient, due credit being given them for the requirements already satisfactorily covered.

In all cases, when the applicants so desire, will the fact of application as well as the results of an examination be kept confidential, should there be a failure to pass.

Thus may many young musicians and teachers, for their own satisfaction, put their knowledge and ability to the test, and if proven adequate, they may derive from this fact the benefit of greater public and private recognition, with an increase in number of pupils, engagements, etc., in rivalry with those who are unwilling to submit to the test.

At any rate, the moral influence of a definite standard of essential requirement in music teaching will make itself felt more and more strongly as these requirements become known and are generally acknowledged to be essential.

Parents or guardians and school principals will then try find out whether their music teacher is competent at least to the extent of such requirements, or they may feel that they are wasting time and money. To help the applicants the better to prepare themselves for examination in their special branches of teaching, a number of standard textbooks are indicated. The list for all teachers in common was given with the general outline of requirements published in the MUSICAL COURIER two weeks ago:

Piano teachers should at least make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the contents of such books as Clarence G. Hamilton's "Piano Teaching" and Franklin Taylor's "Primer on Piano Playing." For deeper study also: Ethelbert W. Graybill's "The Mechanics of Pianoforte Technic," James Francis Cook's "Great Pianists on Piano Playing," and Henry E. Krehbiel's "The Pianoforte and Its Music."

Violin teachers should have a practical and theoretical knowledge of such books as Curvoisier's "Violin Playing," Richard Scholz's "Technic of the Violin," also an acquaintance with Spohr's "School of Violin Playing" or De Beriot's method, with a reading of other books, such as Edith L. Winn's "Violin Talks," etc.

Vocal teachers may "brush up" their knowledge with such books as Joseph Smith's "Voice and Song" (Schirmer) and Fillebrown's "Resonance in Singing and Speaking" (Ditson). Further books with useful information are: Louis A. Russell's "The Commonplaces of Vocal Art," Henderson's "The Art of the Singer," Clara K. Rogers' "My Voice and I"; also the papers on vocal art in the Annual Reports of the N. Y. S. M. T. A. for 1912 and 1913.

Special theory teachers should, of course, have a practical acquaintance with a wider field of theoretical knowledge than other teachers of music, and they should, aside from a most thorough study of some one standard textbook, get new points of view from some of the other books on theory as, for instance, those by Goetschius, Gow, Goodrich, Sechter, Cutter, Loewengard, Grunish, Prout, Shinn, Vincent, White, Shepard, Tapper, Mokrejs, York, Ziehn, Anger, Schoenberg and others.

The organists may refer to M. Lemmen's method (translated from the French) to "Organ Playing," by Arthur Page, Stainer's "Organ Primer," F. F. Harker's "The Organ" and other helpful text-books.

For ear training there is now published an ample list of books by Frothingham, Ritter, Alchin, White Faelten, Jewett, Heacox, Sparmann, Brown and others.

The compilers of the above list of books would suggest that though it is always good to have an ample library of standard books for reference, it should not be forgotten that one good book thoroughly absorbed into one's mind is of more value than 200 books on the bookshelf—unread.

Trnka Plays at Trudeau Sanatorium.

Alois Trnka, the prominent New York violinist, tendered the patients of the sanatorium at Trudeau, N. Y., a pleasant surprise and an event long to be remembered in their temporarily less fortunate lives when, on Sunday afternoon, July 5, with the assistance of the pianist, Ella Bucrger, he played a very attractive program for them.

The Bach G string aria, Tartini-Kreisler variations, a Wieniawski legende, with the rather exacting "Perpetuo" by Novacek, and a group in which short numbers by Chopin, Cartier-Kreisler, Schubert-Auer and Zarzycki were played, comprised the first half of his program.

The Martini-Kreisler andante and the Brahms fourth Hungarian dance arrangement by Joachim, followed by Schumann's "Vogel als Prophet," "Alte Weise," by Sinding, and the "Rondo des Lutins" by Bazzini, concluded the program proper, but that was insufficient, for the enthusiastic demands made by his appreciative audience, and several encore numbers were gratefully added by Mr. Trnka.

Klibansky's Summer Class.

A fine class of talented vocal pupils is studying with Sergei Klibansky this summer, and among them Betty Powers, who is a coloratura soprano, is prominent. She has an unusual range, and success is predicted for her.

Umberto Sorrentino, the favorite tenor, though not personally known to Mr. Klibansky, sent him a letter of congratulation on their fine singing recently. He remarked especially on Klibansky's "wonderful method," "perfect voice placement," etc.

Schumann-Heink's Vacation.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, who is now in Bayreuth, will return to this country on September 17. For one month prior to her sailing for America this busy prima donna is going to take a sight seeing tour through Europe in an automobile, accompanied by two of her sons, her daughter and her accompanist, Katherine Hoffmann. This will be the first actual vacation which she has taken in nearly eight years. Her tour next season will open October 3.

Leander S. Sherman in the East.

Leander S. Sherman, president of Sherman, Clay & Co., of San Francisco, and one of the vital factors in Pacific Coast music and commercial circles, spent a few days in New York last week, having come East on a flying business trip. Mr. Sherman returned to San Francisco last Saturday via Chicago.

GEORGE SWEET ON VOCAL INSTRUCTION.

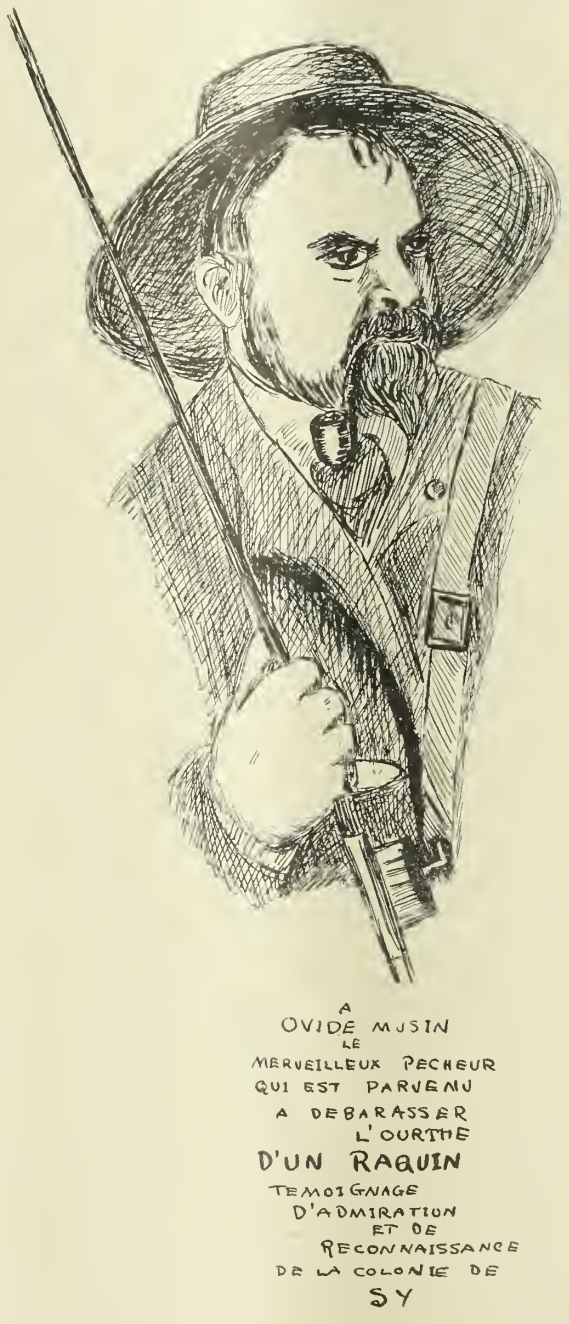
An Eminent Teacher Protests Against Haste in Study.

To the Musical Courier:

A vocal instructor, or master of the art of singing, is confronted by many perplexing conditions relative to the present day methods of voice culture. The average student does not, cannot realize, nor do those who possess extraordinary ability to absorb and retain the suggestions of a master, that those who have gained world wide recognition as artists, were recognized only after ten to twenty years' experience and many times after passing through unfortunate, disappointing failures. In my twenty odd years of training singers, among the first questions asked by a prospective pupil possessing an exceptionally good voice, talent, temperament or sufficient refinement and good taste, is "How long do you think it will be necessary for me to study before I can become an artist, and acceptable singer, or before I can obtain an engagement? Two or three years?" I invariably reply, "Have you patience and the necessary grit to go through the grind under constant corrections or criticisms?"

The first necessary point to consider is the beautiful, floating, velvet tone and perfect control of breath and a keen appreciation of the beauty in the quality of their tone production; then, the technical knowledge of the musical requirements with which few singers are interested, comprehending time or rhythm or proportionate grouping of musical figures; then, the most important factor, that of pronouncing properly or the study of perfect articulation; for is not singing an idealized form of speech, a higher order of language, the tone being more ideal than that used in ordinary conversation; then, and lastly, the question of interpretation, and finish where everything is demanded of them intellectually, to furnish sympathetically those touches of color which take hold of the heart strings of the listeners and wring their emotions at will. Does the average vocal student ever ponder on the tremendous amount of drudgery, hours on hours of nerve racking technical work, men like Rubinstein, Liszt, Paderewski, and others were obliged to give during their student life; violinists, as Ole Bull, Wilhelmj, and in fact, all those one finds in the orchestras throughout the musical world? I spent four years at study before I secured my first engagement in Italy. Mme. Nordica devoted four years to vocalizing before she began her career, as I believe was stated in your journal some months since. My master, Felice Vansi, was among the greatest artists of his time, as records well prove, since Verdi wrote for him the baritone roles of "Rigoletto," "Macbeth," "Trovatore" and many others I fail to remember; also Donizetti wrote for him the part of Antonio in "Linda di Chamounix" and other operas. I learned the opera of "Rigoletto" in ten days, simply on a dare, with my accompanist Brizzi, and my master Vaumiccini while in Florence; but on the latter's advice, I went to the man who created the role (Varesi), and studied it for five months, receiving two and three hour lessons daily, costing over $1,300; and in many of these lessons there was no singing, purely explanations and analytical work. Under this great artist I prepared over thirty operas and can appear tomorrow night in any one of thirty-four scores without a rehearsal. One can understand through the study of so great a number of scores, the character of each role so totally different, why one gains a great fund of artistic versatility.

I wish to add a few words to the foregoing, as to demonstrate facts, naturally one can offer only personal experiences, which will explain my relating incidents in my individual career, and I wish to mention a few of my pupils and the usual desultory periods of study with most of the American singers at home. George Fergusson, now in Berlin, as I learn, is one of the widest known and most successful teachers on the continent, she devoted seven years to study with me exclusively before leaving for Europe, beginning his lessons on July 16, 1890, and during the later years he received daily lessons. Frank King Clark received his first lesson in singing from me October 29, 1890, and continued through that year and 1891. Florence Mulford of the Metropolitan Opera Company began October 17, 1895, continuing seven years, her last lesson being March 25, 1902. Kathryn Bloodgood studied from October 2, 1892 to December 22, 1905, and has returned for study during the past year, since returning from the Philippines. Maude Suan Berri began February 17, 1897, finishing October 11, 1906.



Trusting the above will interest many young singers who aspire to a successful operatic or vocal professional careers, I am,

Yours, etc., GEORGE SWEET.

A Fish Story.

Next to his love for the violin and all that pertains to it, Ovide Musin is fond of his rod and line, and woe to the fish that nibbles at his tempting bait. That fish, be it large or small, will not again return to its companions to relate the marvelous stories of its adventures. Mr. Musin is a good judge of fish, having hauled in members of the finny tribe from the waters of streams from the North Cape, Norway and Sweden, to Tampa, Fla., from those of the Adirondacks and the rivers of his native Belgium.

Near the little hamlet of Sy in Belgium there is a small stream, which for years was reputed to be inhabited by a monster Ragnin (shark) which had often troubled the otherwise peaceful dreams of the simple fishermen. Several years ago Mr. Musin thought he would try his luck in this stream and at catching the monster. After a short time he felt a little nibble, then a huge bite; he pulled frantically but carefully and finally succeeded in landing a remarkably large fish for such a tiny stream. Word was quickly passed to the inhabitants of the village and they all turned out en masse to greet the triumphal fisherman and their deliverer. He was serenaded with tin pans and cow horns in lieu of musical instruments, and was conducted to his house by a procession with torches. As a final tribute, they presented him with the accompanying picture of himself in fishing costume and paraphernalia in token of their lasting gratitude and admiration, at the same time shouting, "Long live Musin, the great fisherman of the Ardennes!"

Max Loest, professor of geology at the University of Liège, made the portrait in oil, and the cartoon from it is the work of Anna Bowers, pupil of Mr. Musin and vocal student of Mrs. Musin.

Rogers Calls American Songs Weak.

"American song writing," says Francis Rogers, "suffers from the same lack of national feeling that characterizes our operas. Even the songs of MacDowell that some people love so well have never struck home to me. They lack a directness of appeal. Our song writers copy Schubert and Brahms and Debussy and Massenet, but they do not express themselves. Another great weakness in our songs is the fact that when our composers write for English words they choose so often such wretched, or at least banal, poetry. Yet English literature is in lyric poetry probably richer than any other. Some of our composers undoubtedly do not know what good poetry is, and others do not choose to set it to music because they fear their technical powers are unequal to the task. It is undoubtedly true that great poetry is harder to set to music than balderdash, yet how often have our composers done their best work when they have been uplifted by great words and thoughts?

"Bruno Huhn's 'Invictus' to the words of Henly is one of the most popular of American songs. I brought 'Invictus' to a dozen American composers in vain. Mr. Huhn, however, saw its merits, and the results are well known. Surely in song writing the great poet and the great song writer will work hand in hand. How well the great Germans appreciate their Heine! First and foremost must our composers express themselves."

Mme. Soder-Hueck Sails.

On Saturday last, July 11, Ada Soder-Hueck, the well known New York contralto and vocal teacher, sailed for Europe on the steamship Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. While abroad she will visit many of the principal cities of Europe and will also include Switzerland in her tour. Her trip is being made for recreation, although some business matters may be attended to while on the other side of the Atlantic.

The past season has been a record one for this eminent teacher, and June and July have been particularly busy months because of the large number of teachers and professional singers who come from the West each summer to receive instruction and coaching from her.

Mme. Soder-Hueck will be back in New York the middle of September to resume her work. Next season promises to be still busier, as many new pupils are already enrolled for the fall.

Donaldson Arranging Next Season Programs.

Gay Donaldson, the well known baritone of Cleveland, has just completed an extremely busy season, his final appearance being at a musicale given by him in Cleveland, where he scored his usual splendid success. During the summer months Mr. Donaldson will devote his time to the arranging of programs for his coming season, which promises to be unusually active, both in concert and with his work at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, Cleveland, where he is the director of music as well as the baritone soloist.

Sterner Institution Recitals.

Muriel Guy, violinist, and Ramee Rivas, soprano, gave a recital June 29, and July 2 Arline Edgerton Felker, coloratura soprano, was heard at the New York School of Music and Arts, under the direction of Ralfe Leech Sterner. The brilliant violin playing of Miss Guy and the splendid singing of Misses Rivas and Felker (pupils of Sterner) caused much favorable comment.

Proof of Affection.

Madge—What makes you think she loves him so desperately?

Marjorie—The other evening she sat out a tango and a hesitation with him.—Puck.

Propriety.

John—Is she proper?

Jack—You bet; she is so proper she won't accompany you on a piano unless she has a chaperone.—Kansas City Star.

KATHARINE
GOODSON
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
KNABE PIANO

The PROGRESS of AMERICAN MUSIC

[This department is designed by the MUSICAL COURIER to be as complete a record as possible of the public performance all over the world of the works of composers born in the United States. The department will be published weekly and contributions are solicited from any source whatsoever to help make the record all-encompassing. The clippings and programs sent must report concerts which have actually taken place and must be of recent date. However, advance notices and advance programs will not be considered. The data submitted must also include the place and date of performance and the names of the performers, and, before all things, it should be remembered that composers not born in the United States are ineligible for the MUSICAL COURIER list. All communications referring to this department must be addressed:—"American Composition Editor," MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.]

Bartlett, Homer N.—"Toccata" (organ), played by Edwin Arthur Kraft, St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Alliance, Ohio, December 17, 1913.
—Meditation Sérieuse," op. 243 (organ), played by Clarence Eddy, St. George's Episcopal Church, New Orleans, La., January 28, 1914.

Bauer, Marion—"Light" (song), sung by Constance Purdy, Jordan Hall recital, Boston, Mass., January 28, 1914.
—"Star Trysts" (song), sung by Charlotte Lund, studio recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

Beresford, Lorena—"Indian Lullaby" (song), sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Woman's Club, Jersey City, N. J., January 8, 1914.

Bliss, Paul—"Perfect Nights and Days" (song), sung by Marie Hissem de Moss, Cincinnati, Ohio, January 28, 1914.
—"A Plainsman's Song" (song), sung by the Orpheus Club (John J. Bishop, conductor), John M. Greene Hall, Smith College, Northampton, Mass., January 29, 1914.
—"The Rosary of Spring" (song), sung by Mary Green Peyton, Methodist Episcopal Church, Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, January 30, 1914.

Bond, Carrie Jacobs—"God Remembers When the World Forgets" (song), sung by Elizabeth Eastwood Luce, Omaha University, Omaha, Neb., January 13, 1914.

Brown, Mary Helen—"A Plaint" (song), sung by Charlotte Lund, studio recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

Cadman, Charles Wakefield—"From the Land of the Sky-Blue Water" (arranged for organ by Clarence Eddy), played by Clarence Eddy, St. George's Episcopal Church, New Orleans, La., January 28, 1914.
—"The Moon Drops Low" (song), sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Grove Street Church, Orange, N. J., December 20, 1914;—Sidner Studio, Newark, N. J., January 6, 1914.
—"Call Me No More" (song), sung by Mrs. Romaine Smith Russell, First Unitarian Church, Pittsburgh, Pa., February 3, 1914.
—"Call Me No More" (song), sung by Olive Emory Russell, Whiton Hall, Dorchester, Mass., December 11, 1913.
—"Thistledown" (song), sung by Yvonne de Treville, Moore Theatre, Seattle, Wash., January 8, 1914.
—"At Dawning" (song), sung by Vernon Archibald, Waldorf-Astoria, New York, February 11, 1914.

Campbell-Tipton—"Rhapsodie" (song), sung by Charlotte Lund, studio recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

Carpenter, John Alden—"Fog Wraiths" (song), sung by Constance Purdy, Jordan Hall recital, Boston, Mass., January 28, 1914.
—"Don't Ceare" (song), sung by Christine Miller, First Methodist Church, Waterloo, Iowa, February 6, 1914.

Cole, Rossetter G.—"Fantasie Symphonique" (organ), played by Edwin Arthur Kraft, St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Alliance, Ohio, December 17, 1913;—played by Clarence Eddy, St. George's Episcopal Church, New Orleans, La., January 28, 1914.

Croyer, Chas.—"Indian Songs" (songs), sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Sidner Studio, Newark, N. J., January 17, 1914.

Daniels, Mabel—"Beyond" (song), sung by Constance Purdy, Jordan Hall recital, Boston, Mass., January 28, 1914.

Edick, Ethel—Romanza—Vibrations from the Workshop; Capital and Labor (piano), played by the composer, Y. W. C. A. auditorium, Portland, Ore., December 9, 1913.

Farwell, Arthur—"Song of the Deathless Voice" (song), sung by Constance Purdy, Jordan Hall recital, Boston, Mass., January 28, 1914.

Federlein, Gottfried H.—"Legend" (organ), played by Arthur Davis, Christ Church Cathedral, St. Louis, Mo., January 17, 1914;—played by Edwin Arthur Kraft. St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Alliance, Ohio, December 17, 1913;—played by J. Frank Frysinger, East Lincoln Baptist Church, Lincoln, Neb., December 18, 1913.

Foerster, Adolph M.—"Trio," op. 29 for violin, cello and piano, played by the Schellschmidt-Carman trio, Indianapolis, Ind., January 29, 1914.
—"Alone" (song), sung by Carl H. Rupprecht, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.

Foote, Arthur—Silhouette, "Flying Cloud," D major, op. 73, No. 4 (piano), played by Doris Godfrey, Huntington Chambers Hall, Boston, Mass., February 7, 1914.

Foster, Fay—"Sing a Song of Roses," "When Comes the Spring," "Song of the Thistledrift," "Star Tracks," "Sleep Song," "Fairy Castles," "Winter Butterflies," "On Dress Parade" (songs), sung by Miss Wetmore, Musicians Club, New York, January 27, 1914.
—"Con Amore," "Winter," "Serenade La Seville," "Maria Mia!" "The Painter," "A Busy Man," "The Ould Doctor," "A Tired Father's Lullaby" (songs), sung by Roy Steele, Musicians Club, New York, January 27, 1914.
—"Sleep, lil' Chile, Go Sleep," "The Land of Make Believe," "I Shall Not Care," "Call of the Trail" (songs), sung by Laura Maverick, Musicians' Club, New York, January 27, 1914.

Freeby, Grace Adele—"May Day," "O Golden Sun" (songs), sung by Mildred Langworthy, the College of the Pacific, San Jose, Cal., January 16, 1914.
—"O Golden Sun" (song), sung by Ellen Beach Yaw, the College of the Pacific, San Jose, Cal., November 14, 1914.

Frysinger, J. Frank—"Traumlied," "Laudate Domini," "Meditation in G" (organ), played by the composer, East Lincoln Baptist Church, Lincoln, Neb., December 18, 1913.
—"At Twilight" (organ), played by Clarence Eddy, St. George's Episcopal Church, New Orleans, La., January 28, 1914.

Gaul, Harvey—"Noël Normandie" (organ), played by John Hermann Loud, First Baptist Church, Newton Center, Mass., February 2, 1914.

Gilberté, Hallet—"Two Roses" (song), sung by Grace Wheeler Duncan, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.
—"Ah Love, But a Day" (song), sung by Charlotte Lund, studio recital, New York, January 22, 1914.
—Minuet, "La Phyllis" (song), sung by Vernon Archibald, Waldorf-Astoria, New York, February 11, 1914.

Grant-Schaefer—"The Sea" (song), sung by Christine Miller, First Methodist Episcopal Church, Waterloo, Iowa, February 6, 1914.

Homer, Sidney—"The Fiddler of Dooney" (song), sung by Carl Rupprecht, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.

Johns, Clayton—"I Love, and the World Is Mine" (song), sung by Christine Miller, First Methodist Episcopal Church, Waterloo, Iowa, February 6, 1914.

Kroeger, Ernst R.—"Dance of the Elves" (piano), played by Ethel Edick, Y. W. C. A. Auditorium, Portland, Ore., December 9, 1913.

Lang, Margaret Ruthven—"The Wind" (double chorus), sung by St. Cecilia Club, Waldorf-Astoria, New York, January 20, 1914.
—"The Night of the Star" (Christmas cycle), sung by Josephine Knight, soprano; Clarence B. Shirley, tenor; Stephen S. Townsend, baritone; the Harvard Musical Association, Boston, Mass., December 24, 1913.
—"The Night of the Star" (chorus), sung by St. Paul's Cathedral Choir, Boston, Mass., December 24, 1913.

Luce, Elizabeth—"How Sweet the Moonlight Sleeps" (song), sung by the composer, the Clio Club, Omaha, Neb., January 13, 1914.

MacDowell, Edward H.—"To a Wild Rose," "A Deserted Farm," "Uncle Remus" (organ), played by Arthur Davis, Christ Church Cathedral, St. Louis, Mo., January 19, 1914.
—"The Sea" (song), sung by Grace Wheeler Duncan, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.
—"Polonaise," E minor (piano), played by Grace Adele Freeby, the College of the Pacific, San Jose, Cal., November 14, 1914.

Martin, Margaret—"Lullaby" (song), sung by Elizabeth Eastwood Luce, Federal Club Women's Concert, Omaha, Neb., January 14, 1914.

McMillan, Malcolm Dana—"A Valentine" (song), sung by Constance Purdy, Jordan Hall recital, Boston, Mass., January 28, 1914.

Neuer, Berthold—"St. Anthony of Padua" (song), sung by by Charlotte Lund, studio recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

Nevin, Ethelbert—"The Nightingale" (song), sung by Elizabeth Eastwood Luce, the Clio Club, Omaha, Neb., January 13, 1914.
—"O That We Two Were Maying" (duet), sung by Grace Wheeler Duncan and Carl H. Rupprecht, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.
—"The Nightingale's Song" (song), sung by Christine Miller, First Methodist Episcopal Church, Waterloo, Iowa, February 6, 1914.

Rogers, James H.—"The Snow Storm" (chorus), sung by the St. Cecilia Club, Victor Harris conductor, Waldorf-Astoria, New York, January 20, 1914.

Salter, Mary Turner—"Sweet Chrysanthemum" (song), sung by Eva Gill, Y. W. C. A. Auditorium, Portland, Ore., December 9, 1913.
—"Come to the Garden, Love" (song), sung by Olive Davis, Nebraska Wesleyan University Conservatory of Music, Auditorium, University place, Neb., January 22, 1914.

Schneider, Edwin—"Your Eyes" (song), sung by Vernon Archibald, Waldorf-Astoria, New York, February 11, 1914.

Smith, Wilson G.—"Fulfillment" (song), sung by Elizabeth Eastwood Luce, Omaha University, Omaha, Neb., January 13, 1914.

Smythe, Richard—"Saviour Again to Thy Dear Name" (song), sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Bloomfield High School, Bloomfield, N. J., December 7, 1913; sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Hillside Press Club, Newark, N. J., January 3, 1914.
—"Forever And a Day" (song), sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Grove Street Club, Orange, N. J., December 20, 1913; sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Woman's Club, Jersey City, N. J., January 8, 1914; sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Sidner Studio, Newark, N. J., January 6, 1914; sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Sidner Studio, Newark, N. J., January 17, 1914.

Speaks, Oley—"Morning," "To You" (songs), sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Sidner Studio, Jersey City, N. J., January 17, 1914.
—"Morning" (song), sung by Mrs. Clarence H. Wescott, Woman's Club, Jersey City, N. J., January 8, 1914.

Strang, S. Tudor—"Cantique D'Amour" (organ), played by John Hermann Loud, First Baptist Church, Newton Center, Mass., February 2, 1914.

Ware, Harriet—"The Cross," "Joy of the Morning" (song), sung by Mary Green Payton, Methodist Episcopal Church, Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, January 30, 1914.

Warford, Claude—"The Tide of Life," "Sword Song" (songs), sung by Carl H. Rupprecht, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.

Woodman, R. Huntington—"A Song of Joy" (song), sung by Olive Emory Russell. Whiton Hall, Dorchester, Mass., December 11, 1913.

Yaw, Ellen Beach—"Cuckoo and Firefly," "The Sky Lark," "California" (songs), sung by the composer, the College of the Pacific, San Jose, Cal., November 14, 1913.

MICHIGAN MUSIC TEACHERS HOLD THEIR ANNUAL MEETING.

Active and Interesting Sessions Held at Muskegon—Business, Concerts and Social Affairs Fill the Program—New Officers Elected and Detroit Selected for Next Year's Meetings.

Detroit, Mich., July 10, 1914.

The Michigan Music Teachers' Association held its twenty-seventh annual meeting at Muskegon, where the members present were most royally entertained. The meetings began Tuesday afternoon, June 23, and closed Thursday evening, June 25. Tuesday afternoon was devoted to registration of members and a short business session, which opened with an address of welcome by the mayor, responded to by the president, L. L. Renwick. Various committees were appointed and the meeting adjourned. An automobile ride to points of interest was followed by a reception at the Country Club. Tuesday evening an interesting program was given by Muskegon musicians, followed by a reception. Wednesday morning was devoted to a meeting of county vice-presidents, a round table for organists, conducted by Edward B. Mannville, Detroit, and Earle V. Moore, Ann Arbor, and a round table for vocalists conducted by M. H. Van der Water, Muskegon, and Maud S. Howard, Olivet.

Wednesday afternoon, there was a business meeting, with election of officers. The question of the bill for the standardizing of music teachers was discussed, and inasmuch as the bill was defeated largely through the opposition of many music teachers throughout the State, it was thought wise to enter upon a campaign of education. The treasurer was authorized to allow the president $100 to use in any manner he deemed best to arouse the interest of the teachers in the bill. At 3 o'clock there was a program given by various State musicians. The evening program was given Mrs. Charles H. Clements, contralto, and Archibald Jackson, baritone, both of the Detroit Conservatory. Hazel Wing, pianist, of Holland, contributed a group of solos, and Clara Coleman and Vera Bennett, of Grand Rapids, played a sonata for violin and piano by Carpenter.

Thursday morning there were round tables for theory teachers and pianists and a paper on "High School Credits for Music Study," by John W. Beattie, of Grand Rapids. Thursday afternoon there was another business session, in which unfinished business was transacted, followed by a concert presented by musicians from Grand Rapids, Holland and Muskegon. The concert was followed by a launch ride to Lake Michigan Park for a picnic supper. The concert Thursday evening was given by Caroline Beebe, pianist, assisted by William Howland, baritone, making a most brilliant ending to what many pronounced one of the most enjoyable sessions of the association.

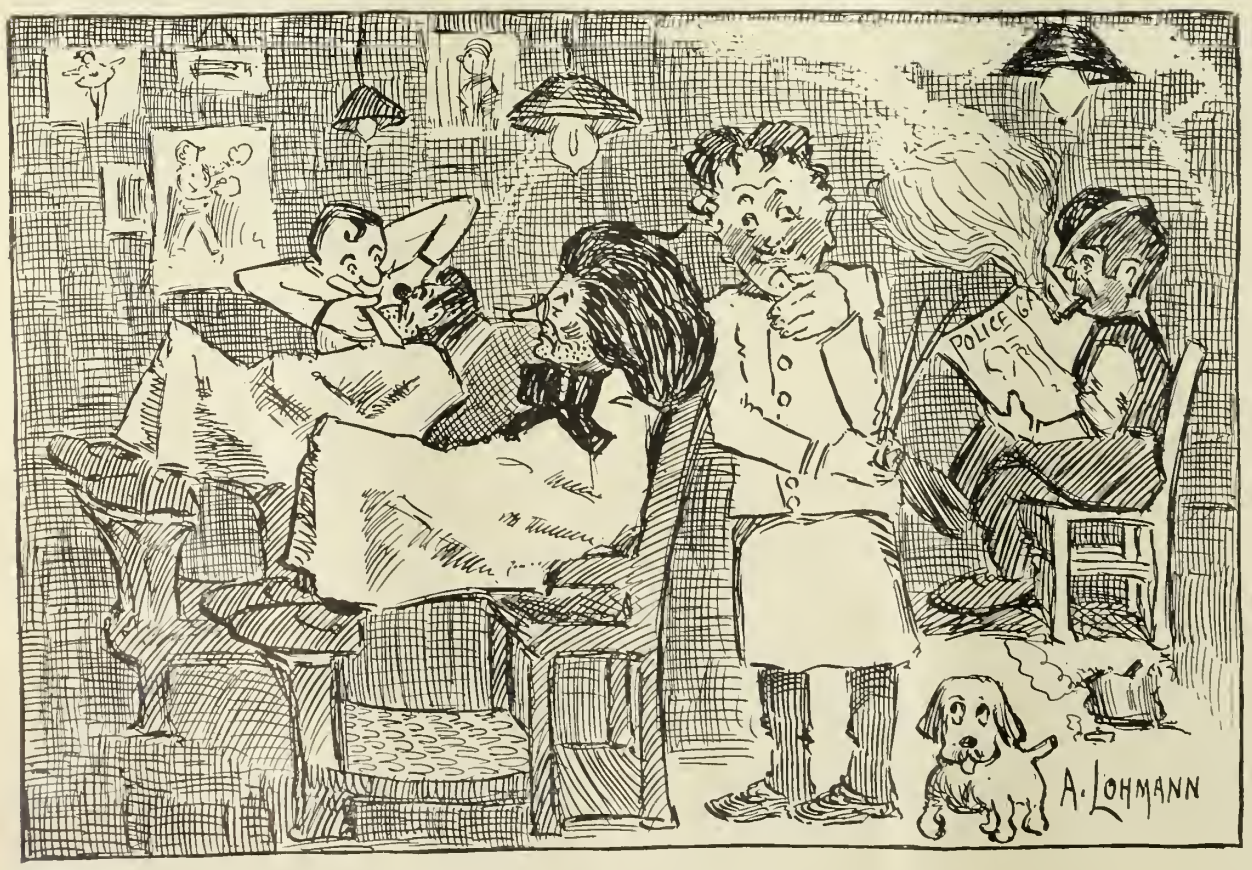
The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, G. W. Renwick, Muskegon; vice-president, W. E. Hartley, Grand Rapids; secretary, J. G. Cummings, Saginaw; treasurer, M. W. Chase, Hillsdale; auditor, S. E. Clark, Detroit. Membership committee, Jennie M. Stoddard, chairman, Detroit; Anna C. Dooling, St. Johns; A. W. Platte, Saginaw.

The next meeting will be held in Detroit, June 28, 29, 30, 1915, and the program committee appointed by the president consists of F. L. York, chairman, Mrs. Boris L. Ganapol, Louise Unsworth Cragg and Kate MacDonald. Julius C. Weiss is chairman of the local executive committee.

JENNIE M. STODDARD.

Tour of the Abells.

[From the Berlin Continental Times, June 27, 1914.]



Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Abell have returned to Berlin after ten weeks spent in a very remarkable pleasure trip through parts of provincial Russia and Turkey, never before visited by American tourists. They sailed practically the entire length of the Volga, from Jaroslov to Astrakhan, more than 3,000 kilometers, in a special steamer chartered by Sergei Kussewitzky, whose guests they were, visiting all the principal cities of this greatest waterway of Europe, as Kostroma, where the first Czar was crowned; Nijni Novgorod, famous for its great annual fairs; Kasan the ancient stronghold of the Tartars; Samara, the terminus of the Siberian Railway, Simbyrsk, Saratow, Zaritzin, on the border of the Steppes and Astrakhan, which is renowned for its caviar fisheries. More than 75,000 people are employed in the fisheries there. After crossing the Caspian Sea, they traversed the entire range of the Caucasus Mountains, from the Caspian to the Black Sea, more than 600 miles, the greater part of the way in an open carriage. Mr. and Mrs. Abell had been warned that there was danger of being waylaid by bandits in the mountains but they came through unharmed, although they had several romantic adventures. They found the wild mountaineers picturesque in the extreme. The mountain scenery was far grander and wilder than in the Swiss Alps, one peak being nearly 4,000 feet higher than Mt. Blanc. Mr. and Mrs. Abell were greatly impressed by the location of Tiflis and by the great natural beauties of Batum, on the Black Sea, which they considered the most beautiful harbor in the world. They visited numerous towns in Asiatic Turkey and were at Samsoun at the time of the recent great slaughter of the Greeks by the Turks. At the time they were informed that war between Greece and Turkey might break out at any moment. Among the other places of interest they visited on the trip were Constantinople, Symrna, Athens, Corfu, where they were shown over the palace of the King; Brindisi and Venice.

Southern Tour for Florence Hinkle.

Commencing January 5 with her engagement with the Symphony Orchestra of Kansas City, in that city, Florence Hinkle will open her tour in the Southwest and Southern cities. Oklahoma, Texas and Mississippi are included in the itinerary. The week of January 11, commencing with an engagement in San Antonio, will be devoted to the State of Texas.

Zimbalist at Worcester Festival.

Efrem Zimbalist, the violinist, has been engaged by the Worcester Festival Association as the principal instrumental feature. He will be heard in the symphony concert on Thursday afternoon, September 24.

PRESERVING THE CROP.

Prof. Spiccato—"Please cut my hair—the one that sticks out on top."

How to Do It.

The mastery of music never just "came naturally" to any human being. The world has never known a more industrious worker than the illustrious Franz Schubert. Yet, if to any one in the world music "came naturally," it seemed to come so to him. When the school principal asked his harmony teacher how young Franz Schubert was progressing, the teacher said: "He is a wonder. Whenever I explain anything new to him, he always seems already to know it." He must have received his knowledge straight from heaven." Yet, in spite of such superb gifts, there was never a harder worker than he. And don't you think that we, with our lesser gifts, should follow his example? If he with all his heaven sent genius could not succeed without strenuous daily labor, how can we hope to accomplish anything worth while without ceaseless, patient and conscientious toil?—Woman's World.

The Destinn-Gilly Tour.

The demand to hear Emmy Destinn in concert has been so insistent that her managers, the Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, have deemed it wise to start the tour earlier than was at first contemplated, and it is now arranged for her to arrive in this country on October 11. The dates already booked for the Destinn-Gilly combination include appearances in Boston, Pittsburgh, Toronto, Detroit, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Cleveland.

Byford Ryan Rests.

Byford Ryan, the noted vocal instructor, after one of the busiest and most successful seasons in his career, closed his New York studio for the summer on June 10, and now is enjoying a vacation which he richly deserves. Mr. Ryan will reopen his classes here about September 1, and already they are filling rapidly.

Berger and Rappold Under R. E. Johnston Management

Rudolf Berger, the famous tenor, and Mme. Rappold-Berger sailed for Europe on the steamship Vaterland last week. Both Mme. Rappold and Mr. Berger will be under the management of R. E. Johnston next season.

Gluck to Appear First at Worcester.

Alma Gluck will make her first appearance here next season in the Worcester, Mass., Music Festival, where she has been engaged as the principal feature for the artists' night concert, which will take place Friday evening, September 25.

Borwick's New York Recital.

Leonard Borwick, the English pianist, will open his American tour with a series of three recitals in Carnegie Hall, New York, to be given on the afternoons of November 5 and 21 and December 8.

Austin New York Recital.

Aeolian Hall is to be the place of Florence Austin's New York violin recital, a matinee affair, on October 20. Edna Rothwell will be her accompanist, as usual.

Henriette Bach in New Jersey.

Henriette Bach, the young violinist, is spending a part of her vacation at the home of Jacob H. Schiff, on the Rumson road, New Jersey.

Lambert Murphy to Sing in Kansas City.

Lambert Murphy has been engaged as one of the soloists for the Kansas City symphony concerts. He will appear on December 2.

Klotz and Connell with Syracuse Club.

Maude Klotz and Horatio Connell have been engaged by the Syracuse Arts Club, Syracuse, N. Y., for a joint recital next season.

Samaroff Recital.

Olga Samaroff will give her first New York recital in Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon, November 28.

Sure Thing.

First Chorus Lady—What do you think, dear? George is back from Scotland, stony broke and so altered that you would hardly know him!

Second Chorus Lady—I'm sure I sha'n't, dear.—London Opinion.

WHY CLEVELAND NEEDS A PERMANENT SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

[From the Cleveland, Ohio, Leader.]

Nothing but popular music will be played and anything resembling the classical will be barred, announces Councilman McGinty, at a public concert to be given in the Haymarket district. And this in a city that employs an imported kapellmeister and supports a municipal symphony orchestra at a cost to the taxpayers of thousands of dollars annually for no other purpose than to elevate the public taste in music!

The thing was bad enough the last time it happened—last summer, while the municipal symphony orchestra was still purring and sighing Sunday afternoons in the parks. The all-ragtime concert in which the Haymarketers were indulged at that time could be excused on the plea of variety. It merely afforded a choice. But now, when symphonies are an established failure in the parks, and are perforce confined to the winter season of indoor diversions, it seems almost cruel to flaunt the popularity of syncopation in the field whence the tone poem has fled.

Again, it would be bad enough if those who prefer ragtime and dance tunes were to enjoy the melodies of their choice and leave the classics alone. Their taste might seem inexplicable to devotees of the higher musical thought, in the city hall and elsewhere, but at least the classic cult would have escaped the affront provocative. As it is, the disdainful announcement that no high-brow composition need apply makes it perfectly plain that the Haymarket clientele not only knows what it wants, but also knows all about the classic stuff and wants none of it.

LEO DIETRICHSTEIN AND GEORGE HAMLIN (RIGHT) IN VIENNA.

Applies Also to Musical Courier.

[From the Los Angeles, Cal., Graphic.]

One point often overlooked by teachers of music and art is the fact that in the summer many parents select the teachers for their children to begin study with in the fall. It will be noted that the largest advertising of colleges and music schools in the Eastern magazines is done in June, July and August. The advertisers know what time in the year brings them the best returns, hence their use of the summer numbers. It may not be out of place to call attention to this fact in this department of The Graphic, as many teachers, not recognizing this condition, defer their announcements until September and October. By that time most persons have made up their minds about the instructors they will employ. A hint to the wise was long ago said to be sufficient.

The columns of The Graphic are open to reputable teachers and will be found to be the best magazine medium in the Southwest by which to reach the class having the highest cultural and financial standing in the community—just the persons whom musicians and artists of ability most desire to add to their clientele.

Australia Lauds Dufault.

Paul Dufault continues to win praise on his tour of the antipodes, as may be seen by the following extracts from Melbourne papers:

Last night at the Auditorium, Paul Dufault made a welcome reappearance after an extended tour through New Zealand. The French-Canadian tenor is an artist whom Melbourne audiences delight to honor, and rightly so, for his many admirable qualities are precisely those which the intelligent music lover looks for in a singer of real eminence. At this time of day there remains little or nothing to be added to what has been written before in these columns on the subject of Paul Dufault. The distinctive "timbre" of his voice—in which sturdiness and sweetness are happily commingled—was as evident at last night's concert as ever before, and once again he was rewarded with the plaudits of an audience whose enthusiasm was completely justified. This is high praise, but the purity of Dufault's vocal methods and the finished manner with which he treats everything he sings call for an honest approval of a particularly fine artist.

Time after time was the popular tenor recalled last night; it is no overstatement to record that he achieved a thoroughly deserved triumph.—The Age, Melbourne, April 14, 1914.

Paul Dufault is an artist through and through. His are not unpremeditated strains, though nature has endowed him with a magnificent voice. He is a finely mental singer, and gains his effects by reason of a splendid mastery of vocal method (which includes perfect moulding of the tone), equally perfect enunciation, and a capacity for suggesting atmosphere so exactly calculated that every note, every word and subtle inflection tells.

The concert last night was a brilliant success. Mr. Dufault, of course, reaped the greatest honors, rousing the audience—a very large one—to an extraordinary pitch of enthusiasm. And not with one or two things either, as is so often the case. In effect, M. Dufault says with Epictetus, "Not too much of anything," not even of his brilliant top notes, his choicest bits of mezzo voce, or any other of the striking effects in his art. He believes in a finely balanced method, and the result is that in whatever he does he is always interesting. . . . "The Trumpeter," by Dix, was also memorable, and as a conclusion to the concert sent away the audience with a greater opinion than ever as to what M. Dufault can do.—The Argus, Melbourne, April 14, 1914. (Advertisement.)

Wolfsohn Artists at Worcester Festival.

The following artists under the management of the Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, have been engaged for the Worcester (Mass.) Musical Festival, which takes place September 23, 24 and 25: Alma Gluck, Olive Kline, Florence Hinkle, Mildred Potter, Evan Williams, Herbert Witherspoon, Clarence Whitehill, Efrem Zimbalist.

A Busy Manager.

Pictured herewith is Wendell Heighton, the astute manager of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, who happened to be at Christian College, Columbia, Mo., when caught by the camera.

Mr. Heighton called at the Chicago office of the MUSICAL COURIER recently and informed the representative that the season 1914-15 will be the biggest and longest in the history of the Minneapolis Orchestra. The announcement of plans for next season, including the list of the soloists and concerts to be given, will soon appear in the MUSICAL COURIER.

WENDELL HEIGHTON AT CHRISTIAN COLLEGE.

Hinkle with Boston Orchestra.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has just engaged Florence Hinkle to sing with this organization in Providence, R. I., for the second time. In April last she was the soloist at the final concert in that city for the season by the Boston Orchestra.

George Hamlin's Son Wants to Conduct.

Jack Hamlin, the eleven year old son of George Hamlin, the tenor, is now in Berlin, studying violin. Recently the conductor of a large orchestra, meaning to encourage him, told the small boy that when he learned to play well enough he could come and play in his orchestra. Jack was unimpressed. "I don't care anything about playing," he said, "but I'd just as soon conduct."

Tenor and Actor in Vienna.

George Hamlin, the distinguished American tenor, and Leo Dietrichstein, the well known New York actor, are shown herewith. The snapshot shown on this page was taken recently in Vienna.

Whitehill to Return to London.

Clarence Whitehill is a prime favorite with the English public. His recent appearances there in opera at Covent Garden were such sterling successes that the Covent Garden management immediately contracted with him to return next April for the opening of the opera season, commencing April 16. His success on the concert platform there two years ago was equally emphatic. Sir Henry Wood more than a year ago urged Mr. Whitehill to hold his October time of this year for a series of English festivals and he is booked to sing at the Norwich, England, festival, from October 28 to 31. This will necessitate Mr. Whitehill's sailing from this country right after he fills his engagement at the Worcester (Mass.) Festival, which takes place during the week of September 21. Mr. Whitehill's opening fall engagement in England will be in Manchester on October 10.

MILAN NOTES.

Milan, Italy, June 27, 1914.

During the past week at the Carcano, "Tosca" and "Rigoletto" were given.

Giovanni Sample has returned from Arona, where he sang for ten days as leading tenor in the operas heard in that city. He scored a hit and received encores and curtain calls every night. He is to appear soon in "Otello."

Alice Sovereign has been appearing in various places in Italy in grand opera and has been very successful. She sang last week in "Trovatore" in a city near here.

Francesco Mottino, the old teacher of operatic acting, has so far recovered from his illness that he is attempting to resume his work. In his young manhood he was not only a good singer in grand opera, but also quite celebrated in drama. He was a pupil of the celebrated Gustavo Modena, who was also Rossi's, Salvini's and Ristori's teacher.

On June 24 Zlatko Balokovic, violinist, gave a concert at the Teatro dal Verme.

Maria Mohler, soprano, left this week for Cortina in the Dolomites, where she will remain until the last of August, when she returns to Milan to be married, after which her home will be here.

Advices from Verona state that "Carmen" will be given in the Arena in that city from August 1 until August 16, the cast being: Carmen, Maria Gay-Zenatello; Micaela, Sarah Fidelia, Solari; Frasquita, Farrario, Wanda; Corbetto, Ada; Don José, Famadas, Amador; Escamillo, Viglione, Borghese, Domenico; Dancairo, Paltrinieri, Giordano; Remendado, Morelatto, Gaetano; Zuniga, Mugnoz, Luigi. The conductor is Moranzoni.

On June 24, at the Arena in Milan, they celebrated with music and pyrotechnics the anniversary of the battle of San Martino before an immense throng of people.

Giovanni Tansini, the retired celebrated basso, who has a villa at Arona, is building a home in Milan. He retired from the operatic stage about two years ago after a career of over forty years. He was at the Scala for two years, appearing in important roles. He also toured Russia with a company of Italian artists.

On June 24 Maria Franceschini made her debut as Mimi in "Boheme" and was received favorably. She sang in the Garibaldi Theatre and was encored warmly.

"Notte di Leggenda," by Franchetti, and "Le Tre Maschere," by De Lara, are being prepared at the Scala. These operas are new at the Scala.

J. ALLEN.

The Grouch—Ten reels and just one man killed—and you call this a play!—Evening Post.

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave. New York

Articles of general musical interest, with or without pictures, will be examined by the Musical Courier if sent on approval, accompanied by stamped envelope for the return of the manuscript. In the event of its acceptance, such matter will be paid for at space rates. Address all manuscripts to The Musical Courier Company, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, Southeast corner of Thirty-ninth Street.

LOS ANGELES SEASON WANES.

Musicians Welcome Season End—Dominant Club's New Officers—Music Teachers Will Meet in Convention at San Diego—People's Orchestra Revived—Gamut Club Gives Dinner—Popular Manager Visits the East.

1110 West Washington Street,
Los Angeles, Cal., July 3, 1914.

With the final pupils' recitals of last week and the commencements at the various colleges and conservatories, the season seems to be reaching an end, and I think with regret neither to teachers nor pupils, and I am sure not to the critics.

DOMINANT CLUB OFFICERS ELECTED.

As the first Saturday of the month fell upon July 4, the annual meeting of the Dominant Club was changed to June 27. The newly elected officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Mrs. Wm. H. Jamison; vice-president, Margaret Goetz; recording secretary, Verna Blythe; financial secretary, Mrs. Sidney Webb; treasurer, Lucile Dickson; social chairman, Frieda Peycke; membership committee, Mrs. Charles G. Stivers (chairman), Mrs. Clifford Lott, Mrs. Roth Hamilton; program committee, Blanche Ruby (chairman), Minne Hance, Gertrude Cohen.

THE MUSIC TEACHERS' STATE ASSOCIATION CONVENTION.

The main interest of the music teachers at present is the coming convention in San Diego, July 13 to 16. A large delegation from Los Angeles will attend and be represented upon the programs. July 11 the State board will come to Los Angeles for a joint meeting with the local board, previous to the convention.

The program prepared looks very interesting and covers a wide field. One question which is likely to come up for settlement is the standardization of requirements for membership in the association. The board of directors has formulated the following, presumably tentative requirements:

Class I.—Teachers of ten years' experience, no examination to be required. This term of experience to be increased two years each year for six consecutive years.

Class II.—Teachers of metropolitan, national or international repute as music artists or teachers, no examination.

Class III.—Pupils having completed or successfully passed the examinations in a four years' music study course in any accredited school or college of music: also, advanced pupils who have studied at least two years under teachers in Class II admitted upon presentation of diploma without further examination.

Class IV.—Persons not eligible under Classes I, II or III may become active members by passing the membership examination as formulated by the committees in the various branches of music.

Class V.—All active members in good standing at the time of adoption of this classification will be accepted as "Founding Members" without examination.

The degree or title of fellow shall be conferred upon any active member of this association, upon presentation of a postgraduate diploma covering at least a six years' course of music study in any accredited school or college of music or upon passing an examination formulated for such degree.

The degree or title of associate shall be conferred upon any active member, upon presentation of a diploma covering at least an eight years' course of music study in an accredited college or university, or upon passing an examination formulated for such degree which shall be considered uniform with the degree of bachelor of music.

EDWARD LEBEGOTT REVIVES PEOPLE'S ORCHESTRA.

Mr. Lebegott, who was the first conductor of the now defunct People's Orchestra, will make another effort to revive a popular priced orchestra for Los Angeles next year. He announces that the concerts will be given in the Shrine Auditorium, which is the largest building of the kind in the city, but as it is some distance out, many have expressed doubts as to his ability to get the people to go. However, that remains to be seen.

GAMUT CLUB'S MONTHLY DINNER.

The monthly dinner of the Gamut Club Wednesday evening partook of a patriotic nature, coming so near the national holiday. In the absence of President Blanchard and Vice-President Behymer, Professor Willhartitz presided. He is a prime favorite of all and presided with his usual hearty grace and wit.

Among the guests of honor, who provided the program, Louise Rieger, dramatic soprano of the Boston Opera Company, scored an immediate success; Evelyn Gurley-Kane, of Washington, D. C.; Bernard Walther, violinist; Anna Reher, pianist, and her husband, Wilhelm Reher, violinist, recently from Vienna; the Euterpean Quartet, and Frank Kurtz, baritone, also contributed numbers. The accompanists were Mrs. Hennion Robinson and Gertrude Ross. Great jollity prevailed and the evening wound up with a round robin letter to F. W. Blanchard, telling him of the extraordinary success of the evening. Mr. Blanchard is now in Paris.

L. E. BEHYMER GOES EAST.

L. E. Behymer left for his annual trip to the East, Monday, June 29, to be gone a couple of months and to complete his arrangements for next year's attractions.

JANE CATHERWOOD.

Bits of Grand Opera for the Masses.

If the courts will not allow Oscar Hammerstein to provide the New York public with grand opera entire at popular prices he proposes to give it to them piecemeal—in "snatches," as he announces. Grand opera selections as vaudeville numbers are nothing new, although on a less ambitious scale, and it is hard to see how Mr. Hammerstein can be prevented from carrying out this adroit scheme in his new opera house, where the excerpts from the great music dramas will be interspersed with motion pictures. It will be a grand operatic half loaf, far better than no bread for the multitude of music lovers who cannot afford to pay metropolitan prices for seats.—Newark (N. J.) Star.

The Care of the Piano.

One of those popular fellows who can sit down at a piano and play accompaniments to songs, even when the "music" is not forthcoming, happened to be in a little village recently when a concert was almost stuck through the pianist disappointing at the last minute. Our friend, says the Glasgow News, came to the rescue and got the company out of its difficulty, but inwardly he applied to the instrument adjectives which would shock even George Bernard Shaw. After the performance the caretaker (a "lady") was covering up for the night, and the player mentioned to her that the piano was very much in need of attention, but she scouted the idea. "Why," said she, "I went over it myself this morning and scrubbed every part of it, keys and all."

Carl Friedberg in Europe.

Carl Friedberg, the famous German pianist, who will come to America next season, is still busy with his concert work in Europe. He has played over one hundred concerts in the principal cities throughout Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, France, England and Denmark, and has been soloist also at important festivals on the Rhine.

He expected to arrive the first week in October, but has had to change his plans in order to fill some concert dates in Europe before he sails. He has to play over a dozen concerts during September, one to be under the leadership of Felix Weingartner.

Mme. Schloemann on Jersey Coast.

Minna Schloemann, vocal teacher, of New York, is spending the summer months at East Long Branch, N. J., which is so convenient for a number of her pupils that they will continue their studies during the summer. However, Mme. Schloemann will find it necessary to spend one day a week at her New York studio for the accommodation of a few pupils who will remain in the city during the warm weather.

A Wagnerian.

"Do you like Wagner?"

"Better than I used to," replied Mr. Cumrox. "There's a lot of his music that no one would attempt to dance to."—Washington Star.

WANTED

WANTED—Singing Director by German-American Singing Society. Good field for competent man. Address, Secretary, Belleville Liederkranz, Belleville, Ill.

WANTED—There is a splendid opportunity for a good piano, violin or singing teacher to connect with a musical institution of the highest standing in one of the leading cities of the United States by investing moderate sum in the institution. Only men or women of superior ability, culture and refinement considered. Steady income assured to the proper persons. All communications confidential. Send photo, credentials, telephone number and complete particulars to "Cooperative Opportunity," care of MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

HENRY P. SCHMITT
VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
Residence Studio: 203 W. 81st St., New York. Tel. Schuyler 9517

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY
BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

SAMUEL GARDNER, VIOLINIST
Exclusive management
FOSTER AND DAVID
500 Fifth Ave., New York

VICTOR HARRIS
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
THE BEAUFORT
140 West 57th Street
Tel. 3053 Columbus

SARTO
Bass-Baritone
(Late Metropolitan Opera Company)
Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th Street, - New York

EMMA NAGEL SOPRANO
SEASON 1914-15
Management, WALTER ANDERSON, - New York

WALTER ANDERSON ANNOUNCES
LOUISE VAN OGLE
(Now Touring Russia) in Illustrated
"TALKS ON MODERN OPERAS"
Assisted by EMMA NAGEL, Soprano
Western Tour, January-February, 1915
Address 171 West 57th Street - - - New York

Morse - Rummel
VIOLINIST
Endorsed by Nikisch, Damrosch, Ysaye, Godowsky
DIRECTION - Walter Anderson, 171 West 57th Street - NEW YORK

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 3 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 22, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1791

1—GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON. 2—WALTER H. ROTHWELL, CONDUCTOR ST. PAUL SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA. 3—ELIZABETH ROTHWELL-WOLFF, SOPRANO. 4—EDNA GUNNAR PETERSON, PIANIST. 5—ESTHER PLUMB, CONTRALTO. 6—CORA KEMPRE, SOPRANO (Photo by Victor Georg). 7—ALBERT BORROFF, BASSO. 8—RIDGELEY HUDSON, TENOR. 9—CELENE LOVELAND, PIANIST. 10—ROSA OLITZKA, CONTRALTO (Copyright by Mishkin Studio, New York). 11—KATHLEEN HART, SOPRANO. 12—CLARA WILLIAMS, SOPRANO.

GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON

And Some Artists Under Her Management

...NAL MUSICAL AND
...ATIONAL AGENCY.
...ert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
...hone: 2634 Columbus.

CLIFFORD DEMAREST, F. A. G. O.,
ORGANIST—COMPOSER.
Recitals—Instruction.
Church of The Messiah, 34th St. & Park Av., N.Y.C.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall,
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
BOICE.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

EUGENIE PAPPENHEIM,
THE CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Culture in All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101 W. 78th St., New York City.
Telephone: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
68th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals.
Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
'Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.
Special Summer Course.

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
Will teach during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano.
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1913. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West, Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York.
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet.
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th St.

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Street
Complete musical education given to students from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

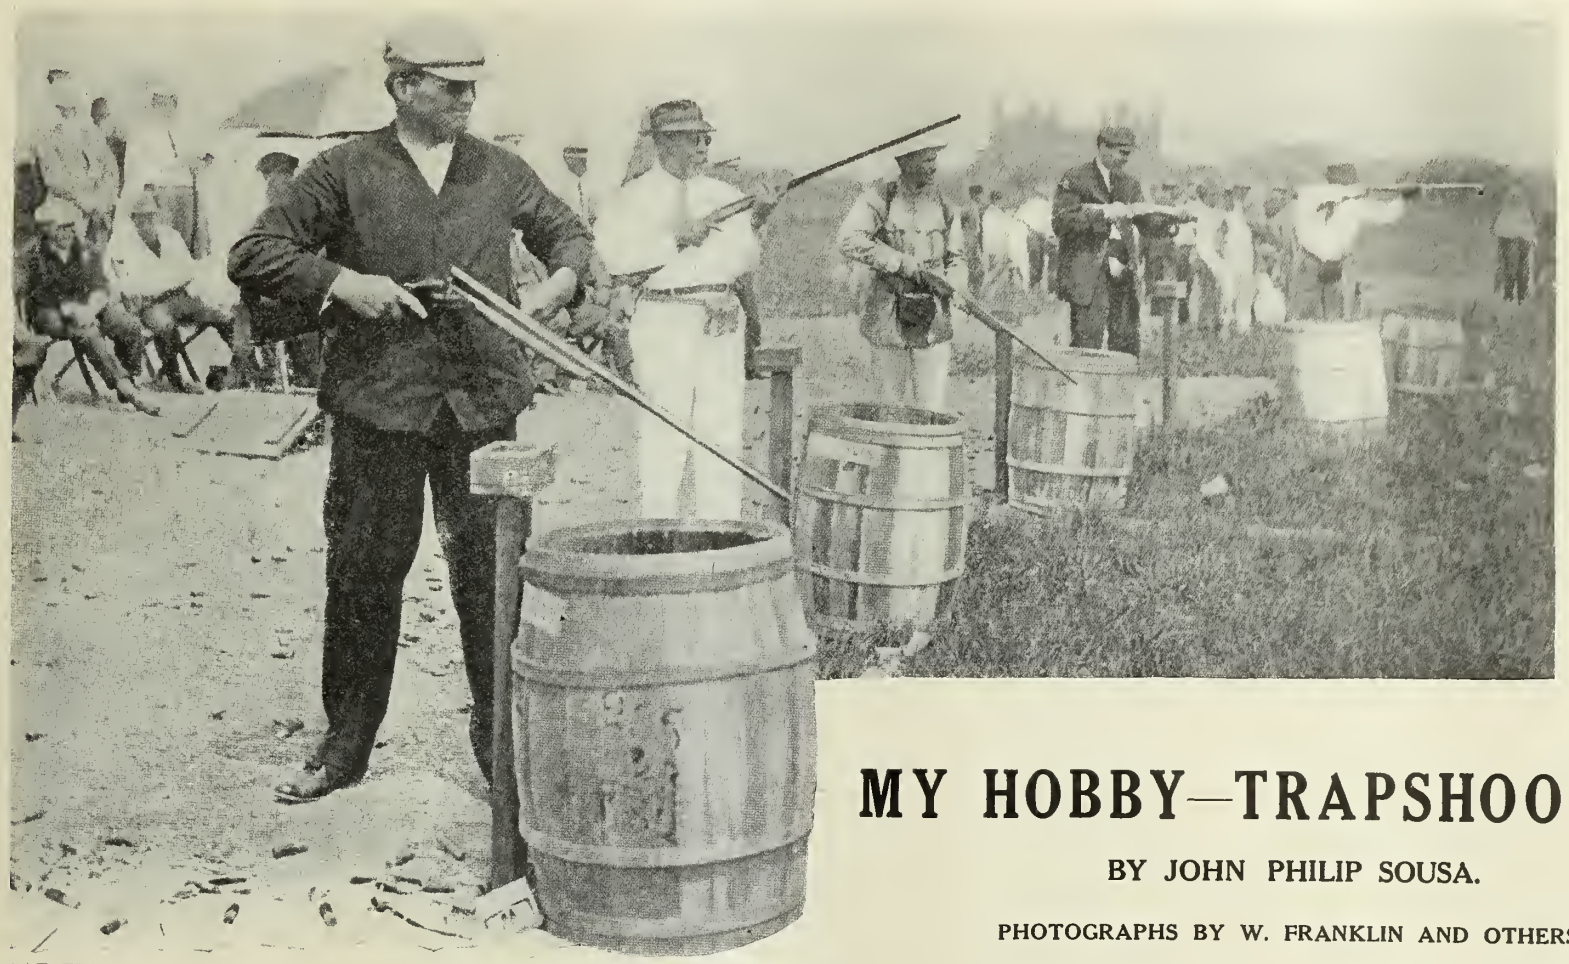
MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR.
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT.
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]



ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMOND,
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Correct Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 3. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 22, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1791.

"AT THE FIRING LINE ALL MEN ARE FREE AND EQUAL" MR. SOUSA (SECOND FROM LEFT) AT THE HARRISBURG, PA., 1913 TOURNAMENT.

[From Country Life in America—Reproduced by Permission.]

MY HOBBY—TRAPSHOOTING.

BY JOHN PHILIP SOUSA.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY W. FRANKLIN AND OTHERS.

Heaven pity the poor mortal who has not a hobby! In the wisdom of things, every man should have an active, muscle building, fat destroying, lung developing hobby that he can confide in, talk baby talk to, and coddle when he is depressed by liverish symptoms or business cares. It should be his hobby alone and should never be offered to another to "throw a leg across." Hobbies should always be ridden and never allowed to ride. A riding hobby is a nuisance, it is a veritable "old man of the sea," therefore "Verbum sat sapienti," which to the hobbyist is "A word to the wise," etc.

In the very olden days a gentleman's recreations were principally confined to hunting, hawking, fowling and fishing. At the present time one can add quoits, tennis, croquet, bowling, billiards, pool, archery, golf, trapshooting, mounted hockey or polo, squash, hand ball, and a myriad other games to select from as a hobby, therefore no well conducted family should be minus one.

Perhaps the games, exercises, pastimes and recreations with a horse as an integral part are the most fascinating of all sports. The delights and excitements of the chase, the race, jumping, and plain riding have been sung by poets from time immemorial.

But, alas! for the high cost of living—though the horse stands preeminent as the sportsman's ideal, the cost and the maintenance of an equine companion bar all save the favored few.

Next to love for the horse comes love for the gun; it is a love that is natural, for it is identified with the chase and the conflict, and the world knows its power when in quest of food or the enemy. Tomes have been written about the achievements of those who have excelled as marksmen—be it with gun or bow. The keen eye and steady hand of William Tell have fired with emulative zeal the youth of all lands.

With an inherent admiration for the skill of the marksman, it is not difficult to account for the present day popularity of trapshooting. It is the apex of social democracy in sport. At the beginning sport was confined to the efforts of "gentlemen"; later it pertained to recreations and pleasures for "gentlemen, citizens and countrymen"; and with the birth of trapshooting, it became a sport for every one, be he millionaire or artisan, prince, wage earner, financier or farmer. In its ranks is found every stratum of society; like love, it levels all classes. At the firing point all men are free and equal, and he who smashes the greatest number of flying targets is the king of the day, whether he live in a palace or a hut.

Trapshooting is very largely an American sport and is now about thirty years old. While it obtains in other countries, it has reached its present dignity through the efforts of the American shooters. It took the place of live bird shooting, which, as a "sport," appealed but to the few and was condemned by the many. Live bird shooting was the wanton destruction of a domestic bird, and was a false sport, to say the least. Like bull fighting, cocking mains and dog battles, it is fast disappearing from the list of killing "sports."

FROM LEFT TO RIGHT, G. MAXWELL, THE FAMOUS ONE-ARMED SHOOTER; JOHN PHILIP SOUSA, HENRY JONES, GEORGE WADDELL, AND WALTER HEEP, WINNER OF PROFESSIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE GRAND AMERICAN HANDICAP IN 1913.

The necessary adjuncts for trapshooting, apart from the men, their guns and ammunition, are: A fair sized field with a good background; one or more traps to throw the targets; the targets, small saucer shaped objects; trap houses or screens to protect the boys from injury; referees; scorers; and trap pullers.

The word "pull," spoken by the shooter, is a command to the trap puller to release the target, and at the same time it is a declaration of the contestant that he is in the game and must abide by the result of his shot. The referee's duty is to announce the result of the shot, whether hit or missed, the scorer to make a true record of that result.

The tournaments are conducted with five men at each trap, the firing points being designated as 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, all equidistant from the trap. If the event is for twenty-five birds, each contestant moves to the next firing point after he has shot five times, until his score is completed. The standard distance is 16 yards. In handicaps it graduates from 16 to 23. The yearly average of the shooter's skill is determined by the number of birds he has shot at 16 yards, without any handicaps, and to be made at tournaments registered with the Interstate Association.

The Interstate Association is composed of the leading gun, powder, shell and lead manufacturers in the United States. They are organized to foster and encourage trap-shooting throughout the land. The various companies comprising the association employ expert shooters, who are known as professionals, to exploit their particular goods. These professionals appear in conjunction with the amateurs at all tournaments. They are not permitted to shoot for prizes, but only for record, but they are invaluable to the amateur in giving advice, encouragement and even mechanical skill when something goes wrong with the gun. The professional, I believe, is an indispensable adjunct to the shooting game. He is a true sportsman, a comforter and a friend, thoroughly honest and wholesome. Long may he continue with us.

When it is understood that the combined ammunition loading companies of the United States have a daily output of a million shells, one can realize the fondness of man for the gun.

The flying target manufacturers send out their product by the carload, and many makers of guns are busy year in and year out, supplying the needs of the growing army of trapshooters. The sport is clean, manly and gives even the timid self reliance.

Binocular shooting has reached its perfection through the experience of the trap gun men. Experts discovered that, as you can read better with two eyes than with one, so you should shoot better with two eyes than with one, and drawing a bead on an object, with one eye, is largely a thing of the past.

A simple test of the practicability of binocular shooting can be made by looking at an object through a finger ring with both eyes open, then closing one eye, thus finding out which eye is focused on the object. That eye is the pilot or master eye, and the other eye is really passive at the moment the trigger is pulled at a flying target.

The greatest trapshooting event of the year is the Grand American Handicap. It is the classic of the sport.

The national and professional championships are determined during this tournament, as well as the race for the Grand American trophy, the most coveted prize in the shooting world.

At the Grand American, held last June, in Dayton, Ohio, there were 501 entries, of which more than 460 qualified, and representative shooters from all over the Union and Canada competed.

On two occasions we have sent American teams to Europe to try our skill against the best European shots. In 1900, a team captained by Tom Marshall, and comprising Crosby, Gilbert, Elliott, Heikes, Fanning, Powers, Merrill, Banks, Tripp, Palmer and Woodward, swept everything before them, both as a team and in individual matches.

At the last Olympic Games an American team comprising Graham, Spotts, Hendrickson, Gleason, Hall and Billings won the trophy, and Jay Graham, of Illinois, won the championship of the world.

The question is often asked, "How can one become a good shot?" If it were keenness of vision or physique alone, many who cannot hit a "flock of barn doors" would be top notchers. Experience teaches us that it requires something beyond mere vision and brawn to make the invincible shot. Let us call it "faculty." Phrenologists define faculty as "a command of nature, having for its object a special impulse or inclination, a talent, an aptitude, a mental gift." The shooting faculty, in its highest development, must therefore be a combination of intellectual faculties and certain physical traits.

"Eventuality is the perceptive faculty whose function it is to take cognizance of objects when in a state of mobility." This applies with equal force to the trapshooter or the baseball batter. We call it the shooting eye in one case, and the batting eye in the other; but in reality, it means the faculty to combine location, time, concentrativeness, and energy. One may have a dozen eyes, but unless one employs these intellectual and physical faculties until they answed almost instinctively, one will not be a great shooter or a great batter.

No doubt ball players like Wagner, Cobb and Jackson, and shooters like Crosby, Gilbert, Huff and others, have these faculties so intertwined that they become almost instinctive.

The young shooter, while developing these faculties, should pay attention to the velocity of his vision, the sensitiveness of his trigger finger, and the pliability of his left arm.

Age has nothing to do with expertness in trapshooting, for the beardless youth and the grizzly septuagenarian compete on an equal footing in every great tournament held during the year.

Trapshooting is poor sport for the chronic prevaricator. The imagination of the piscatorial artist and his fidus Achates, the bird hunter, has no place in the shooting game. The cheerful liar can amplify and elongate five 5-inch perches into a school of young whales, unabashed and unassailed; and the Nimrodic Munchausen can metamorphose six catbirds into fifty braces of pheasants without mussing an infinitesimal strand of his capillary substance. But woe to the trapshooter who deviates from the primrose path of rectitude. Referees, scorers, shooters and spectators will bid him be truthful—for theirs is the knowledge, and his the perfidy.

There is no sport that is so dependent on the man himself as trapshooting; you, and you alone can do it; and whether or not, no one can help you.

Ocular demonstration is the evidence of the contest. The man who breaks the most targets is the man of the hour, and everybody knows it and admires him.

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA AT HIS FAVORITE DIVERSION. THE "MARCH KING" PUTS THE SAME ENERGY INTO HIS PASTIMES THAT HE DOES INTO HIS MUSIC.

ST. JOHN SUMMER BREVITIES.

New Brunswick City Still Active Musically—Examinations Held.

St. John, N. B., July 11, 1914.

Dr. Herbert Sanders, who was in St. John last month for the yearly examinations of students for McGill, gave an organ recital of particular interest in Trinity Church. It is a rare privilege to hear a player of Dr. Sanders' ability. His pedal work is exceptional, clean, rapid and smooth.

His program was excellent, including the overture to "Ruy Blas" (Mendelssohn), "Prayer and Cradle Song" (Guilmant), variations on the "Austrian Hymn" by Chipp, barcarolle by Sterndale Bennett, and "Marche des Templiers" by Benedict. Two especially pleasing numbers were rondo in A by Lemare and toccata by Wood.

Dr. Sanders was assisted by Louise Knight, soprano of Trinity Church, who sang with good conception "Hear Ye, Israel," from Mendelssohn's "Elijah," and Dorothy Littler, of Halifax, N. S., a contralto with nice vocal quality, who sang with expression "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears," from Sullivan's "Light of the World." The recital was well attended.

The St. John music teachers, both vocal and instrumental, are to be congratulated upon the fine showing their pupils made in their examinations under Dr. Sanders, many passing with distinction.

Two Pleasing Concerts.

Evelyn Scotney, assisted by Cara Sapin, contralto; Alfreda Ramella, tenor; Howard White, bass, with John Craig Kelly at the piano, gave two concerts at the Opera House, June 11 and 12.

This organization is making a tour of the Maritime Provinces under the management of E. B. Hesser. At the first concert an all English program was given; part first was made up of songs, part second, the second act of "Martha," sung in costume. Mme. Scotney's best songs were "The Spirit Flower," by Campbell Tipton, and "Down in the Forest," by Landon Ronald.

Mr. White sang with fine conception "She Alone Charmeth My Sadness," from Gounod's "Queen of Sheba." His other numbers, "The Caravan" (De Koven), "My Little Woman" (Osgood) and "King Charles," by Maud Valerie White, were delightful numbers. Mr. White's clear enunciation is a pleasure to his hearers.

The second act of "Martha" was very well given and was acted with spirit and faithfulness to the respective parts. A. L. L.

Backward and Forward.

To be considered really smart nowadays you must never be up to date, says the London Tatler. Your aim must be either to live seventeenth century or scream A. D. 2000. If you play the piano with the desire of being listened to you must either play Bach on a harpsichord or sit down here and there on the keyboard and call it the "music of the future." In the same way, if you paint, you must either copy the earliest Italians or cut a chocolate box into a hundred pieces, throw them into the air, paste them on a canvas as they fall, and call it a Futurist portrait of the Queen Mother of the Netherlands. Even your clothes must either be très-Poiret or else as near the Garden of Eden as a yard of tulle and a blue bow will permit you. Never must you be fin-de-siècle—that is, of today. You must either hark back to the year nothing or soar into the future on the wings of your individual fancy. Perhaps the future is the safest card to play, because the future can never answer you back.

All the world's a stage and most of us want to occupy the critics' seats.—Winnipeg Town Topics.

KATHARINE GOODSON

"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"

In America January to April 1915

TOUR NOW BOOKING

KNABE PIANO

Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.

The Great Demand For

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD

For Recital and Concert

is shown by the fact that over fifty per cent of her entire season of 1914-1915 is now booked. For the remaining dates early application should be made to her sole managers

FOSTER & DAVID

500 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK CITY

TWO PITTSBURGH EVENTS OF INTEREST.

Contralto With Festival Orchestra—Well Known Baritone to Sing.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 11, 1914.

About the only thing of interest musically in Pittsburgh this summer is the Festival Orchestra. Carl Bernthaler has a splendid organization this season, and the summer night concerts at the Schenley Hotel are drawing better than ever. Capac' y crowds have been in attendance at almost every c cert. A splendid array of local artists have appear . this season with the orchestra. Martha Steele, the well known contralto, was among the artists appearing last week. Her numbers included the aria from the "Queen of Sheba," by Gounod, and a group of songs with piano accompaniment, including "Lungi del caro bene," by Secchi; "Frühlingsnacht," by Schumann, and "Der Schmied," by Brahms. The aria was given with warmth of tone, while the group was given with good variety, displaying a brilliant and legato quality with equal finesse. Mrs. Steele has a host of admirers and is always assured of a cordial welcome when appearing with the orchestra.

The orchestra program on this occasion was light, but well rendered. Friday evening of each week is devoted to the classics. These programs, although difficult to render with a small orchestra, have been presented splendidly under the able direction of Mr. Bernthaler.

CECIL FANNING TO APPEAR IN PITTSBURGH.

No announcement of the present season has been received with greater enthusiasm than the one that Cecil Fanning and H. B. Turpin were engaged to appear in Carnegie Music Hall, October 12, in an entire program. Mr. Fanning has appeared twice with the Euterpean Choral and on each occasion has scored a decided triumph, and the fact that he will come here in an entire program will give his many friends an opportunity to hear him at his best. This concert will be handled on the most democratic basis of any given here recently. No seat will be more than one dollar, while student rates will prevail in any part of the hall. From the intense interest manifested at this early date, the prospects for a big house are splendid.

HOLLIS EDISON DAVENNY.

Talented Soprano from Saenger Studios.

Frances Bickford Allen gave a delightful song recital in Greenfield, Mass., June 23, receiving much praise from both press and public for her rendition of English, French, German and Italian songs and arias. She won instant favor with her beautiful dramatic soprano voice, easy stage presence and charming personality. Miss Allen has booked a number of concert and oratorio engagements for the early fall season.

Cellist Liebling Sails.

James Liebling, the cellist, will sail for Europe tomorrow, July 23, where he intends to spend the coming season, making Berlin his headquarters and devoting himself chiefly to concert activity. He is engaged for appearances with several of the large orchestras.

DR. FREDERICK CLARK IN TWO CHARACTERISTIC COSTUME SKETCHES.

For the Organist.

[From Musical Canada.]

Denuded of the exuberant grace notes which were characteristic of the period the favorite movement from Gluck's works, the march from "Alceste," makes an excellent organ voluntary. I am entirely sympathetic with discrimination as to what one plays in divine service, both as regards its essential character and associations. But I hope no young organist will be deterred from rendering this movement merely from its being called a "pantomime" in some editions. For in Italian the words mean simply action without words, and the piece in question is the music accompanying a solemn but mute ceremony round the tomb of Alcestis. In many albums it is quite appropriately headed "Marche Religieux" or "Marcia Religioso," as the case may be.

Musical Cops to Tour Country.

A band composed of members of the police bands of New York, Philadelphia, Newark and Jersey City, N. J., will make a tour of the larger cities of the country in October. There will be about eighty members in all and the project has been sanctioned by the heads of the various departments.

One of the chief objects will be to arouse interest among policemen of other cities to organize bands. It is estimated the expenses of the tour will amount to about $1,200 per day, but there is no fear but this will easily be netted by the admission at the concerts. Inspector Harry Crofut, of Philadelphia, president of the National Police Bands Association, will have personal charge of the tour.

Dr. Frederick Clark's Recitals.

Dr. Frederick Clark, brother of Charles W. Clark and also a baritone, gives recitals in costume, as may be seen by the accompanying pictures, which show Dr. Clark as the Indian and as the Outlaw.

St. Louis to Hear Hamlin and Shattuck.

George Hamlin and Arthur Shattuck will appear in joint recital on the artists' series course conducted by Hattie B. Gooding, St. Louis, Mo.

AMERICAN TOUR—NOVEMBER—MAY 1914—1915

WILLY BURMESTER
THE GREAT GERMAN VIOLINIST

Mr. Burmester will make his First Orchestral Appearance next season, November 6th, with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, playing the Paganini Concerto No. 1.

Other Orchestral Engagements are with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

STEINWAY PIANO USED

For dates and terms apply to CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées), Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI.) Paris

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Studio: 10 Rue Herran, Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS
French and English Readings | (especially for opera students)
America, October to April | Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Address, care Musical Courier | Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4. rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Seul professeur de chant diplomé par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi
151 Rue de Rome

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
Mme. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris

American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

PARIS SUMMER EVENTS BRIEFLY CHRONICLED.

Noted Teacher Finishes Season with Attractive Pupils' Recital—Operatic Debut of American Soprano—Prix de Rome—California Glee Club Heard—Notes

[All inquiries referring to American musicians and music as well as matters of interest to American visitors in Paris, or such as contemplate a visit to France, may be addressed to H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beauséjour, to whom tickets should also be sent by those who desire their recitals or concerts to be attended.]

Paris, July 7, 1914.

Arthur Alexander ended his teaching season with a pupils' recital at his studio on June 25. There was a capital program rendered, well calculated to show the ability of his pupils and the splendid progress which they have made during the past season. It opened with a duet from Thomas' "Hamlet," finely sung by Kathleen Lawler, soprano, and Richard Bunn, baritone, and at the end they were heard to still better advantage in a capital rendition of the big duet from the second act of "Rigoletto." Mrs. Lawler, a fine coloratura soprano, needs no fresh praise, as her excellent work has often been mentioned in these columns. Richard Bunn has a baritone voice of exceptionally good quality and he has made great progress in singing this past season, during which he has been working hard with Mr. Alexander and with Maitre de Reszke as well. This is a young man who is bound to be heard from in public work in the near future. Both were heard in solo numbers as well.

Photo by Ellis, Paris.
ARTHUR ALEXANDER.

Another very excellent singer in the class is Charles de la Platé, who has a very mellow, round and agreeable basse cantate. I have heard him many times this past winter, in public and private work. His progress has been steady and marked, and his two numbers, an aria from Verdi's "Don Carlos" and the serenade from Tschaikowsky's "Don Juan," were excellently done. Addison Putney, a contralto from Australia, has a beautiful voice and sings finely. Lenore Simonsen, soprano, also has an exceptionally fine voice and has made great progress the past season. Clara Peterson, a sister of May Esther Peterson and the possessor of a pretty soprano voice, sang for the first time before an audience and acquitted herself with great credit. Others who contributed most acceptably to the program were Eleanor King and Mme. Santos-Suarez. Mr. Alexander is certainly to be congratulated on the evidences of his successful work as shown by each member of his class. I have kept in close touch with the work of his studio this past season and can testify from personal knowledge that there is not one pupil who has not showed steady and certain progress. There was not a single weak spot in the program, something very unusual in students' recitals.

An American Soprano.

On June 24 May Esther Peterson, American soprano, made her debut at the Opéra-Comique, singing the same role, that of Lakme, in which she made her debut earlier in the season at the Gaietc-Lyrique. Her fine work in this role was reviewed in detail at that time, so it is sufficient to say this time that she was again in splendid form and showed a thorough mastery of the role in every way. It may be truly said that she met with a triumphant success, so much so that the management immediately entered into negotiations which have resulted in her engagement as a

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

DOCTEUR CONTA Cure and rejuvenescence of the voice by a special treatment of the mucous membranes of the nose and throat
OFFICE HOURS: 1 to 4
18 RUE DUPHOT, (Bd. Madeleine) PARIS

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

CHARLES W. CLARK
AMERICAN TOUR SEASON 1914-15
Direction: Redpath Musical Bureau, Chicago
BARITONE
Dr. Frederick Clark, Personal Representative, 12 Rue Leonard de Vinci, Paris regular member of the company at that famous institution for six months of next season.

During the summer Miss Peterson will appear in concert or in opera at several of the best known resorts in Europe, including Ostend, Dinard, Cabourg, Deauville, Le Toquet and Biarritz. Her engagement at the Opéra Comique will begin in October and extend to the beginning of the year. In January, February and March she will sing several times in Menton and Cannes, after which she will return to the Opéra Comique to complete her season there. Miss Peterson is one of the many pupils who have passed from Jean de Reszke's studio to a successful career on the stage.

Prix de Rome.

The Prix de Rome of music has fallen this year to Marcel Dupré, who received the reward of the judges for his cantata at the annual contest which took place last Saturday. The subject of the cantata this year was "Eros and Psyche," containing, as usual, the three roles which are written for soprano, tenor and bass. The artists who executed M. Dupré's composition were Mlle. Montjovet, MM. Foix and Dupré, of the Opéra Comique, accompanied at the piano by that very accomplished player, Jean Verd. M. Verd appears to be a mascot in this annual contest, for this is the second laureat whom he has helped to win the Prix de Rome.

California Glee Club.

Last evening the glee club of the University of California gave the last concert of its second European trip at the Hotel Majestic. It was a treat to hear a real American program once more which, though perhaps more closely allied to vaudeville than to music, was most enjoyable. Of the strictly musical numbers the best were in the last group, especially the "Pipe and Stein" song, written by Walter de Léon, of the class of 1906. The boys have evidently been very well trained by their director, C. R. Morse. Their high jinks, which included popular songs by Howard Patrick, L. R. Turner, G. W. Baker and Dickson Maddox as soloists and a most laughable dancing skit by Gilbert Rose and Douglas Short were most entertaining and very heartily applauded by a large audience, encores being the order of the day.

The boys have had a splendid trip, giving concerts in London, Berlin, Dresden, Lucerne, Venice, Milan and Paris, and will return home tomorrow with memories of a very jolly time.

Notes.

Mildred Dilling, a New York harpist, is spending the summer in Paris studying with Henriette Renée, the Paris harp virtuosa. On Sunday, June 28, she gave a short recital at the American Art Club, including in her program:

Bourrée ..... Bach
Menuet d'Armour ..... Massanet
Am Springbrunnen .....Zabel
Arabesque ..... Debussy
Les Follets .....Hasselmann
Impromptu Caprice ..... Pierné

Miss Dilling has the good luck to be a musician as well as a harp player, two things which do not always go together. Such things, for instance, as the Bach "Bourrée" she played with a splendid musicianship. Other specially attractive pieces were Debussy's "Arabesque" and Pierné's "Impromptu Caprice." Needless to say, Miss Dilling was the recipient of very hearty applause from a large audience.

Camille Decreus, the pianist, who has been Ysaye's accompanist in America for the last two seasons, returned to his Paris home a few weeks ago. He will leave it again shortly to go to the magnificent chateau of Senator A. Clarke, at Evry Petit Bourg, a short distance out of Paris, on the Seine. He will spend the summer there resting and preparing his repertoire for the concerts of the coming season in America, which he will play, together with the French violinist, André Tourret. M. Decreus received an offer to play fifteen concerts with Ysaye in Switzerland and in Germany next November, but will be obliged to decline it, as his arrangements with Manager R. E. Johnston call for him to begin his concert work in America the middle of November.

Here is a notice which appeared last Sunday in the Paris New York Herald: "M. Vanni Marcoux, the French baritone, who sang in Paris during the Boston Opera Company's recent season at the Theatre des Champs-Elysées, was married at the church of Saint-Sulpice yesterday morning to Mlle. Madeleine Morlay, the Parisian actress. Mr. Henry Russell was a witness for the bridegroom. After an automobile tour in the south of France and Italy, the newly wedded couple will leave for America on board the Olympic on October 21."

And here another paragraph from this morning's New York Herald: "Mlle. Heilbronner, of the Opéra Comique, was injured in an automobile collision in Paris on May 21 last, her face being cut by fragments of glass. As a consequence, she was obliged to interrupt her engagements for three weeks." "Her suit against the driver of the autocab in which she was riding and the autocab which collided with it was heard yesterday," says the Journal, "and she was granted 7,000 fr. damages, two-thirds to be paid by the driver of the autocab which struck that which she occupied and one-third by the chauffeur of the latter. They were fined respectively 100 fr. and 50 fr." Of course one must be very sorry for Mlle. Heilbronner and for the injury to her face, but at the same time the reflection inevitably suggests itself that, at the absolutely ridiculous salaries which are paid at the Opéra Comique, she probably receives a good deal more from the court than she could earn at that institution in three weeks, three months, or, one is almost tempted to add, three years.

At the last concert of the Société Française de la Musique, given on Thursday last, M. Paul Loyonnet, a favorite French pianist, played Debussy's "Passe-Pieds," and "Spring" and "Autumn," from Campbell-Tipton's beautiful suite, "Four Seasons." Apropos of Campbell-Tipton, I have just received from the Schirmer press his new "Lament" for violin and piano. This composition is very valuable for recital purposes and is most interesting, both on account of its melody, its ingenious harmonies, and its clearly contrasted rhythms. It is written with a fine eye to the possibilities of the violin.

The famous French basso, Pol Plançon, has been very seriously ill, but we are happy to learn that he is now on the road to recovery.

Mrs. Hanna Butler, the well known Chicago teacher, is visiting Paris this month accompanied by some of her pupils, among them Mrs. Samuel Insull, of Chicago. They will go later to the Bavarian Alps, a most beautiful country which is becoming a favorite summer resort for Americans.

Roberto Moranzoni, the excellent Italian conductor of the Boston Opera Company, has been honored by being specially invited to conduct Wolf-Ferrari's "Jewels of the Madonna" at the Opera here. He has already led two performances, which have shown Parisians how that opera should really be given.

Gabriel Lapierre, who is known in America for his fine work as pianist on the splendid tour which Mme. Melba and Kubelik made last winter, will leave shortly with his family for a vacation on the south coast of Finistère. His splendid new studio on the Boulevard Jules Sandeau is nearly completed, and he will return there on the first of September to begin his work as vocal teacher and coacher. This studio, with its wonderfully designed decorations in the Gothic style, will be one of the most attractive in Paris. M. Lapierre was honored by a visit from Mme. Melba just before she left for Australia, who expressed her hearty admiration for it even in its then unfinished state.

Johannes Sembach, the German tenor, who made such an excellent impression here during the season of the Boston Opera Company at the Theatre des Champs-Elysées, left Paris at the close of the season for Herrsching an Ammersee, a beautiful summer resort in the Bavarian highland, where he and Mrs. Sembach will spend their vacation.

Jean de Reszke will have two pupils at the Opera Comique next season, Maggie Teyte having been engaged for that institution as well as May Esther Peterson.

Joseph Ballentyne, director of the Ogden (Utah) Temple Choir of 250 voices, has just arrived in Paris, where he will remain for some time coaching with Charles Bowes.

A New Strauss Opera?

The accompanying photograph of Ottilie Metzger, the great German contralto, and her husband, Theodor Lattermann, of the Hamburg Opera Company, which was sent to the Musical Courier from their home in Hamburg, shows the singers in the famous zoological gardens of Hagenbeck, who originated the idea of having the animals kept in the open air on rocks and among trees in imitation of nature, and not in cages. One might imagine from this photograph that they were rehearsing the leading roles in some new horror emanating from the brain of Richard Strauss.

OTTILIE METZGER AND THEODOR LATTERMANN AT HAGENBECK'S ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS, HAMBURG.

PIANOS IN PARIS

Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos

We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.

Renting for Music Students a Specialty

THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Kingston Will Return in September.

Morgan Kingston, a leading tenor of the New York Century Opera Company, his teacher and coach, Evelyn Edwardes, and Richard Eckholt, the German conductor of the Quinlan Opera Company, are shown in the accompanying snapshot in the garden of Miss Edwardes' charming country home at Charleywood, England.

ARTISTIC RELAXATION—LEFT TO RIGHT: MORGAN KINGSTON AND DOG, "RAGS" (FIND THE DOG); EVELYN HATTERAS EDWARDES, RICHARD ECKHOLDT, GERMAN CONDUCTOR OF QUINLAN OPERA COMPANY.

This distinguished Welsh tenor, whose first season at the Century Opera House proved such a signal success, announces that he will return to America, September 1, to resume his duties in the leading roles, at the popular New York opera house.

Everyone will be looking forward eagerly to the early return of this splendid artist, who, during last season developed into one of the operatic favorites, with the many large audiences, which were fortunate enough to hear him. Kingston's work for the coming season promises to be much more interesting than ever before.

Ganz at Home.

Rudolph Ganz appeared at the Swiss Music Festival, in Berne, June 27 and 28. This was his first return to his native land since his opening ten concerts there last October. The audience was most enthusiastic. After his playing of his own konzerstück, op. 4, in its new revised and final form, the big audience of 2,500 people rose and cheered him loudly and he had to give three encores.

Mr. Ganz will sail September 6, from Boulogne, on the steamship Berlin, and he expects to open his American tour, September 25, at the Worcester (Mass.) Festival, where he will play the Tschaikowsky B flat minor concerto.

The Famous Prima Donna of the Paris Grand Opera

MLLE. ALICE VERLET

"With the exception of Mmes. Patti and Melba, no voice of exactly the same quality has been in this country for a long period. . . ."
—London Morning Post, March 22, 1909.

Will Tour the Season 1914-15 in U.S.A. and Canada and is now being booked for Concerts and Recitals.

By Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave. New York

GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON'S ARTISTS.

Popular Chicago Manager Has an Attractive List for Next Season.

Gertrude V. O'Hanlon, manager of musical celebrities, has been in the managerial field several years and during that time has made bookings for the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, and last year managed the extensive tour of the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra. She is an active, buoyant and attractive woman, popular among impresarios, well liked by her competitors and highly appreciated by the artists under her able direction, several of whom are discussed herewith:

Rosa Olitzka.

Rosa Olitzka, contralto, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company, of New York, Chicago and Boston Grand Opera Companies and Covent Garden, London, is recognized today to be among the leading vocalists of the world. Her fame has been established by a continuous succession of operatic triumphs and concert successes. To enumerate them would require too much space, but they are known not only to the patrons of the opera houses above mentioned, but also to those of the Imperial Opera Company of St. Petersburg, the National Opera Company of Berlin and La Scala of Milan. In recital, Mme. Olitzka is known all over Europe, and she has appeared with great success throughout the United States. In concert, as in opera, her powers have been attested by the cordial comment of critics and the enthusiasm of her audiences. Few artists have gone from the grand opera stage into concert with greater facility and success.

Mme. Olitzka will appear in the West and the Middle States under the management of Miss O'Hanlon, who has already reported several important engagements for this renowned artist for the coming season. The balance of Mme. Olitzka's dates are booked through the offices of R. E. Johnston, of New York.

Elizabeth Rothwell-Wolff.

Elizabeth Rothwell-Wolff, the well known operatic and concert artist, and wife of the distinguished conductor of the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra, will, this year, make a joint recital tour with her husband. She was the first American Cio-Cio-San in the production of Savage's "Madame Butterfly." Mrs. Wolff is said to have been the youngest American artist to win prima donna honors, and she was released from the grand opera in Mainz only after Mr. Savage had paid well for this release.

Mrs. Wolff has appeared as soloist at the Mozart Festival in Weimar, with the Cæcilien Society of Frankfurt, with the Symphony Orchestra of Bad Nauheim, with the Royal Opera of Darmstadt, and with the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra and in grand opera in Mainz. She toured the United States several times and her success has been attested by the splendid tributes paid her by the leading critics in the country and the enthusiasm of her audiences.

Under the management of Gertrude V. O'Hanlon Mrs. Wolff's coming season promises to be exceptionally profitable from every standpoint. Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor of the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra, who will preside at the piano at his wife's recitals, is a too well known musical personality to need any introduction here. The combination will, no doubt, prove to be one of the prominent ones in the musical world this coming season.

Edna Gunnar Peterson.

In the short time that this young pianist has been before the public she has already established herself firmly in the front rank of American pianists. Her playing is distinguished by strength unusual in a woman, combined with a delicacy and poetic charm of interpretation and a keen sense of rhythm. Her debut as a pianist was made in Berlin with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, under Dr. Ernest Künwald. She played the Mendelssohn B minor capriccio, the Chopin E minor concerto, and a concertstück composed of and conducted by her teacher, the eminent Rudolph Ganz. Her success was such that she was engaged for a second appearance with the same orchestra, and on April 20 of the same year she again played the Ganz concertstück for two pianos.

Two years ago Miss Peterson returned to America and appeared as soloist at the regular concerts of the Theodore Thomas Orchestra. Then she went back to Paris, and only a few months ago returned to her native land, appearing since then with the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra and in a number of recitals. She made a joint recital tour with Alice Nielsen and played with the Boston Opera Orchestra in Boston as associate soloist with Mme. Tetrazzini. In addition to numerous other concerts she also appeared on the same program with Mary Garden in Chicago, in each case dividing honors with the stars.

Clara Williams.

Clara Williams, "the soprano of the Northwest," will again be under the management of Miss O'Hanlon this coming season. She was a pupil of Alberto Randegger and Georg Henschel, of London, and Bouhy, of Paris, and is a graduate of the Royal School of Music, of London, where she spent six years, a part of the time as teacher in that institution. Upon this thorough foundation her intelligence has built the enviable career which has made her art so well known and so universally admired throughout the country.

In song recital, concert, oratorio and orchestral engagements, Miss Williams has been equally and invariably successful. As soloist with the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra on its annual spring tour, she won many laurels, and she has created a charming little field of her own by her incomparably moving interpretations of the folksongs of Wales, the country of her parentage. The press comments from coast to coast have praised Miss Williams' crystalline and charming voice.

Cora Kempré.

Cora Kempré, the distinguished soprano, is a native of California. Her great musical talent manifested itself early, and after studying in this country she went abroad to prepare for grand opera. After eleven months of study her teacher pronounced her ready, and she made her debut in Novellara, a small city near Milan, as Violetta in Verdi's "La Traviata" with such success that she was offered another contract immediately upon finishing her season there. She has appeared in the leading theatres of such cities as Milan, Venice, Verona, Naples and Florence, and has sung with Alessandro Bonci the part of Donna Elvira in "Don Giovanni" at the Royal Opera of Vienna. She sang also with great success at the Grand Opera in Nice and at the Royal Opera in Madrid.

Mme. Kempré returned to this country recently for a visit, intending to return shortly to Europe to resume her operatic career. But Miss O'Hanlon made her a very flattering offer, asking her to devote herself to concert work, and as she has met with equal success in that field, she decided to accept it and remain in America for the present. She is now available for concert, festival and oratorio—fields in which she is as much at home as in grand opera.

Ridgeley Hudson.

Ridgeley Hudson began his musical life as a boy soprano. Although when he first grew to manhood he entered a business life, music continued to draw him more and more strongly. He was always studying and finally decided to devote himself definitely to the profession in which he has won a name for himself. In this resolution he was undoubtedly strengthened by his marriage to Mary Tiffany, a young soprano, who was already making a name for herself as a singer. Since then Mrs. Hudson has been her husband's teacher, and he declares a most exacting critic.

Mr. Hudson's voice is a dramatic tenor of wide range, and critics have been unanimous in praise of his artistic use of it and the excellence of his style and interpretation. He is proud of the fact that his entire musical education has been obtained in this country—indeed, he has not yet been abroad—so that he is, in the strictest sense of the word, an American tenor. He also comes of a family which has been prominent in the history of this country. His great-great-grandfather's uncle and adopted father, Samuel Huntington, was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and the first Governor of Connecticut.

Albert Borroff.

Another successful artist who was under Miss O'Hanlon's management last year is Albert Borroff, the American basso, who has won fame as one of the most successful recitalists in the land. His recitals have been styled by many musical reviewers "musical delights," and Mr. Borroff has been called a master in program making and an admirable interpreter of lieder.

Mr. Borroff has been soloist with the Chicago Apollo Club and the principal choral societies throughout the country. He has organized choirs and sung in the leading churches of Chicago as soloist. He has been heard in opera and appeared frequently in oratorio. He sings in English, French, German, Russian and Hungarian, having introduced to this country several novelties now in demand. Mr. Borroff is essentially a Chicago product. He is of English birth, although his name indicates Russian ancestors. As a boy he possessed a fine soprano voice, but sang only occasionally. As he attained to manhood his voice developed into a resonant, mellow bass. Advised to study singing, he placed himself under the guidance of the late L. Gaston Gottschalk, who was his only teacher and with whom he studied for six years and to whose masterly instruction and advice Mr. Borroff believes he owes his success as a singer.

Kathleen Hart.

Kathleen Hart will make her first tour under the management of Miss O'Hanlon, and at this early date she promises to be exceptionally profitable, both artistically and financially. Miss Hart, who is especially well known in the Northwest, having appeared with the leading organizations in the territory, has met with such approval as to warrant her engagement under the O'Hanlon direction.

Writing about her appearance in Minneapolis, Dr. Caryl B. Storrs, the critic of the Minneapolis Tribune, said: "Miss Hart has not only a voice of warm, true and rich quality, which is, of course, the essential basis of singing, but she possesses those rare powers of voice coloration and the impersonation of the spirit of the song which lifts singing above the realm of mere tonal beauty into that of genuine art."

Esther May Plumb.

Esther May Plumb has appeared in concert, recital and oratorio all over the United States, winning everywhere the full approval of the public and press alike, and her success has resulted in many reengagements. Miss Plumb sings just as well in English as in German, French and Italian. Endowed by nature with a glorious voice she has been often compared to the famous Schumann-Heink. Miss Plumb's repertoire embraces nearly every phase of song literature and all the standard oratorios. Miss O'Hanlon expects to book several important engagements for this artist for the coming season.

Celene Loveland.

Célene Loveland, born of a family that has given many illustrious names to the history of this country in literature, art and music, has been for several years ranked among the foremost American pianists. She is a pupil of Rudolph Ganz, who paid her a signal honor when he chose her to introduce to a very critical audience in Berlin one of his own compositions (since become famous) while it was still in manuscript form. Fully as great recognition and compliments were paid Miss Loveland as a teacher when, upon the temporary absence from Berlin of the noted teacher, Mme. Eylau, her class was given over to Miss Loveland. So noteworthy was this that the German musical press commented upon it as bestowing upon Miss Loveland an unusual honor and recognition. While in Germany she also taught many American teachers who went there to complete their musical education.

Miss Loveland, in addition to the usual concert programs, has made a specialty of lecture recitals, a field which she has practically to herself. In these, by well chosen introductory remarks, she brings to the comprehension of her audience the meaning of the most difficult and intricate compositions. One of her most interesting lectures deals with various pianistic effects, and how they can be obtained, even by a superficial student, giving an understanding and

MAESTRO FRANZ EMERICH VOCAL INSTRUCTION
and MADAME TERESA EMERICH

PUPILS PREPARED FOR THE OPERATIC AND CONCERT STAGE

Some Distinguished PUPILS of MAESTRO and MME. EMERICH:

CHARLES DALMORES, tenor, Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden. Lohengrin of Bayreuth festival.
ADAM DIDUR, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
FRANCIS MACLENNAN, tenor, Berlin Royal Opera.
*HANS TANZLER, tenor, Royal Opera, Karlsruhe.
FLORENCE WICKHAM, mezzo-soprano.
CAVALLIERE MARIO SAMMARCO, baritone, Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden.
PUTNAM GRISWOLD, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
*MARGUERITA SYLVA, Carmen in the guest performance of Caruso at the Berlin Royal Opera.
MARGARETHE MATZENAUER, mezzo-soprano, Metropolitan Opera, New York.
*HELENA FORTI, soprano, Dresden Royal Opera.
MARY CAVAN, Soprano, Dippel Opera Co., Chicago.
MARCELLA LINDH, the famous concert singer.
HEINRICH HENSEL, Dramatic Tenor, Hamburg, Stadt Theater.

INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH AND ITALIAN

*The names marked * are those of pupils of Mme. Emerich.* Telephone Amt. Pfalzburg No. 2067 BERLIN, W. W. Nicelsbergerplatz 1

RUDOLF BERGER FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

regard for the instrument which the listeners never had before. Historical recitals, or those dealing with a single composer, his work, birthplace and home, many of these illustrated by views secured by Miss Loveland when visiting these scenes, form other attractive programs.

Mrs. Catherwood's Season-End Reception.

Jane Catherwood, soprano, gave her closing reception for this season, Monday evening, June 29, at the Fowler Apartments, Los Angeles, Cal. This one was somewhat more formal than her other receptions have been this season. An unusually large attendance of the musical fraternity was noted among the 200 guests present.

For the first time this year Mrs. Catherwood herself appeared on the program, the numbers of which were as follows:

Batti Batti ..... Mozart
Die Nacht ..... Strauss
Synnove's Song ..... Kjerulf
One Summer Night ..... Grieg
Sonata, op. 36, first movement ..... Grieg
Le Soir ..... Thomas
Voici le Soir ..... Laparra
Des Pas de Sabots ..... Laparra
Ouvre tes Yeux Bleus ..... Massanet
Spanish rhythms—
Tientos ..... Laparra
Calesera ..... Laparra
Echo Song ..... Bishop
Meditation (Thais) ..... Massanet
Danse Rustique ..... Squire
Night ..... Beach
The Elves ..... Salter
Come Unto These Yellow Sands ..... La Forge

The other participants were: Raoul Laparra, pianist; Robert Alter, cellist; W. H. Mead, flutist; Kassa Bailey, accompanist.

Mrs. Catherwood is the Los Angeles correspondent of the MUSICAL COURIER.

Nana Genovese's Busy Season.

Nana Genovese, the well known mezzo-soprano, formerly of Oscar Hammerstein's opera, was booked to sail for Italy to spend the summer at her beautiful home in Florence, but had to give up her trip for the present, as she has several important engagements for the summer. Sh will appear in some morning musicales in summer resorts on the Jersey coast and will also be heard with a large orchestra in the West. Her manager, Annie Friedberg, already has several very important dates booked for the fall, among them two orchestra engagements. Her next season promises to be a very busy one.

The Real Worker.

A stranger being shown over the country church, asked the old pew opener who showed her round who the organist was.

"My 'usban'," was the proud reply.

"Indeed?"

"Well," added the old woman, "the young lady up at the 'all hits the keys, but it's my 'usban' what blows."—Public Opinion.

Caruso's Charity.

A snapshot from the London Bystander, showing Enrico

CARUSO BUYING FLOWERS IN LONDON.

Caruso in London, a fortnight ago, buying flowers at a charity bazaar.

Helen Bixby-Wetzel in Venice.

This snapshot of Helen Bixby Wetzel was taken on top of St. Mark's Cathedral, in Venice, near the famous horses which Napoleon carried to France and were afterward returned to Italy.

Miss Wetzel has met with much success in opera on the other side of the Atlantic. Immediately after her return from her most successful engagements in Fossano she received an offer from another impresario to give ten performances of Gilda in "Rigoletto," which she did not accept on account of desiring a much needed rest.

HELEN BIXBY-WETZEL. ON TOP OF ST. MARKS CATHEDRAL, VENICE.

A De Reszke pupil who occupied the stage with Miss Wetzel during her nine performances of the Page in the "Masked Ball," singing the baritone part, said: "Her performance was a thing of beauty and a joy forever." Villani, the famous stage coach of Paris and Milan, said: "Her acting is ideal."

We recently heard of a man so bald that he makes an egg look like the head of a violin virtuoso.—Boston Transcript.

Alberto JONAS
Jenaer St. 29, Berlin, W.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
KUFSTEINER, ST. 6 BERLIN W., GERMANY

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York City
Western Rep: James Devoe, 196 Blaine Ave., Detroit, Mich.

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher
Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

MAURICE ARONSON VERA KAPLUN
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 3

Summer Class for the Leschetizky Method under the instruction of Mrs. Potter-Frissell well known piano pedagogue, in Neu Schandau (Ostrau Plain), famous summer resort in charming Villa Colony, in grandest part of Saxon Switzerland. (Mountain Air), Address, until July 1st, Eisenstuckstr. 16, Pt., Dresden, A. After July 1st, Villa 17 Neu Schandau, Saxon Switzerland, Germany.

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent.
For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, Berlin, W., 9

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL
European Tour, July, 1914—Jan. 1915
American Tour, - after Feb. 1, 1915
Address THEODORE SEYDEL, 70 Westland Ave., Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies
In London Until July 28, 1914
Address Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDEN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

EDYTH WALKER

(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)

Dramatic Soprano

Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.

Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

THOMAS J. KELLY

Conductor Mendelssohn Choir.

VOCAL COACH

Lecture Recitals with Mrs. Kelly.

209 SOUTH 35th AVE., OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO

Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO

Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.

VOCAL STUDIO - 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller

VIOLINIST

In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING

Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC

128-130 East 58th Street

CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE

The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.

CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR SHATTUCK

The Distinguished American

PIANIST

In America Season 1914-15

Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

Steinway Piano Used

A Midsummer Chat with Mme. Maigille.

While cool breezes swayed the curtains, adding to the enjoyment of a midsummer chat in the music room of the American School of Bel Canto, at Carnegie Hall, New York, the writer noted the attendant joyousness that betokened the success and influence of the Helene Maigille School of Bel Canto upon its founder, Helene Maigille, who was animatedly describing the unequivocal success of the school and the gratifying enrollment for the summer course.

One understands the reason for the success of this school of singing upon hearing, as did the writer, an illustration of the wonderfully accurate change in a scale, producing with unerring precision a perfect production and eventually a beautiful note in a voice, the possessor of which kept enthusiastically interrupting to tell of the wonders achieved since the first lesson in the summer session was taken.

"How many States are represented?" asked the interviewer.

"Do you mean for the summer or next fall?" Mme. Maigille inquired.

"Since we are really speaking of the present, which I supposed was the all important question, I only had that in my mind," answered the writer.

Photo by Mishkin Studio, New York.
HELENE MAIGILLE.

"There are four foreign countries represented; England, Germany, Scotland and Ireland, while enrollments from California, New York, Pennsylvania and Delaware constitute the summer session."

"And for next fall?"

"Oh, that is assured," naively replied the radiant teacher of bel canto. "I have already assigned hours for several new pupils, to say nothing of the continuation of several pupils now studying, the return of last season's students, some of whom have not pursued the summer course, and the fall is not yet here."

"You see," added the teacher, "these quarters are only temporary. We remove to the tenth floor in the autumn, where the reception and music rooms are commodious, and are supplied with plenty of windows, which promise still greater coolness than we have today.

"The formal opening of the American School of Bel Canto will really take place in the early part of October, but it cannot inaugurate a more successful or happier launching than has already taken place, as success came with the confidence of the public in all the good work of the past years and the splendid endorsements of the press, musicians, loyal friends, and pupils throughout the country."

If optimism ever had a happier exponent than in Mme. Maigille, and its benefits were ever more brilliantly illustrated, this writer would be pleased to make the acquaintance of such a representative, for in her and her successful work it has had a most complete exemplification and culmination in a life devoted to vocal art.

Baroness Von Rappe at Home.

Baroness Signe von Rappe is resting at Christinelund Wassmolosa in Sweden, at the manor home of her father, which has been in the family of the Barons von Rappe for several centuries. Later in the summer, Baroness von Rappe will go to Finnala, a Scandinavian resort famous for its excellent fishing and beautiful sailing. Baroness von Rappe's next American tour will not begin until March, 1915.

ELEANOR SPENCER

PIANIST

Returns to America Season 1914-15

Management, Antonia Sawyer
1425 Broadway, New York

MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

The Sensation of the Year

CARL FLESCH

The Great Hungarian Violinist

Second American Tour
January and February, 1915

Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

FIRST AMERICAN APPEARANCE

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE

SOPRANO

Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.

"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914

First American Tour January-May, 1915

OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English

Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

EFREM ZIMBALIST

Celebrated Violinist

— Will return to —

AMERICA

Season 1914-1915

For Terms and Dates available
Apply

WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

1 West 34th St., New York

STEINWAY PIANO

THE XAVER SCHARWENKA
MASTER SCHOOL

OF PIANO PLAYING

AND TEACHERS' SEMINARY

ISOLDE SCHARWENKA.

XAVER SCHARWENKA.

MARTHA SIEBOLD.

WALTER PETZET.

Director, Prof. Xaver Scharwenka, Court Pianist to the Emperor to Austria-Hungary; Assistant Director Prof. Walter Petzet.

Principal Assistants, Miss Martha Siebold, Miss Isolde Scharwenka.

THE MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING is in no way connected with the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory of Music, with which Prof. Xaver Scharwenka has severed his connection.

The new institution is a special school for pianoforte playing, and affords its pupils the opportunity to acquire a complete pianistic training for the concert stage, or to thoroughly equip themselves for the profession of piano instruction.

The first term begins September 1, 1914.

Any desired information, prospectus, etc., sent on application to

THE MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING, Blumenthalstr. 17, Berlin W.

LEWIS
SHAWE
Baritone
Recital, Concert, Oratorio — Schiffman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES — Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street — Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 W. 67th St. — Tel.: Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. — Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant — New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THF WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street — New York

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals — Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

RICCARDO MARTIN
FAMOUS TENOR
Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
October, November, 1914. May, 1915
Management:
CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

What's in a Name?

In the accompanying snapshot we see Djane Lavoie-Herz, the well known Canadian pianist (who is to tour the United States next season under the Hanson management), and her infant son, five months old. The child is named Tristan, and if there is anything in a name he should turn out to be extraordinary. At this moment he appears to be maintaining a gay outlook upon life and not to be worrying much about his future Isolde.

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ AND TRISTAN, HER FIVE MONTHS' OLD SON.

Marion Green's Oratorio Singing.

Marion Green's singing in two recent festivals won the following tributes for the excellent work of the baritone:

"ST. PAUL" AT HILLSDALE COLLEGE, HILLSDALE, MICH.

The two arias by the bass, Mr. Green, "Oh God, Have Mercy," and "I Will Praise Thee," were characterized by all of those technical qualities that make Mr. Green's singing such an unalloyed delight, but, in addition to those, there was yet another, one not found in ordinary concert or recital programs, that of authority. Mr. Green's singing was marked throughout by that one characteristic; in addition, the striking sincerity of production and ease of delivery enhanced the pleasure of hearing him. Hillsdale people have reason to consider themselves fortunate that Professor Woodhams was able to secure such a St. Paul as Mr. Green. From the standpoint of mere harmony and compelling lyric beauty, the duet for tenor and bass was unparalleled in the evening. Coloring, shading and effects of all sorts were wholly at the artists' command. They were compelled to bow several acknowledgments to the applause.—Hillsdale Review, June 28, 1914.

"THE MESSIAH" AT WESTMINSTER COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, PA.

The baritone role was most ably sustained by Marion Green. His rich, resonant voice, which he controls with consummate ease, is well suited to this oratorio. His breath control is remarkable, and he sang with authority and dramatic sense. We must make special mention of his singing of "Thus Saith the Lord," "But Who May Abide" and "Why Do the Nations Rage."—New Wilmington (Pa.) Globe, July 18, 1914. (Advertisement.)

Theatre Headaches.

[From the Journal of the American Medical Association.]

The most frequent cause for headaches occurring during or after the theatre is eye strain. People who use the full energy of the delicate eye muscles to obtain perfect vision are often unconscious of this strain. In the theatre the continuous effort to keep everything constantly focused exhausts the nerve centers and headache results. The practice of seating the audience in a total darkness while they are staring into an intensely lighted stage is another serious factor. The pupils being widely dilated in the dark admit the excess of light from the stage, often producing irritation of the eyes which lasts sometimes for days. Those subject to headaches should never sit where it is necessary to raise the eyes to watch the stage. This unnatural position of the eyes is very tiresome even to those who never have trouble at other times. Unfortunately, the theatre going public has not insisted on proper ventilation without draughts. The overheated foul air of itself lessens the spectator's vitality and power of endurance. This, followed by draughts, frequently produces stuffing up of the nose or cold in the head and a disagreeable headache from internasal pressure, which is usually worse the following morning.

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street, New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall — Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-1915
Management. ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA
Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus
"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone, Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX — STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st. St., NEW YORK

SOUSA AND HIS BAND

"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"

Office: 1 West 34th Street

Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH

CONCERT VIOLINIST

Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue. New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS

Hans Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory and is assisted by an able corps of teachers. Bendetson Netzorg has also been added to the Conservatory faculty. For catalog address

MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO

68 West 56th Street, New York

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO

Concert-Recital-Oratorio

Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN

America's Violinist

Season 1914-1915 Now Booking

Address:
THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York
Phone Murray Hill, 2239

VOCAL STUDIO AND OPERA SCHOOL (Italian Method)

KARL SCHNEIDER

PHILADELPHIA: 1705 Chestnut St., October to May
MUENCHEN, Germany: 9 Friedrich Str., June to Sept. 15

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER

Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARY DENNISON GAILEY

VIOLINIST

Address, Russell Bridges, Empire Life Bldg., Atlanta, Ga

Yolanda MERÖ Hungarian Pianist

STEINWAY PIANO USED

Under the exclusive management of CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, New York City

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Assisted by Cutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist
SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City

Baldwin Piano Used

Baroness Evans

Von KLENNER

America's Representative of the GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD

Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.
Tradition. Languages. Repertoire. Diction. Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY

of NEW YORK

1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915

JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor

SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.

TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South

Prospectus on application to

FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

Arrigo Serato's Italian Successes.

Arrigo Serato's successful tour through Europe last winter is described in glowing terms in the following notices, translated from the Italian:

Arrigo Serato is a man standing in the limelight, a genuine artist, who covered himself with glory in every European country, in every city where he played.

Young, passionate, proud of his art, he is the king of violinists. This title is by no means exaggerated, for Serato is one of the greatest violinists of the day—the greatest of Italy.

He came to the Liceo after a tour of seventy-five concerts given in the most important cities of Europe, and after meeting with seventy five genuine triumphs.

He presented himself with a select program, full of a thousand difficulties of technic and execution. He overcomes them easily and calmly, with the competence of a thorough and reliable artist, with his purity of style, with the overflowing feeling of his soul, deeply in love with his art.

He was preceded by his great fame and duly heralded by the daily papers, who lifted him to the highest artistic spheres, and he did more than prove his artistic metal. Unanimously all critics spoke of him in superlative terms.

His reward was the admiration of masters and laymen and the warmhearted approval of the select audience that filled the Liceo. His first number, Mozart's tenth sonata, awakened a storm of applause.

Thanks to his training, to his studies, to everything that made him the sublime artist that he is, his playing sparkles with life and with living fire; he rises like the chosen ones who are given to see the realization of their dreams, like the master who sees the work of his genius before him, complete and perfect. His hands

JOSEF GUARNERIUS DEL JESU VIOLIN.
Old and valuable instrument, belongs to Arrigo Serato, the noted Italian violinist, and is used by him in his concerts.

clasp all the notes that are destined to spread into the universe; he holds them and shapes them according to his own wishes, and therefore he can rise to extreme artistic heights, because he knows how to communicate with his audience the joy and the sadness of the music which he so wonderfully interprets.

On these evenings he played the chaconne of Tommaso Vitali, and, assisted by Maestro Contessa, he won his public. As a soloist he creates enthusiasm and calls for endless applause.

Also in Busoni's second sonata—which he played for the first time in Italy—we recognized in him the strong and refined artist, the sincere and truthful interpreter, superior to many whose praise is shouted all over Europe.

Most sincere congratulations to this great artist; may our wish come true that the final aim of his noble ideals may not be far away, and may he keep recognition of supremacy over the many who come to Italy to enchant with their sublime notes.—Milano Attualita, May 7, 1914.

The first concert gave us an opportunity to hear the violinist Serato again, accompanied by Busoni. He played that wonderful Beethoven concerto, which we heard him play last winter at the Augusteum, and again he was rewarded by clamorous applause and recalls. It was a complete, warm and fully deserved success and confirmed his fame as a violinist gifted with a perfect style and an exceptional mastery of technic and sentiment.—Milano L'Arte Lirica. (Advertisement.)

Christine Miller Is in Berlin.

Christine Miller, the contralto, cabled her managers, Haensel & Jones, of her safe arrival in Berlin, July 4. She will pass her three months' vacation in the German metropolis.

George Hamlin with Chicago Club.

George Hamlin has been engaged by the Amateur Music Club, of Chicago, as the artist for its spring concert.

Unchallenged Leadership!

Attained in 1823
Maintained in 1914

Attaining its leadership in 1823,

The Chickering PIANO

has steadily improved its marvelous tone quality, durability, case design, etc.

Each year has seen the Chickering Piano a little better than before—has witnessed wonderful triumphs in its refined art, its greater durability, its richer, deeper and purer tone—its acquisition of all the piano perfections and none of the piano frailties, has attested the great distinction of its unchallenged leadership.

Sold Everywhere. Write for Catalog and full information.

Chickering & Sons

Div.—American Piano Co.

PIANOFORTE MAKERS

Boston, U S. A.

LONDON WITNESSES INITIAL PRODUCTION OF HOLBROOKE'S "DYLAN."

New Opera Sung in English by an All English Cast—Music Is Modern and Dramatic with Fine Orchestral Writing—Audience Is Enthusiastic and Repeatedly Recalls Composer and Conductor at Close of Performance—Covent Garden Opera—Promenade Concerts Announcement.

5 Portland Place, W.,
London, England, July 9, 1914.

The important event operatically within the last fortnight has been the first production of Josef Holbrooke's opera "Dylan," at Drury Lane, July 4. It was staged as follows:

Dylan ..... Frederic Austin
Sea King ..... Edmund Burke
Gwyddno ..... Frank Mullings
Govannion ..... Robert Radford
Gwydion ..... Robert Maitland
Seithenin ..... Frederick Ranalow
Elan ..... Doris Woodall

Conductor, Thomas Beecham.

The opera was sung in English by an all English cast and it would seem that there should be no further questioning the place of English opera in the operatic scheme of things. Music of a very modern, persuasive, and dramatic character is that through which the story of "Dylan" is told. And there is much exceedingly fine writing for orchestra as well as in several splendidly conceived choruses. Thus the composer proves his right to a place among the few musical writers who possess the twofold gift of writing equally well for voice and orchestra.

The libretto is by T. E. Ellis (Lord Howard de Walden), and "Dylan" is the second part of the work which is in the form of a trilogy. The first part of this trilogy was given some two seasons ago at the London Opera House, then under the management of Oscar Hammerstein. The title of the first part of the trilogy is "The Children of Don"; "Dylan" is the second section, and the third, which is in the writing is "Bronwen, daughter of Llyr." The libretto is founded on incidents taken from various Celtic legends, and the whole, it is affirmed, is an attempted unification of the British Celtic cycle. "Mr. T. E. Ellis' poem," to quote from an article which appeared in the Academy on "Dylan," "it would seem, was not originally conceived or written as a libretto for an opera, but when Mr. Holbrooke had read it, and when his imagination had been set on fire by these fables of Wales, he saw that with some skill the complete poem could be arranged for stage presentation in the form of an operatic trilogy. Though each part of the trilogy is complete in itself, the whole group of legends is unified by dramatic and psychological continuity, and a knowledge of the story of 'The Children of Don'—the first music drama of the trilogy—helps to an understanding of 'Dylan.'

YEATMAN GRIFFITH,

Who will bring to a close the end of this month a most successful season of teaching. Accompanied by Mrs. Griffith, who assists him in his studio work, Mr. Griffith will spend the month of August on the Continent. He will reopen his London studios early in the autumn.

A RECENT PICTURE OF FLORIZEL VON REUTER.

"This is not the place in which to give an outline of the dramatic scheme, nor indeed is such an outline necessary for some comprehension of the kind of music Mr. Holbrooke has given us; but as the music springs as naturally from the words as a flower from its stem, it will be as well to explain that Mr. Ellis's poem is conceived in a vein of high romance, that it carries these Celtic stories bravely, infusing them with new life and vigor, and that it has some of the ruggedness and stark beauty that belong to all the old tales that have survived many generations of men. The legends are not 'modernized,' for Mr. Ellis is too true an artist to attempt to visualize Gwyddno, Dylan, Elan, and Govannion according to the literary conventions of the day. These legendary figures are still shrouded in the mists of long ago; they come near to us with their vivid words and acts, but they do not give us the nearness of intimacy. The feelings that govern them—love, revenge, hatred, and the like—are those which live in our hearts today, but the motives which set these emotions at work, the whole scheme that binds character to character, is outside the experience of our life, and is not to be apprehended save by the aid of the imagination. A subject that is so removed from the littleness attaching to all familiar things, and that is saturated with symbolization is precisely what one would expect to appeal to Mr. Holbrooke. whose score reveals a genius that never fails through lack of stimulus. The characterization of the music is as true as it is subtle; a different idiom belongs to each character, and the leitmotif system is used with the skill and aptness of one who understands perfectly the scope and utility of dramatic suggestiveness.

"The choral music is remarkably free and descriptive, and in the eighth part 'Wild Fowl Chorus' where the writing is unaffectedly 'horizontal' instead of 'perpendicular,' there are ample signs of an extraordinary fine and penetrating imagination.

"But the most remarkable feature of Mr. Holbrooke's 'Dylan' music is its eloquence. Never for one moment does the music fail in its expressiveness, its variety, its resource, and its dramatic veracity are such as one gets only in composers who, free from contemporary influences, have arrived at a mature and broad style that is capable of limning all varieties of character and all shades of feeling. The musical phrases have the rhythm, the contour, and the emotional content of the words, and so far as one can judge from a close study of the vocal score, each note has its logical place in the general scheme, and is the outcome of the dramatic necessity of the moment. British music has not in our generation produced many works so fine."

An innovation in the staging of "Dylan" at Drury Lane was the introduction of the cinematograph for the picturing of the flight of the wild fowl which in the libretto are said to carry the news of Dylan's death to the Sea King. This cinematographic representation was very well done and suggested great possibilities for future staging of things operatic. The cast was excellent and did full justice, one and all, to their respective parts. Great enthusiasm prevailed at the close of the opera and composer and conductor were repeatedly recalled.

Covent Garden.

The activities at Covent Garden the last week have included a production of Mozart's "Nozze di Figaro," with Rosina Raisa as the Countess; Mme. Zeppilli as Susanna; Maggie Teyte as Cherubino. Signor Scotti as the Count and Signor Aquistapace as Figaro. Some repetitions included that of Boito's Mefistofele; "La Tosca," with John McCormack as Mario and Dinh Gilly as Scarpia, both artists appearing in those parts for the first time. "Don Giovanni," "Samson and Dalilah," with Kirkby Lunn, as usual as Dalilah, and "Pelléas et Mélisande," with Mme. Edvina as Mélisande.

Queen's Hall Orchestra Promenade Concerts.

The programs for the Promenade concerts, which begin August 15, include twenty-one works by British composers. They are as follows:

Sir Edward Elgar—"Söspiri," op. 70, a work for strings, harp and organ.
Percy Grainger—Colonial song, "Molly on the Shore," in its newly orchestrated version.
Coleridge-Taylor—"From the Prairie," an orchestral rhapsody.
Cyril Scott—A new piano concerto. An aubade for orchestra.
Kathleen Bruckshaw—A new piano concerto.
Percy Pitt—"Sakura," suite de ballet.
Sir Frederick Cowen—"The Language of Flowers." A new orchestral suite.
Oskar Borsdörf.—"Glaucus and Ione." A dramatic fantasy from "The Last Days of Pompeii."
Felix White—Three new songs, with orchestra.
Richard Walthew—Overture, "Friend Fritz."
H. Balfour Gardiner—Orchestral piece, "In Maytime."
J. D. Davies—Elegy and scherzo for cello and orchestra.
Henry Geehl—Suite for orchestra, "Fairyland."
Eugene Goossens, Jr.—Symphonic poem, "Perseus."
Dr. Walford Davies—Work for piano and orchestra entitled "Conversations."
Frank Bridge—Dance rhapsody for orchestra.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N.W.

OSTROVSKY INSTITUTE OF HAND DEVELOPMENT
The Ostrovsky Method solves the problems of technique and manual flexibility for violinists, pianists and 'cellists. It develops manual elasticity, stretch, speed, looseness, suppleness, strength and resistance by means of the Ostrovsky Apparatus and Appliances. It shortens the hours of technical practice, lessens the drudgery and makes progress under any method certain and rapid. For terms and circulars also the illustrated booklet, "Technique and Hand Development" by H. Ostrovsky, nine pence post free. Address Secretary OSTROVSKY MUSICIANS' HAND DEVELOPMENT CO., Ltd., 50 Leinster Gardens, London, W. Chicago Branch, Steinway Hall, 513-514, 64 E. Van Buren Street.

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
BECHSTEIN HALL STUDIOS, LONDON
Private address, 40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

Rutland Boughton—Excerpt from music drama "The Birth of Arthur."

Algernon Ashton—The Scottish dances for orchestra.

Of new works by foreign composers there are some twenty-four. They include six new songs by Gustav Mahler, for soprano and orchestra, which will be given September 2, and later in the season there will be programed his "Des Knaben Wunderhorn," for mezzo-soprano and orchestra; "Kinder-Todtenlieder," for contralto and orchestra and the "Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen," for baritone and orchestra. Max Reger will be represented by four tone poems, after Arnold Böcklin; and also his ballet suite. Erich Korngold's "Sinfonietta," op. 5, will be heard; a new violin concerto by Julius Weisman; a set of futurist impressions by Anton von Webern, a disciple of Arnold Schönberg; and the overture to "Reineke Fuchs," Karl Bleyle. Among Hungarian composers are Béla Bartok, whose new suite and two new pieces entitled "Deux Images," for orchestra, which will be heard for the first time, besides a rhapsody for piano and orchestra, and Anton Novacek, whose concerto for piano, entitled "Eroica," will receive a first performance.

Photo by Alfieri.

STRAUSS IN LONDON.

He conducted his "Legend of Joseph," and in this picture from the London Bystander is seen side by side with Thomas Beecham.

Russian composers will be represented by Stravinsky, whose "Scherzo Fantastique" for orchestra will be given; and Liadow, whose symphonic picture, "A Fragment from the Apocalypse," will receive a first hearing. A bacchanale for orchestra by Lady Dean Paul; Florent Schmitt's new suite for orchestra, "Reflets d'Allemagne"; César Franck's symphonic poems, "Les Eolies" and "Psyche"; Granodoe's symphonic poem, "Dante"; Francesco Sacrati's aria, "Edove t'aggiri"; a Marcia di Nozze, by Aurelio Giorni, and an arrangement of one of the Vivaldi concertos by A. Siloti complete the list of novelties and new works.

London Notes.

At the concert given at Albert Hall, July 5, the last special Sunday concert of the season, the artists were Alma Gluck, Efrem Zimbalist, and M. Pachmann, the pianist. An interesting program was given and Mme. Gluck sang some songs in English with great taste and good diction.

At his concert at Aeolian Hall, July 7, Signor Lecomte sang in his inimitable manner a number of old Italian songs and arias. His voice is of a most sympathetic quality, and he has command of a perfect legato which distinguishes all he does. He was assisted by Mme. Zélie de Lussan.

Helen Blain, contralto, has just completed a number of concerts in the Provinces, including appearances at Harrogate, Scarborough, Southampton, Yarmouth, Folkstone and Felixstone. A great favorite at Harrogate, where she has recently filled four engagements at the Kursaal, and several "at home" recitals, she has numerous encomiums from the press of these various places affirming her excellent taste as a singer and the fine timbre of her voice.

Victor Buesst, the young pianist, who recently gave two recitals in London, is arranging a number of recitals for the autumn. He will play in Paris in October, and in London October 15 and November 12.

Bettina Freeman, the young American soprano, has been engaged by the Century Opera Company of New York as leading dramatic soprano. Miss Freeman, accompanied by her mother, left London July 4 for her home in Chicago, where she will rest over the summer.

Mark Hambourg, the eminent pianist, will give a series of historical piano recitals at Aeolian Hall, beginning in the early autumn. Mr. Hambourg's programs, which are in construction, will include not less than fifty compositions of the different schools and periods from Scarlatti to the contemporary modern writers.

Edmund Burke, the English baritone, will return to the United States in October for an extended concert tour.

Blanche Marchesi's pupils were heard in a concert at the "Arts Center" yesterday afternoon. Evelyn Kaesmann.

Von Ende School Recitals.

The students and faculty of the summer course at the Von Ende School of Music had the pleasure of hearing Laurence Goodman last Wednesday in another piano recital with an interesting program. The thoughtful and poetical interpretations of Beethoven's C sharp minor sonata and Chopin's F sharp major nocturne, the brilliant rendering of the E flat minor waltz and the spirited performance of the B flat minor scherzo made a profound impression upon the appreciative audience. Mr. Goodman proved the catholicity of his taste and range by closing with the "Ballade," by Brockway, and the concert etude by Schlözer, compositions eminently adapted to bring out his high qualities as technician and interpreter.

Today, Wednesday, July 22, at 4 p. m. there will be a miscellaneous piano and violin recital, with a few vocal numbers.

Charles W. Clark Asserts.

"It is the singer's average that counts—not what he is able to do in one program in ten," asserts Charles W. Clark, the distinguished American baritone. "Upon average is reckoned the commercial value of every form of artistic utterance."

"Often a singer will rise up in a night. His remarkable tones will astonish his listeners and he will be heralded far and wide as a future wonder. But on his next appearance he will fail dismally. For some cause or other not apparent to his audience or his sponsors, he has become weak, and visible effort marks every passage of his song. Such misfortunes result from ill health, or from nervousness. Concerning the latter cause, it might be said that it requires years for some talented singers to overcome timidity sufficiently to do themselves justice, when singing in public.

"Before the actual worth of a soloist can be determined he must be heard many times. Uniform excellence, embodying voice quality, strength, production, culture, interpretative breadth and personal appeal figure in the analysis. When these factors are found to comply with standard requirements, the acceptability of the singer is established.

CHARLES W. CLARK.

Years of patient hard work are usually necessary to accomplish this result, and those who fancy that the road is smooth should study the biographies of some of our old song interpreters."

Maude Klotz in Canada.

Maude Klotz, the soprano, will appear in a dozen of the leading Canadian cities as soloist with a concert trio, beginning October 19.

You may have an ideal accompanist in your home at all times.

One that never tires.

Plays to suit your temperament and with a touch and technique beyond compare.

The GULBRANSEN "Non-Visible Player of NO Effort" does all this for you.

Installed within your own piano without the slightest injury to tone or appearance of same.

We furnish you with a complete accompaniment repertoire, using special hand-played rolls, which may be recorded by any artist you may select.

Full information, special to musicians, upon request.

GULBRANSEN-DICKINSON COMPANY

505 FIFTH AVENUE,
AT 42nd STREET,
NEW YORK CITY

Factories New York :: Chicago

FLORYN OPERA PRODUCING CO., Inc.
1482 Broadway, Room 1105
Three Opera Bouffe Co's in repertoire
Applications in writing from Aspirants with good voices and talent will be considered

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 W. 34th St., New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music
Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

FLORENCE
TRUMBULL
PIANISTE
Vorbereiterin (ASSISTANT) to Theodor Leschetizky
VIII Laudongasse 22 - - - - Vienna, Austria

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE Coloratura Soprano
GRAND OPERA PRIMA DONNA
Season 1914-15 Now Booking Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals
European Address: - - - 68 rue de l'Aurore, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - - - - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana
GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

ERIE PROGRESSES MUSICALLY.

Lively Interest Shown in Annual Festival—Adequate Music Hall May Be Built—Recitals and Pupils' Events.

Erie, Pa., July 15, 1914.

Although the Erie (Pa.) Music Festival is already more than a month past, Erie musicians are still discussing it. The fact that an annual one is now assured testifies to its success. In all probability prominent Erie business men will join with Franz Kohler and Morris Gabrielle Williams, the leading spirits of the movement, and built an adequate hall for festival purposes and other big musical events in the near future.

ERIE MUSICAL NOTES.

Among other interesting Erie musical happenings are the following:

Harry Waithe Manville presented a number of the advance pupils from his Meadville and Erie studios in a difficult program at the Lawrence Hotel Ballroom, Saturday evening, June 6. Particular interest was attached to this recital, as it presented a number of Mr. Manville's pupils from the Pennsylvania College of Music in their graduation work.

The program was divided into two parts, the first being devoted to arias and groups of songs by the various soloists, which disclosed a number of pleasing and well developed voices. The second part of the program consisted of the four part composition "Sir Olaf," by Harriet Ware, for women's voices, with soprano and tenor solos, these being in the capable hands of Marian Blanchard Allen and Bruce M. Morrison respectively. Those appearing on the first part of the program were Nettie Iantha Brock, Clara Irene Schutz, Lucy Maudaline Yocum, Angileen Gifford, Mrs. Charles S. Pratt, Marian Blanchard Allen, Mary Alena Reynolds, Bruce M. Morrison and George Dewitt Rose. Mary Chort Graham and Charlotte Marhoffer Grinager furnished splendid support at the piano. Frances Hall and Bessie Freeman, of Mrs. Colby's piano classes, and Paul Cleveland, of Franz Kohler's violin classes, each added interesting numbers to the program. Mr. Manville entertained at luncheon at the Lawrence on Saturday in honor of his out of town pupils taking part in the recital.

Otto Ebisch, organist of the First M. E. Church, recently gave his first public recital on the newly installed organ. Mr. Ebisch was assisted by Clyde Miller, baritone, who is also soloist at this church. Both artists contributed to the program enjoyed by a large audience, which was appreciative of the ability of these two prominent musicians. It is to be hoped that Mr. Ebisch will give more of these delightful recitals during the coming season.

Caroline Ferguson presented a number of her piano pupils in a series of three charming recitals Thursday and Friday, June 4 and 5, at the Park Presbyterian Chapel. Vocal and instrumental pupils from the studios of Mrs. McKean, Mr. Manville, Marie Miller and Edith Bess Barton assisted. Those contributing to the program were Marjorie Butler, Marie Jeffs, Gertrude Coe, Annabel Diehl, Hildred Carson, Vivian Brockway, Frances Mertens, Charlotte Hindrichs, Adelphia Clark, Margaret Frail, Belle Solomon, Ethel Losey, Clara Hoffstetter, Aline Skinner, Margaret Surre, Elizabeth Altermatt, Mildred Clark, Ester Almhagen, Pauline Dean, Mary Orr, Marion Scarlett, Josephine Mayer, Virginia Flickinger, Mary Foster, Lennox Treat, La Salle Felheim, Wilson Bushnell, Harold Middleton, Henry MacDonald, Sidney Sobel, Edward Doll and Charles Haller.

Hulda Schuster Schnurman gave an interesting recital, in conjunction with a number of her pupils, at the First Baptist Church, Tuesday evening, June 9. Many of the singers appearing on the program disclosed exceptional talent, reflecting much credit on their teacher. The program included the names of Margarite Neyland, Gertrude Vogt, Marion Nason, Thelma Phipps, Ruth Mooney, Sadie Gallagher, Gertrude McGraw, Mrs. R. Burns, Milda Myers, Jewel Marie Dudenhoffer, Iona Phipps, Marcia Meyers, Esther Thorpe, Bertha Liebel and Robert Smith.

Vocal pupils of Winifred Eggleston and piano pupils of Henry Bethuel Vincent gave two artistic programs recently in the First Unitarian Church auditorium. Dorothy Liebel, soprano, and Katrina Blass, pianist, gave a recent delightful recital bordering closely on the standard set by professionals. Miss Liebel's coloratura work was exceedingly well done; her voice is of a sweet quality, and much can be expected of her in the future. Miss Blass enfused an unusual amount of temperament into her numbers and also displayed fine technic. This program was made up of compositions by Haydn, Gounod, Gilberte, Nevin, Chaminade, Beach, Cadman and Brahms.

Ruth Evelyn Ford, contralto; Ernest Parshall, tenor, and Florence E. Heidt, pianist, presented another recent interesting program. Miss Ford's voice is of extensive range and a lovely deep contralto quality. Mr. Parshall's lyric tenor showed more volume than heretofore. Each singer gave finished interpretations to their numbers, bespeaking much for the training they have had at the capable hands of Mrs. Eggleston. Miss Heidt's work was very commendable in the two numbers allotted to her on the program, which was as follows: "Raft Song," Nevin; "Am Strande,"

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181 Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
in his last Liederabend met the same unqualified success which attended his first recital. There is a radiance and warmth in his artistic and intelligent delivery which affects his audience most happily.—Der Reichsanzeiger, Berlin.
Concert direction Wolff, Flottwellstr. 1, Berlin.
Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall, New York.
AVAILABLE FOR A LIMITED NUMBER OF ENGAGEMENTS, SPRING, 1915.

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

MME. ROSA OLITZKA
CELEBRATED RUSSIAN CONTRALTO
Engaged as Soloist, Great Texas Saengerfest, May 11 to 14, 1914
AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIOS and MUSICALES
Manager R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
For Terms, Dates, etc., Address temporarily, care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the U.S.

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and how control. Special SUMMER COURSE for Teachers and Professionals. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR, 51 W. 76th St. N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG
Summer Course for Teachers, Amateurs and Professionals by these famous artists. TORONTO, CANADA.

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapolis, Minn.

The MEHAN Summer School for Teachers and Singers
July 7—Aug. 15. Appointments By Mail
Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 15
SUITE 70, CARNEGIE HALL. TEL. 5946 COLUMBUS

The Eminent Austrian Pianist
MME. MARIE VON UNSCHULD
Piano Recitals and Lectures on Technic by Motion Pictures
EUROPEAN CONCERT BUREAU, 1320 F St., Washington, D. C.

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
133 West 80th St. Tel. Schuyler 3786 New York City
Mr. Regneas will teach but 3 days weekly during July and August.
No interviews granted excepting by appointment.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

Alice PRESTON SOPRANO
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON 1451 Broadway, New York

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management. Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

JOHN McCORMACK
CELEBRATED IRISH TENOR
In America Entire Season 1914-15
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Personal Management: CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

Von Fielitz; "I Hear a Thrush at Eve," Cadman; "Die Traumernde," Edwards; "Im Walde," Berwald; "Were My Song," Hahn; "Ave Maria," Kahn; "Veil Dance," Friml; "Valse Coquette," Friml; "Since You Went Away," Johnson; "Lil' Feller, Come an' Play," Kellogg; "The Better Land," Cowen; "Onaway, Awake," Coleridge-Taylor; "Jean," Spross; "In the Early Pearly Morning" ("Garden of Kama"), Vincent; "Cradle Song," Worden; "The Cheerful Sunbeam," Hastings.

Mr. Vincent supplied splendid accompaniments for each recital and Mrs. J. P. Smart, violinist, also was heard in two obligatos. WILSON ROOT BUSHNELL.

Vida Llewellyn at Salzbrunn.

Vida Llewellyn, whose American tour next season is being awaited with great interest, recently scored a remarkable success with Hugo Kaun's E flat minor concerto as soloist in a symphony concert at Salzbrunn, Germany. The following press notice shows with what enthusiasm the American was received:

Although the concerto is one of those which may be designated as symphonies with piano obligato, nevertheless it gives the soloist plentiful and remunerative tasks. These a young pianist, Vida Llewellyn, of Berlin, absolved with the best success. The fine polish of her highly developed technic, the depth and sureness of her musical feeling were magnificently displayed. Especially in the last part, the rhythmic precision, the clearness and transparency of the rich figuration charmed her audience. The artist was deservedly and most enthusiastically applauded.—Waldenburger Wochenblatt, June 20, 1914. (Advertisement.)

VIDA LLEWELLYN.

Riheldaffer, Gailey and Lewis in the West.

Grace Hall Riheldaffer, soprano; Mary Dennison Gailey, violinist, and Ward Lewis, pianist, are meeting with great success in their first concerts in the West, where they are engaged for a series of seventy consecutive appearances. The following notices are indicative of the enthusiastic reception accorded these splendid artists:

Grace Hall-Riheldaffer is a soprano having a magnificent voice, trained to the perfection of art, but she adds to this the rare ability to reach the hidden depths of the human heart and awaken a response at once ennobling and uplifting. She possesses a fine stage presence, a gracious personality and remarkable temperamental gifts.

In the violin playing of Mary Gailey there is a conscious power and unmistakable charm. She is a violinist of brilliant and conspicuous ability and has been hailed by musical critics everywhere as an accomplished and finished artist.

Ward C. Lewis, of New York City, is the pianist of the company. Little need be said of his work, as it is well known here in Huron. He has traveled with grand opera stars and visited Huron last winter. As usual his work as accompanist is excellent.—Huron (S. D.) Daily Huronite.

Grace Hall-Riheldaffer, of Pittshurgh, possesses a magnificent soprano voice, trained to the perfection of art. She gave to every number an interpretation that music critics in the audience declared perfect. Mary Dennison Gailey was declared the best woman violinist who has been heard in Northfield for years, a high compliment indeed, but fully deserved. Ward C. Lewis, of New York City, the pianist of the company, rounded out a brilliant organization. He filled with ability the exacting role of accompanist.—Northfield (Minn.) News. (Advertisement.)

The English militants have written new words to "Home, Sweet Home." It is obvious that they would have to if they wanted to use it at all.—New York American.

Steinway

THE Steinway is the preferred piano of today. It is a mechanical and an artistic triumph—the master work of four generations of the world's greatest piano makers.

The fame of the Steinway has been won through merit alone. Why not let this well-won fame decide your choice in the purchase of a piano?

The name of the Steinway dealer nearest you, together with illustrated literature, will be sent upon request.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
Subway Express Station at the Door.

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED BY MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY THE

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Pegujar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 22, 1914.

No. 1791

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemeuway St., Suite 7. 'Phoue: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dobbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
LONDON—
Mrs. Evelyn Kaesmann,
5 Portland Place, London W.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY—
Miss Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florianigasse 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza dl Spagna.
BRUSSELS, BELGIUM—
Luella Anderson, 52 rue de l'Ermitage.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatau 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

Max Schilling's new opera, "Mona Lisa," will have its premiere at the Stuttgart Opera, on November 1.

The ashes of Mme. Nordica arrived here last week from Europe, in charge of her husband, George W. Young.

All singers, composers, and instrumentalists who will be visiting in Los Angeles during the last week of June, 1915, and the first week of July, 1915, are requested to communicate with the MUSICAL COURIER.

Georg Brandes, the great Dane who visited this country recently, calls America "a pupil of Europe." He should have added that while it is a talented pupil, it never has received free scholarships from its master.

All the operas by Ermanno Wölf-Ferrari, except "Die Vier Grobiane," are to be produced at the Century Opera next season. They include "The Secret of Suzanne," "The Jewels of the Madonna," "Le Donne Curiose" and "L'Amore Medico."

Public School Superintendent Maxwell has received permission from the Board of Education to enlist the services of several thousand children of the high schools in a chorus in connection with the Saengerfest to be held in Brooklyn next summer.

Attendance at the orchestra and band concerts in Central Park is computed to be fifty per cent. larger than formerly. This must be due to the programs selected by the city's music committee, among whom are John Philip Sousa, Nahan Franko, Victor Herbert, R. E. Johnston, etc.

Our Paris office informs the MUSICAL COURIER by cable that Cleofonte Campanini has secured Artur Bodansky, of Mannheim, one of the best known and most capable of the young German directors, as his conductor for German opera in Chicago and Philadelphia during the coming season.

It is pleasant to be able to report that already a number of music teachers have expressed their desire to take the examination according to the "Essential Standard" recently adopted by the New York State Music Teachers' Association. All inquiries regarding the procedure and requirements should, until further notice, be directed to Gustav L. Becker, as chairman of the committee. His address is Steinway Hall, 109 East Fourteenth street, New York City.

Buffalo, Minn., does not show much insight into the importance of the development of music in the public schools, for the Journal of that city remarks scoffingly of a movement in Duluth, Minn.: "Some people in Duluth are agitating for music as part of the course. Music teachers will be the next fad in the public school, then will come the tango teacher, and after her a department of deportment and etiquette. Also we should have an instructor in manicure to teach the art of keeping the nails beautiful."—Evidently Buffalo, Minn., is as unmusical as Buffalo, N. Y.

A concert given recently in Albert Hall, London, by Mme. Tetrazzini and the London Symphony Orchestra, under the directorship of Arthur Nikisch, was one of the musical red-letter events of the present season in the English capital. The vast hall was crowded to the limit with an audience wildly enthusiastic over the performance of the coloratura diva, whose popularity and drawing power seem to be ever increasing in London, and whose art was conceded by the critics to be on the same high plane as formerly, when she first conquered London and its music lovers and tonal experts. The fact that in a season so crowded with concerts of importance, Mme. Tetrazzini was able to fill the large Albert Hall to overflowing, speaks volumes for the place she holds in the esteem and affection of the English public.

Another insult: Julius Paulus, who flourished about the year 200, wrote a book about Sextus Pompeius Festus, grammarian, in which book musicians are distinctly called "scrapers of strings"—"rasores, fidicines dicti, quia videntur chordas ictu radere." We cannot put up with this. It must stop!

At the annual election of the Associated Musical Conductors of America, held July 10 at the Association Rooms, 227 West Forty-sixth street, the following were elected officers for the ensuing year: Oscar Radin, president; Paul Schindler, first vice-president; Frank Darling, second vice-president; Leon M. Polachek, secretary; William Kerngood, treasurer. Board of Trustees, Anton Heindl, Frank Mandeville, John Lund, Alexander Henderson and Gus Salzer. All the foregoing are comic and light opera conductors, but the leaders of symphony and of grand opera might do worse than to join the organization, among whose members are some fully competent to lead Beethoven or Wagner with as much effect as Lehar, or De Koven, or Sousa.

Rumors are rife again as to a wonderful "endowed" music paper which is to be started next winter and financed by millionaires. It sounds likely, for no one except millionaires are able to supply the cash necessary to equip a music paper for active competition against the MUSICAL COURIER. It has plenty of company but no competition. In the meantime let the knowledge go forth again that the MUSICAL COURIER, too, is an endowed paper—endowed by its advertisers and subscribers. The MUSICAL COURIER carries more paid advertising and has more readers than all the rest of the world's musical papers put together. This is not a boast; it is a truth. And, by the way, if the new "endowed" music paper is looking for a good printer, why not try the Blumenberg Press? (Advt.) It prints the MUSICAL COURIER and fifteen other weekly and monthly class publications, and might just as well make it sixteen.

The fact that the operas which are being submitted for the Los Angeles opera prize of $10,000, offered through the National Federation of Musical Clubs, now have all been handed in should not deter American composers from going on with the composition of opera. A good many American composers were heard to state when the $10,000 Metropolitan Opera prize failed, that there would be no more such opera prizes and that they would certainly not waste their time writing opera. This attitude is unquestionably unwise and shows more than anything else that those composers who took this attitude were not sure of their own ability to turn out worthy work. The result has been that many who gladly would have entered operas for the $10,000 Los Angeles prize could not do so, because the time to complete such a large work was insufficient. However, there is balm for the future, as the $10,000 prize will be repeated every four years in Los Angeles. (See elsewhere in this issue). The MUSICAL COURIER is in a position to furnish the names of librettists who can offer worthy librettos for composers. Among these, two may be immediately mentioned, Emma Scarr Booth, author of the Indian opera libretto, "Norah"; and Janet Williams Dean, author of "Awahna." Inquiries regarding these librettos may be addressed to the MUSICAL COURIER. It might be added that both of these librettists are California women and the spirit of their work therefore may be assumed to be acceptable to the judges of a prize offered by Californians.

A CONCERT TOUR OF THE VOLGA.

By Arthur M. Abell, Special Representative of the Musical Courier on the Tour of the Volga Made by Sergei Kussewitzky and His Symphony Orchestra.

II.

Russian history is inextricably connected with the history of the Volga. As early as the eighth century there was a lively traffic up and down this great waterway between central Asia and eastern Europe and the basin of the Volga was the stage on which was played the history of Russia of the sixteenth century. The distance that the Volga covers from its source to its mouth is greater than the distance from Lake Itasca to the Gulf of Mexico, but the actual length of the Mississippi exceeds that of the Volga by about 500 miles, because of the extraordinarily tortuous course of the ney of 2,000 miles; and sometimes its broad expanse spread out to the extent of six miles. There is something very impressive about the majestic flow of this mighty river.

We were nearly twenty-four hours covering the distance from Jaroslav to our next stopping place, Kostroma. The banks of the river were for the most part low and we saw only fields, forests and peasant villages. It was a picture steeped in a profoundly Russian atmosphere of melancholy. Very beautiful was our first sunset. We had the river all to ourselves, as there was no other traffic. The simple, illiterate peasant to his sovereign. A monument to Susanin in the market place is one of the chief sights of Kostroma. The churches there are beautiful and similar to those of Jaroslav.

The Kussewitzky concert was given here, as at Jaroslav, in the municipal theatre, which is built in the regulation western European style, with a seating capacity of about 800. The program of this, our second concert of the Volga tour, was the same as on the previous evening at Jaroslav. The audience listened with rapt attention and applauded both Kussewitzky and Risler with great warmth

ICE ON THE VOLGA BELOW KOSTROMA. THE RIVER HERE IS TWO MILES WIDE.

HE MONUMENT TO SUSANIN, THE PEASANT, WHO SAVED THE LIFE OF THE FIRST CZAR BY SACRIFICING HIS OWN.

THE LANDING AT KOSTROMA. THIS PICTURE SHOWS THE WAY MERCHANDISE IS STORED ALONG THE BANKS OF THE VOLGA, AWAITING REMOVAL.

AN INTERESTING CHURCH AT KOSTROMA.

Father of Waters." In many respects the Volga iggests the Mississippi. Its great breadth and ngth, the immense territory which it drains, its ver shifting channel, which is a great source f danger to navigation, its low banks and uddy waters are much the same. Its channel continually changing and must be staked out anew very season. The current is swift, averaging from our to five miles an hour. Before the introuc-on of steam, merchandise was towed up the river peasants, no less than 300,000 of them having en employed this way. The journey from strakhan to Nijni-Novgorod required seventy ys, and because of the swift current it was an ceedingly hard experience. This gave rise to the ying, "The Volga is our mother going down ream, but our stepmother going up stream."

At Jaroslav, where we took the steamer, the olga was nearly a mile wide and at no time did it easure less than that throughout the entire journey approach to Kostroma was as lovely as a fairy tale; the green, blue and gold domes of the handsome churches silhouetted against the sky made a never to be forgotten impression. Kostroma is a very pretty town of 45,000 inhabitants, known for its beautiful monastery of Ipatiev and famous as the place where the first Czar was crowned three hundred years ago. The monastery of Ipatiev was founded in 1330, but the town itself is much older. It was in this old monastery that Mikhael Feodorovitch Romanow, who later became Czar, was hidden when pursued by the Poles. He was founder of the dynasty of the Romanows and the ancestor of the present Czar. Before him the house of Rurik had ruled over Russia for seven centuries. Susanin, a Russian peasant, saved the Czar's life while he was in hiding, by sacrificing his own, and on this historical background is based the libretto of Glinka's celebrated opera, "A Life for the Czar." The text is a touching story of the devotion of this and enthusiasm. Risler again scored an immense success and contributed no less than four encores—the Liszt twelfth rhapsody, a Chopin nocturne and the C sharp minor waltz, and a Saint-Saëns etude.

As the distance from the steamboat landing to the theatre was about a mile and a half, Kussewitzky had provided carriages for our party and this was our first experience with those wonderful Russian horses from the steppes. They went like the wind and as the pavement was very bad it required no small amount of effort to retain our seats in the little open "Isvostischkas," or cabs seating two people, which are the only form of public conveyance save the tramways in all these cities on the Volga. Automobiles are practically unknown.

The concert lasted from nine until twelve and it was not until one o'clock that we sat down to supper in the salon of our steamer. Our cuisine was strictly Russian and quite different from western European cooking. We soon came to be very fond of one Russian dish, in particular—a fish soup made with sterlet. I know of no other fish that gives such delicious bouillon. Here, too, we made for the first time the acquaintance of real caviar, for the export article that one gets at outrageous prices in Berlin or Paris or London or New York has no taste at all compared with the delicious product that we had direct from the fish. It would be worth while for every caviar enthusiast to make a tour down the Volga in order to learn what true caviar is, if for no other reason.

On the Volga we learned to turn night into day. Supper over, Risler entertained us with his magnificent piano playing again. Some one had brought along an album of American ragtime and it was amusing to hear this great pianist dash off at sight this typically American music, which he played with wonderful rhythmic verve. It was generally 3 a. m. before we retired for the night—or rather for the morning. This was the usual routine throughout the tour.

When the distances between towns were not too great, we would lie in the harbor over night and not set sail until daylight, in order that we might all enjoy the scenery of the river. Below Kostroma traffic became livelier. We passed, above all, great numbers of immense "masut" boats. Masut is the unrefined petroleum which is burned exclusively by the steamers on the Volga in place of coal. The next day our own steamer took in a supply of 80,000 pounds, which lasted us for about a week. It was in masut and petroleum that the Nobel brothers, donors of the famous Nobel prizes, made their immense fortune at Baku, on the Caspian Sea, where their great oil wells are situated. Standard oil is not used at all in Russia, as the Baku district furnishes more than enough to supply the entire country. Nor is coal burned in any part of Russia, either on railroads or steamboats. In northern Russia they burn wood and in Southern Russia masut exclusively on the engines. As masut costs less than half a cent a pound, it is a cheap form of fuel. The Nobel brothers opened up a new and tremendous industry for Russia. They were Swedes who went to Baku about the middle of last century and for several decades they were the only ones to exploit the immense oil fields of that district. Now, however, there are numerous companies doing business there. One sees the great Nobel reservoirs on the banks close to the water at every town along the river. The banks of the river between Kostroma and Nijni Novgorod are very sparsely settled, there being no towns of importance and only a few straggling villages with an occasional old monastery and some very beautiful churches. In fact, the churches, even in the poorest villages, always were a surprise. Although the hamlets were poverty stricken in every other respect, these edifices always nearly were beautiful and impressive.

Although it was the second of May, there still was not a vestige of anything green to be seen along the Volga. Spring comes here, however, very suddenly—over night, as it were. Now and then we would hear fishermen in their boats singing that famous old song of the Volga, "Rasigralasya pogoda, Pogodushka Verkhovaya, Verkhovaya, volnovaya." (Down our little mother Volga on the broad expanse of water.) Probably in no other song does there throb such a majestic note of melancholy and heart-sickness as in this. The fishermen, peasants and workmen are always singing at their work and this lends a very characteristic note to the life of provincial Russia.

As I have already stated, the seed which Kussewitzky is sowing along the Volga is falling on good ground and is bearing fruit. We saw evidences of this in many different ways. The musical conditions in these provincial towns are naturally very primitive. Before the coming of Kussewitzky most of the people of the Volga cities had never seen or heard an orchestra and their interest in the various instruments was very great. This was shown by the crowds that collected around the wagons that transported the instruments from the steamer to the

ONE OF THE MANY BEAUTIFUL CHURCHES AT KOSTROMA.

THE OLD IPATIEV MONASTERY AT KOSTROMA, FOUNDED IN 1330. IT WAS HERE THAT THE FIRST ROMANOFF, THE FOUNDER OF THE PRESENT DYNASTY, WAS CONCEALED FROM THE POLES WHO SOUGHT HIS LIFE.

PETROLEUM TANKS OF THE NOBEL BROTHERS, SUCH AS ARE SEEN BY THE HUNDREDS ALONG THE VOLGA.

THE OLD PALACE OF MIKHAEL FEODOROWITSCH ROMANOFF, WHO WAS CROWNED AT KOSTROMA THREE HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

GENERAL VIEW OF KOSTROMA, WITH VOLGA IN THE DISTANCE.

theatre. At Kussewitzky's first concert in Rybinsk a deputation came to him on the stage after the first number and requested that he place the harps in front, so that the audience could see and admire these beautiful gold instruments. Since the last tour, two years ago, when Scriabine was piano soloist, the love for the piano and its music along the entire route has increased to an enormous degree. Dietrichs now reports quite a sale of pianos in these towns and there is even talk of schools of music being founded in some of them. American ragtime is well known all along the Volga through the music machines, and we found the tango to be omnipresent. It is a lovely stretch of water from Kostroma to Nijni Novgorod. The river flows grandly, majestically, almost due east. The distance between the two towns is about 300 versts or a little over 200 miles. On the Volga this seems nothing, for one quickly becomes accustomed to great distances there. At Povolgskoi the Volga is fed by the Unsha and for the next 100 miles to Nijni Novgorod it averages about two miles in width. At the mouth of the Oka, the next tributary, we saw large quantities of ice, although it was the third of May.

(To be continued.)

AN "ANONYMOUS" LETTER.

Accompanying is a reproduced facsimile of a typewritten letter received by the MUSICAL COURIER and illustrating one of the most contemptible forms of anonymous letter writing.

A careful perusal of the letter shows that the writer's statements are not based on fact, for to begin with, the contest judges have not yet been selected by the Los Angeles prize committee, therefore it is incorrect to say that Mr. Cadman or Mr. Chadwick "will have much to do" with the competition. The assertion that Mr. Cadman or Mr. Chadwick or one of the latter's pupils will receive the $10,000 prize is pure guesswork.

No "Club" is giving the $10,000, and therefore the offer could not have been stimulated by any "opera worth the prize" and known to the "Club" beforehand. The city of Los Angeles is raising the $10,000 for the prize and an additional $50,000 for the performance of the winning opera on the express condition that the Federation of Musical Clubs will hold their convention in Los Angeles every four years provided similar sums are raised for a similar purpose on each occasion. Therefore, anyone who is acquainted with Los Angeles knows that those enterprising Westerners will not let such a chance at this escape them, and that the offer amounts in a way almost to a permanent opera prize endowment. As a new opera will be awarded $10,000 in Los Angeles every four years from now on, the proof is conclusive that the contest was not devised for the purpose of producing any one particular opera or benefiting any one particular composer,

It is not "pretty well known now who will get the prize."

There is no harm if two or three "on the inside" --presumably meaning those who have been instrumental in helping to prepare the Los Angeles 1915 biennial and congress of the National Federation of Music Clubs—have an opera ready for the event, as long as they are not judges in the competition or receive no special privileges over other contestants.

There is no reason why the judges could not "wade through twenty or thirty operas in MS." and "descover" (!) an opera of great musical worth. It was done in the case of "Cavalleria Rusticana" when more than thirty works were in competition.

It is not strange that the weird Metropolitan Opera contest comes in for criticism; the selection of "Mona" gave rise to many disturbing thoughts.

There is no reason why Mr. Cadman or Mr. Chadwick should not win the Los Angeles prize; both are composers of talent and renown. No secret has been made of the fact that those two gentlemen have written operas, as the MUSICAL COURIER published exclusive news to that effect. Mr. Cadman himself told the present editor of the MUSICAL COURIER three or four years ago about an Indian opera which he was writing, and the same news gatherer was informed last winter in Boston by Philip Hale about the existence of a Chadwick opera. If that is the Boston opera referred to by the anonymous calumniator, then Mr. Chadwick was justified fully in reserving it for the Los Angeles competition if he felt so inclined.

In conclusion, let the anonymous gentleman be informed that he is not as anonymous as he imagines himself to be. As there is a way of establishing the identity of handwriting, there also [illegible] of establishing the identity of typewriting. Something familiar about the lettering in the reproduced document led us to make comparisons with certain other signed communications in our files, and the similarities in the printed type formations were apparent at once. We know the identity of the writer and for his own information we will say that he is a writer of operas himself and not so long ago changed his place of residence from one large American city to another. We realize that it is our duty to publish the name of the cowardly author of the unwarranted attack, but we shall let pity rule over duty and by way of example show the wretched man that consideration which he did not display toward his colleagues.

We feel sure that the musical world will take no more stock in the charges against Messrs. Cadman and Chadwick than does the MUSICAL COURIER.

Now that Sir Joseph Beecham has purchased Covent Garden Estate, what is he going to do with it?

June 20th 1914.

To The Musical Courier,

New York City,N. Y.

Gentlemen:-

The enclosed is a modern prophecy regarding the opera prize to be awarded next year,by the National Federation of Musical Clubs. The foretold event will happen about in this way.

The ten thousand dollar prize will be awarded to one Charles Wakfield Cadman;or to one Geo.W. Chadwick;or a California composer. Chadwick will have much to do with it one way or another,and if Cadman does not receive the prize a pupil of Chadwick will:in case my prophecy falls short in this,a California composer will be the lucky man.

Let no one be so foolish as to think that the "Club" is not quite sure that there is an opera worth the prize that they have an inkling of;and let no one be so dumb as to think that one the opera prize contest could bring forth an opera from who lives in the wilderness of musical-art.It is pretty well known now who will get the prize.It has all been worked up to a point where it was pretty well known that so and so could be relied upon for an opera already written

Two or three on the inside have operas-or at least one opera ready-for the event.It was known that either of these would be worth the prize and that the contest would not result in as big a failure as the one conducted by the Metropolitan.Who is so stupid as to believe that the judges could wade thru' twenty or thirty operas in M.S. and descover an opera of great musical worth.I tell you it is known even now by some who will get the prize,and that a certain work can be relied upon:This is a hard assertion to make;and seems to throw a reflection upon many good and hohorable people-but mark me,and see if I am not a prophet.

A certain opera was to have been produced in Boston by the Boston Opera Company,and about the time the contest came into view the opera was withheld,and thereby hangs a tale.There, is also a California composer who has done something smack;ah, it is known what he has accomplished.Indeed it has all been worked up by those who are in a position to know just how it will all end and let no one be so foolish as to think the prize opera will be one that was descovered by the judges during their score readings.They will not wade thru' all the scores that will be sent in to find the winner-no,it is marked even now.

Keep this prophecy until after the contest and until after the prize has been awarded,it is on this condition alone that I give you the right to publish my foretelling.I do not know in what western city I will mail this to you but on my way West I will mail it and no one knows me any way so it does not hurt my conscience.

It will only go to show how well I know how this kind of business works out.I foretold who would get the Metropolitan prize and it came out as I predicted.I was told that I was a dishonest fool for saying such a thing,but the fool who judged me was himself a "judge."Ah,did he know,He thinks so.As a prophecy is something that is foretold,so in turn is a "prize contest" something that is pre-arranged-but here my train pulls into town,and from here will my prophetic telling be mailed from.(I can hear them even now saying;"What an outrage to infer such a thing,what a dastard a man is who would stoop to such a thing:ah,but when it turns out to be the truth ,who is he that sulks and is disgruntled? So, here endeth what shall cause commotion.

Signed,

I.Know.

SOCIETY OF ST. GREGORY OF AMERICA.

The first American congress of Catholic organists and choirmasters interested in the advancement of the cause of sacred music has just been held at the Catholic Summer School, Cliff Haven, N. Y.

All sections of the United States, Canada and Mexico were represented by delegates, many of whom are prominent composers of sacred music. Canada's representatives included the foremost organists and choirmasters of Montreal.

The main object of the organization is to foster fraternal assistance and encouragement among its members, in the promotion of the cause of liturgical music according to the recommendations of Pope Pius X, in the famous "Motu Proprio" of November 22, 1903.

Resolutions were adopted admitting women to membership. This action was taken with especial reference to the sisters and lay teachers who have charge of the musical work in the parochial schools, convents and academies, etc. The following plans, as material aids to the accomplishment of the desires of the Holy Father with regard to liturgical music, were discussed, and steps were taken toward putting them into practical operation:

The establishment of a summer school in Cliff Haven providing instruction in sacred music, including Gregorian chant, modern music, choir boy training, organ accompaniment and kindred subjects. The compilation of a Catholic hymnal for general use which can be recommended not only for its devotional character, but also for its unquestioned artistic value. The publication of a periodical or bulletin devoted to the interests of the organization which shall also contain lists of liturgical church music recommended by a committee appointed for the purpose of examining music from all catalogues. The establishment of a bureau of information for the mutual benefit of rectors and organists.

Papers were submitted during the session by Rev. Leo P. Manzetti on the subject of "The Motu Proprio," Nicola A. Montani on "Choir Boy Training and a Consideration of the Methods Employed in Various Countries, Walter N. Waters (secretary of the National Association of Organists) on "Some Obstacles to be Overcome Before Arriving at a Successful Application of Church Music Reform," Prof. Antonio Mauro, of New York, on "Church Music Conditions and Suggestions for Their Improvement."

The society owes its inception to the efforts of an organization committee composed of the following members: J. C. Ungerer, choirmaster of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York; Rev. Leo. P. Manzetti, musical director of St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, Md.; Rev. L. Bouhier, choirmaster, Notre Dame Church, Montreal, Can.; Nicola A. Montani, choirmaster, St. John the Evangelist Church, Philadelphia, Pa.; Rev. J. M. Petter, musical director, St. Bernard's Seminary, Rochester, N. Y.; Rev. J. A. Boylan, choirmaster, Our Mother of Sorrows Church, Philadelphia, Pa.; Alph. Heuerman, organist, Our Mother of Sorrows Church, Philadelphia, Pa.; Rev. Virgil Genevrier, East Orange, N. J.

Among the delegates present were Rev. E. M. McKeever, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; J. Hession, organist, St. Patrick's Church, Boston, Mass.; Rev. S. M. Yenn, diocesan director of church music, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Rev. C. H. Lefebvre, S. J., of St. Mary's College, Montreal, Can.; J. N. Charbonneau, choirmaster, St. Charles Church, Montreal, Can.; Rev. Desjardins, S. J., choirmaster, Immaculate Conception Church, Montreal, Can., and Rev. P. F. Quinnan, St. Cecilia's Church, Pittston, Pa.

The following officers were elected: Spiritual director, Rev. E. M. McKeever, Pittsburgh, Pa.; vice-presidents (representing respective districts), Rev. Leo. P. Manzetti, Baltimore, Md.; Rev. L. Bouhier, Montreal, Can.; Rev. S. M. Yenn, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Rev. Domenic Waedenschwiler, Mt. Angel, Ore.; Alfred Rhode, S. Louis, Mo., and Rev. Laboure, San Antonio, Tex.; treasurer, Rev. J. A. Boylan, Philadelphia, and secretary, Nicola A. Montani, Philadelphia, who was also appointed editor of the society's "Bulletin."

THE PAVLOWA CONTEST.

American composers will know within a few weeks the result of the Pavlowa Prize Dance Music Competition, for on Saturday last two hundred and three scores submitted were taken aboard the steamship Imperator by Max Rabinoff when he sailed for Europe. He will present the works to the premiere danseuse, who is the sole judge in the matter.

This does not mean that the contest is closed. In point of fact the original closing date of August 1 has been extended to August 15 in order that a number of musicians may have a little more time in which to forward compositions on which they now are working.

The additional manuscripts received at Mr. Rabinoff's New York office, in the Metropolitan Opera House building, are to be sent on to Mlle. Pavlowa as fast as they come in. The Russian dancer expects by the middle of August to have selected the most suitable manuscripts that are in her hands at that time, and from these and the others that later reach her she will choose the three she deems entitled to the prizes of $1,500.

"I am gratified over the number and the excellence of the dance music pieces that have been placed in this contest," said Mr. Rabinoff to a MUSICAL COURIER representative shortly before the Imperator sailed on Saturday. "I have had played for me every one of these compositions and find that a considerable percentage of all are sufficiently meritorious to justify publication. What is particularly pleasing is the seeming suitableness of a dozen or more waltzes, gavottes and one-steps that have been written by composers of whom little or nothing is known. As soon as I reach London, Mlle. Pavlowa will immediately set to work with a pianist to have played to her every composition. In doing this she will proceed without any previous knowledge of who the composer may be. This, as is apparent, will exclude any possibility of preference that might otherwise ensue through such advance information. Moreover, to guard against 'snap' judgment, Mlle. Pavlowa has told me in letters that she intends to hear on at least three separate occasions every piece of music received by her. I believe that all eliminations may be made by the last week in August, which will give a week or ten days for the thorough examination and testing of the fifteen or twenty compositions that will probably constitute this selected list. The public announcement of the winners of the three cash prizes of $500 each will be made some time about the first week in September."

AN IDEA.

There is a Melba Theatre in Melbourne. That ought to give the other prima donnas an idea for their own home towns. Let Melba get ahead of them by being the only singer to have a theatre named after her? Never.

SAN DIEGO'S THRIFT.

San Diego's (Cal.) Symphony Orchestra closed its fourth season last May without a deficit and with money in the bank. B. Roscoe Schryock is the conductor and magician who accomplished the result.

OVERLOOKED.

No one has thought as yet of blaming the financial condition of the American composer on President Wilson's policies. For one thing, however, it is not psychological.

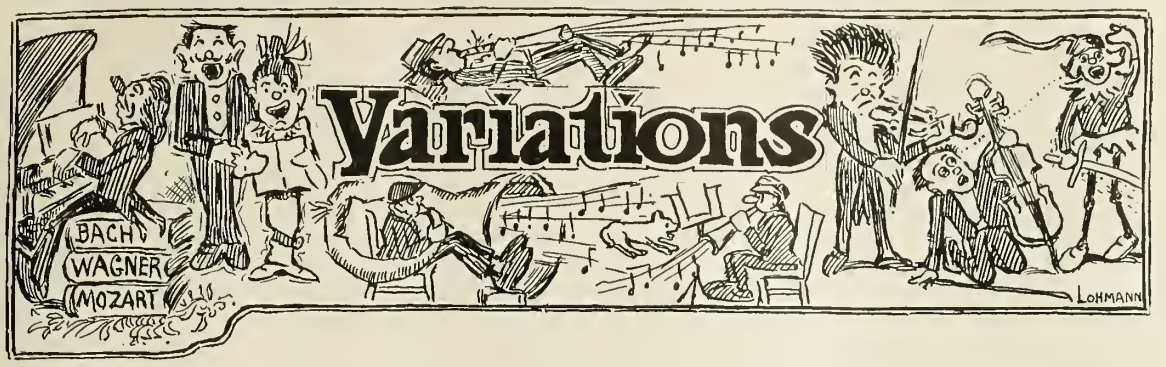
ST. LOUIS SYMPHONY EXPENSE.

Attached is a certified statement of income and expenditure of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra during the past year:

EXPENDITURE.

Salaries—Conductor and Orchestra		$55,918.60
Soloists		6,724.50
Hall rent		6,735.84
Advertising and press agent		3,430.91
Management salary and office expense		3,676.61
Ticket seller		125.00
Music and orchestra equipment		627.72
Printing, stationery and postage		634.18
Interest and miscellaneous expense		3,545.11
Total expenditure		$81,418.47
Deduct—Gross receipts from symphony (afternoon and evening) concerts	$36,031.15
Gross receipts from popular concerts	14,940.75
Net income from extra concerts and tours	992.27	51,964.17
Deficit on concerts		$29,454.30
Less—Profit on programs		200.00
Total deficit for year (excluding subscriptions to the Guarantee Fund)		$29,254.30

We have audited the books of the St. Louis Symphony Society for the year ending March 31, 1914 (being the season 1913-1914) and we certify that the above income and expenditure account exhibits a correct view of the operations for the period.



PRICE, WATERHOUSE & Co.,
Certified Public Accountants.

St. Louis, Mo., May 11, 1914.

Compared with the statement of 1912-13, the current budget shows an increase from season subscriptions and door sales, etc., of $4,785.56, while the total expenditure decreased $2,678.42, thus reducing the present deficit of $29,254.30 from $36,718.28, which it reached in the previous year. A guarantee fund of $30,000 per year for five years is the basis of the St. Louis Orchestra's financial support.

MAC DOWELL FESTIVAL.

This year's festival—the fifth annual—to be held under the direction of the Edward MacDowell Memorial Association at Peterborough, New Hampshire, will take place from August 19 to August 23. There will be plays, pageants and music. To the last named, Edward Burlingame Smith contributes a tonal setting to "Pan and the Star," a one act pantomime, and other original works are furnished by Edward Ballantine, Gena Branscombe, Rossiter G. Cole, Chalmers Clifton, Henry F. Gilbert, Wm. H. Humiston, Lewis M. Isaacs, Edgar Stillman Kelley, Arthur Nevin, Deems Taylor, etc. Ferdinand Reyher contributes a play called "Youth Will Dance," many MacDowell compositions are to be heard, Lada, an American terpsichorean artist who has studied in Russia, is to dance, and some of the other attractive features are choral numbers specially prepared for the festival by the Peterborough MacDowell Choral Club of seventy-five voices under the direction of Eusebius Godfrey Hood, of Nashua, N. H. (who has from the first conducted the orchestral and choral work of the festivals), and Haydn's "The Creation," also led by Mr. Hood, and participated in by his MacDowell Choir of Nashua. As the official notice of the association at Peterborough says: "One of the main purposes of the annual festival, given in this attractive setting, is to create an opportunity for the individual artist, whether he is a dramatist, composer, singer or actor, to show his talent on an occasion where no personal expense is entailed, where all the necessary material to show his work to good advantage is provided, and where a large and distinguished audience is assured." Full particulars regarding the festival, accommodations, etc., can be secured from the Edward MacDowell Memorial Association, Peterborough, N. H.

Running the Blockade.

Many kind contributors send jokes, articles, sketches, essays and burlesques to this department, but unfortunately their authors seem to forget that we are conducting chiefly a musical column and therefore, excellent as some of the contributed matter is, only a very small part of it is available for "Variations." Sometimes, however, our contributory friends devise clever ways to circumvent us, and one of them is the following, sent by a wag who signs himself "Wotan McGinty, a friend of Siegfried O'Houlihan":

"DEAR VARIATIONS—I often have read in your erudite and keen visioned journal jokes about the vocal daughter of the household who sings or plays the piano badly and annoys her friends and neighbors without measure. For the love of Orpheus, is there no household in the world that has a daughter who sings or plays well? Won't the comic papers please sometimes give us a jest about a girl whose voice or piano playing is liked by those who hear it? I confidently expect the jokeworm to turn some day and then we will read this:

"'There was a room full of visitors in the old family parlor. Farmer Biffkins asked his daughter Miranda to perform a piano selection and sing a song for the company. The girl did so. At the first sound of her music, the neighbors opened their windows and came to their doors. When Miranda finished, salvos of applause from the visitors and neighbors rent the air and testified both to the excellence of the girl's renderings and to the pleasure they had given the listeners.'

"There are some other humoresques which I despise as much as the one about the greatly maligned daughter and her music. They are the time worn 'funny' stories about the college graduate who cannot find work, the dandified city youth who tries to milk the cow, with the result that she kicks a pail of milk over his natty clothes, the imperishable mother-in-law slam, the perennial 'Mr. Staylate' anecdote about the young man who is kicked by Her father, the tale about Mrs. Newlywed's indigestible biscuits, the recital of the ill treatment received by the budding poet at the hands of brutal editor, and the myth of the so called 'summer girl' who plights her troth to several men at the country resort and forgets all about them as soon as the autumn leaves begin to redden.

"When the jokeworm finally turns, the foregoing fable will read like this:

"'What's that you've got in your hand?' asked the boss.

"'My diploma,' replied the candidate for a job; 'I've just graduated from college and——'

"'Come right in,' interrupted the other: 'I'm looking for help and I prefer a college man.'

"Farmer Corntossel was doing the milking while his city nephew looked on curiously.

"'Gol durn you lazy city folks,' said Corntossel; 'you don't know nothin'; you don't even know how to milk a cow.'

"'That isn't so hard,' replied the nephew, pleasantly.

"'It ain't, hey? Well, just you come and try it.' Farmer Corntossel arose and winked at the farm hands.

"The city nephew seated himself on the stool and quickly and deftly emptied the cow's udders of a pailful of excellent milk."

"'John, dear,' announced Mrs. Youngwife; 'mother is coming to spend next week with us.'

"A smile of genuine pleasure lit up hubby's features.

"'I'm delighted,' said he; 'for your mother is a woman of rare charm and keen intellect and I enjoy her society hugely. Couldn't she stay a fortnight?'"

"Cuthbert Staylate was taking leave of Dorabelle in the vestibule when a heavy step was heard at the top of the stairs, and a gruff voice broke the stillness, saying: 'Don't be frightened, my dears. I got up to get a drink of water. There's no hurry, Dorabelle, about your young man leaving. It's only two o'clock. Go into the parlor and turn down the gas, so the neighbors can't see your shadows on the curtains. It's a trick your ma and I learned. Good night, Dorabelle, my child.'"

"Mrs. Newlywed brought in a tray of hot biscuits.

"'I made them myself, Will, darling,' she announced.

"Will tasted the biscuits. 'Sweetheart,' was his decision, 'they are light, tasty, baked to the right consistency, well flavored, and generally excellent. In short, much better than the biscuits mother used to make, which were soggy, sour, as hard as a baseball and of a gray, forbidding color.'"

"The poet advanced timidly to the editor's door, and offered his wares.

"'Kindly have a seat,' said the editor; 'I'll read your poetry at once.'

"He cast his eyes carefully over several sheets of the script.

"'This is excellent verse,' was his verdict; 'and I shall consider it an honor to print it in our magazine. The cashier will give you a check as you pass out.'

"It was September 10. The Summer Girl had just returned to town. A caller sent in his card. It bore the name of the man to whom the Summer Girl had been engaged at the beach in August.

"'Of course, you've forgotten him,' said the Summer Girl's mother, coldly.

"'No, indeed,' the lovely maiden made answer; 'and I shall marry him next week as I promised.'"

Versatility.

We would not go so far as to call Leonard Borwick (long celebrated) a rising pianist, but the fact remains that the advertisement shown herewith appeared in the London Tatler of July 1, 1914:

BORWICK'S

THE BEST
BAKING POWDER
IN THE WORLD.

Smoked Sigi.

When Albert Spalding and his accompanist, Andre Benoist left St. Petersburg recently for Florence, the violinist was presented by his Russian impresario with a "sigi," the best fish delicacy produced in the Czar's domain. The problem immediately presented itself as to how that sigi was to be kept fresh during the fifty-eight hour run and at the same time escape the vigilant eye of the customs guards at the various frontiers. Very intelligently Spalding decided to intrust the precious cargo to the cook on the train. However, as the artistic smuggler relates, he had forgotten that it is necessary to change trains at the German boundary owing to the different gauge of the Russian railways. As Spalding disembarked the cook came forward and handed him the package containing the smoked sigi. A customs guard darted forward and, according to the Spalding report, the ensuing conversation took place:

Guard (gruffly)—What's in that package?

Spalding (indifferently)—Why—a fish.

Guard (gruff and incredulous)—What do you mean by a fish?

Spalding (more guarded but still indifferent)—Why, I mean a regular fish!

Guard (dignified and haughty)—Do you wish to insinuate that you travel with a fish?

Spalding (crushed and humble)—Why—yes, I must admit I am traveling with a fish, and my accompanist.

Guard—Well, you'll have to pay duty, that's all!

Spalding—On the fish, or on the accompanist?

Guard (contemptuously)—Dummes Luder!

All concerned were marched off to the customs office where the official who was in charge, after smelling, feeling, and looking as if he wished also to taste the toothsome fish, announced that the duty and fine would be "forty-five." Benoist quickly translated the sum into English for himself. "Geewhittaker!" he gasped, "eleven dollars and twenty-five cents." Spalding handed over a fifty mark bill. He received forty-nine marks and fifty-five pfennigs in change. "Oh!" burbled Benoist, "I see. The charge was only forty-five pfennigs, or eleven cents and a quarter." "Of course," assented Spalding, but he admits that he felt considerably relieved.

Sunken Treasure.

Beau Broadway, of the New York Morning Telegraph, tells us in his always well informed column that of the $15,000,000,000 produced since 1492, as many as $4,000,000,000 are missing. Come, come, Paderewski, put some of it back into circulation.

Musical Sporting Notes.

Beethoven has had a checkered career recently. On July 10 he trained a mile in 1.54 at the Empire City track at Yonkers, N. Y. On July 15 he ran second in a six-furlong race over the same course. On July 17 the world almost lost him. As the Morning Telegraph of July 18 reports: "During the heavy electrical storm yesterday which enveloped the Yonkers track in darkness, before the fourth race was run, the stable of A. J. Goldsborough, just back of the grandstand, was struck by lightning. In the barn was Beethoven, owned by S. L. Parsons. He was knocked down by the shock, and at first it was thought he was seriously injured. Beethoven had been down for ten minutes when he regained his feet."

POOR STRAUSS.

At Empire City, Lohengrin was third in an eight-horse race. Distance, one mile; track, fast; weather clear.

Oscar Hammerstein, grandson of the impresario, won a tennis tournament last week.

No, Phryne, it was not Charpentier, composer of "Louise," who won the heavyweight championship fight in London from "Gunboat" Smith. The winner's name is Carpentier.

Henrietta Bach, the violinist, is a devoted and expert tennis player.

Ruby Lips Wasted.

In the Music Student is an article on "The Clarinet as an Instrument for Girls." Would not "implement" be better?

Violin Debutants.

The Berlin home of Carl Flesch is a social and artistic center where his colleagues of the fiddle and bow often congregate on their visits to the German capital and play what and when they will without considering the wishes of the private audience. A talented beginner who appeared recently at one of the exclusive Flesch musicales was Fritz Kreisler. It is reported that he played nicely. At a former occasion under the same auspices, three gifted young men performed ably and showed much promise for the future. They were Eugen Ysaye, in a Vieuxtemps concerto; Mischa Elman, in the first movement of the Tschaikowsky concerto; Carl Flesch in the Nardini A major sonata.

First Aid to Literature.

Allenhurst, N. J., July 6, 1914.

DEAR VARIATIONS—While we know that your column is chiefly musical, because we read it eagerly every week, we thought that perhaps you might not be averse to printing a contribution of general humorous interest compiled by us on the beach one morning last week while we watched the people lolling in the sand around us and noticed the titles of the books they brought with them to read. As the following are the names of works recently published, our sketch might be called "New Authors For New Books." Here are our suggestions:

"At Bay" ..... Victoriano Huerta
"Black is White" ..... William J. Bryan
"The Blindness of Virtue" ..... Woodrow Wilson
"Busting 'Em" ..... Charles Mellen
"The Fortunate Youth" ..... Vincent Astor
"Great Days" ..... Theodore Roosevelt
"The Strength of the Strong" ..... Captain Cheape
"The Hour of Conflict" ..... Mrs. Pankhurst
"The Boomers" ..... Upton Sinclair
"The Forester's Daughter" ..... Miss Pinchot
"The Inside of the Cup" ..... Thomas Lipton
"You Never Know Your Luck" ..... Richard Canfield
"Letters From a Living Dead Man" ..... William A. Sulzer
"The Palace of Darkened Windows" ..... H. B. Claflin
"Guardian Angels" ..... J. D. and William Rockefeller
"The Man With the Iron Hand" ..... Alfred Hertz
"The Last Shot" ..... Charles A. Becker

Very truly yours,
GLADYS AND JOE.

Omaha, July 7, 1914.

LIEBSTER LIEBLING—Meinem widerstands-unfähigen Inneren entrang sich die folgende: "Sommerliche Ferienstimmung":

(Apologies to Brahms.)

Immer leiser wird mein "Schlommer," Immer heisser dieser Sommer—
Immer weniger die Schüler
Bis es einst im Herbst wird kühler.

Bin nun wieder bald am Wandern
Ueberlass das Schuften Andern
Reise durch Gebirg und Wälder
Vom Erlös der Stundengelder.

Lebt nun wohl—O "schwere Noten";—
Falsch gespielt, durch Schülerpfoten,
Habt ihr zu verschied'nen Malen
Mir Verursacht Höllenqualen.

Ruht Euch aus,—Ihr Musikanten
Und vergesset die Folianten,
Diese dicken mit Sonaten,
Partituren und Kantaten.

Packt die Koffer;—schnürt die Kisten,
Sänger,—Geiger,—Pianisten—
Nisten gern am Strand der See'en
Oder bei den Berges-fee'en.

Ferienfreuden und "Moneten"
Alles irdische geht "flöten,"
Doch im Herbst das Geld ernaut sich—
Und der Musikante freut sich—

Denn ein reicher Ernte segen
Kommt auch ihm dann sehr gelegen
Und es geht bequem und heiter
Mit dem Stundengeben weiter.
ad infinitum.

Ich verbleibe mit warm-sommerlichen Gruss
Dein stiller Bewunderer.
SIGMUND LANDSBERGER.

How About It, Jan?

Henri Kubelik, a vaudeville violinist, who calls himself a cousin of Jan Kubelik, is appearing at present in Australia. The Tasmania Mail informs us that Henri has invented the "Kublophone, or musical wireless."

On Gasoline?

Cecil Fanning overheard a good one recently. "Gracious sakes," complained an old lady, "the doctor tells me I have autointoxication. Stuff and nonsense. I have been a teetotaller all my life and never stepped inside one of those pesky automobiles." LEONARD LIEBLING.

LIST OF MEMBERS COMPRISING NAHAN FRANKO'S CONCERT BAND ESPECIALLY ORGANIZED FOR THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

Clarinets.—Williams, Metropolitan Opera Orchestra; Finkelstein, Chicago Opera Orchestra; Scheck, late of New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Brisset, Sousa's Band; Schutz, Sousa's Band; Giannone, L., Franko Orchestra; Wissler, Herbert's Orchestra; Schreiber, Herbert's Orchestra; Giannone, 2d, Sousa's Band; Fontanella, Montreal Opera Orchestra; Gerhard, Metropolitan Opera Orchestra; Christman, New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Flutes.—Fayer, solo flute, New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Kurth, Metropolitan Opera Orchestra; E. Wagner, New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Oboes—Labate, solo oboe, New York Symphony Orchestra; St. Angelo, New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Bassoons.—Bucci, solo bassoon, Metropolitan Opera Orchestra; Mesnard, solo bassoon, New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Pfankuchen, New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

French Horns.—Reiter, solo horn, New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Corrado, solo horn, Metropolitan Opera Orchestra.

French Horns.—Dutschke, New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Laitner, New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Cras, New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Altos.—Wagner, Franko Orchestra; Diles, Franko Orchestra.

Trumpets and Cornets.—Capodiferro, solo trumpet, Metropolitan Opera Orchestra; Klatzkin, solo trumpet, New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Schlossberg, New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Maurer, Metropolitan Opera Band; Lubin, New York Symphony Orchestra; De Blasi, Metropolitan Opera Band; Beringer, Metropolitan Opera Band; Gerner, Pryor's Band.

Baritones and Euphonium.—Perfetto, solo baritone, Sousa's Band; Diehl, Metropolitan Opera Band; Phasey, Coldstream Guard Band.

Trombones.—Cusimano, Franko Orchestra; Clark, New York Symphony Orchestra; Lucas, Sousa's Band; La Croix, Metropolitan Opera Orchestra.

Tuba and Basses.—Geib, New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Helleberg, 1st, Sousa's Band; Thomae, Savage Opera Company; Helleberg, 2d, Sousa's Band; Grett, Metropolitan Opera Orchestra; Krause, New York Symphony Orchestra.

Tympani and Drums.—Friese, New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Chapman, Sousa's Band; Helmecke, Metropolitan Opera Band; Greinert, librarian, Franko Orchestra.

Mme. Alda's Latest Honor.

Frances Alda, the beautiful and charming Metropolitan Opera soprano, whose American popularity is limited only by the coasts of the East and the West, and whose European appearances have won great admiration for the soprano abroad, is again the recipient of a signal honor.

Photo copyright by Miskin Studio, New York.
FRANCES ALDA.

She has been asked by Arturo Toscanini, the distinguished Metropolitan Opera musical director, to sing the title role in the opera "Lorely," which Mr. Toscanini himself is to conduct at Lucca, Italy, in September.

The opera was written by Catalani, and is being given as a festival to honor the dead composer.

Mme. Alda will accept the invitation, and it is a foregone conclusion that her success will be a most brilliant one.

Ziehn Appreciation.

Chicago, Ill., July 17, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

The splendid tribute paid to the late Bernhard Ziehn by your San Francisco correspondent, Julius Gold, pleased me more than I can express. I like a generous and a just act, and this was one on the part of Mr. Gold and of the MUSICAL COURIER. No pupil ever valued the teaching and attainments of Mr. Ziehn more than myself, and though one can almost say no one is indispensable, the loss of Bernhard Ziehn is an irreparable one. (I doubt, too, if a teacher will ever quite fill the place Mathilde Marchesi did.) The greatness of Mr. Ziehn enabled him to discuss music with any one and to come down to the level of a small child in his illustrations; for greatness may be profound but dare not be abstruse.

My husband often said he had never come in contact with so stimulating a mind; truly the mind of a genius. Mr. Ziehn stood with me, firmly as a rock, as "to vocal music in the vernacular," and having his works published here, said they would be without value unless with English texts. The "Manual of Harmony" is published in Germany in German (Harmonielehre), but our edition is in English; and his "Five and Six Part Harmonies" and "Canonical Studies" are published with both German and English, I think.

Sincerely yours,
ELEANOR EVEREST FREER.

Flesch Appearances.

The concert tour of Carl Flesch, the eminent Hungarian violinist, includes four appearances in New York, four in Chicago, three in Philadelphia, three in Boston and two each in Cleveland and Toronto. Other cities in the Flesch itinerary are Minneapolis, St. Paul, Brooklyn, Washington, Utica, North Adams, Pittsfield, Jacksonville, Grand Rapids, Oberlin, Montreal, Quebec, Indianapolis and Lima, Ohio.

Samuels to Accompany Flesch and Serato.

Homer Samuels, who has been reengaged as the accompanist on the second tour of Carl Flesch, the distinguished Hungarian violinist, which opens the first part of January, has also been engaged as the accompanist for the Italian violinist, Mr. Serato, from October 15 to January 3.

THE SCHARWENKA MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING.

Famous Polish Pianist and Pedagogue Establishes His Own Master School in Berlin.

The announcement that Xaver Scharwenka, the famous Polish pianist and pedagogue, had severed his connection with the conservatory of music which he founded and with which he had been so closely identified for a quarter of a century, has caused much surprise and a great deal of comment in musical circles in Germany. The demands for private lessons with Scharwenka from students coming from all parts of the world have become so great that he found he could not do justice both to the conservatory and his private pupils. So he decided to resign and establish his own master school and henceforth devote himself exclusively to the teaching of the piano.

XAVER SCHARWENKA.

At the conservatory there were numerous demands upon his time aside from his piano instruction, and Scharwenka no longer cares to dissipate his energies in various directions. The new Scharwenka institution is the only special school of music in Berlin giving its entire attention to piano instruction in its various phases. A large number of pupils already has applied for admission to the new school, which opens for its first term in September. Scharwenka's genius and his great wealth of experience as pianist and pedagogue, covering nearly half a century, will be focussed upon making this new school one of the foremost of its kind in the world. For the present it will be located at Blumenthal strasse, 17, where the famous pianist has a large double apartment with fourteen rooms, so there will be no lack of space.

Walter Petzet, the assistant director, who has been teaching at the Scharwenka Conservatory for some time past, is an experienced pianist and instructor, and a splendid all round musician. Petzet spent seven years in the United States and speaks English as fluently as his native German. An admirable soloist, he has been singularly successful as a teacher.

Marta Siebold has for years been Scharwenka's principal assistant, both at the conservatory and in his private teaching. Having been exclusively taught by the master, she is thoroughly conversant with his method and has long since proved herself a pedagogue of the first rank. She is also a formidable soloist and has repeatedly been heard in Berlin and other important cities of Germany with marked success.

Scharwenka's daughter, Isolde, who will also teach at the master school, has inherited her father's great ability as a musician and pianist. Having been taught entirely by her father, she, too, is thoroughly familiar with his methods of instruction. For eight years past she has taught with flattering success at the conservatory. Isolde Scharwenka is also an excellent piano soloist and has played works for two pianos with her father in Berlin, Breslau, Dresden and other important music centers of Germany, where she found marked favor with the press and public. Thus will it be seen that uniformity in method and style of teaching will be one of the characteristic features of the new master school for piano.

Baernstein-Regneas Pupil for Light Opera.

Belle Storey, the erstwhile prima donna soprano and so called "headliner" in vaudeville, has just closed a contract to star next season with Montgomery and Stone in a light opera, which is now being written for her. Miss Storey has an exceptionally beautiful voice with unusually brilliant and fluent coloratura, and she is one of the few singers of popular music who takes her art seriously. This summer, when most high salaried artists are resting at seashore or traveling abroad, this singer is in New York, taking daily instruction from the eminent vocal instructor, Joseph Baernstein-Regneas, and under his guidance is acquiring a better and a surer technic. Miss Storey, in addition to being an excellent singer, has a most charming stage presence and she will unquestionably have success in her new line of work next season.

Handel's "Messiah" at Ocean Grove.

Thanks to the untiring efforts of Tali Esen Morgan, musical director of the Auditorium at Ocean Grove, N. J., that city, has become within the last few years a place of musical importance. Mr. Morgan shows his ability, not only as a thoroughly competent and deeply gifted musician, but as an organizer as well, and every summer he gathers together a chorus of from a thousand to twelve hundred voices to give the greatest works of the classical masters. Ocean Grove and its adjacent city, Asbury Park, offer unlimited inducements for visitors during the summer months, and each one of these choral performances at the Ocean Grove Auditorium takes on the appearance of a genuine musical festival. The auditorium itself is very large and commodious and possesses excellent acoustic properties. It also holds one of the greatest organs in the East, and this adds much to the performance of choral works in which the original score calls for an organ part.

On Saturday evening, July 18, Handel's "Messiah" was given a splendid rendition in this auditorium, under Mr. Morgan's spirited direction. The chorus numbered about one thousand, being made up of five combined choruses from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark and Ocean Grove. Altogether it should number about twelve hundred voices, but there is no absolute means of knowing how many were absent, and it is sure that there must have been well over a thousand on the stage. The work of this massed chorus was smooth and the rendition of the noble music of the "Messiah" dignified and impressive. The chorus produced a large and sonorous beauty of tone.

DAN BEDDOE.

The soloists on this occasion were Elizabeth Tudor, whose agreeable soprano was enjoyed; Mary Jordan, of the Century Opera Company, whose beautiful contralto brought out effectively the Handel melodies; Dan Beddoe, [illegible] the tenor part with his well known beauty of tone and breadth of interpretation, and was especially effective in the recitative, "Comfort Ye My People" and the arias, "Every Valley Shall Be Exalted," and "Thou Shalt Break Them," which were loudly applauded; and Henri Scott, the basso, who was in excellent voice and sang with great dignity and beauty, "Thus Saith the Lord," and "Who May Abide the Day of His Coming." Mr. Scott is known to the musical world as a member of the Chicago Opera Company, and the depth and thoroughness of his musicianship was well shown in his interpretation of the music of the "Messiah."

The orchestra of this occasion was made up of sixty-five players, selected from the New York Symphony Orchestra, and the organist was Clarence Reynolds, official organist of the Auditorium. The whole performance was an unqualified success, and the Auditorium was crowded to its capacity.

HENRI SCOTT.

Bambrick and La Bonte at Allenhurst.

Winifred Bambrick, the young Canadian harpist, and Henri La Bonte, the French operatic tenor, were heard in joint recital on Sunday evening, July 12, at the fashionable and exclusive Allenhurst Club at Allenhurst, N. J. Their program follows:

Fenrich's Orchestra ——
Tenor solo, Celeste Aida ..... Verdi
M. la Bonté.
Harp solo, Fantasia di Bravura ..... Pinto
Miss Bambrick.
Orchestra ——
Tenor solo, Group of Songs.
M. la Bonté.
Harp solo—
Serenata capricciosa ..... Pinto
Berceuse ..... Kastner
The Butterfles ..... Verdalle
Miss Bambrick.
Orchestra ——
Tenor solo, Group of Songs.
M. la Bonté.
Harp solo—
Vision ..... Verdalle
Tarantella ..... Pinto
Orchestra ——

Miss Bambrick's fine tone and wonderful technical facility won instant success with the large audience that attended this well arranged recital. Mr. La Bonté was particularly successful with his "Celeste Aida" and was enthusiastically applauded.

Slezak's Itinerary.

Leo Slezak, the Czech tenor, will arrive in America on Christmas Day. His tour, which begins January 2 and extends until May 15, includes in its itinerary the cities of Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Dallas, Fort Worth, New Orleans, Milwaukee, Quebec, Montreal, Buffalo, Washington and New York.

NORAH DREWETT THE FAMOUS PIANIST
SEASON 1914-15
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

THE WEEK IN CHICAGO.

Timely Items Concerning Current Summer Happenings in the Middle West Metropolis.

Chicago, Ill., July 18, 1914.

Frances Ingram and her husband, Karl MacVitty, the well known dramatic producer, left Chicago three weeks ago on an automobile tour, during which they will visit the principal towns between Chicago and New York. They will stop at Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland and Detroit on their way back and are expected to be in Chicago toward the end of the month.

MARION GREEN.

Chicago Band.

The Chicago Band, of which William Weil is conductor, is giving concerts in the various Chicago parks during the summer months. During the past week the band played on Tuesday evening in Jackson Park. On Wednesday and Saturday evenings concerts were given in Grant Park, and on Thursday evening a concert was given in Washington Park and in the Bessmer Park on Friday. On Sunday two concerts were given, one in the afternoon in Lincoln Park and another at night in Fuller Park. These performances are listened to by a large crowd and the programs furnished by Weil and his men are not only well arranged, but also beautifully rendered.

Fabbrini in Chicago.

Giuseppi Fabbrini, the well known pianist, was among the callers at this office during the past week. Mr. Fabbrini, who is head of the piano department at the Minneapolis School of Music, will remain in America this summer enjoying his vacation in the principal music centers and will return in the fall to Minneapolis.

Zukowsky Soloist with Chicago Symphony.

Alexander Zukowsky, assistant concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, was the soloist with that organization at the concert given Saturday evening, July 11, at Ravinia Park, under the direction of Frederick Stock. Mr. Zukowsky, who is among the favorite artists appearing yearly at that beautiful North Shore park, met with his customary success and was accorded a rousing reception.

Eugene Simpson at Home.

Eugene Simpson, the witty and astute Leipsic correspondent of the Musical Courier, has reached America and is enjoying his summer vacation visiting friends and relatives in New York, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul and St. Louis and will spend some time on his farm in southern Illinois. Mr. Simpson, who comes of a family of noted farmers, is himself a well known truck hand, though an exceptionally good musician and violinist—an instrument which is also very well played by his younger brother.

American Conservatory's Third Recital.

Edward Clarke, basso, and Kurt Wanieck, pianist, will present the program of the third summer recital by the American Conservatory, Wednesday morning, July 22, at Kimball Hall.

Chicago Piano Quartet's Opera Evenings.

The opera evenings that were given last season by the Chicago Piano Quartet, consisting of Henriette Weber and the Messrs. Itte, Van der Voort and Klammsteiner, of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, with the assistance of various singers, were so successful that they are to be resumed next season on Sunday, November 1. Miss Weber, under whose direction the concerts again will be given, has been fortunate in being able to secure as soloists, among others, Marion Green, basso, and Lucille Stevenson, soprano. A well known contralto and a tenor will also take part in these concerts, and it is the plan now to include in the list of the operas to be given many of the notable works in the standard repertoire, some old popular favorites like "The Mikado," "The Chimes of Normandy," "Martha," etc., and also some of the latest novelties. "The Ring of the Niebelungen" will also be described one evening with all four singers taking part.

The Chicago Piano Quartet, with the four singers selected by Miss Weber, has also been booked for a limited number of important out of town engagements during the season 1914-15.

LUCILLE STEVENSON.

Carl D. Kinsey Farming.

Carl D. Kinsey, secretary and treasurer of the Apollo Musical Club and business manager of the North Shore Festival Association, is enjoying his summer vacation with Mrs. Kinsey and their son on his "Woodlawn Farm," in Churubusco, Ind. Mr. Kinsey is engaging in farm work of all kinds and he says it is "great." He has been plowing corn almost every day. Tilling the soil will doubtless prove a beneficial exercise to the astute manager.

Recital at Bergey Studios.

Last week a recital was given by advanced pupils of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore S. Bergey in the Bergey studios in the Fine Arts Building. Mr. and Mrs. Bergey will leave at the end of the month for an automobile tour through Kentucky and will return to Chicago early in September.

Devries Engaged by Wisconsin Conservatory.

Herman Devries has been engaged to teach one day a week, Monday, at the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music in Milwaukee. The balance of his time will be devoted exclusively to his studios in the Fine Arts Building, Chicago.

Bloomfield Zeisler Leaves for Europe.

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, her husband, Sigmund Zeisler, and their two sons, Paul and Ernest, sailed from New York on the S. S. La France last Wednesday, July 15. The Zeislers will tour through Europe and will be back for the beginning of the musical season in Chicago.

Mme Weber Receives Requests for Lectures

"L'Amore dei tre re," by Montemezzi seems to be creating a great amount of interest. It was heard with great

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Mrs. STACY WILLIAMS Voice Production :: Repertoire ::
In Europe June 15 to September 15
For information, prospectus, etc., address
Mrs. Williams, 405-406 Kimball Hall - Chicago, Ill

Lucille STEVENSON (TEWKSBURY) SOPRANO
Address: 4438 Berkeley Avenue Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
Consisting of
OPERA, LECTURE RECITALS AND MELODRAMES and
THE CHICAGO PIANO QUARTETTE
Henriette Weber, piano; Fritz Itte, violin;
Carl Klammsteiner, cello; A. Van Der Voort, viola.
Specializing in Opera Programs.
Arrangements with Distinguished American Singers as Soloists
FOR TERMS AND DATES ADDRESS MISS H. WEBER
Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill., Phone Harrison 4868-4869

MARION GREEN BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

MR. and MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
Registration for Summer Term Now Open
Summer Address: 1434 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill. Phone 1105 Evanston

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President

SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rive-King, Guy Herbert Woodard, Grace Stewart Potter, Mae Julia Riley, Harold von Mickwitz, Frank B. Webster, Eleanor Smith, Ernest O. Todd, Mme. Justine Wegener, Edgar A. Nelson, Edward Dvorak, Adelaide G. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

success in New York this season, and is one of the principal novelties promised by the Chicago Grand Opera Company for next season in Chicago, and Henrietta Weber says that she has had requests for lectures on it from many different parts of the United States, showing that this new opera seems to have taken hold.

CHICAGO MUSICAL COLLEGE ITEMS.

The concert of original compositions by Felix Borowski, given July 15 in reception hall, Chicago Music College, was one of the most unique and successful ever offered in Dr. Ziegfeld's institution. Eleven numbers were presented on the program and the excellence of the compositions submitted by advance students was remarkable. The best vocalists, violinists and pianists of the college were selected to interpret the compositions, and the entire program represented some of the most conscientious work pursued in this institution during the summer session.

Students of the School of Acting, Chicago Musical College, will provide the entertainment to be given in the Ziegfeld Theatre, Saturday morning, August 1. Under the direction of Redmond Flood they will present a musical fairy tale, "Creatures of Impulse," by W. S. Gilbert. In connection with the production, dances by pupils of Marie Jung will be given. Those who will appear in the principal roles are Adolphe Richard, A. Redeff, Cecil Hall, Mae Pfeiffer, Gertrude Chalker and Vola Anthony.

MRS. E. H. LEWIS IN CHICAGO.

Mrs. E. H. Lewis, of the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, New York, was one of the visitors at this office this week. Mrs. Lewis seemed very much pleased over the bookings for the different artists under the M. H. Hanson direction for next season.

CONCERT AT UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO.

Nelda Hewitt Stevens, soprano; Heathe Gregory, baritone, and Ruth Simmons, pianist, gave the third of the Monday evening concerts of the University of Chicago summer series at Mandel Assembly Hall last Monday evening, July 13.

Press Notices of a Successful Contralto.

A few press notices accorded Mme. Rost-Why after a recent appearance in "Elijah" are herewith reproduced:

Mme. Rost-Why, contralto, was the best of an excellent quartet, singing with delightful taste and effectiveness, and scored the individual success of the evening.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

In Mme. Rost-Why, contralto, there was an admirable artist, whose opportunities were all too limited. Her voice is rich and powerful, and both her enunciation and style were beyond criticism.—Philadelphia Record.

Mme. Rost-Why, the contralto, rapidly becoming better known in Philadelphia, sang with a beautifully even and level voice.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The chorus was no doubt spurred to its best effort by the admirable singing of the soloist, T. Foster Why, to whom was assigned the arduous task of rendering the music of "Elijah"—the most exacting probably in oratorio. From the start Mr. Why showed his mastery over the difficult role, not only singing in admirable taste, but his enunciation was perfect. Mme. Rost-Why was equally effective in all her singing, but in her plaintive and mellow rendering of "O Rest in the Lord" she received an ovation—the greatest of the evening—and there was a persistent demand for a repetition, to which she only graciously bowed.—Philadelphia Press.

The warm contralto of Mme. Rost-Why was admirably adapted to the contralto part, and her "Woe Unto Them That Forsake Him" was one of the most effective solos of the evening.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Mme. Rost-Why, contralto, has a voice of opulent quality, which she used with much taste and notable effectiveness.—Philadelphia North American. (Advertisement.)

Willard Flint Plans Busy Season.

From Hyannis, on Cape Cod, where he is at present enjoying the ocean breezes, comes word of a very strenuous season ahead for Willard Flint, the well known Boston basso.

Among his dates already booked are a "Messiah" performance at Sherbrooke, Canada, December 8; a tenth engagement with the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston, December 20; a festival at Concord, N. H., February 10 and 11, when Verdi's "Requiem" will be performed, and a re-engagement with the Lowell Oratorio Society, May 11. Mr. Flint is also planning to give a recital in Chicago early in the season, and several other Western dates are now pending under the management of the Briggs Musical Bureau of Chicago, with whom Mr. Flint is now connected.

A Larkin-Weber Engagement.

Anne Irene Larkin, reader, and Henriette Weber, pianist and lecturer, will give six lecture-recitals at Lake Chautauqua, New York, during the biggest week there, that of August 17, known as "Recognition Week." The operas to be described in melodrama form are "Pelleas and Melisande," "Ariane and Bluebeard," Horatio Parker's "Mona," "Parsifal" and the comparatively new opera by Wolf-Ferrari based upon a Moliere comedy, "Love Is the Best Doctor," which has been wrongly translated into "Dr. Cupid," and one miscellaneous program of melodramas.

Mme. Rosa Olitzka
Celebrated Russian Contralto
ASSISTED BY
Kathleen Hart, Soprano
Exclusive Management West of Cleveland
By special arrangement R. E. Johnston
Elizabeth Rothwell Wolff, Soprano
From Royal Court Theatre Darmstadt.
Walter Henry Rothwell at the piano, condr.
St. Paul Symphony Orchestra
AND
Miss Edna Gunnar Peterson, Pianist
Mr. Albert Borroff, Basso-Cantante
Lecture Recitals, Oratorio
Mme. Cora Kempre, Soprano
Fresh from European Operatic Triumphs
Miss Esther May Plumb, Contralto
Recitals, Oratorio
Mr. Ridgley Hudson, Tenor
Recitals, Oratorio
Miss Clara Williams, Soprano
Oratorio
Miss Celene Loveland
Piano Lecture Recitals
AND
Metropolitan Grand Opera Quartette
Exclusive management:
GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON
Cable Building Chicago, Ill.

Bloch Again with Auer.

Of the successful debuts made in New York City last season, that of the young American violinist, Alexander Bloch, was one of the most prominent. Upon this Aeolian Hall occasion Bloch's success was immediate. A brilliant career was unanimously predicted by the New York press for the talented young man. The ensuing season brought little room for doubt as to the veracity of the statement, for the many concert victories and the fine results gained with a large class of violin pupils, marked Bl[illegible] and musician of special merit. He is one of the promising additions to that large and fast growing American violin school which promises, in time, to be rivaled by none in the whole world.

ALEXANDER BLOCH IN HIS GARDEN AT LOSCHWITZ.

As pictured in the accompanying snapshot, Mr. Bloch is spending the present summer at Loschwitz, near Dresden, Germany, where he is again enrolled as one of Leopold Auer's master pupils. Mr. Bloch's express purpose in returning to his former teacher at this time was the desire for coaching several new concerto numbers which will be played next season on his American concert tour under the management of Foster & David. An announcement already made by these New York managers, states that they have been very successful in their 1914-15 bookings for the violinist.

Mr. Bloch returns to America about September 1, and immediately upon taking up his New York residence again, will resume his teaching activities. These had increased to such an extent last season that he expects to devote all his available time this year to the interests of his pupils.

California Music Teachers Convene.

San Diego, Cal., July 14, 1914.

A reception and a short musical program opened the fourth annual convention of the Music Teachers' Association of California, at the U. S. Grant Hotel last evening. This morning the organization commences the real work. President Albert F. Conant will make the welcoming address. While there was a fine attendance of the local musicians last night, the northern contingent had not arrived in any large force.

The California and Eastern press correspondents, however, were in evidence, including the MUSICAL COURIER Los Angeles correspondent, Jane Catherwood.

After the reception, which took considerable time, the San Diego Mando Club, under direction of L. E. Hammond, gave several interesting and delicately wrought out selections. Mrs. Vierson was the singer of the evening and created a most favorable impression. This lady is representing Santa Ana. Mrs. Vierson's voice is fresh and lyrical, exceedingly well placed, and her selections were happy. Among her numbers was a charming song, "As the Billows Fling Shells on the Shore," by a Santa Ana composer, Charlotte Dresser by name, and a new composition by Waldo F. Chase, of Los Angeles, entitled "A Song of Joy." Both these songs met with instant approval. Miss Florence Norman-Shaw, a San Diego violinist, represented this city and rendered "Preghiera" (Zazzini) and "Polonaise" (Jean Becker), responding to a generous encore with a delightful number composed by an old Leipsic friend for such purposes. Florence Schinkel Gray acted as accompanist for both artists. After the concert refreshments were served and enjoyed. The evening was a fine success.

TYNDALL GRAY.

Jan Hambourg's Visit.

Jan Hambourg, violinist, and one of the directors of the Hambourg Conservatory of Music in Toronto, was in New York several days last week, combining business activity with social recreation. Mr. Hambourg reports the school controlled by himself, his brother, and his father, as flourishing in every sense of the word. A summer term now being conducted by the institution is taxing the capacity of the staff and the school to their utmost. Mr. Hambourg left for Toronto last Wednesday.

Miss Stanley in Berlin.

Helen Stanley is spending the summer in Berlin, studying with the well known vocal teacher, Frank King Clark. Miss Stanley is learning new operatic roles and working on her recital programs for next season. Among the roles which the young soprano has added to her repertoire is Matilda, the heroine of Rossini's opera, "William Tell," which will be produced at the Century Opera House next fall.

Robinson in the Catskills.

David Robinson, the eminent violinist, is spending his well earned vacation in the Catskill Mountains. At a private concert given last week by Mr. Robinson, he delighted a large and enthusiastic audience by his artistic rendition of a number of standard violin works as well as improvisations. He received much applause, and was compelled to respond to several encores.

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

L. E. BEHYMER VISITING THE EAST.

Pacific Coast Impresario to Manage New Trinity Auditorium at Los Angeles—Discusses Proposed Greek Theatre in Griffith Park.

L. E. Behymer, the energetic, enterprising and influential Pacific Coast manager, has a new home for his musical attractions in the Trinity Auditorium which is just being completed on South Grand avenue between Eighth and Ninth streets, Los Angeles, Cal. This auditorium, which will have a seating capacity of 2,300, will be second to none west of Chicago for arrangement and beauty. The auditorium will consist of three floors, the balcony and gallery being reached by elevators. The stage has been particularly arranged for choral and concert events, and is extended out into the auditorium giving an intimate effect. A $35,000 pipe organ with chimes, echo organ and harp will be built in the rear of the stage. It is also arranged that where orchestral and choral organizations appear together, the orchestra will be in the pit rather than on the same level with the singers.

The Auditorium building contains four smaller auditoriums, which are to be used for recitals, receptions, rehearsals, etc.

Among those who will be heard in this new auditorium during next season will be Olive Fremstad, Alma Gluck, Julia Culp, Leo Slezak, John McCormack, Zoellner Quartet, Josef Lhevinne, Tina Lerner, Rudolph Ganz, Arrigo Serato, Efrem Zimbalist, Jacques Thibaud, Evan Williams, Jane Osborn Hannah and others.

The growth of Los Angeles musically and otherwise within the past twenty or thirty years has been enormous and much of this musical development has been due to the efforts of L. E. Behymer, aided by public spirited and wealthy residents.

Concerning the proposed Greek Theatre at Los Angeles, Mr. Behymer makes the following enthusiastic report:

"I enjoyed the honor of a ride over to the East Hollywood entrance of Griffith Park with the man who made it possible for Los Angeles to secure a sufficient acreage to give to this wonderful city of the Southland a recreation ground that would be good for many years to come, until we become more than a million souls. With nooks and corners for the animals of the West, with huge aviaries for the fowls of the air of every species in the known world, hills and valleys for the deer, elk, bison, the cattle of the Holly Land, and with trees and shrubbery, crags and cliffs in which wild animals may have their haunts and still be protected by the bounds of nature and the bars of men and thrive in this wonderful climate until with the splendid foliage it becomes a veritable Garden of Eden for the education, amusement, and the resting of tired bodies and minds of this section of the human race that is supposed to be growing nearer perfection than that to be found in any other part of the globe.

"The approach is a beautiful vista, and the plan of the donor to make the first view of this attractive corner is almost Elysian. As you round the curve of the canyon the first thing that will burst upon the view will be on Mt. Hollywood a temple dedicated to science, with museums, observatories, mathematical and mechanical instruments, every known invention to bring man into closer communion with nature, with the planets, the universe, and the Master maker, the Divine Creator.

"Adjacent to this is to be the Temple of Walhalla, a facsimile of that beautiful structure which overlooks the Danube a few miles out of Regenberg, in Bavaria, where Prince Louis built a structure in which are enshrined the busts of warriors, statesmen, poets, inventors, musicians, who have made famous both Germany and Prussia in the past century.

"In the foreground, nestling at the foot of this mountain and facing it, a formation of nature which outrivals in many ways the architecture of man—a sheltered spot in the superb, virgin woodlands and the magnificent mountainsides, which offers itself as a natural setting, such as the Roman senator, the Attic poet, the wandering minstrel or the mighty Demosthenes might have dreamed of but never known. Those who have visited the Greek Theatre at Berkeley, with its sylvan setting and its terraces of granite and cement, have marveled at its magnificent proportions and almost perfect acoustics.

"I have made pilgrimages northward several times to hear Ben Greet and his pastoral players, Sarah Bernhardt in 'Phédre,' Margaret Anglin in 'Elektra,' Maud Adams in 'As You Like It,' and Tetrazzini, with a marvelous chorus and a symphony orchestra, presenting 'Stabat Mater,' and envied Berkeley its mighty arena in which distinguished people could extend a perfection of the dead Attic splendors to the lovers of classic lore.

"Again, I have journeyed to Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, Norfolk, Conn.; Peterboro, N. H., and recall the campuses of many colleges momentarily converted into arenas at a tremendous expense to the promoters of these educational purposes, and sighed for a possibility on the Pacific Coast that would some day give to Los Angeles and Southern California a similar edifice for similar purposes.

"If you should wish to unite dramatic art or pastoral productions with commercialism, as an advertising factor, the one event at the Harvard stadium where Maud Adams, with fifteen hundred assistants, presented the story of Jeanne d'Arc so sumptuously, would prove a fitting example as to commercial values, for it has been photographed, talked about, written about, all over the known world in many languages.

"Last year I journeyed to the little town of Erl, 180 miles up in the Austrian Alps from Munich, there to hear 'The Passion Play' as it has been enacted in nature's surroundings, with simplicity and dignity by the peasants of that picturesque land. I sat at the feet of the Muse at Oberammergau and in Bayreuth at the 'Festspielhaus' of Wagnerian fame, and longed for something in the Southland that would allow us to give our people what these countries are giving theirs.

"The arena and the nature theatre of America—academic though they have been—no doubt lent the first hint to prac-

L. E. BEHYMER, THE PACIFIC COAST IMPRESARIO, AND THE NEW TRINITY AUDITORIUM, LOS ANGELES, OF WHICH HE IS MANAGER.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR—SEASON 1914-15—NOW BOOKING
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

tical Teutonic producers of a fresh, new, romanticism, and they seized upon the inspiration with avid longing for novelty. They clothed it with the depth and thoroughness of Teutonic idealism, and they have given it back full panoplied as a great modern movement. Wachler, in Germany. Minstrel, in France, Lorenz, in Switzerland, have helped to crystallize the idea. Any intelligent man may put a small play upon a small stage—it is very simple, this finesse of realism—but a classic moving in a blaze of stormy words and great heroics requires the strategic skill of a generalissimo; requires the setting of the sky itself, the background of the virgin forests, the open arena where real deeds have moved.

"Recently in Berlin, in lieu of a stadium or auditorium sufficiently great in arena to accommodate Max Reinhardt's 'Theban Mob,' the 'Oepidus Rex' of Sophocles was given in a circus tent. It marked the high waterline of that wizard producer's power. It stirred Germany to an awakening. Out of it has sprung a new romanticism and the cult of the Secessionists. To behold that tragedy was to be transported to early Greece, to become for a moment a holiday making Theban, non-combative, as it were, approaching the Dionysiac Temple with a measure of respect and reverence. It was to become a worshiper, that integral part of the great moving spectacle itself. Neither curtain nor footlights disturbed the sensation of actuality; the gods themselves appeared to hover over the proscenium. On the exposed stage there was a massive palace with steps descending into the circus ring itself, and those who visited from America realized that the great scale on which it was planned was small indeed when the wonderful setting that God had so superbly created in the Far West was taken into consideration, and now at hand we have in the entrance to Griffith Park a common theatre, created under the open sky where the masses and the classes meet, bound together by a common impulse and a common purpose, wherein the intellectual appetite of the elect is whetted and the senses of the hoi polloi may be stirred.

"Few realize the firm hold that the nature theatre—but another phase of the arena theatre—has taken on the mind of suburban Americans. It holds a place of significance in the salvation of the drama, an altar set in the highway where art for art's sake is the slogan of the woodland.

"As Ernest Wachlet, of Weimar, has builded in the Hartz Mountains, as Lorenz has builded in the Alps near Wurtemberg, so Griffith J. Griffith proposes to build for Los Angeles and Southern California a granite and cement semicircle fitted simply to that wonderful amphitheatre that Nature has builded in the Hollywood Hills—an amphitheatre rivaled only by the Coliseum at Rome and the temple at Athens. By extending the tiers of seats a little further than the slope of the sides of the proscenium arch, and facing them with two triumphant pillars within whose recesses elevators may run, raising the public to the different landings, or levels, 50,000 people may be housed at one sitting, and 600 feet away a permanent gigantic stage be erected, fully 800 feet wide, with a background built in the simple manner of the Athenian temples with its columns, and an arena in front on whose stage thousands may take part in pageantry, dramatic fervor, or choral beauty, while closer in this amphitheatre can be erected a sectional stage used for intimate productions with electrical, dramatic and musical surroundings, where under the queen orb of night or the sparkling sun rays of the day can be given to unlimited spectators the beauty of the classics of yesterday, the creations of today, or plan for the brilliancy of the future.

"Certainly it is an inspiration to go with this man who offers to do so much for Los Angeles, for the nature theatre will exercise a greater influence on civilization than any other movement since the Reformation. His plans are not of charity, not of a monument, not of publicity, but for a greater benefit to a greater number of his fellow men, where thousands at a minimum price may hear the maximum of art.

"The work at Point Loma shows what may be done in a small way, but when Sarah Bernhardt first looked upon this little Greek temple when she visited the Pacific Coast a decade ago, her delight was manifest, and the two things that may stand forth greatest in her memory of her many triumphs in America were the one at the Berkeley Theatre and the other in the theatre built upon the end of the wharf at Venice, Cal.

"To seek the forest theatre is to find a respite in Walhalla, and there is no reason why Los Angeles cannot become the American Oberammergau if the citizens of Los Angeles, the governors of our park system, the city council and His Honor the Mayor will endorse the ideals of Colonel Griffith, accept its munificence and cooperate with him in raising this Athenian temple and all that it represents crowning our hills with the temples of education that will not only redound to the credit of Los Angeles, the State of California, our own America, but to the entire civilized world."

"Phonograph Heard 200 Miles at Sea."—Head line. But why add to the terrors of the deep.—Newark (N. J.) Star.

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

JEANNE DUFAU COLORATURA SOPRANO Concert Recital
CHICAGO-PHILADELPHIA GRAND OPERA COMPANY

VAN YORX THEO. —— Tenor
Will teach throughout the Summer
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

BISPHAM
For Terms and dates Address
All Communications to Private Address
44 West 44th Street, New York

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
Management:
"Perfection—Thy name is Borwick."—London World.
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York
Steinway Piano Used

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera
Management:
THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 West 34th Street, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

FLORENCE MULFORD CONTRALTO
Of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Personal Address:
1104 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.
Phone, 525 W-Market
HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, 27 West 42d Street
NEW YORK

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

MME. MARIE RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano
SARA HEINEMAN
Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume
In Europe During Summer
Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Combination Recitals of Two of the Most Brilliant Young Artists of the Present Generation

ALICE EVERSMAN
AMERICAN SOPRANO
Has achieved emphatic successes as a member of the Chicago, Montreal and Karlsruhe Grand Ducal Opera (Germany).

YELENA VON SAYN
RUSSIAN VIOLINIST
Her fame as a violinistic celebrity of the first magnitude is artistically established in Europe; likewise in America.

Programs Selected from the Greatest Operatic and Instrumental Composers

Under the exclusive Management of W. L. Radcliffe, 406 Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.

There is an improvement in the soft pedal of the Kranich & Bach grands found in no other. In ordinary grands it is impossible to secure a uniform reduction of tone volume throughout the scale when pressing the soft pedal, because the shifting key-board effects no change in the extreme bass whatsoever, reduces the volume one-half in another, and one-third in the treble. The famous "ISO-TONIC" (soft) Pedal in Kranich & Bach grands affects every note in the scale IN EXACTLY THE SAME PROPORTION. Examine this wonderful departure and try the effects possible.

KRANICH & BACH, New York
Send for catalogue describing this invention.

Busy John Thompson.

"Uncertain lies the head that wears a crown" might be said of the one whose manager is busy booking engagements; at least so thinks John Thompson, the talented pianist. He was busy getting into form for a tennis tournament, as may be seen from the accompanying snapshot, when his manager, Robert P. Strine, of Philadelphia, sent him word that he was booked for a tour of Maine, which was to begin August 1. Of course, Mr. Thompson had to drop his tennis (confidentially, this cost him quite a struggle, as he is extremely fond of tennis) and get back in pianistic form.

JOHN THOMPSON.

The tour will include appearances in Wiscasset, Augusta, Bangor, Bar Harbor, Camden, Rockland, Togus, Me., and Portsmouth, N. H. Mr. Thompson is certain to meet with success, for this seems to be his invariable rule of life.

Anita Rio and George Hamlin in Operetta.

Anita Rio, the charming soprano, who is remembered with pleasure in America, although she has not been heard here for several seasons, and George Hamlin, the distinguished tenor, are to appear next season in joint recitals on the Continent and on a spring tour in America. Their program is said to end with a clever novelty in the form of a one-act operetta by the composer Weckerlin, which will be sung and acted in costume. It is called "The Milkmaid of Trianon."

Louise Jansen-Wylie and Vacation Days.

"The summer is always a keen delight to me," says Mme. Wylie, in speaking of her vacation plans.

During these unusually cool July days, the popular soprano is enjoying many wonderful automobile trips, which New York State and the East so richly facilitate. She will spend the month of August on the beautiful coast of Maine, with a party of New York artists, coaching the programs for next season, which will begin in October in the West.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

Manuel Quiroga
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH
VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

Zoellner Quartet
Coast to Coast
Tour 1914-15
H. Culbertson, Fine Arts Bldg, Chicago

FOR AMERICAN COMPOSERS
AN OPERA libretto by Emma Scarr Booth will be submitted to American composers for examination. This libretto deals with an Indian subject and is entitled "Norah." All inquiries should be addressed to
MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
437 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist
ALBERT SPALDING
Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST
Steinway Piano

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

NELSON AND HIS ORCHESTRAL BAND
OF MINNEAPOLIS
Assisted by Celebrated Soloists, Will Make a Concert Tour During Months of October and November, 1914. For dates address
OTTO L. HEEGER, Mgr., Shiffman Building - St. Paul, Minn.

Liszt and the Gypsies.

I like to think that there are two Franz Liszts. There seems to me to be a dualism in his nature which is fundamental and is to be traced throughout his whole life. It is a dualism of qualities deeper than his mysticism, his amorousness, his romantic literary preoccupations. These were to be accounted for by luck, by opportunity, by the trend of the age; the deeper dualism which I have in mind was the given material with which chance and the age worked to produce the artist. The cleft between the two natures which I find in Liszt was never bridged; sometimes in his works the natures are mechanically intermingled, as one may mix sand with sugar; but never, I think, are they chemically mixed, as oxygen and hydrogen are mixed to make water. The two natures were awakened in him (if they were not born in him) in his earliest years—the years of which the Jesuit said: "Give me a child to educate before he is seven, and I care not who has him afterward."

These two natures are the virtuoso and the Hungarian gypsy. The gypsy, I mean, in the specific sense, the actual technic of the gypsy musician, which became firmly rooted in his mind before he was aware of it, and made the grooves which all his later creative music perforce flowed in. Of Liszt the virtuoso we all know—how he traveled about Europe, and, perhaps alone of conquerors, never failed to win a battle or a skirmish. This virtuoso instinct—the instinct for successfully "showing off" before an audience—is obvious enough in all his music, in the early etudes, in the "Annees de Pelerinage," in the two magnificent piano concertos, in every one of the symphonic poems—in which of Liszt's compositions is it absent? The other source, that of the gypsy, is not quite so obvious, but I am sure it can be traced, just as definite, just as masterly; and just as unwilling, in the last test, to mix with or in any way recognize the brotherhood of its fellow. In the present article I do not intend to analyze Liszt's music with a view to reducing the creative part of it to the inspiration of the gypsy, but only, assuming the hypothesis for the purpose of further investigation, to bring together certain data from well known sources, showing the relation of Liszt, the artist, to the music of the Hungarian gypsy, and laying the human foundation for the hypothesis itself. . . .

Hear what he says about the nature of the gypsy and his art. He says they find it difficult to relate events, to tell stories of what they have seen or heard (let alone what other people have seen and heard), unless they were actors in the events, and even then they can relate only of the events as felt by them. They lack utterly, that is, the Appolonian faculty of objective observations. "Their passions," on the other hand, "are of unusual impetuosity, without law, without reservation and without hypocrisy. Their originality in narration consists in the fact that they give to their stories the form of dramas in which they play the role of hero—a form which moves, more or less energetic, fantastic, melancholy, and nearly always accompanied by an unforeseen turn, curve or modulation."

The narrator as hero of every event! Is this not the very soul of Byron's artistic creed, of Pushkin's, of Victor Hugo's, of Jean Paul and the early Goethe, of Schumann, of Chopin, of Berlioz, of Liszt? How utterly different from that of Haydn, who meekly wore his court clothes when he composed, because he wished to be worthily clad "in the sight of his God"! Mozart was content if he was given ruled paper and a pen, with an occasional meal. Liszt needed the whole world to feed upon. And note one thing more in that last paragraph—how the form is unforeseen, but grows out of the matter, curving, modulating according to the needs of the thing to be expressed. Isn't this precisely Liszt's theory of form in music? Isn't it the very kernel-statement of the philosophy of the symphonic poem?

Now, supplementing the above description of the gypsy as story teller, hear Liszt's description of the gypsy as musician: "From the moment when he has placed his violin against his breast, as though he would pour the very blood of his heart into it and make the instrument echo its beating, he pays no more concern to the listeners, and presently is hardly any longer conscious that he has an audience. Some of the gypsies play for a long time with a sort of concentrated fury. Their physiognomy remains all the while expressionless, until finally great tears flow one after another from beneath their eyelids; at first slowly rolling down their cheeks, then coming more and more quickly and frequently, until at last they flow down in a stream onto the violin and moisten the strings." This would have been countersigned by Nietzsche as the very essence of Dionysian.

This was the soul of the gypsies (at least as seen by Liszt). Now, what about their music—how was it made? Liszt continues: "The gypsies recognize in their music as little as elsewhere any principles, laws, rules, discipline. To them all is good, all is permitted, provided it pleases them; provided that in it their feeling comes to expression. 'Comes to expression!'—the great word of every real artist! Notice, in passing, that these undisciplined men are not bunglers, beginners, spoilt children who will brook no instruction. They are past masters in their own technic even as Liszt was, and reject laws not because of their weakness, but because of their strength. They quail before no extreme of daring, as soon as they feel that it harmonizes with the bold beating of their hearts, as soon as they see in it the faithful portrait of their being. Since for them art is neither a science which man learns, nor a handiwork which man practises, nor a cleverness which is picked up by certain means in the course of a regular business, nor a trade which man follows after a set period of apprenticeship, nor a hocus-pocus whose formula man can receive as one receives a recipe—not these, but a mystical song, or rather a sublime but (to the initiated) intelligible language, which they make use of according to the measure of that which they have to say, without allowing themselves on any account to be influenced in their manner of expression by any outer consideration." And a little later, Liszt says that rules and laws "are made a posteriori."

And now, take down your Hungarian rhapsodies, the second or the twelfth. Don't sneer at them; it is fashionable but silly. Play through one of the gorgeous tapestried Lassans. Isn't this, in very truth, music which "recognizes God and the people as its living fountainhead, dramatic and holy, splendid and simple"? That power of commanding instant human response which Liszt, at his best, had in common with the greatest artists of the world and with them only—it is the power which comes to the greatest artist, the democratic artist, who is too precious to find and sense the least common denominator of humanity and to make this the source of his musical creativeness. And I like to believe—to me it seems self evident—that Liszt had this power, because in his earlier years he learned to know a music which was made by a people rather than by an individual, and therefore was greater than other music, just as many men are greater than one man.—Harvard Music Review (reprint).

The Hotel Rittenhouse, Philadelphia.

Situated in the centre of the fashionable section of Philadelphia and yet within walking distance of the theatres and concert halls, the Hotel Rittenhouse is splendidly located to fulfill the needs of the many artists and musicians who make it their headquarters while visiting in that city. Being outside of the noisy shopping district, an atmosphere of quiet pervades it which is restful and soothing to the artistic temperament, weary with the hustle and bustle of the ordinary city hotel.

The Hotel Rittenhouse, at Twenty-second and Chestnut streets, has just closed an unusually busy musical season, many of the most prominent recitals and concerts in Philadelphia having been held in its spacious music hall. At a dinner given by the Sons of Delaware recently, a musical program was furnished by the Rittenhouse Orchestra and the La Favorita Quartet, which is well known in Philadelphia and vicinity. The members of the quartet are Julia Z. Robinson, soprano; Katharine Rosenkranz, contralto; Anthony D. McNichol, tenor, and Henry Hotz, basso, all well known musicians.

The large and comfortable rooms and suites, attractive dining and grill rooms and the high standard of service are well known, and under the able management of Charles Duffy next season promises to be even busier musically than the one which has just closed.

Musical Critics.

Sir Frederick Bridge, the famous organist of Westminster Abbey, tells some excellent stories.

"Two ladies," he once said, "were in Westminster Abbey, when one of them suddenly raised her hand. 'Hush! Listen!' she said. 'There's the organ. Isn't it splendid! I always love to hear Sir Frederick play!'

"'Beautiful, dear,' replied the other; 'for a moment I thought it was Sir Walter Parratt, but, of course, he couldn't play like that! One can usually distinguish them by their touch.'

"As a matter of fact," says Sir Frederick, "it was the vacuum cleaner buzzing away in preparation for the coronation!"—Pearson's Weekly.

All the world's a stage and most of us want to occupy the critics' seats.—Winnipeg Town Topics.

THE HIGHEST STANDARD IN MUSICAL EDUCATION IN AMERICA HAS BEEN INAUGURATED BY

The von Ende School of Music

of New York City

HERWEGH von ENDE, Director

¶ The von Ende School of Music discourages the turning out of innumerable unprepared students, and foisting incapable young professionals upon the public.

¶ The indiscriminate manner in which certificates and diplomas have been issued by all sorts of schools in the past has reduced their value to a minimum.

¶ By adhering strictly to the schedule of work and final tests for certificates and diplomas, The von Ende School of Music begs to assure the musical profession and the public that no student will receive a certificate or diploma from this institution without meeting the full requirements.

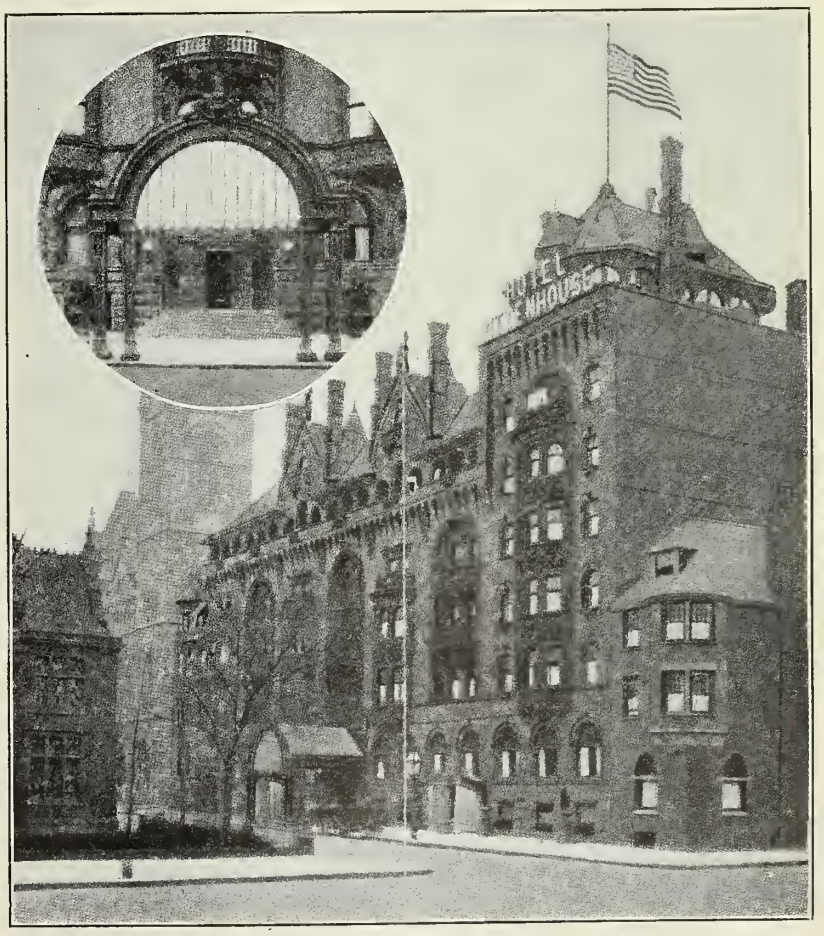
FALL TERM SEPTEMBER 14TH

For Fall Catalogue or Dormitory Reservation, address the Secretary.

The von Ende School of Music

44 West 85th Street, New York. Box 7

Up-State Club to Hear Scott Songs.



John Prindle Scott, the New York baritone-composer, is enjoying the summer "cool" among the rugged hills of his native Chenango County, New York. Mr. Scott has been engaged for a Composer's Recital with the Monday Evening Musical Club of Norwich, N. Y., for October next.

Death of Ethel McGrew Sheffield.

Ethel McGrew Sheffield, wife of George Sheffield, the well known tenor, died at her residence, 4654 Beacon street, Chicago, Ill., on Sunday, July 12. Mrs. Sheffield died of injuries received from burns.

Mr. Sheffield, who is under the management of M. H. Hanson and tenor soloist in the Oak Park Presbyterian Church, was married to the deceased some twelve years ago. Mrs. Sheffield since then has been his accompanist and both were prominent in musical circles.

The remains were cremated at Graceland on Monday, July 13.

RITTENHOUSE HOTEL AND MAIN ENTRANCE.

RECEPTION ROOM.

RECITAL HALL AND BALLROOM.

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

Clayton F. Summy Company, Chicago.

SECOND SERIES OF COMPOSITIONS AND ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE PIPE ORGAN. By various composers and arrangers:

William Faulkes—March in B flat.
William Faulkes—Pastorale in F.
William Faulkes—"Grand Chœur," in A flat.
William S. Waith—Melody in E.
Gatty Sellars—"Cantilene Rustique."
Gatty Sellars—"Cradle Song."
Herbert J. Wrightson—"Night Song."
Herbert J. Wrightson—"Interlude."
Julia Mary Canfield—Berceuse.
T. Carl Whitmer—Fanfare."
Eric de Lamarter—Suite.

These works are all published in the convenient oblong form, on good paper without gloss, and from well engraved plates. In every sense of the word they are practical and serviceable works of moderate difficulty and of musical interest, such as the average good church organist needs.

"SONGS FOR THE CHURCH." Third series:

Carlton Drew—"I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say."
Alfred Wooler—"Out of the Depths."
Frederick W. Root—"God's Presence."
William Lester—"My Prayer."
William Lester—"Evening Hymn."
James R. Gillette—"O Strength and Stay."
Frank T. Miles—"Unfolding Faith."
Chancellor Jenks—"Thus Saith the Lord."

All these songs are devotional in character and well suited for their intended purpose. They are of moderate compass and their accompaniments are either written directly for the organ, or are so simple that any organist can play them at sight and adapt them to the organ without trouble.

"SUMMY'S OCTAVO EDITIONS." Sacred series.

The following pieces are published as part songs with sacred words, and are suitable for full chorus or quartet in church services. All the accompaniments are moderately simple and effective:

Ley Roy Wetzel—"Magnificat" and "Nunc Dimittis."
H. W. Harris—"Light of Those Whose Dreary Dwelling."
H. W. Harris—"God is Love."
H. W. Harris—"With Seraphim on High."
Alfred Wooler—"O Blessed Saviour Mine."
Alfred Wooler—"My Soul Doth Magnify the Lord."
Alfred Wooler—"God Be Merciful."
George N. Rockwell—"Come Ye Disconsolate."
George N. Rockwell—"Lead Kindly Light."
Mari R. Hofer—"O Littel Childe."
Mari R. Hofer—"Old Christmas Hymn."
L. A. Coerne—"The Shadows of the Evening Hours."
L. A. Coerne—"Through the Day."
L. A. Coerne—"Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand."
Leroy Wetzel—"There's a Wideness in God's Mercy."
P. C. Lutkin—"O Paradise."
Charles E. Wheeler—"Beside the Silent Sea."
Palmer Christian—"Two Responses."
Jacobus Gallus—Lætentur Cœli (Latin only).
Geom Evans—"Christ the Lord is Risen Today."
James R. Gillette—"Ave Verum."
Philo A. Otis—"My God, I Thank Thee."

"THE NEW JERUSALEM." Sacred song. By Louise R. Waite.

This is a simple and somewhat conventional song of the ballad type, but with sacred words, and it ought to satisfy the requirements of most amateur church singers, such as are found in so many church choirs throughout the nation.

TWO SONGS BY RICHARD R. CANTERBURY: "A Dirge of Love" and "When You Awake."

This composer's very modern and richly harmonic style seems more appropriate to Irene Putnam's "When You Awake" than to Shakespeare's "Dirge," though, of course, there is no reason why a composer should make his music old fashioned simply because the words are. Both songs are singable and they offer considerable scope to a singer with dramatic instincts and a range of sentiment.

THREE SONGS BY G. RICHARDSON PITNER: "A Song of Love," "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes," "Two Roses."

These are art songs, though simple as a ballad. Any cultivated amateur could manage the accompaniments, and there are few singers who will find any trouble with the melodious and singable voice parts. Bourdillon's popular lyric has had a good many worse settings than this, and a very few better. It is time this thousand eyed night song had a respite however. Bourdillon might now write:

My verse has a thousand tunes,
Each day adds one.
They're mostly reflecting moons
Of a brighter sun.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

"A firm mastery of a remarkably smooth, clean, technic and a fine regard for tonal balance and musicianly phrasing were features of her performance."—The Berlin Continental Times.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

"WISTARIA." Song by Cora Willis Ware.

This pretty little song of two pages is as dainty as a spray of the mauve flowers from which it gets it title. It is one of those trifles which make their best effect between two more serious songs on a recital program. Amateur singers as a rule, avoid these accompaniments in broken arpeggios, as they in no way suggest or support the melody. These are effective, however, when correctly written, as they are.

THREE SONGS BY MARY TURNER SALTER: "An April Message," "A Rose and a Dream," "Tonight."

There is a simple charm and naivete in these three songs that explain why this composer's works are so popular with amateur parlor singers. When these songs are well sung by good singers they are fully as satisfactory to the general public as most of more elaborate and difficult songs are. Simplicity is a virtue when it is managed with discretion and does not sink to childishness.

"MUSICAL PICTURE BOOK." A set of easy recreations for the piano. By Carl Koelling.

There are two albums of these little pieces, tastefully bound in gray paper, with title and ornaments in green ink, and reinforced with linen tape to prevent the destructive little hands from tearing the pages out. The music is suitable for young students of the piano, and each piece is about as long as an industrious child can manage at a lesson. The pieces are printed in bold, clear characters, and one well fingered.

This same publishing house also lists a number of very elementary works for beginners.

EIGHT PIANO SOLOS BY JOHN MOKREJS: Prelude, Scherzo, Intermezzo, Arabesque, Scherzo in F, "The Blacksmith," "Gladys at Play," "An Indian Idyll."

These pieces are all a little above the average piano solo for advanced amateurs. They have a style which lifts them out of the commonplace. In "An Indian Idyll," for instance, the figure of accompaniment in the right hand part is by no means usual, and the melody, which is in the left hand part, has character. To crown all, the work is in 5-4 time, which will not commend it to the ordinary half hearted pupil.

The John Church Company.

"'TIS ALL THAT I CAN SAY." Words by Thomas Hood, music by Carl Hahn. Published by the John Church Company, New York.

This is a deeply felt and well expressed song of sentiment, in which the composer has made use of lyrical melody, rather than complex harmonies, to bear the burden of his emotional outpouring. It is not impassioned and quick moving, but slow and deep. The composer was therefore wise in setting but one of the three stanzas of Hood's poem, as the song would have been far too long and monotonous at the moderate speed he chooses. As it now stands, the song is complete in itself. Each stanza of the poem is sufficient unto itself and is related to the other two stanzas only in style and subject matter.

Swan & Co.

"THERE IS A PATHWAY." Song. Written and composed by Marie Clegg. Published by Swan & Co., London.

This is a typical English ballad about memories of yester year and the sadness of life in general since circumstances compelled separation, ending with religious hopes. It is a good song of its kind, is easy to sing and play, and it has an agreeable melody of the conventional ballad sort.

Sam Fox Publishing Company.

WILSON G. SMITH'S SONGS: "Fulfillment," "Because I Love You," "Has Yo' Seen Ma Pickininny," "June Ecstasy." Published in several keys for all voices, by the Sam Fox Publishing Company, of Cleveland.

It is a pleasure to read these new songs of Wilson G. Smith and to note how simply a composer of experience can write, and yet express all he has to say without limitations. Without comparing the two composers in any way, we may call attention to the easy piano parts of Liszt's songs as well as those of Wilson G. Smith. It is odd enough that many of the most difficult accompaniments are written by composers who do not know one-tenth of what Wilson G. Smith knows about the piano, and who cannot properly play their own accompaniments. These new songs are not piano solos with vocal obligatos, but are spontaneous and thoroughly vocal melodies with just enough piano accompaniment to supply the harmony and rhythm. We recommend them conscientiously to professional and amateur singers alike.

Schott & Co.

TWO SONGS BY J. C. H. BEAUMONT: "Reflections" and "The Mind of a Child." Sung by Elena Gerhardt and published by Schott & Co., London, and sold by G. Schirmer, New York.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox's "Reflection" has here a faithful musical delineation of its spiritual contents. Every shade of sentiment, and rise and fall of emotion in the poem is mirrored in the music. The composer, who is himself an accomplished singer, writes particularly well for the voice. This same merit is likewise to be found in the tender and gracefully melodic "Mind of a Child." Both of these songs are within the powers of the ordinary singer, and the nature of the really poetic lyrics makes them suitable for almost any occasion.

C. W. Thompson & Co.

VALSE LENTE, "PAS DES FLEURS," from the music drama "Montezuma." Composed by H. J. Stewart, and published by C. W. Thompson & Co., Boston.

There is a Viennese suavity and melodic grace in this valse which would doubtless be very insinuating and haunting when played by the orchestra to the accompanying flower ballet. Even in its present arrangement for piano solo it has a good deal of the atmosphere and the lilt of the graceful dance in it.

In the "Processional March," from the same music drama, the composer has evidently found a harder nut to crack in compressing his orchestral work to the dimensions of a piano solo. Still, the march is not very difficult to play. It is a vigorous and pompous march, which ought to be thoroughly effective in the right time and place. It is hardly as attractive a piano solo as the Valse Lente, in our opinion.

Middleton Is Summering in Illinois.

Arthur Middleton is summering in western Illinois and is busy preparing his repertoire for his coming season at the Metropolitan Opera House.

HINSHAW

Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE

Berlin Wagner Ring Festival,
June 23rd to Aug. 21st

American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE

Management, R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Ruby Brock, of Chicago, a pupil of Morati, of Berlin, give a musicale at the apartment of Dr. George Edison Mott, Berlin, in June, before about one hundred and fifty invited guests. Brahms lieder, English songs, arias from "Madame Butterfly" and "Tosca" made up the program.

The University of California Glee Club, C. R. Morse, director, is now on its second European tour. London, Berlin, Dresden, Lucerne, Venice, Milan and Paris are among the cities visited.

The Women's Music Club of Columbus, Ohio, has arranged for a series of fourteen free Sunday afternoon organ recitals for next season.

Marie Davis, of Columbus, Ohio, presented some of her pupils in a program of twenty-seven piano numbers, in June.

Annabelle Ambrose pupils appeared in a Dayton (Ohio) recital recently.

Grace Stevens Lake, contralto, gave a recital in Bridgeport, Conn., assisted by Oliver W. Hunter, reader, and Mrs. Elmer Beardsley, accompanist.

Nora F. Wilson's pupils gave a program of ensemble music at her Columbus (Ohio) studio.

Charles Espenshade, of Coatesville, Pa., has returned from Berlin, where he has been studying a concert program with Xaver Scharwenka.

Helen Hewitt Evans, soprano, was soloist, with the Alexander Band, Woodside Park, Philadelphia.

Amelia Margolies, of Philadelphia, has returned from a period of three years' study in Europe under prominent teachers. She will go on the concert stage.

Richard Knott's vocal class appeared in a recent Philadelphia concert.

Ethel Lee, of Greenwich, Conn., gave a musicale for her pupils in June.

Lucretia Le Riemonde's pupils appeared in an annual recital at The Women's Building, Memphis, Tenn.

Victor Smith and Carl Demangate, of the Schenectady School of Music, gave a joint pupils' recital at the conservatory in the Orpheum Building, Schenectady, N. Y., recently.

July recitals in Memphis, Tenn., included those of the piano pupils of Mrs. C. C. Nance, at The Women's Building, and the Olive Branch piano pupils of Susie Neely, also at The Women's Building.

Julia Zalesky presented her primary pupils and intermediate class in a joint recital at Hasek Hall, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Claudia Eugene Smith presented her pupils in a dramatic recital at St. Mark's Auditorium, San Antonio, Tex.

Piano and voice pupils of Mrs. John Wesley Graham, Houston, Tex., gave two recitals, a morning and an evening, June 27.

Bertha Edstrom, for several years a student at Flaaten's Conservatory, in Duluth, Minn., gave a pupils' recital in Odd Fellows' Hall, in that city, recently.

Capetown, South Africa, has a municipal orchestra. Its programs aim to please both the popular music loving contingent as well as the more seriously inclined musician. These programs contain usually an overture, a symphony and a concerto, as well as lighter music and songs.

Ellis Marx is the leader of the Chamber Music Union Quartet, Beatrice Stuart plays the second violin, Jan Luyt, viola, and W. van Erkel, cello. This is a Capetown (South Africa) organization.

Ernest S. Peacock is the moving spirit of the two days of spring festival given in New Brunswick, Canada, by the St. John Choral Society, organized in 1911.

Another New Brunswick organization is the La Tour Male Voice Glee Club, conducted by D. Arnold Fox.

Albert Archdeacon gave a song recital in the Dutch Reformed Hall, Capetown, South Africa; also in the City Hall, in Port Elizabeth, South Africa.

The Orpheus Club, thirty years old, with seventy-five active members, and the St. Patrick Club, conducted by D. Hubley, are Halifax (Nova Scotia) musical organizations.

The Clemsar gold medal and one hundred dollars in cash, offered by the A. G. O. for the best anthem, was won this year by Dr. Herbert Sanders, organist at the Dominion Methodist Church, Ottawa, Canada. This is the second time Dr. Sanders has won this honor. "Angels from the Realms of Glory," a Christmas piece, was the winning composition.

Capetown, South Africa, listened to a Dvorák and Debussy program at the third symphony concert, in City Hall.

Stanley Purves conducts the Choral Union, North Sidney, Nova Scotia.

Works by Blujenfeld, Sinding, Glazounow, Longo, Paderewski and Strauss formed the recital program of Alfred Laliberte's pupils, given in the Montreal (Canada) Y. M. C. A.

Mme. Niay-Darroll's second recital at Capetown, South Africa, was given in the Banqueting Hall, City Hall.

Acadia University Glee Club gave a concert at Wolfville, Nova Scotia, under the direction of Carrol C. McKee.

John J. Moncrieff conducts the Winnipeg (Canada) Oratorio Society, under whose auspices the annual musical festival of that city is given. Winnipeg has also an Elgar Society, conducted by Eward Vinen; an Edelweiss Society, German, conducted by Josef Moser.

Mme. Gallione, assisted by some of her pupils, gave a concert at St. Saviour's Hall, East London, South Africa.

Jane Buchanan, mezzo-soprano, sang a program of German, Norwegian and English songs in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, Canada.

Nevin Doyle's new comic opera, "The Golden Age," the first Canadian opera to be copyrighted in Ottawa, was given in Belleville, Canada, for the first time.

Mrs. J. W. Brineacombe's vocal class gave a recital at the Marion Conservatory of Music, Marion, Ind.

Paul Volkmann, tenor; Helen Macnamee Bentz, soprano; Mabelle Allison, contralto; Franklin Wood. Frank Conly, Horace Hood and Florence Wood appeared in the "Aida" musical program with Wassili Leps' Orchestra, in Willow Grove Park, Philadelphia, Pa.

Florence Thomas' piano pupils gave a rose recital at Conklin's Hall, Cleveland, Ohio. Ada Hook, violinist; Dorothy Almgren, pianist, and Rumelda Bureau, vocalist, assisted.

Paul Wells, examiner for the Toronto (Canada) Conservatory of Music, gave a piano recital in the drawing-room of the Prince Edward Hotel, Brandon, Canada, in which works by Beethoven, Schumann, Weber, Godard, Paul Wells and Chopin were included.

Broadus Farmer's violin pupils gave a recital in Margaret Eaton Hall, Toronto, Canada, June 29.

Two piano recitals were given by the pupils of Mrs. Charles M. MacLean, in the Monday Afternoon Clubhouse, Binghamton, N. Y., early in July.

The annual studio recital of Professor Southworth's pupils took place in Scranton, Pa., late in June. Molly E. Wheeler assisted.

Amelia Burns' violin and piano pupils were heard in a recital at the Lyceum Building, Knoxville, Tenn.

Anna C. Broekhoven's piano pupils were heard lately in recital in Columbus, Ohio.

Linnissa Braden Crosby and Mabel Ray Crosby, other Columbus (Ohio) music teachers, gave a pupils' recital in the auditorium of the Columbus Public Library in June.

Mrs. George L. Fisher's pupils gave a recent studio recital in Houston, Tex.

Philadelphia Band concerts are accompanied by "Sing Night" features. Harry C. Lincoln directs the singing.

Piano and organ pupils of Mrs. Leroy Bixby gave a recital in the North Presbyterian Church, Binghamton, N. Y. Georgia Moore Doughty was the assisting soloist.

The Pittsburgh Opera Company has decided to repeat the opera, "Pirates of Penzance," early in the fall.

Helena Tardivel, the pianist who returned recently from Paris, played at a musicale given at the studio of Pauline H. Clark, Boston.

Harrisburg, Pa., has a Verdi Musical Club, made up of more than 150 Italian residents. Cosimiro Gaeta is the president.

Annie May Creamer's pupils gave a recital in Providence, R. I. Margaret Kelly, viola, and Mary McGinn, vocalist, assisted.

Advanced pupils of John T. Hand, Salt Lake City, gave a late June recital.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra has been engaged by the Milwaukee Musical Society, Milwaukee, Wis., for a series of ten concerts next season.

The Turner School of Music, Springfield, Mass., gave a June end pupils' recital.

Pupils of Crissie Chapman gave a recital at her Salt Lake City (Utah) home in June.

Marion West is the recently elected president of the Music Study Club, Washington, D. C., and Roberta Allen is the newly elected musical director of the Friday Morning Music Club, of the same city. Mrs. Frederick W. True is the president of the latter club.

Grand Rapids (Mich.) pupils of Emma Rice gave a recital in her studio in that city lately.

Recent Washington (D. C.) recitals were given by pupils of the following teachers: Ella Sargent (piano), Myra Whitney-Hall and Mrs. Edward R. Whitman (piano), Ednah Landvoigt (piano), Marie McCourt, Zeida L. Miller (piano), Marguerite Ison (piano). A song recital was given by Grace Gilbert, pupil of Florence MacDonald, in Baltimore, Md., and by Elizabeth Leckie, in Washington, D. C.

Hildegard Brandegee has been engaged as head of the violin department of the Ganapol School of Musical Art, Detroit, Mich.

Pupils of May E. Smith and Theodore J. Smith gave a recent recital at Detroit, Mich.

Myron E. Barnes' pupils gave the concluding recital of the season at his residence-studio, Rockford, Ill., the end of June.

An Unusual Opportunity.

The failure of the old management of the Paris Opera does not mean that the Paris Opera will close. It means merely that a new management will step in, and that there will be no interlude in the giving of opera. The Paris Opera has been frequently criticized, and perhaps compared with New York. It has its failings, since it cannot of course present the same great artists that are heard at the Metropolitan; but the presentations of the classical operas at the Paris Opera House are absolutely according to tradition. The orchestra and chorus are among the finest in the world, and the advantage that it is for students to enjoy the privilege of hearing operas thus given cannot be overestimated.

This advantage is offered by the Deverell School for Girls, which is situated in the fashionable part of Paris. The pupils of this school are under the careful guidance of Frances E. Deverell, who is not only a brilliant musician, but a brilliant scholar in other lines as well. She is a member of the faculty of Shorter College, Rome, Ga., and of Ward Conservatory of Music, Nashville, Tenn.; dean of the faculty of St. Mary's College, Dallas, Tex., and is a pupil of William H. Sherwood, Felix Moreau, Wager Swayne and Harold Bauer.

The instruction in this school consists of the usual courses, history of art, English, music, etc. French is the language spoken throughout the school, and Miss Deverell has taken a box at the Paris Opera and has also special arrangements with the managers of the Opera Comique, Comedie Française and the subsidized orchestras of Paris, so that her pupils may attend these theatres and concerts whenever they desire. This school undoubtedly offers an unusual opportunity for the study of the arts in Paris.

Davis, the Violinist Composer.

Charles Konedski Davis originally came to New York in 1901, and was well known as a solo violinist. For some time he was head of the string instrument department of C. G. Conn, on Fourteenth street, where he became personally acquainted with many of the best musicians and conductors of this country, including John Philip Sousa, Arthur Pryor, Fanciulli, Charles van Baar, W. Paris Chambers, etc. About this time he began composing, his first number, a valse de concert, "Rozalia," meeting with marked success. In 1903 he was appointed musical critic on the Washington Gazette, and for the next three years was solo violinist at the Metropolitan Temple with Dr. Cadman. In 1907 he returned to Europe and established the Imperial School of Music in his native city of Birmingham, England, where he was also engaged in a musical and managerial capacity with many large choral and orchestral societies, including the Handsworth District Orchestra and the Imperial Military Band, of which he was conductor. He was secretary and librarian of the Halford Society, which comprised an orchestra of seventy performers, with world famous soloists, including Kreisler, Ysaye, Elman, Melba, Leonore Sparkes and Zacharawitz.

Since his return he has written the music to the specialty dances of Joan Sawyer. His two songs, "Say Not Farewell" and "Bring Back Those Summer Days," have been sung by leading artists all over the world.

American Institute Summer Recitals.

Rose I. Hartley, George Dare and Rose Edith des Anges, pupils of Leslie Hodgson at the summer session of the American Institute of Applied Music, gave a fine program of piano music at headquarters July 17. There will follow two faculty recitals, by Messrs. Hodgson and Lanham, and a general recital by the summer students. The program of the Hodgson pupils recital follows:

Intermezzo, op. 117, No. 1 ..... Brahms
Capriccio, op. 76 ..... Brahms
Rose I. Hartley.

Nocturne, op. 32, No. 2 ..... Chopin
Gavotte in the old style ..... Grünfeld
George Dare.

Air, Ask If Yon Damask Rose ..... Handel-Lavignac
Nocturne ..... Sgambati
Spring Night ..... Schumann-Liszt
Rose Edith des Anges.

Nocturne, op. 37, No. 2 ..... Chopin
Japanese etude ..... Poldini
Rose I. Hartley.

Serenade ..... Sinding
Prelude, G minor ..... Rachmaninoff
Gavotte ..... Bach-Saint-Saëns
Watson H. Giddings.

Gerville-Reache Will Open Chicago Series.

Jeanne Gerville-Reache has been booked for Monday, November 30, to open the Chicago artists' series of concerts managed by Eleanor Fisher-Talbot. This concert will take place in the ballroom of the Congress Hotel.

"She did the mad scene very well."

"All primed for it. She had just been going over the m[illegible] receipts in the box office."—Kansas City Journal.

The PROGRESS of AMERICAN MUSIC

[This department is designed by the MUSICAL COURIER to be as complete a record as possible of the public performance all over the world of the works of composers born in the United States. The department will be published weekly and contributions are solicited from any source whatsoever to help make the record all-encompassing. The clippings and programs sent must report concerts which have actually taken place and must be of recent date. However, advance notices and advance programs will not be considered. The data submitted must also include the place and date of performance and the names of the performers, and, before all things, it should be remembered that composers not born in the United States are ineligible for the MUSICAL COURIER list. All communications referring to this department must be addressed:—"American Composition Editor," MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.]

Bartlett, Homer N.—"Japanese Reverie," "Japanese Romance," prelude, "The Approaching Storm" (piano), played by Miguel Castellanos, the International Art Society, Hotel Astor, New York, February 17, 1914.

—"It's All For Love of Thee," "Tell Me Where Is Fancy Bred," "Today and Tomorrow" (songs with violin obligato), sung by Rowlee McElvery, the International Art Society, Hotel Astor, New York, February 17, 1914.

—"Elaine," "The Two Lovers," "When Dorcas Passes By" (songs), sung by Estelle Bloomfield Adler, the International Art Society, New York, February 17, 1914.

—"Meditation Serieuse," trio for violin, cello and piano, played by Adolph Maerlender, William Maerlender and the composer, the International Art Society, Hotel Astor, New York, February 17, 1914.

Bauer, Marion—"Star Trysts" (song), sung by Charlotte Lund, studio recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

Bliss, Paul—"Butterflies" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Lenten Morning Musicales, Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., March 4, 1914.

Bollinger, Samuel—"Elegy" (piano), played by Bertha Eisenhart, Strassberger Conservatories of Music, St. Louis, Mo., February 6, 1914.

Brewer, John Hyatt—"The Dawning of the Day" (chorus with soprano solo), sung by the Women's Lyric Club, Los Angeles, Cal., November 19, 1913.

Brown, Mary Helen—Prelude and Andante, "Le Soleil Couchant" (cello), played by Willem Durieux, the Plaza, New York, January 25, 1914.

—"Es liegt der Heisse Sommer," "Liebes Schmerzen," "Romance," "The Gift," "The Fairest Flower," "If I Were King" (songs), sung by Royal Dadmun, the Plaza, New York, January 25, 1914.

—"A Plaint," "Rose Dreamed She Was a Lily," "Where the Sunshine Grows," "Spring Greeting" (songs), sung by Edna Dunham, the Plaza, New York, January 25, 1914.

—"Non ti ricordi piu," "Cherie" (songs), sung by Salvatore Giordano, the Plaza, New York, January 25, 1914.

—"What the Chimney Sang," "The Moss Rose" (cello obligato), (dramatic reading with musical setting), read by Marion L. Alexander, the Plaza, New York, January 25, 1914.

—"Thoughts of You," "Like Stars In Heaven," "Night Song" (songs), sung by Kate Rooney, the Plaza, New York, January 25, 1914.

—"Liebes Schmerzen," "The Gift," "The Fairest Flower," "Thoughts of You," "Like Stars in Heaven," "Rose Dreamed She Was a Lily," "Just You" (songs), sung by Daisy Brown, Maplewood Music Study Club, Newark, N. J., February 23, 1914.

—"Es leigt der Heisse Sommer," "The Fairest Flower," "A Plaint," "The Gift" (songs), sung by Vernon Archibald, the National Arts Club, New York, January 21, 1914.

—"To a Hidden Violet," "Just You," "The Sweet Red Rose," "Where the Sunshine Grows," "Valentine," "Spring Greeting" (songs), sung by Ruth Harris, the National Arts Club, New York, January 21, 1914.

—Prelude and Andante, "Le Soleil Couchant" (cello), played by Willem Durieux, the National Arts Club, New York, January 21, 1914.

—"Thoughts of You," "Like the Stars in Heaven," "Night Song" (songs), sung by Kate Rooney, the National Arts Club, New York, January 21, 1914.

—"What the Chimney Sang," "The Moss Rose" (cello obligato), (dramatic reading with musical setting), read by Marion L. Alexander, the National Arts Club, New York, January 21, 1914.

—"The Evening Hour," "Mistress Mine" (duets), sung by Ruth Harris and Vernon Archibald, the National Arts Club, New York, January 21, 1914.

—"A Plaint" (song), sung by Charlotte Lund, studio recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

—"A Plaint," "The Gift" (songs), sung by Vernon Archibald, song recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

Charles Wakefield—Idyls of the South Sea: "Where the Long, White Waterfall," "The Great Wind Shakes the Breadfruit Leaf," "The Rainbow Waters Whisper," "Withered is the Green Palm" (songs), sung by Christine Miller, Illinois Women's College, Jacksonville, Ill., March 2, 1914.

—From Wigwam and Tepee: "The Place of Breaking Light," "From the Long Room of the Sea," "Ho, Ye Warriors of the War Path," "The Thunderbirds Come from the Cedars" (songs), sung by Christine Miller, Lenten Morning Musicales, Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., March 4, 1914.

—"From the Land of the Sky-Blue Water" (cello), played by Frederick Preston Search, Majestic Theatre, Corvallis, Ore., February 26, 1914.

Campbell-Tipton—"A Fool's Soliloquy" (song), sung by Charles W. Clark, the Auditorium, Los Angeles, Cal., February 5, 1914;—sung by Charles Edward Mayhew, the Waldo, Clarksburg, W. Va., December 30, 1913.

—"Spirit Flower" (song), sung by Maude Fenlon Bollman, Twentieth Century Club, Marshalltown, Ia., December 1, 1913;—sung by Maude Fenlon Bollman, Mendelssohn Club concert, Chicago, December 2, 1913;—sung by Evan Williams, Hartford Choral Club concert, Parson's Theatre, Hartford, Conn., December 8, 1913;—sung by Arthur Hackett, Quincy Choral Society, Quincy, Mass., December 10, 1913;—sung by Arthur Hackett, Rubinstein Club, musicale, Waldorf-Astoria, New York, December 20, 1913;—sung by Angel Chopourian, Rumford Hall, New York, December 13, 1913; sung by Caroline Crenshaw, Aeolian Hall, New York, December 16, 1913;—sung by Rose Hagerman, Royal Arcanum Council, Chicago, December 16, 1913;—sung by Mrs. King Clark, song recital, Paris, December 16, 1913.

—"Homeward" (song), sung by Jeanne Delsolay, song recital, Hotel Majestic, Paris, December 6, 1913.

—"Rhapsodie" (song), sung by Emma Loeffler, Metropolitan Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, December 7, 1913;—sung by Oscar Seagle, Finney Chapel, Oberlin, Ohio, December 12, 1913;—sung by Mrs. King Clark, song recital, Paris, December 16, 1913;—sung by Jeanne Jomelli, Carnegie Hall, New York, December 28, 1913.

—"The Four Seasons," suite (piano), played by Ruth Dudley, Heights Casino, Brooklyn, December 8, 1913.

—"Confession" (song), sung by Mrs. King Clark, song recital, Paris, December 16, 1913.

—"Legend, No. 1," "Autumn," from suite, "Four Seasons" (piano), played by Maude Kraft Honeyman, King Clark recital, Paris, December 16, 1913.

Carpenter, John Alden—"When I Bring To You Colored Toys," "I Am Like a Remnant of a Cloud" (songs), sung by Christine Miller, Ashtabula, Ohio, February 24, 1914.

—"Don't Ceäre" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Troy Choral Club, Music Hall, Troy, N. Y., February 26, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Illinois Woman's College, Jacksonville, Ill., March 2, 1914.

Clough-Leighter, H.—"Who Knows," "Silver Eve," "Ave Astra," "Youth and Spring," "I Wonder, Little Girl," "O, Would I Were the Cool Wind," "The Magic Hour" (songs), sung by Mrs. Blumenshein-Rowe, Trinity M. E. Church, Schenectady, N. Y., October 14, 1913.

Downing, Lulu Jones—"Sad Memories," "Love's Song," "Only a Rose," "June" (songs), sung by Isabel Richardson, Millard Avenue Woman's Club, Chicago, February 6, 1914.

—"Pipes of Pan," recitation to music given by the composer, Millard Avenue Woman's Club, Chicago, February 6, 1914.

—"Nocturne" (piano), played by Georgia Kober, Millard Avenue Woman's Club, Chicago, February 6, 1914.

—"Apparitions," "June" (songs), sung by Charles W. Clark, the Auditorium, Los Angeles, Cal., February 5, 1914.

Foote, Arthur—"The Hills o' Skye" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Lenten Morning Musicales, Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., March 4, 1914.

Foster, Fay—"Nocturne" (song), sung by Orville Harrold, Sunday Night Concert, Century Opera House, New York, February 1, 1914.

—"Winter," "The King" (songs), sung by Roy W. Steele, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, March 5, 1914.

—"Spinning Wheel Song," "The Call of the Trail" (songs), sung by Gwyn Jones, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, March 5, 1914.

—Songs of Childhood: "Star Tracks," "Sleep Song," "Fairy Castles," "Winter Butterflies," "On Dress Parade" (songs), sung by Louise MacMahon, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, February 19, 1914.

—"Con Amore," "Maria Mia," "Serenade in Seville" (songs), sung by Ellison van Hoose, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, February 19, 1914.

Freebey, Grace Adele—"O Golden Sun" (song), sung by Emma Porter Markinson, Ebell Club, Long Beach, Cal., November 3, 1913;—sung by Ellen Beach Yaw, Orpheum, Los Angeles, December 17, 1913;—sung by Gage Christopher, Jonathan Club, Los Angeles, Cal., January 6, 1914;—sung by Ellen Beach Yaw, College of the Pacific, San Jose, Cal., November 14, 1913;—sung by Mildred Langworthy, Lordsburg, Cal., January 16, 1914.

—"May Day" (song), sung by Mildred Langworthy, Lordsburg, Cal, January 16, 1914.

—"My Dearest Wish" (song), sung by Isobel Carol, Mason Opera House, Los Angeles, Cal., February 5, 1914.

Freer, Eleanor Everest—"To a Dreamer" (song), sung by Cardon V. Burnham, Memorial Church of Christ, Chicago, March 12, 1914.

—"Lyric Studies," Nos. 2 and 9 (piano), played by Georgia Kober, Millard Avenue Woman's Club, Chicago, February 6, 1914.

Gilberté, Hallett—"A Maiden's Yea and Nay" (song), sung by Isabel Thorpe, Hotel Martha Washington, New York, February 7, 1914.

—"Ah, Love, But a Day" (song), sung by Isabel Thorpe, Manual Training School, Brooklyn, February 15, 1914;—sung by Charlotte Lund, studio recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

—"Minuet la Phyllis" (song), sung by Jeanne Jomelli, the Auditorium, Los Angeles, Cal., February 19, 1914;—sung by Vernon Archibald, song recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

—"Two Roses," "Minuet la Phyllis," "Allegro," "Ah, Love But a Day" (songs), sung by Charlotte Lund, the Assembly Salon, the Plaza, New York, February 19, 1914.

Grant-Schaefer, G. A.—"The Sea" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Ashtabula, Ohio, February 24, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Troy Choral Club, Music Hall, Troy, N. Y., February 26, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Illinois Woman's College, Jacksonville, Ill., March 2, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Lenten Morning Musicales, Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., March 4, 1914.

—"The Wind Speaks" (song), sung by Vernon Archibald, song recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

Grunn, Homer—From My Sketch Book: "Album Leaf," "Lament for a Vanished People," "Toualouwa," Hopi Indian Dance, Concert Waltz, "Sounds from the Woods"; Desert Suite: "At Sunrise," "Cholla Dance," "On the Mesa," "Mirage," "Oasis" (piano), played by the composer, matinee musicale, Gamut Club, Los Angeles, Cal., February 19, 1914.

Homer, Sidney—"Prospice," "Uncle Rome," "How's My Boy," "The Fiddler of Dooney" (songs), sung by Charles W. Clark, the Auditorium, Los Angeles, Cal., February 5, 1914.

Hugo, John Adam—"My Dearie," "When We Two Parted" (songs), sung by Earle Tuckerman, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, March 5, 1914.

—"A Dream," "The Swan" (songs), sung by Ella Courts, violin obligato by Roland Meyer, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, March 5, 1914.

Johns, Clayton—"I Love and the World is Mine" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Ashtabula, Ohio, February 24, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Illinois Woman's College, Jacksonville, Ill., March 2, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Lenten Morning Musicales, Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., March 4, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Troy Choral Club, Music Hall, Troy, N. Y., February 26, 1914.

MacDowell, Edward A.—"To a Wild Rose," "At An Old Trysting Place" (cello), played by Frederick Preston Search, Artists' Course, Oak Park, Chicago, Ill., February 16, 1914;—played by Frederick Preston Search, College of St. Teresa, Winona, Minn., February 17, 1914;—played Frederick Preston Search, St. John's University, Collegeville, Minn., February 18, 1914;—played by Frederick Preston Search, Grand Opera House, Aberdeen, Wash., February 24, 1914;—played by Frederick Preston Search, Majestic Theatre, Corvallis, Ore., February 26, 1914.

MacFadyen, Alexander—"Inter Nos" (song), sung by Hazel Huntley, Memorial Church of Christ, Chicago, March 12, 1914.

Marshall-Loepke—"Two Roses" (chorus), sung by the Women's Lyric Club, Los Angeles, Cal., November 19, 1913..

—"Devotion," "The Awakening," "A Memory" (songs), sung by Mrs. Blumenshein-Rowe, Trinity M. E. Church, Schenectady, N. Y., October 14, 1913.

Neuer, Berthold—"St. Anthony of Padua" (song), sung by Charlotte Lund, studio recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

Nevin, Ethelbert—"The Woodpecker," "My Desire," "The Nightingale's Song" (chorals), sung by the Troy Choral Club, Music Hall, Troy, N. Y., February 26, 1914.

"The Nightingale's Song" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Illinois Woman's College, Jacksonville, Ill., March 2, 1914.

Search, Frederick Preston—Minuet in D Major, "Anticipation," "Reverie of Lake Garda" (cello), played by the composer, Artists' Course, Oak Park, Chicago, February 16, 1914;—played by the composer, College of Saint Teresa, Winona, Minn., February 17, 1914;—played by the composer, St. John's University, Collegeville, Minn., February 18, 1914.

—First Movement of the Sonata in G Minor, op. 17 (for cello and piano), played by the composer and Robert Raymond Lippitt, Artists' Course, Oak Park, Chicago, February 16, 1914; played by the composer and Robert Raymond Lippitt, College of Saint Teresa, Winona, Minn., February 17, 1914;—played by the composer and Robert Raymond Lippitt, St. John's University, Collegeville, Minn., February 18, 1914.

—"Will o' the Wisp" (piano), played by Robert Raymond Lippitt, Oak Park, Chicago, February 16, 1914;—played by Robert Raymond Lippitt, College of Saint Teresa, Winona, Minn., February 17, 1914;—played by Robert Raymond Lippitt, St. John's University, Collegeville, Minn., February 18, 1914;—played by Robert Raymond Lippitt, Grand Theatre, Aberdeen, Wash., February 24, 1914.

—Minuet in D Major, Arietta (cello), played by the composer, Grand Opera House, Aberdeen, Wash., February 24, 1914;—played by the composer, Majestic Theatre, Corvallis, Ore., February 26, 1914.

—First Movement of the Sonata in G Minor, op. 17 (cello and piano), played by the composer and Robert Raymond Lippitt, Grand Opera House, Aberdeen, Wash., February 24, 1914;—played by the composer and Robert Raymond Lippitt, Majestic Theatre, Corvallis, Ore., February 26, 1914.

Wheeler Critiques.

In praise of William Wheeler, tenor, the press of several cities have published the following critiques:

The tenor, Mr. Wheeler, is a splendid artist and made a fine impression on his audience—Orange (N. J.) Chronicle.

Mr. Wheeler showed himself possessed of a beautiful tone and good technic.—New York Journal.

Mr. Wheeler has a tenor voice of unusual quality, with interpretation, musicianly qualities and diction of the highest order.—New York Evening Mail.

Mr. Wheeler sang six songs with artistic use of his delightful voice, all being given with inimitable expression and sentiment.—Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

In the solos first honors must be awarded to Mr. Wheeler, who excelled in art, voice and diction.—New York Evening Post.

Mr. Wheeler is a singer with a voice of pure tenor quality and sufficient volume. His fresh and agreeable singing quickly caught and held his hearers.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Mr. Wheeler's singing is especially broad and forceful, yet he sings with perfect ease. His voice is rich in quality, even, throughout his entire register, and is guided by an intelligent understanding.—Kingston (N. Y.) Freeman.

Mr. Wheeler as Lionel made a profound and lasting impression and aroused his audience to most enthusiastic applause by the beauty of his voice and the perfection of his artistry. His tones are of beautiful quality with a "mezza voce" of particularly great charm. His singing is a positive delight and will not soon be forgotten.—Fishkill (N. Y.) Herald.

Mr. Wheeler, who was a stranger to the Worcester audience, has a clear tenor voice and perfect enunciation. His solo, "Urbs syon aurea," was sung in a manner that showed the fine qualities of his voice, and was highly praised on all sides.—Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post. (Advertisement.)

Christine Miller in Joint Recitals.

In addition to her many recitals this season, Christine Miller, the contralto, will appear in a number of joint recitals. Some of the latter are: With Edith Chapman Goold at Grand Rapids, Mich.; with the St. Cecilia Society at Cleveland, Ohio, with Harold Bauer, pianist, on the morning series at the Statler Hotel, and with Katharine Goodson before the Matinee Musical Club, of Cincinnati.

Shattuck with New York Philharmonic.

A contract has been closed for Arthur Shattuck, the American pianist, to appear as soloist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Josef Stransky, conductor, in Detroit, Mich., March 16. He will appear also as soloist with the Chicago and Minneapolis Symphony Orchestras.

Florence Mulford Hunt at Spring Lake.

Florence Mulford Hunt, the noted contralto, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is spending the summer at the New Monmouth Hotel, Spring Lake, N. J. There are few resorts along the entire New Jersey coast as attractive as this, and Mrs. Hunt has found an ideal place for both rest and recreation during the summer months. Bathing, motoring, driving, tennis and golf are all included in her daily program. Her singing, however, is not being neglected, for she is constantly filling engagements in and around Spring Lake.

The early fall promises to find this well known artist unusually busy with concert work. On October 9 she is to be heard at Morristown, N. J., on one of the programs of the Claude Warford series, in a joint recital with Evan Williams, the tenor. She will also be heard in the fall at Newport, R. I., at a concert given by the Newport Philharmonic Society.

On the afternoon of July 17 last, Mrs. Hunt sang at the Columbia Hotel, Belmar, N. J. On July 29 she will be the soloist at a concert to be given in the Governor's Mansion, Sea Girt, N. J., for Governor Fielder of New Jersey.

Mrs. Hunt will return from Spring Lake early in September to resume her teaching in Newark, N. J., where the busiest season she has as yet encountered is awaiting her.

Flesch-Shattuck at Illinois College.

Carl Flesch and Arthur Shattuck have been engaged on the artists' series of the Illinois Woman's College, at Jacksonville, Ill., next season.

JULY, 1914. FIXTURE LIST UNDER REVISION.

1	Wednesday -	MARJORIE ADAM - - - -	Pianoforte Recital - -	3.15
1	Wednesday -	MISS TARA WALLACE AND MISS SARITA BENATON - - -	Violin & Pianoforte Recital	8.15	L. G. SHARPE
2	Thursday -	SIR GEORGE POWER - - -	Pupils' Concert - -	3.0
2	Thursday -	MR. TOBIAS MATTHAY - - -	Pupils' Piano Recital -	7.45
3	Friday -	MME. YVETTE GUILBERT - -	Recital - - -	3.15	DANIEL MAYER
3	Friday -	MME. NINA PHOCAS - - -	Vocal Recital - -	8.15	DANIEL MAYER
5	Sunday -	ORLANDO E. MILLER, PH.D. - -	Higher-Thought Service -	11.15
6	Monday -	MME. CARRERAS, SIGNOR LIVIO BONI, AND SIGNOR MAGISTRETTI	Piano, 'Cello, and Harp Concert - - -	3.15	CURTIUS & POWELL
6	Monday -	MR. GREGORY HAST - - -	Pupils' Concert - -	8.0
7	Tuesday -	KARLYLE BENEFIT - - - -	Concert - - -	3.30	DANIEL MAYER
7	Tuesday -	MISS RODOLFA LHOMBINO - -	Vocal Recital - -	8.15	CHAPPELL & CO.
8	Wednesday -	CARL WEBER - - - - -	Annual Concert - -	8.15
10	Friday -	HERR HANS EBELL - - - -	Pianoforte Recital - -	8.15	VERT'S CON. AGENCY
12	Sunday -	ORLANDO E. MILLER, PH.D. - -	Higher-Thought Service -	11.15
14	Tuesday -	MR. GEORGE AITKEN - - -	Pupils' Concert - -	8.0
15	Wednesday -	MR. TOBIAS MATTHAY - - -	Pupils' Concert - -	7.45
16	Thursday -	MRS. DE LATOIX - - - -	Benefit Concert - -	8.0
19	Sunday -	ORLANDO E. MILLER, PH.D. - -	Higher-Thought Service -	11.15
23	Thursday -	MR. TOBIAS MATTHAY - - -	Pupils' Concert - -	7.45
26	Sunday -	ORLANDO E. MILLER, PH.D. - -	Higher-Thought Service -	11.15

TICKETS MAY BE OBTAINED FROM THE BOX OFFICE, BECHSTEIN HALL

JULY MUSIC AT BECHSTEIN HALL, LONDON.

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano

American Tour

WHOLE SEASON 1914-15

Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave. New York

Articles of general musical interest, with or without pictures, will be examined by the Musical Courier if sent on approval, accompanied by stamped envelope for the return of the manuscript. In the event of its acceptance, such matter will be paid for at space rates. Address all manuscripts to The Musical Courier Company, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, Southeast corner of Thirty-ninth Street.

Jacques Thibaud on American Taste.

In Paris Jacques Thibaud has given out an interview in which he contrasts musical conditions in America as he found them last season and those existing in the country he visited ten years before, when his playing was first heard here.

"Frankly," says Thibaud, "I did not like the America I found on my first visit. My experience this past season was just the reverse. On my first American tour I always was the stranger, and constantly ill at ease. Exigencies of popular taste forced me to play programs that were distasteful to me, and musical culture was ofttimes of a very indifferent variety.

"One of my especial grievances was the fact that I was compelled to play short, light pieces. Only such were supposed to satisfy the popular taste.

"Incessant exploitation of virtuosity is absolutely futile. In these days it defeats its own purpose. Everybody now is a good technician, and everybody who chooses can amaze by sensational tricks. But performers of this type do not impress themselves indelibly upon the minds and souls of their hearers, however much they may startle and amaze the great body of the public.

"That type of music was demanded in America ten years ago. It is not now. Now it is serious enough to listen to the substantial works and to enjoy them.

"I know this by the attitude of my audiences at my many recitals, and by noting the character of the programs invariably demanded."

Thibaud will return to America early in December and will appear with all the important orchestras, in addition to making a recital tour that will extend from coast to coast. The violinist is under the management of Loudon Charlton.

Arthur Shattuck, the Traveler.

Arthur Shattuck, the pianist, has played in all the capitals of Europe and many of the most important foreign cities. He also toured Iceland, climbed Mont Blanc, camped in the Sahara Desert and made a tour of the Holy Land. Prior to his concert season in America, Mr. Shattuck will concertize in England.

Orpheus had been permitted to ascend from the lower regions.

"Why did you let him go?" the Old Boy was asked.

"The cuss insisted on playing ragtime," replied Satan disgustedly.—Exchange.

Boice Artists at Ocean Grove.

Artists from the Boice Studios, New York, collaborated in a concert at Ocean Grove Auditorium July 8, an event which gave great pleasure to all concerned. All the singers were at their best, Mrs. Otis and Mrs. Lockitt making special hits with their contrasting voices. The audience was much larger than usual so early in the season, very enthusiastic, and all the singers were encored. Prominent singers in the audience came to Mrs. Boice afterward with warm words of commendation for the very beautiful singing, showing such artistic breath control, etc. It was an evening of triumph for the teacher, Mrs. Henry Smock Boice, as well as for the singers. Following was the program:

CONCERT

By Artists from the Boice Studios, of New York.

Florence Anderson Otis, Grace Douglas Bell, Katherine Bickford Self, Jessie Rowe Lockitt, W. J. R. Thiers.

The Boice Ladies' Quartet. Accompanist, Susan S. Boice.

PROGRAM.

Quartet—
Greeting to Spring ..... Strauss
Rockin' in de Win' ..... Neidlinger

Songs—
Cry of Rachel ..... Mrs. Salter
The Clover ..... MacDowell
The Bluebell ..... MacDowell
Mrs. Bell.

MacDowell—
Aria, Be Thou Faithful Unto Death (St. Paul) ..... Mendelssohn
Mr. Thiers.

Solo, polonaise, Mignon ..... A. Thomas
Mrs. Otis.

Recitative and aria, Nadeschda ..... Goring-Thomas
Mrs. Lockitt.

FLORENCE ANDERSON OTIS.

Songs—
Je ne veux pas autre chose ..... Widor
Ishtar ..... Charles Gilbert Spross
Song of April ..... Mary Turner Salter
Mrs. Self.

Songs—
Dearest ..... Sidney Homer
Revelation ..... John Prindle Scott
Mr. Thiers.

Songs—
Come, Little Leaves ..... Leoni
Death and the Maiden ..... Schubert
Mrs. Lockitt.

JESSIE ROWE LOCKITT.

Songs—
Soupir ..... Leo Stern
Pastoral ..... H. Lane Wilson
Mrs. Otis.

Quartet—
Barcarolle ..... Offenbach-Sherwood
Song of the Seasons ..... Hawley

Wagner's Flying Trip.

Charles L. Wagner sailed Tuesday, July 21, on the Aquitania for London, where he will join John McCormack and pilot him to Salzburg, where the great tenor will help dedicate the temple of music erected to the memory of Mozart. The trip will be a flying one, as Mr. Wagner expects to return August 25.

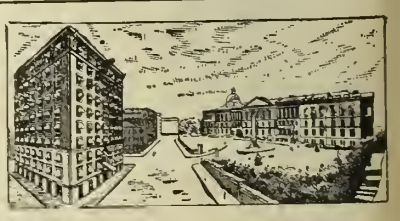
WANTED

WANTED—There is a splendid opportunity for a good piano, violin or singing teacher to connect with a musical institution of the highest standing in one of the leading cities of the United States by investing moderate sum in the institution. Only men or women of superior ability, culture and refinement considered. Steady income assured to the proper persons. All communications confidential. Send photo, credentials, telephone number and complete particulars to "Cooperative Opportunity," care of Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

PIANIST of reputation desires a position as accompanist in a studio, on tour or in chamber music. Pianos furnished free by a leading piano house. Address "Pianist," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

WANTED—Organists for moving picture houses. Must be able to play piano also. Steady employment assured, with good salary. Address "Organist," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

HOTEL POWHATAN WASHINGTON D.C.
HOTEL OF AMERICAN IDEALS
The Hotel Powhatan is the best, at the same time the newest, hotel in Washington.
Famous Pennsylvania Avenue, at the junction of 18th and H Streets, affords the site for this most luxurious and modern hotel.
Write for booklet with map.
CLIFFORD M. LEWIS, Manager



Clarence EIDAM Pianist
Ninth Floor, Auditorium Building - CHICAGO

HENRY P. SCHMITT
VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
Residence Studio: 203 W. 81st St., New York. Tel. Schuyler 9517

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY
BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC in LEIPSIC
Own building with one large concert hall and two small halls, also fifty teaching rooms. Founded by F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy in 1843. Yearly attendance, 950 students of all countries. Students received at Easter and Michaelmas each year, but foreigners received at any time, in accordance with page 9 of the regulations.
The course of tuition includes every branch of musical instruction, namely: Piano, all stringed and wind instruments, organ, solo singing and thorough training for the opera, chamber music, orchestra, and sacred music, theory, composition, history of music, literature and æsthetics.
Prospectus in English or German sent gratis on application.
Director of THE ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC DR. ROENTSCH

Commonwealth Hotel
OPPOSITE STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, MASS.
Offers room with hot and cold water for $1.00 per day and up, which includes free use of public shower baths.
Nothing to equal this in New England
Rooms with private baths for $1.50 per day and up; suites of two rooms and bath for $4.00 per day and up.
ABSOLUTELY FIREPROOF
Strictly a Temperance Hotel. Send for Booklet
STORER F. CRAFTS - - Gen'l Mgr.

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 4 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1792

JULIA CULP

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

CLIFFORD DEMAREST, F. A. G. O.,
ORGANIST—COMPOSER.
Recitals—Instruction.
Church of The Messiah, 34th St. & Park Av., N.Y.C.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
B O I C E.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

EUGENIE PAPPENHEIM,
THE CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Culture in All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101 W. 78th St., New York City.
Telephone: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
68th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
'Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.
Special Summer Course.

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

Miss EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
Will teach during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano.
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1913. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West, Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York.
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet.
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th St.

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE. 230 East 62d Street
Complete musical education given to students from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR.
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT.
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza.

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMOND,
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Correct Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 4. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1792.

PRIX DE ROME IS WON BY WIDOR ASSISTANT.

Paris Conservatoire Presents Famous Prize to Young Organist—Won Last Year by a Woman—Mme Valda Entertains—Paris Personalities.

[All inquiries referring to American musicians and music as well as matters of interest to American visitors in Paris, or such as contemplate a visit to France, may be addressed to H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beauséjour, to whom tickets should also be sent by those who desire their recitals or concerts to be attended.]

Paris, July 14, 1914.

Marcel Dupré, as noticed in this column last week, is this year's winner of the Prix de Rome, the principal prize offered to the student of the National Conservatoire of Music which carries with it three years' residence at the Villa Medicis in Rome for the purpose of further studying and composition. M. Dupré's home is at Rouen, where his father is organist in the church of St. Vivien. The Prix de Rome winner has been a musician since his earliest boyhood. He studied first with his father and when only eight years old gave his first organ recital at Rouen; at twelve years of age he became his father's regular assistant there. At fourteen years an oratorio of his entitled, "Les Anges de Jacob," was performed. Coming to Paris to study in 1905 as a pupil of Professor

YVONNE GALL.

Diémer he won the Premier Prix de Piano; in 1907, under the late Alexandre Guilmant, he won a Premier Prix d'Orgue and in 1909, under Professor Widor, a Premier Prix de Fugue. Since 1906 he has been Widor's assistant in the famous church of St. Sulpice here in Paris.

VALDA RECEPTION.

One of the pleasantest social features of the summer musical season is the reception which Mme. Giulia Valda, directress of the Lamperti-Valda school of singing, gives each year for the Baroness de Bazers (perhaps better known in America as Mrs. Frank Leslie) on the occasion of her annual visit to Paris. The reception took place this year on Friday, June 26, and an excellent musical program was provided. Mrs. W. M. Corry, soprano, was heard in an aria from "Madame Butterfly." Mrs. Corry possesses a very pretty voice and sang capitally, showing evidence of the steady progress which she has made this past season in studying with Mme. Valda. Julia Porter, another pupil of Mme. Valda, was in splendid voice and was heard to such advantage in a duet from "Rigoletto" with M. Tiessié that they were compelled to repeat the whole number. Still further evidence of the fine work accomplished in the Lamperti-Valda school during the past season was the capital rendering of a duet from "Don Juan," sung by another of the pupils, Victoria Harrel, a light soprano with a voice of much beauty, who was also assisted by M. Tiessié. Other excellent numbers on the program were contributed by Olga Rudge, violinist, Signor Sottolana and Mme. Bianca Waldo.

"GLAD TO SEE HIM." ARNOLD VOLPE ARRIVING AT PARIS TO JOIN MRS. VOLPE.

Among the guests were: Princess Odescalchi, Princess Cornelia de Bourbon, Prince Louis Bourbon, Baronne de Grand Court, Comtesse Spottiswood Mackin, Comtesse Jean de Castelburjac, Mrs. Bainbridge Bell, Miss Bainbridge Bell, General A. T. Spiridovitch, Comtesse Bonniville des Bonchour, Comte Bonniville des Bonchour, Comtesse de Cisneros, Rev. Father Mac-Mullan, Mrs. Marc A. Blumenberg, Mrs. James Gordon Kellog, Mr. and Mrs. Sommerville Story, Alexander Zeitlin, Mrs. L. W. Stimpson, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Stinson, P. Whitlon Stinson, M. Meyerheim, Genevieve Dehelly, Mrs. L. W. Glover, May Birkhead, Mrs. Rudge, Miss Rudge, M. Leonce Tiessié, M. Sottolana, Frances Bery, Mrs. Powers, Mrs. A. T. King, Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Dewey.

The following pupils of the school were also among the assembly; the Misses Clara and Sarah Strain, Mrs. H. Southard, Mrs. Joseph Humphreys, Misses Marie and Antoinette Glover, Annie Hanslick, the Misses Minnie and Katie McClean, Mrs. Francis Berg.

MARY GARDEN'S PLANS.

The rumor that Mary Garden was to give up the operatic stage for the "legit" and become a member of the company at the Comedie-Française is false. I am assured, on the best authority, that there is nothing the matter with her voice. Miss Garden's plans for next season are not entirely completed, but one thing certain is that she will be heard many times at the Opéra-Comique, which institution seems to be a happy meeting ground for those artists who are not returning to America next season. Maggie Teyte will be there also.

NOTES.

Paris is pretty well deserted in this hot weather—genuinely hot weather compared even to our American summers. Yesterday was the quietest Sunday for the boulevard and cafe traffic that I have ever seen, still I suppose there are about two millions of us left inside the walls, and we are being visited by a lot of our American friends.

Theodore Harrison, the splendid American baritone, and Mrs. Harrison are here for the summer. Mr. Harrison, who previously has done most of his foreign work in Germany, will devote his time to coaching French songs. He has accepted a position as director of the vocal department of the music school of the University of Michigan and will go to Ann Arbor to begin his work in October.

Dr. William C. Carl, New York's famous organist, is here for a few days on his way to Switzerland for his annual vacation.

Gertrude Cowen, for several years on the staff of the MUSICAL COURIER, and now the energetic manager of Marie Sundelius, among other artists, is here for a short stay. Before returning to America she will visit Berlin and Vienna and also will see some of the Wagner festival at Munich.

Yvonne Gall, the prina donna at the Opera, will soon leave Paris to spend her annual forty days' vacation in automobiling all about France with friends. Immediately on her return rehearsals will begin for "Antar," the new opera in which she is to create the leading role.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Alexander have left Paris for their summer house at Malmaison, about half an hour out of the city. Many of Mr. Alexander's pupils are still in town, and he will come up to his Paris studio twice a week to give lessons for the present.

Katherine Ziegler, of Chicago, a young soprano who has already sung in operetta in America, is giving up that career to prepare herself for grand opera, and is at work in the studio of the Marquis de Trabadelo. He is much impressed with her voice and its future possibilities. Miss Ziegler will be among the few favored pupils who accompany him to his summer studio at San Sebastian.

MARCEL DUPRE.

Walter Earnest Engaged for Maine Festival.

Walter Earnest, the Pittsburgh tenor, has been engaged as soloist for the Saco Valley Festival, Llewellyn B. Cain, of Portland, director, to be held at Bridgeton, Me., on August 3 and 4, also to give recitals at several large summer resorts, including Bar Harbor.

Mr. Earnest has been unusually busy during the past season and has a number of engagements booked for the coming year.

New Song by Mrs. Beach.

A new song by Mrs. H. H. A. Beach is soon to come from the presses. It is said to be one of the best songs yet written by this gifted composer and is dedicated to the tenor, George Hamlin.

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées), Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI.) Paris

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Studio: 10 Rue Herran, Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS
French and English Readings America, October to April Address, care Musical Courier
(especially for opera students) Courses Begin April 1, 1914 Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4. rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Soul professor de chant diplomé par Mme. Mathilda Marchesi
151 Rue de Rome

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
Mme. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris

American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

Oscar Seagle in England.

It would be hard to imagine a more attractive spot than the little town of Bramber, in Sussex, England, which Oscar Seagle has picked out for his summer work. It is situated close to Shoreham, on the famous English south coast, and at the same time it is far enough inland so that one has the most beautiful country surroundings. The quaint old house, built of flints, brick and mortar, dates back to 1668, with the studio window looking out upon a most delightful country prospect which is in itself a direct incentive to artistic work. Mr. Seagle goes there for a "rest" with his family, but it is very little rest that he gets. As a matter of fact his class this summer numbers almost thirty members, requiring him to teach at least seven hours every day—not the average man's idea of a summer holiday. Mr. Seagle's accompanist, Frank Bibb, is there with him and "spare moments" are devoted to working up the repertoire for the very extensive concert tour which Mr. Seagle will have in America next season.

"WELCOMING THE NOVITIATE." FRANK BIBB (AS THAIS) AND MISS CURLEY.

OSCAR SEAGLE (LEFT), WITH HIS ACCOMPANIST, FRANK BIBB, AND HIS SON, JOHN SEAGLE.

PART OF OSCAR SEAGLE'S SUMMER CLASS, 1914, AT BRAMBER, SUSSEX, ENGLAND.

The Fourth of July was gloriously celebrated by the group of Americans, who add such a note of gaiety to the life of the quiet little village. Impromptu evening parties and a good deal of outdoor sport help to keep everybody interested. Occasionally there is a chance of combining work and play, as on the last evening in June when Mr. Seagle himself and several members of his class, including Mrs. Poehler, Mrs. Jones, Miss Curley, Messrs. Holmquist, Brown and Andrews, accompanied by Mr. Bibb, gave their services for a concert in aid of the mission chapel of the little village of Beeding, a part of Bramber in which New House, Mr. Seagle's home, is situated.

"What kind of a pianist is she?"

"The kind that plays a few measures of a piece and then says, 'and so on!'"

Holt Pupil's Recital.

Lillian Rosen, a pupil of Georgia Holt, assisted by Floyd M. Baxter, tenor, gave the attached program, in Steinert Hall, Bangor, Me., Tuesday evening, July 14:

Loure, from third suite ..... Bach
Sonata Pathetique, op. 13 ..... Beethoven
Prâyer, Benedicimi-tu ..... Wolf-Ferrari
Opera, "The Jewels of the Madonna," Act I.
La Mia Canzone ..... Tosti
Mr. Baxter.

Impromptu, A major ..... Schubert
Nocturne, F minor ..... Chopin
Waltz, F minor ..... Chopin
Chant Sans Paroles ..... Tschaikowsky
Consolation in E ..... Mendelssohn
Rondo Capriccioso ..... Mendelssohn
My Rose of Yester-e'en ..... Rich
Thou'rt Like Unto a Lovely Flower ..... Smith
Lift Thine Eyes ..... Logan
Mr. Baxter.

Papillon ..... Grieg
Erotik ..... Grieg
Silver Spring ..... Mason
Rigoletto Paraphrase ..... Verdi-Liszt

Miss Rosen proved unusually talented in this varied program, displaying rare musical conception and technical skill. She has also a very dependable memory.

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot. Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Devereli, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

DOCTEUR CONTA Cure and rejuvenescence of the voice by a special treatment of the mucous membranes of the nose and throat
OFFICE HOURS: 1 to 4
18 RUE DUPHOT, (Bd. Madeleine) PARIS

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Managament: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Managamant: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

CHARLES W. CLARK
AMERICAN TOUR SEASON 1914-15
BARITONE Dr. Frederick Clark, Personal Representative 12 Rue Leonard de Vinci, :: PARIS

Thuel Burnham's Matinee Recitals.

Thuel Burnham, the well known piano virtuoso, has been touring the southern part of France and the chateau district per automobile with Mrs. and Miss Woodford, the widow and daughter of the late General Woodford, former United States ambassador to Spain, and a party of friends. Mr. Burnham is spending his time in Paris except when traveling for pleasure and rest. He is working up his repertoire for the extended tour which he is to make in America under the direction of Harry Culbertson, beginning in October. His absences from Paris are necessarily of short duration since he is giving a series of six summer matinee recitals, the program performed on Sunday, July 5, being as follows:

THUEL BURNHAM ON MOTOR TRIP IN SOUTHERN FRANCE WITH MRS. AND MISS WOODFORD, WIDOW AND DAUGHTER OF GENERAL WOODFORD, FORMER UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR TO SPAIN.

Sonate, op. 27, No. 2 (Clair de Lune)	Beethoven
Papillons	Schumann
Romanza	Schumann
Grillen	Schumann
Prélude	Chopin
Valse	Chopin
Polonaise	Chopin

Mr. Burnham had a tour arranged in America for last season, but was obliged to postpone all of it, with the exception of a few Western dates, on account of illness. The dates which were postponed have been taken up for next season, and a large number of additional dates have already been booked.

Popular Contralto in Detroit.

For the third consecutive time, Christine Miller appeared in recital in Detroit March 4, and was accorded a warm welcome from the large and representative audience present. Brief excerpts from the press follow:

Christine Miller, one of the most pleasing contraltos on the recital platform, opened the current season of Lenten morning musicales in the Green Room of the Hotel Pontchartrain yesterday at 11 o'clock. Miss Miller made her third appearance in Detroit yesterday, and the cordiality of her reception showed how sincerely her work is appreciated here. Gifted with a naturally beautiful voice, the young artist has training and musicianly interpretative powers in marked degree. Moreover, she has a most delightful personality and her recitals are distinguished by a very interesting simplicity in manner and rendition. Miss Miller is gifted with the power of admirable program making. Her numbers are varied and each is chosen because of some special appeal. Explanatory remarks giving the real meaning of the compositions offered by Miss Miller before singing added much to their enjoyment.—Detroit News, March 5, 1914.

The program was furnished by Christine Miller, who possesses a remarkably rich contralto voice. The rare sympathy with which Miss Miller rendered her numbers, combined with her charming personality, completely carried away her audience.—Free Press, December 5, 1914.

The delightful atmosphere that pervaded the morning musicales at the Pontchartrain was reestablished on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, when that popular favorite, Christine Miller, gave her second recital in the series. She was in fine voice, and her interpretations, as always, were of the kind to charm the cultivated audience that listened to her program. Miss Miller's success in the musical world has been little less than remarkable, and it has been one that was thoroughly deserved.—Saturday Night, March 7, 1914.

(Advertisement.)

George Sweet's Truths.

New York, July 23, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

I am replying publicly to a request relative to my ideas on correct vocalization or tone production, which is something of a problem to most of the students of singing in the present day. It is deplorable that most of the so-called instructors of vocal music, have practically departed from the simple methods of the earlier masters, Porpora, Bordogrie, Concone, Vaccaj, and others, who knew infinitely more concerning the physiological and artistic details in this particular branch of the art of music than these inventors and theorists of the twentieth century. Put it mildly, we are woefully below the beautiful high standards established by these wonderful men. Tone placing, or what was termed among the aforesaid maestros "la messa di voce" was the mere exhaling the air taken into the lung, causing the vocal chords to give a vibration which was called "vocalized breath," termed "ima vocale" or amplified into English, "a vowel, a sound made without interruption, reaching the ear of the listener as an indefinite Ah, or as the sound of the child coming into life, and the last heard at death."

As singing is an idealized form of speech, the tone being more beautiful in quality than when speaking, we are naturally governed by the first rule in language, which is to pronounce properly. Consequently, the student should be trained to hear the correct emission of the only pure sound that nature gives us, as nearly as I can express it, as "a" the first letter in all the alphabets (the mother sound) pronounced as the indefinite article—a—in the English language before words beginning with a consonant. Rossini, who was a great wag, said, "Singers sing with their ears and not with their throats," and how true this remark. So when a student's ear is keen enough to appreciate this essential rule, he must also combine his power of imitation for the ideal beautiful quality of the sound.

You will ask, "Imitation of what?" Is not the voice an instrument? How perfectly the old masters recognized this fact. When they employed the services of a first class tone master of the violin which possessed the perfect tone (pianos were not then in existence) and the students were taught to imitate that tone, and when it was impossible to detect which was voice and which the instrument, they had gained the perfect, ideal floating tone, and from these old masters, we have been entertained by those wonderful singers, Malibran, Pasta, Grisi, Rubini, Donzelli, Mario, La Blanche, Tamburini, and later on the same principles, Parepa Rosa and Adelina Patti. (The latter appeared in our company at Krolls' in Berlin in October, 1877 and in the music lesson scene in the "Barbiere di Siviglia" when she introduced the aria from "Perle de Brazil" ("Charmant Diseau"), it was impossible with the flute obligato to detect the difference between the voice and the instrument, so perfect was her power of imitation or blending).

While I was a young singer, the question of different methods was being constantly discussed around me, and I naturally fell into line and experimented with every new invention; viz., lowering the larynx by drawing backward and depressing the root of my tongue, at the same time learning the Glottis stroke, by raising the uvula and soft palate, to open the throat. I was also taught to pronounce "aw" or something between an "ah" and an "o," to gain volume, also to direct the tone into the "nasal cavities," and many other theories, totally unmusical when resorted to. I was, in consequence, constantly suffering from sore throat and at one time lost my voice for three months. Can the voice or cultivated tone of a singer be musical which is guttural or nasal? Is not the main object to make music? Since my return to our country, when I was the leading baritone with Mme. Etelka Gerster under the Strakosch management of grand opera and after beginning the thankless task of training singers, other new and complex theories have been hatched out; for example, the lowering of the jaw upon the wishbone and placing one's collar button under the right or left ear to obtain perfect resonance.

Very truly yours,

GEORGE SWEET.

PIANOS IN PARIS

Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos

We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.

Renting for Music Students a Specialty

THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Clara Williams Has Sung from Babyhood.

Clara Williams, the well known Minneapolis soprano, comes naturally by her musical talents. Her parents were both musical. Miss Williams was born in Wales. As a mere baby she sang, and one of her earliest recollections is of being awakened one night to sing for some visitors, who wanted to "hear baby sing." Her father taught her to read music before she was old enough to realize what it meant, and it was owing to her ability to read anything at sight that at six she was admitted to the piano class of a well known professor who had, previous to discovering her ability in this direction, declared that she was far too young for him to teach. At eleven she held a position as church organist, and since then, save for absence in Europe for study, has held a position in church in either that capacity or later as soprano soloist; surely an unusual record.

Alice Zeppilli's Success in Europe.

Alice Zepilli, the brilliant soprano of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, is scoring fine successes in Europe. She appeared recently at Covent Garden in "Nozze de Figaro" and essayed for the first time the role of Nannette in "Falstaff" with much success. On July 2, 4 and 7, she sang in Deauville in "Manon," "Boheme" and "Tosca." July 9 she gave a concert at Spa, and on the 12th and the 19th she was heard in concert at Ostend.

Miss Zepilli will end her season the first part of September and will then enjoy a well needed rest in her villa in Monte Carlo, where she will remain until time to return to Philadelphia for the opening of the opera season.

The Famous Prima Donna of the Paris Grand Opera

MLLE. ALICE VERLET

"With the exception of Mmes. Patti and Melba, no voice of exactly the same quality has been in this country for a long period. . . ."
—London Morning Post, March 22, 1909.

Will Tour the Season 1914-15 in U.S.A. and Canada and is now being booked for Concerts and Recitals.

By Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave. New York

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN. 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau. 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street, New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-1915
Management. ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA
Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus
"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Menegement: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone, Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st. St., NEW YORK

Emma Loeffler with Pittsburgh Orchestra.

Emma Loeffler, the dramatic soprano, appeared as soloist with the Pittsburgh Festival Orchestra, under the direction of Carl Bernthaler, Thursday evening, July 16. Miss Loeffler was enthusiastically received and a hearty invitation was given her to return to the "Smoky City" in the very near future, which will bring about a return engagement.

Some press opinions are herewith reproduced:

A large and enthusiastic audience was at the Schenley Lawn last evening to greet Emma Loeffler, a former Pittsburgh girl, on her appearance with the Pittsburgh Festival Orchestra, Carl Bernthaler, conductor. Miss Loeffler did not need much advertising, as she appeared in Pittsburgh in recital two seasons ago. When Miss Loeffler finished her first number on the program, the aria "Dich Theure Halle," from "Tannhäuser," it had to be repeated. Her voice is an unusual one of fine range and agility.

Later in the program Miss Loeffler was heard in a group of three songs by Tosti, Strauss and Homer, in which she brought to her work a sympathetic understanding manner. Her evident love for them gave her something like authority in their interpretation. As encores to this group she sang Brahms' "Der Schmied" and "Mighty Lak a Rose." Mr. Bernthaler's program included selections from Wagner, Suppe, Zichrer, Herbert, Puccini, Moszkowski and Delibes.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

EMMA LOEFFLER.

Before a large and appreciative audience Emma Loeffler, the dramatic soprano, whose home is in Pittsburgh, made her appearance last night with the Pittsburgh Festival Orchestra at the Hotel Schenley lawn concert. On a portion of the program she was accompanied by Carl Bernthaler, pianist and director of the Festival Orchestra.

Miss Loeffler revealed a range and quality of voice that was pleasing, at the same time displaying dramatic ability of rare attainment. She sang Elizabeth's "Dich Theure Halle" particularly with splendid effect. This was one of Miss Loeffler's few appearances in her native city, she having identified herself largely with the musical work of the East.—Pittsburgh Post. (Advertisement.)

Flonzaleys' Coast Experience.

What seemed to impress the members of the Flonzaley Quartet most on their last Western tour was the size of the audiences that greeted them in contrast to the limited support accorded them on their former visit to the coast. In Fresno, Cal., for example, where only a limited audience heard them in a church two years ago, the largest auditorium was hardly large enough to contain the music lovers that greeted them this time.

"Chamber music," commented Iwan d'Archambeau, in a Los Angeles interview, "is not amusing, and it requires a cultivated audience. In Fresno a Buffalo Bill show was playing against us, and personally I should have preferred to have been a member of Buffalo Bill's audience rather than of ours. But nearly a thousand people came to hear us, and this was our experience throughout the West. It is an inspiration to find a universal desire, even in the smallest communities, to seek musical education, and a willingness to come to hear us play."

Mr. and Mrs. Fiqué in Maine.

Carl Fiqué and Katherine Noack Fiqué are spending their vacation in Northeast Harbor, Me.

Piano Foreman—What are ye doin' there, Rafferty?
Rafferty—I'm oilin' the piano casters.
Piano Foreman—Well, lave them alone. I'll do it meself. What do you know about machinery?—London Music.

LEWIS SHAWE
Baritone
Recital, Concert, Oratorio Schiffman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON. 437 Fifth Ave., New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 W. 67th St. Tel.: Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THF WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
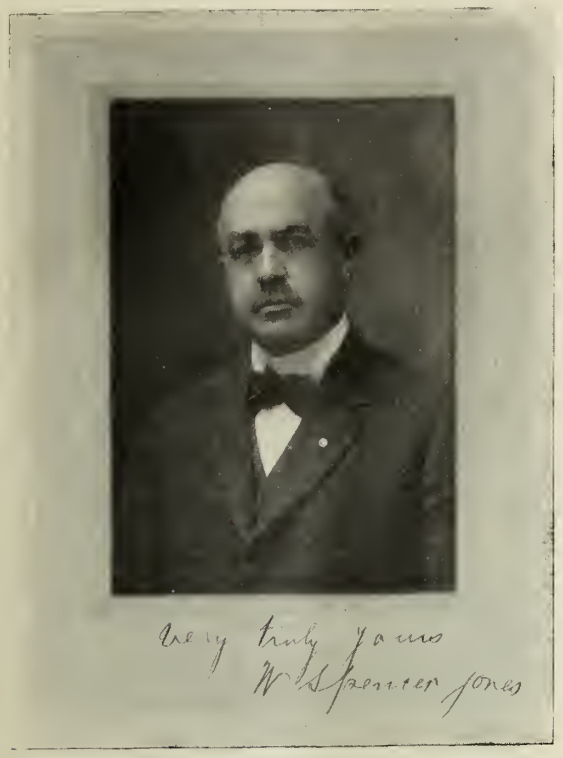
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN, Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

Combination Recitals of Two of the Most Brilliant Young Artists of the Present Generation

ALICE EVERSMAN
AMERICAN SOPRANO
Has achieved emphatic successes as a member of the Chicago, Montreal and Karlsruhe Grand Ducal Opera (Germany).



YELENA VON SAYN
RUSSIAN VIOLINIST
Her fame as a violinistic celebrity of the first magnitude is artistically established in Europe; likewise in America.

Programs Selected from the Greatest Operatic and Instrumental Composers

Under the exclusive Management of W. L. Radcliffe, 406 Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.

A Managerial Chat.

With a date book in one hand and a satchel stuffed with inquiries and contract blanks in the other, W. Spencer Jones, the traveling member of the firm of Haensel &

W. SPENCER JONES.

Jones, was found the other day by a MUSICAL COURIER representative in the act of entering a taxi at the Hotel McAlpin, bound for the Grand Central Station to begin his annual fall booking tour. When asked "Whither goest thou?" Mr. Jones made a sweeping gesture which indicated that he expected to cover a very liberal portion of the United States and Canada before he returned to the firm's offices in Aeolian Hall, and invited the writer to climb into the waiting machine.

"This is my twenty-fifth trip in the interest of our list," began Mr. Jones, as he settled back into the cushions and passed the MUSICAL COURIER man an extra choice Havana cigar and lit one himself. "I make two trips each season," continued Mr. Jones, "and in the years I have been going about this country in the interest of the best in music I have noticed some wonderful changes, but to my way of thinking every change has been for the best.

"In the good old days, of which I hear the old timers tell, an agent could sell almost any kind of an artist, but the committees of today want only artists with the power to draw more than their fee at the box office. The successful artist is the one that the public will pay to see and hear.

"No matter what folks say about a season—there is always a market for the best. It is always a bad season for a bad artist and a good season for a good artist. The box office is the infallible barometer of art. The concert business is like the cigar business. I suppose I could smoke a 'Staten Island Perfecto' or a 'Connecticut Panetela,' but I know I would get sick of smoking in short order. I buy a good cigar and consequently enjoy it to the utmost. Now there are artists who leave a bad taste in the mouth just as a bad cigar does and people are sick of that kind of artists. They prefer artists they can enjoy.

"During the last dozen years there has been a steady growth and development of music clubs in this country, due, I presume in some measure, to the return of many students who have graduated from the colleges and universities of our country. While at school they were privileged to hear such artists as Flesch, Slezak and Bonci or others of a like standing. Upon returning to their home town these graduates set the concert wheels in motion and another city, town or village is placed on the musical map.

"In a small Texas city some years ago I called upon the president of a music study club who told me 'her girls' were meeting that afternoon and that she would be glad to have me come and speak to them about having an artist's course. At the appointed hour I was on hand and was allotted fifteen minutes to urge the idea of a concert series to supplement the regular club work, which heretofore had been confined to weekly discussions of music topics. After my talk I was told to come back in an hour. When I returned the president signed four contracts. That was several years ago and with each succeeding year this club has brought more expensive artists, until its course for next year costs over five thousand dollars and the club has money in the treasury besides.

"I recall another club in a city of Oklahoma which never paid more than two hundred dollars for an artist. I called on the club one day and suggested Bonci. I never will forget how the president gasped: 'We couldn't raise fifteen hundred dollars for just one artist.' But some of the young ladies, just home from college, said they could and would. The contract was signed and the Bonci concert made the club enough profit to pay for the entire course. Every year since I have sold this club artists and now five hundred is its lowest limit and I believe the sky is their highest, for they offered me $4,000 for Caruso for an hour's recital. I told them Caruso gave no recitals, so they took Slezak at $1,500, and he is going back to this same club again this year for the third time.

"I never believe in overloading a club. I always want to be sure a club can get out with a profit. Debt is the death knell of many a musical organization. An evenly balanced series will always pay out and the success of one season always breeds confidence for another. To make the concert foundation of this country absolutely secure, an eye must be kept on the future. We are building a great institution and it is not the one time business that counts, but the business that once started keeps growing year by year."

Nana Genovese on Jersey Coast.

Nana Genovese, the Italian mezzo-soprano, known from her singing formerly under Oscar Hammerstein's management at the Manhattan Opera House and lately with the Italian Opera Company, is at present staying on the Jersey coast, where she will fill several concert engagements. Among these are a series of morning musicales given at the home of Mrs. Joseph Paterno, Hartshorne Lane, at Rumson, N. J., the beautiful summer residence of Mrs. Paterno.

Mme. Genovese, who originally intended to spend her summer at her home in Genoa, Italy, changed her plans in order to be able to accept several summer concerts. Mme. Genovese's American home is in Rutherford, N. J. She is exceedingly fond, not alone of outdoor life, but devotes hours daily planting and working in her beautiful garden; she is particularly fond of horses, and can be seen frequently on horseback together with her young daughter, who accompanies her mother on a beautiful little pony. Mme. Genovese believes that exercising in the open air is one of the finest remedies for keeping her voice in good condition.

NANA GENOVESE ON HORSEBACK.

Mme. Genovese's manager, Annie Friedberg, has just closed a number of concert and two orchestra engagements for her in the West during the coming season, which promises to be a very busy one for this excellent artist.

Off to Capture Max Reinhardt.

With the hopes of bringing Max Reinhardt to this country, Max Rabinoff, theatrical and producing manager, has sailed for London on the steamship Imperator to confer with the "field marshal of the European stage." The sponsors for the American presentation of "The Miracle," are anxious to have Professor Reinhardt personally stage the huge mystery pageant. The presentation of "The Miracle" will begin in Madison Square Garden on December 4, next. Among the New Yorkers who have given "The Miracle" their support are Otto H. Kahn, Clarence H. Mackay, Benjamin S. Guinness, and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Mr. Rabinoff will meet Professor Reinhardt in London. Karl Vollmoeller, author of "The Miracle," and Maria Carmi, who plays the chief feminine role, that of the Madonna, will also be there. The other principals in the spectacle are scattered over Europe but they will assemble in London early in the fall, and come to New York in a body. Only the principals and chief supporting players will come from Europe. The rest of the 2,000 persons who will take part in "The Miracle" will be recruited in New York.

The work of packing and insuring the costumes and effects of the mystery drama, as used at the Circus Busch in Berlin this spring, has already begun. Costumes, scenery, and properties alone represent, it is said, an outlay of $100,000. Converting the interior of Madison Square Garden into the nave of a vast gothic cathedral will cost another large sum. Then, salaries of 2,000 persons also are an item.

Cordelia Lee Will Return in September.

Cordelia Lee, the noted young violinist, will return to America the beginning of September, after a summer of work in Dresden. Her one great diversion and recreation has been swimming, which she thoroughly enjoys.

Miss Lee opens her American tour with the Maine festivals at Bangor and Portland.

In the orchestra of life the husband who lacks qualifications for leadership must play second fiddle.—Satire.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryan

OCEAN GROVE AUDITORIUM
OCEAN GROVE, N. J.
Tali Esen Morgan
DIRECTOR
Mendelssohn's Famous Oratorio
"ELIJAH"
Saturday Evening, August 15th
Chorus of 1200 voices, consisting of combined choral societies from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark and Ocean Grove.

Madame OTTILIE METZGER
THE GREAT GERMAN CONTRALTO (Second American Tour)
and THEODOR LATTERMANN
THE FAMOUS BASS-BARITONE (First Appearance in America)
Who are now singing in the Hamburg Opera will arrive in America early in February
Opera :: Concert :: Oratorio
Management: Music League of America, Howard E. Potter, Business Manager
Aeolian Hall, New York

Edyth Walker in Europe.

Edyth Walker's recent triumphs are told in the appended press notices won by the famous American soprano:

The second festival evening was a production of "Tannhäuser," which came so near to an ideal stage performance, especially the second act, which was played with a degree of perfection that one does not often see. When Edyth Walker comes on the stage there is a perceptible feeling which it is really necessary to witness. One forgets the theatre makeup and only sees there a real great personality, the embodiment of nature and art, instinct and reason who has also such a fine perception of style that she is capable of overcoming any obstacle or difficulty. Edyth Walker is just the idea of a musically dramatic singer. It is always a perfect enjoyment for the ear when she sings, and added to this beautiful art of singing there is such exceptional representation and her soulful rendering of the role makes her simply inimitable. As a rule the critic remains in the theatre only a few minutes, but here this renowned genial artist held one in anxious expectation all through the performance.—Rhenische Musik in Theaterzeitung.

EDYTH WALKER IN HER AUTO.

An extraordinary large audience gathered in the Beethoven saal yesterday evening to hear Edyth Walker. One eagerly takes the opportunity afforded to hear a combination of such wonderful and true artistic and musical talent which this singer possesses which is today more rare than of yore. With what force of expression and splendid style did she sing as, for instance, "Dem unendlichen," by Schubert, a pure musical force which was the true interpretation of the song. Not less enjoyable was her selections from Schumann and Brahms, and a great number of songs by Wolff and Mahler. But the last song, "Ich weiss nicht wie mir ist," which she rendered in her fine recitative style was a crowning success—Berliner Börsen-Courier.

Edyth Walker, who was the Salome in the festival performance given in Munich a few days ago, was an extraordinary success. In the Münchener Zeitung we read: "There is no doubt that Edyth Walker is today the greatest Salome on the international stage. By Strauss himself she has been let into the secrets of that drama, and she has now mastered, with the highest dramatic spirit and musical art, every intensity of the lovesick siren, from the self abandoned humility to the dumb hate as she was rejected, from Herod's self gratification and the smallest gesticulation in conformity with the musical working out of the dance to the last perception of the bitterness of love. When one thinks that she sings almost every note and drains all the musical value of her role and so thoroughly gives the lie to the so called voice murdering or orchestral operatic work, it must be said that she is, in her art, truly perfect and unparalleled."—Hamburger Fremdenblatt.

The name of Edyth Walker stands today among the greatest of international singers of both Old and New World fame. Her voice is the finest that one can hear today. The pure inexhaustible fulness and beauty of this organ is as astonishing as the splendid range which stretches with ease from alto to soprano. From her activity on the stage in Wien and Hamburg this artist is already valued as a dramatic singer, and rightly, for even in lieder she remains the dramatic heroine. Her wonderfully full and perfectly balanced middle register and magnificent depth rang pure in the lyric songs, and her exquisite technic enchanted and held one the whole evening. In the more pathetic songs, such as Schubert's "Allmacht," in Brecher's "Arbeitsmann," and Richard Strauss' "Liebeshymnus," the glorious brilliance of her voice, the sustained breath, her splendid execution of the soft and loud notes and her physically powerful execution formed an ever to be remembered picture.—Leipziger Neueste Nachrichten. (Advertisement.)

Fourth of July in Dixie.

"The celebration of Independence Day in the South is much less noisy than in the North," writes Ernest Gamble, the concert bass, who is touring the Southern States with his concert party this summer. Mr. Gamble continues:

"The 'Fourth' in Dixie is a very peaceful affair ordinarily, and the customary ear-splitting din of cannon crackers, pinwheels and fireworks is absent. At the time of the Civil War this form of celebration was transferred to Christmas, and ever since the young Southerner shows his patriotism at Christmas time by 'firin' shootin' crackers.'

"While in Macon, Ga., eating my breakfast the morning of the 'Fourth,' I had just remarked to my company how re tful and quiet it was, when just outside I heard four sharp revolver shots. I thought this was simply the belated beginning of celebration and gave the matter no further thought until, upon strolling outside after breakfast, I found a man shot dead on the pavement."

Mr. Gamble is of the opinion that Dixie has its own unique methods of celebration. In Troy, Ala., he saw a monument erected in honor of John Wilkes Booth and an inscription in praise of his assassination of President Lincoln.

Emma A. Dambmann at Work and Play.

Emma A. Dambmann has entertained relatives in her bungalow at Musicolony, R. I. August 1 she goes to Watch Hill, Mr. Friedmann (her husband, the well known New York attorney) joining her there for a month. She contemplates organizing a choral club on her return to the metropolis. Her pupil, Getrtrude Gugler, will have important understudy roles with the Aborn Company, which is now rehearsing "Romeo and Juliet." Miss Cappelano is singing in concerts in Albany, Mt. Vernon and elsewhere; previous to this she had successful appearances with the Aborn Opera Company. Elizabeth Schuster sang recently at a wedding celebration of her sister at the Wook Club.

EMMA DAMBMANN DIVING.

Mme. Dambmann is an expert swimmer; the accompanying picture shows her about to dive from the raft in the lake at Musicolony.

Alberto JONAS
Jenaer St. 29, Berlin, W.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
KUFSTEINER, ST. 6 BERLIN W., GERMANY

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 8

VICTOR HEINZE Pianist and Teacher
Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE
FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

Summer Class for the Leschetizky Method under the instruction of Mrs. Potter-Frissell well known piano pedagogue, in Neu Schandau (Ostrau Plain), famous summer resort in charming Villa Colony, in grandest part of Saxon Switzerland. (Mountain Air), Address, until July 1st, Eisenstuckstr. 16, Pt., Dresden, A. After July 1st, Villa 17 Neu Schandau, Saxon Switzerland, Germany.

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent. For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

RUDOLF BERGER
FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

Munro Will Study in Italy.

Harry Munro, the young American baritone, known in New York City as a vocal teacher who can produce convincing results, has gone to Milan, where he expects to spend the next year or so in operatic coaching with Signor Quirole, the husband and teacher of the famous Italian soprano, Agostinelli.

Many of Mr. Munro's former pupils are now connected with leading operatic companies in North and South America and his teaching experiences here augur well for his splendid musicianship and clear and sane knowledge of vocal rudiments.

Whether it is Mr. Munro's intentions to enter the operatic field himself later on is not known at this time, but should such be the case, a splendid career should await him in consideration of the many important artistic assets, of which he is already in possession.

Morristown to Have Many Soloists Next Season

The coming musical season in Morristown, N. J., promises to be even more interesting than that of 1913-1914, in so far that a greater number of celebrated artists will be presented. All of this is due to the efforts of Claude Warford, tenor and teacher of New York, who is director of a music school there. Under the auspices of his school the following artists will appear: Harold Bauer and Mme. Hudson-Alexander; Evan Williams and Florence Mulford-Hunt; Beatrice Harrison and Reinald Werrenrath; Efram Zimbalist and Florence Hinkle.

Vida Llewellyn in the Giant Mountains.

The accompanying snapshot of Vida Llewellyn shows the gifted young American pianist at the top of the old uin, Burg Kynast, in the Giant Mountains, which she recently visited.

VIDA LLEWELLYN IN THE GIANT MOUNTAINS, AT BURG KYNAST.

MME. METZGER WITH A DEER WHICH SHE HAD SHOT JUST BEFORE THE SNAPSHOT WAS TAKEN.

OTTILIE METZGER ON A HUNTING TRIP.
Mme. Metzger is at the wheel and her husband, Theodor Lattermann, is standing in front of the auto. Seated on the step is Mme. Metzger's brother.

A Margaret Shirley Appreciation.

The Margaret Shirley concert in Xenia Tuesday night for the benefit of the Methodist Church was, without doubt, the most notable musical event ever in the county.

Miss Shirley's appearance in her own home town was surely an ovation. The auditorium was crowded to capacity, not only with her home people, who have known and loved her since childhood, but by many who motored from nearby towns.

The pleasing and well chosen program was made up of arias, songs and ballads.

Her first aria, "Deh vieni non tardar," from Mozart's "Nozze di Figaro," showed to what a degree she has mastered the art of bel canto, while her second aria, "Mon cœur s'ouvre a ta voix," proved her capable of more dramatic interpretation and expression.

That it is a voice of great sweetness and flexibility was shown in Moir's "When Celia Sings," which, with "Lenz," by Hildach, were probably the most effective of her group of songs.

But her hearers were particularly delighted and touched by her encores, the well loved old time ballads, "Kathleen Mavourneen" and the "Keys of Heaven."

Miss Shirley received many beautiful floral tributes, and at the close of the program the Rev. McCracken, pastor of the Methodist Church, speaking for his people, expressed their gratitude and appreciation in a few touching remarks, and presented to her exquisite pink roses, which he likened to her in their beauty, purity and simplicity.—The Southern Illinois Record. (Advertisement.)

Busy Summer for Gambles.

Pilot Charles Gamble announces the following engagements for the Ernest Gamble Concert Party for the present summer: Johnston, S. C., July 9; Batesburg, S. C., July 10; Union, S. C., July 11; Shelby, S. C., July 12; Hickory, N. C., July 13; Asheville, N. C., July 15; Tuscaloosa, Ala., July 16; Hattiesburg, Miss., July 18; Crystal Springs, Miss., July 20; Covington, Tenn., July 22; Fulton, Ky., July 23; Rock Hill, N. C., July 25; Charlottesville, Va., July 28; Somerset, Pa., July 30; Columbus, Ind., August 2, 3; Carroll, Iowa, August 6; York, Neb., August 9; Rockville, Ind., August 12; Culver, Ind., August 14; McConnellsville, Ohio, August 16, 17; Terra Alta, W. Va., August 18; Aledo, Ill., August 20; Battle Creek, Mich., August 22; King City, Mo., August 27, 28. The Gamble Party has a fine list of engagements for next season extending to the Pacific Coast and through the South.

California Glee Club in Europe.

The Glee Club of the University of California, a chorus of about thirty young Americans, has been making a brief tour of Europe, partly for pleasure and partly for concertizing purposes. The club's itinerary included London, Berlin, Dresden, Luzerne, Venice, Milan and Paris. The director is Clinton R. Morse, of the class of '96. In great music centers like Berlin and Paris the singing of the young men made an excellent impression.

A Marie Morrisey Incident.

As an indication of her innate fondness for music, Marie Morrisey has been told, that when a small girl she said one day: "Mother, if I make my bed, then give the collie a walk, please may I come in and practise?" Whether or not the incident is well authenticated, it is quite in keeping with the industry and perseverance which have brought the contralto to her present high artistic standing.

Ottilie Metzger Goes Hunting.

The accompanying snapshots show Ottilie Metzger, the famous contralto, on a hunting trip, accompanied by her husband, Theodor Lattermann, her brother, and a couple of friends.

WALTER PETZET.

THE XAVER SCHARWENKA

Master School of Piano Playing and Teachers' Seminary

Faculty: Director, Prof. Xaver Scharwenka, Court Pianist to the Emperor of Austria-Hungary; Assistant Director, Prof. Walter Petzet; Principal Assistants: Miss Martha Siebold, Miss Isolde Scharwenka.

THE MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING is in no way connected with the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory of Music, with which Prof. Xaver Scharwenka has severed his connection.

The new institution is a special school for pianoforte playing, and affords its pupils the opportunity to acquire a complete pianistic training for the concert stage, or to thoroughly equip themselves for the profession of piano instruction.

The first term begins September 1, 1914.

Any desired information, prospectus, etc., sent on application to

THE MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING
BLUMENTHALSTR. 17, BERLIN, W.

XAVER SCHARWENKA.

Walter Petzet, Pianist and Pedagogue.

The following biographical sketch of Walter Petzet, the distinguished pianist and pedagogue, who is to be assistant director of the new Scharwenka Master School of Piano Playing which has just been founded in Berlin, is from the German periodical, "Modern Art":

In spite of his short sojourn in Berlin, hardly a year, Prof. Walter Petzet has won for himself a great field of work in the music loving city of the Emperor, thanks to his reputation as an eminent pianist and an exceptionally gifted pedagogue.

The artist was born October 10, 1866, in Breslau, the son of Dr. Christian Petzet and his wife, Valesca, nee Krause. Herr Petzet, Sr., later became the editor in chief of the Munich Allgemeine Zeitung. The boy was educated in a gymnasium of his native city, later studying at Augsburg. His decided talent for music was early evidenced and he was therefore sent at the age of sixteen to the Royal Academy of Music at Munich. Here Prof. Gichrl became his piano teacher, Geheimrat Prof. Dr. von Rheinberger introduced him into the secrets of counterpoint and composition, while Prof. L. Abel taught him score reading and conducting and Geheimrat Prof. Dr. von Riehl gave lectures on musical history. Besides these musical studies Petzet did not neglect his scientific education and heard at the Munich University lectures on the history of culture and literature, as well as on esthetics. After having graduated in 1886 with honors, the young pianist went in 1887 to Frankfort on the Main to take a special course under Dr. Hans von Bülow.

WALTER PETZET.

In the fall of the same year Petzet removed to America and accepted a position as piano teacher in Minneapolis, Minn. After three years there he became for a year a member of the faculty of the Chicago Musical College. He then accepted a call from Prof. Xaver Scharwenka, who had founded a conservatory in New York City. In 1896 he returned to Europe, appeared in several Kaim concerts in Munich and afterward accepted an engagement as piano teacher and solo pianist of the Musik Institute at Helsingfors, Finland. There he remained two years, afterward settling for a considerable period in Karlsruhe, Baden. During the twelve years of his stay in the capital of Baden as first teacher of the Grand Ducal Conservatory of Music, he not only gained the reputation of being an excellent pedagogue, but firmly established his fame as an eminent interpreter of the classics. In the course of those years at Karlsruhe he played twice all the thirty-two Beethoven sonatas in a series of nine evenings and cultivated with special interest and understanding the chamber music works of Brahms, which he performed together with great celebrities. In acknowledgment of his successful efforts the Grand Duke of Baden gave him the title of professor. It was with great regret that his many pupils and admirers saw him leave Karlsruhe, when he accepted an honorable call as leader of the piano classes at the Grand Ducal Music School of Weimar. Here also he gained in a short time the heart of all music lovers and repeated his Beethoven cycle with great success. The Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar made him a knight of the Order of the White Falcon and after one of the court concerts he was honored by being sent beautifully framed photographs of the Grand Duke and Duchess with original signatures. The Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha decorated him with the medal for Art and Science.

The artist was married in 1903 to Elizabeth Becker, daughter of Geheimer Hofrat Becker, the late chief of the Secret Cabinet and the Court Theatre at Coburg. He is the father of two splendid children, a boy and a girl. We hope and wish that he will remain permanently in Berlin. While his first love is classical music, he also has full sympathy with sound progress, but he hates hypermodern monstrosities. This standpoint he expresses in a pregnant way in his own creations, of which may be mentioned many compositions for piano and for voice, two symphonic poems and two piano concertos. Last year Prof. Petzet re-edited the well known "Forty Daily Exercises," by Czerny, and revised them with German and English annotations.

Excerpts from two letters written to Walter Petzet:

From Prof. Xaver Scharwenka:

I do not want to make you conceited, and therefore avoid all superlatives which were necessary to praise your performance. Your execution was perfect technically and musically on a height corresponding throughout to my intentions. It was a great pleasure to me.

From Prof. Max Pauer:

With great pleasure I recall your splendid performance of Scharwenka's fourth concerto. You showed yourself a first class interpreter of this valuable and difficult piece, and it is to be hoped that you will play it very often, in order that the musical public may know what you are as a pianist.

Leps Closes Enthusiastic Sixth Season.

Wassili Leps, who with his orchestra appeared at Willow Grove Park, Philadelphia, Pa., from July 5 to July 18, has again convinced both the general public and those more directly interested, of his innate ability as conductor and leader. This is Mr. Leps' sixth season at Willow Grove and by far one of the most interesting and successful.

Mr. Leps introduced many excerpts from grand opera in English, which drew large and enthusiastic crowds. Often reserved seats were entirely sold out and on two days as many as 125,000 people were in attendance.

Tuesday, July 7, enough of "Carmen" to fill an hour was given.

July 8, "Aida," with the assistance of the chorus of the Operatic Society of Philadelphia was listened to by a record Wednesday evening crowd.

"Lucia," on July 9, received such a good interpretation that Mr. Leps received a number of requests to repeat it.

Friday, July 10, was devoted to Wagner programs, and the audience resembled a Sunday one in size.

The Saturday, July 11, crowd was enthusiastic over the two-hour excerpt from "Martha."

"Faust" was given Monday, July 13.

"Easter," by Mr. Leps, was the Wednesday evening, July 15, attraction. This is a new composition by this talented conductor, and is written for soprano solo and chorus, with orchestral accompaniment. It was received with great enthusiasm. An aria by Celeste D. Hekscher, from the opera, "The Flight of Time," followed by an encore by the same composer, "Music of Hungary," both written for soprano solo and orchestra, was also an attractive feature of this evening's program.

WASSILI LEPS IN HIS STUDIO.

Thursday evening, July 16, Henri Scott, bass, of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, sang the "Song of the Drum Major," from Thomas' "Le Cid."

Selections from the "Gypsy Baron," Strauss, and a Wagner program, at which Mr. Scott sang Wotan's "Farewell," from "Die Walküre," were the features.

"Faust" and "The Bohemian Girl" concluded the programs, Saturday, July 18.

The orchestral parts have created as much interest and enthusiasm as ever, and the park is more than ever a resort, at which the masses are taught to appreciate good music.

These are the soloists who appeared with Mr. Leps: Henri Scott, basso of the Chicago Opera Company; Gertrude Hutcheson, coloratura soprano; Paul Volkmann, tenor; Marie Nassau, Helen McNamee Bentz, Kathryn McGinley, Miss M. F. Lewis, sopranos; Marie Langston-List and Mabelle Addison, contraltos; E. V. Coffrain, Franklin L. Wood and Horace Hood, baritones; Frank Conly, bass.

From Willow Grove, Mr. Leps will go to Pittsburgh and Atlantic City.

Alice Nielsen's Summer Tour.

Alice Nielsen sends the MUSICAL COURIER complimentary copies of her latest photographs, and encloses with them the information that she is to make a tour of the

Photo by Victor Georg, Chicago.
ALICE NIELSEN.

West during the month of August and that the last of the same month she is to sing at three concerts at Asbury Park, August 25, 27 and 29.

It had already been announced that Miss Nielsen would remain in America throughout the summer as she had a number of engagements in various Chautauquas and summer resorts. After her phenomenal success at the North Shore Festival, Chicago, the end of May, and in Western recitals, it might have been thought that she would be entitled to a complete rest during the summer, but her engagements were so numerous that she has found it impossible to give herself even a short period of complete leisure.

Alberto Jonas Entertains Carreno.

Alberto Jonas, the celebrated Spanish pianist, recently gave a reception at his home in Berlin, which was attended by a large number of pianists, including Teresa Carreño and six young artists who are assisting Jonas in his work —Charlotte von Sibinsky, Frau Hofmann-Behrendt, Lois Brown, Leslie Loth and Cleveland Bohnet.

Hudson-Alexander Dates.

Caroline Hudson-Alexander will give a recital in Cleveland, Ohio, on October 22, at the Hotel Statler. The soprano formerly lived in Cleveland, and has a great many friends there. Mme. Hudson-Alexander will give likewise a New York recital on October 29 in Aeolian Hall.

"Your daughter plays some very robust pieces."

"She's got a beau in the parlor," growled Pa Wombat, "and that loud music is to drown the sound of her mother washing the dishes."—Pittsburgh Post.

NORAH DREWETT
THE FAMOUS PIANIST
SEASON 1914-15
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

Urlus' Busy Season.

Jacques Urlus, the Wagnerian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who succeeded in getting released from his Leipsic contract so that he could devote more time to singing in America, had one of the longest seasons of any artist. His last appearance at his home opera house was July 18, when he appeared in "Aida" and "Otello."

The Leipsic Tageblatt says in a criticism of July 10:

Last night's performance was an exceptionally fine one. One of the most remarkable impersonations was Radames, sung by Jaques Urlus, which created almost a sensation.

This same paper states in another issue of July 13 about his "Othello."

In yesterday's performance the whole interest was concentrated mostly on Othello himself. Jaques Urlus, who appeared in the title role, gave the most excellent impersonation of the character. No matter what contrasts this artist has to find he will always succeed in giving the right tone in music and diction. He excelled himself in the lyric moment and fiery passion. Urlus' wonderful singing was greatly supported by the orchestra under the direction of Otto Lohse.

Mr. Urlus will leave for his country home in Holland right after the close of his Leipsic engagements and will remain in Norwyk on the Sea, where he owns a beautiful villa, and will study some new roles and especially some new English songs. He is working also to perfect his English diction.

He will arrive in New York November 1, and will appear in concert before the opening of the Metropolitan Opera season.

A Comment for Margaret Shirley.

THE SINGIN' BEE.

There ain't much news, I reckon, Jim,
An' mostly what there is is slim,
Fer talkin' on—but no, I jing!
I plum forgot the very thing
I started in to tell you 'bout.
Last Tuesday night, er there about,
We had a regular singin' bee—
Least ways, 'at's how it seemed to me.

You see us folks a livin' here
Has tried right hard fer more'n a year
To clear the church debt so's we could Feel middlin' certain where we stood,
Er set in seats, wuz all our own—
But luck, somehow, left us alone—
'Twould fizz in spots but wouldn't foam
'Til Margy Shirley cum back home.

You knowed her, Jim, 'at little miss
The sunbeams always fought to kiss,
When she went rompin' 'round knee high,
With tossin' locks an' laughin' eye.
Uv course you knowed her—same as me,
In them ol' days 'at used to be—
Before Time's wrinkles started in
To lodgin' on our cheek and chin.

It seems she'd been, for quite a spell,
'Way up in York State, an' they tell
As how she made the folks there sigh,
Er smile a bit er laugh, er cry;
An' I believe it's gospel, too,
Becuz her singin' goes plum through
An' through a feller, same as what
The angels does—as like as not.

Well, when she saw we's out of luck,
She toed the scratch, she did, an' tuck
Right holt at onct, an' pulled us through
As sure as I'm a writin' you—
She gave some sort uv singin' bee—
I told you uv (they're new to me)—
An' with the dollars she tuck in,
She made the ol' church free agin.

I wish 'at you had heard her sing—
Cuz you'd feel proud as anything
To think you knowed her when she wuz
A little girl, I know, becuz
She's just the same, Jim, only she Has fixt her mind up so's to be
As swift an' clear as is her heart,
Fer climin' hills—some folks call art.

There ain't no use fer me to try
To tell you all about her, why
It makes my ol' heart jump to be
A writin' 'bout her—but I'm free
To tell you right plain out and out,
Without the sprinkle uv a doubt,
The Lord ain't heard a single fuss
Since Margy cum back home to us.

CLYDE ALLISON WRIGHT.

Carlyle, Ill.

—From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Wednesday, July 8, 1914.

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

JEZZY DUFAU COLORATURA SOPRANO Concert Recital
CHICAGO-PHILADELPHIA GRAND OPERA COMPANY

VAN YORX THEO. ——— Tenor
Will teach throughout the Summer
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

BISPHAM
For Terms and dates Address
All Communications to Private Address
44 West 44th Street, New York

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
Management:
"Perfection—Thy name is Borwick."—London World.
WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
Steinway Piano Used

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera
Management:
THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 West 34th Street, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

EDYTH WALKER

(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)

Dramatic Soprano

Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.

Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

The Sensation of the Year

CARL
FLESCH

The Great Hungarian Violinist

Second American Tour
January and February, 1915

Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE

SOPRANO

Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.

"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914

American Tour, March-May, 1915

OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English

Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

EFREM
ZIMBALIST
Celebrated Violinist

— Will return to —
AMERICA
Season 1914-1915

For Terms and Dates available
Apply
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th St., New York

STEINWAY PIANO

Jenny Dufau's Coming American Tour.

JENNY DUFAU.

On her forthcoming American concert tour Jenny Dufau, the coloratura soprano of the Chicago and Boston Opera Companies, will have the able assistance of Charles Lurvey, the young pianist who recently added so much to the success of the George Hamlin tours. During Miss Dufau's infrequent concert appearances while singing her first season with Chicago Opera Company, she had as her accompanist Charles Lurvey, and it is a new reunion of two artists whose work is described as "perfect unity." "Mr. Lurvey is by far the best accompanist I have ever had," said Miss Dufau recently. "He is so quick to catch every inflection and every passing mood. Honestly, I would rather sing two full programs in succession with Lurvey at the piano than to sing one group of songs with the average accompanist—and I have had some good ones."

Contralto and Soprano in Happy Mood.

Nevada van der Veer, the contralto, and Miss Parks, soprano, were caught by the camera on the bathing beach at Chautauqua, N. Y. Both appear to be enjoying their vacation to the utmost.

SOPRANO AND CONTRALTO ON BATHING BEACH AT CHAUTAUQUA.

Pilzer Is Not Idle.

Summer time does not mean "loafing time" for Maximilian Pilzer, the talented young violinist, whom New York is proud to claim for its own, for Mr. Pilzer is already booked for a number of appearances during the warm weather. On July 25, he was heard with his usual success at the auditorium at Ocean Grove, N. J. The directors of the music festival at Round Lake N. J., were delighted and gratified when they learned that Mr. Pilzer was free to accept an engagement with them for August 7 and 8. Two Connecticut towns will hear the strains of Mr. Pilzer's violin on August 28 and 29, when he will appear at Litchfield and Washington respectively. The week of September 1, he will appear at the exposition in Pittsburgh, Pa. Between stretches Mr. Pilzer will rest—i. e., he calls it "resting," although he is doing a lot of "hard work" studying and practising on his beloved instrument.

Alfred Quinn in Europe.

Alfred Quinn, the MUSICAL COURIER correspondent for Oklahoma and one of the best known and most successful piano teachers in that section of the country, has been traveling for some weeks past in Germany, visiting all the principal music centers.

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist

ALBERT SPALDING

Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST
Steinway Piano

THOMAS J. KELLY

Conductor Mendelssohn Choir.
VOCAL COACH
Lecture Recitals with Mrs. Kelly.
209 SOUTH 35th AVE., OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO

Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO
SAPIO

Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.

VOCAL STUDIO . 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

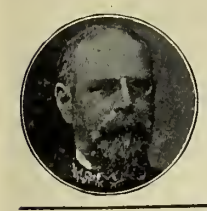
NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC

128-130 East 58th Street

CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE

The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.

CATALOG ON APPLICATION



ARTHUR
SHATTUCK

The Distinguished American
PIANIST

In America Season 1914-15

Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

Steinway Piano Used

SOUSA AND HIS BAND

"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"

Office: 1 West 34th Street

Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH

CONCERT VIOLINIST

Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue. New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS

Hans Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory and is assisted by an able corps of teachers. Bandstaen Netzorg has also been added to the Conservatory faculty. For catalog address

MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO

Concert–Recital–Oratorio

Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN

America's Violinist

Season 1914-1915 Now Booking

Address:
THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York
Phone Murray Hill, 2239

JAZE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER

Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARY DENNISON GAILEY

VIOLINIST

Address, Russell Bridges, Empire Life Bldg., Atlanta, Ga

Yolanda MERÖ Hungarian Pianist

STEINWAY PIANO USED

Under the exclusive management of CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, New York City

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist

SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City

Baldwin Piano Used

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano

SARA HEINEMAN

Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume

In Europe During Summer

Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Baroness Evans

Von KLENNER

America's Representative of the GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD

Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914. Tradition. Languages. Repertoire. Diction. Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY

of NEW YORK

1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915

JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor

SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.

TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South

Prospectus on application to

FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

Marcella Craft's Munich Farewell.

On June 26 Marcella Craft sang her farewell performance at the Royal Opera House in Munich, Bavaria, ending an engagement of four years, during which she has made herself a prime favorite not only in Munich, but throughout Germany, and which she refused to renew because of her desire to return to America and to be heard once more in her native country. The role in which she effected her farewell was that of Butterfly, one which she has made peculiarly her own. The house was packed and tremendously responsive. Miss Craft was in splendid voice and inspired by the warmth of the audience fairly outdid herself both in singing and acting. The management waived the rule of "no flowers on the stage," and in the second act the Japanese living-room was filled with the most gorgeous flowers. Miss Craft had more than ten recalls at the end. The audience seemed as if it could not let her go. A very large crowd waited for her at the stage door, and when at last she came out the air was rent with shouts of "Bravo! Aufwiedersehen! Good luck!" The press gave her the most glowing notices the following day.

MARCELLA CRAFT.

There can be no doubt in Miss Craft's mind after this manifestation as to the genuine heartiness of the love of the people of Munich for her and the security of the position which she has won for herself by her splendid and conscientious work.

Birdice Blye in Europe.

Birdice Blye, since her departure for Europe early in the spring, has visited Brussels, Antwerp, Strassburg, Geneva, Lake Como, Milan, Florence, Rome and Venice. She has been much entertained and has met many prominent musical and literary people. Miss Blye spent three weeks in Florence and particularly enjoyed her visit at the beautiful home of Signor and Signora Braggiotti. Signora Braggiotti is the daughter of Sebastian Schlesinger, the music publisher. The Princess Rouspoli was a guest at the same time.

BIRDICE BLYE IN THE GARDENS OF THE VILLA BORGHESE IN ROME.

Miss Blye will attend the musical festivals in Germany and will spend some time in Paris.

The

Knabe

The World's Best

Piano

was the preference of your ancestors and remains today the choice of discriminating piano purchasers throughout the world. Its preeminence is everywhere acknowledged. The greatest pianists and composers of the day as well as the foremost families of the world refer with pride to the possession of a Knabe.

KNABE PLAYER-PIANOS

contain every worthy type of player mechanism—every form of expression control. In a word, they leave nothing to be desired.

Representatives throughout the world. Catalogs and information forwarded upon request. New York prices universal, with freight and expenses added to outside points.

THE KNABE

The World's Best Piano

"The Smile That Won't Come Off."

From the fact that the radiant Klotz smile is much in evidence in the accompanying snapshot, one may safely conclude that the popular young songstress is thoroughly enjoying her summer on the beach at Belmar, N. J., where she will stay at the Melrose Inn, until after Labor Day.

Miss Klotz is a strenuous devotee of water sports and an expert swimmer and canoeist, so her summer is sure to lay up a store of health to prepare her for the many engagements booked for next season.

MAUDE KLOTZ ON THE BEACH AT BELMAR, N. J.

Seagle Due in October.

Oscar Seagle will arrive in America next October and begin his concert tour in Texas. As Mr. Seagle resided for some time in the South, he has many admirers in that section. The baritone's New York recital is scheduled for Thursday afternoon, November 12, in Carnegie Hall. One of Mr. Seagle's marked successes last season was his appearance in Buffalo, where the critics were especially commendatory. "He completely captivated his audience," said the Commercial. The Courier declared he won instant success; while the Express stated: "He has that wonderfully finished art of interpretation which comes out of the French school." "Mr. Seagle," said the Enquirer, "sings not only with joyous abandon but with finish and splendid command of his vocalism."

Mr. Seagle's tour will again be under the management of Loudon Charlton.

Richardson Will Locate in New York.

Martin Richardson, who has been studying in Italy for several years, has returned to New York, where he intends taking up his work as an operatic and concert tenor.

While in Italy, Mr. Richardson had exceptional success in concerts and made a very fine debut in opera at Florence last May, singing the leading tenor role of Ernesto in "Don Pasquale."

In June, he went to London where he sang at three private musicales and was received with much applause.

While in Paris he was offered a contract by Henry Russell of the Boston Opera Company and in London one by Andreas Dippel, which he is considering.

Mr. Richardson studied with the late Vincenzio Lombardi in Florence and had every assurance from critics in Italy that he would make a successful career. He leaves for a two weeks' visit with his family in Minnesota, then returns to New York.

The Stern Conservatory Annual Report.

The Stern Conservatory, of Berlin, the largest school of music in Germany, brought its sixty-fourth school year to a close with a series of eighteen public pupils' concerts given in the Philharmonic and Beethoven Hall. In five of these concerts the school orchestra assisted. The Stern Conservatory was frequented the past year by 1,334 pupils from all parts of the world, including the United States, Turkey, Madevia, Mexico, Chile, Argentine, Cape Town, India, China, Japan and Australia, as well as from all the principal European countries.

One hundred and forty-six teachers taught at the institution during the year. Aside from the public concerts mentioned above, there were thirty-eight practice concerts given in the hall of the conservatory and four public performances by the operatic school of the conservatory, given in the Nollendorf Theatre; further, two festival concerts, given by the faculty in honor of the Emperor's birthday. All told, there were no less than eighty-eight public performances. A large number of pupils of the school have received engagements on operatic stages. In the seminary connected with the conservatory there were thirty-six pupils studying for the profession of teaching. Lectures on the history of music and other subjects connected with the science of music were given every week and were well attended.

The Ibach Prize, consisting of an Ibach grand piano, was awarded this year to Walter Michel, of Berlin, a pupil of the class of Georg Bertram. The Ibach prize is presented to the best piano pupil of the school every year.

Among the new teachers engaged by Director Gustav Hollaender for the coming school year, which opens September 1, are Alexander Heinemann and Charlotte Huhn, both vocal.

Noted Artists on Music League List.

Howard E. Potter, whose managerial abilities were thoroughly demonstrated before he conducted his own concert bureau, when he served as traveling manager for the Melba, the Kubelik, the Sembrich and other tours of distinguished artists, has just returned from a six weeks' stay in Europe. Mr. Potter is now the business representative for the recently organized Music League of America, whose officers and directors include many of the most prominent and influential persons in the country.

Mr. Potter has transferred to the Music League all the artists with whom he had personal contracts, and he will administer their affairs for the League which has placed them on its list as available for engagements.

Prominent among these distinguished musicians are Ottilie Metzger, the prima donna contralto of the Hamburg Opera, who has secured a temporary release, and who will devote the month of February, 1915, to oratorio and song recital in this country.

Theodor Lattermann, leading bass-baritone of the Hamburg Opera, has likewise secured a brief release and is to make his first appearance in New York City during February next. Arrangements are now being made by Mr. Potter for a joint recital of both Mme. Metzger and Mr. Lattermann.

Anita Rio, the American prima donna soprano, whose endeavors during the past six years have been wholly confined to the leading opera houses of Europe, will also be booked for concert and oratorio engagements by Mr. Potter through the Music League of America.

"She doesn't open her mouth wide enough when she sings."

"She learned to sing in a flat."

"What has that to do with it?"

"She didn't have room to open her mouth."—Houston Post.

Frank Gittelson's London Success.

Frank Gittelson, the noted American violinist, gave a recital in Bechstein Hall, London, on May 23, 1914, winning for himself the following critics:

The young violinist who played at Bechstein Hall on Saturday afternoon had, we think, been heard only once before in London, and that was at a recent Sunday afternoon concert at the Albert Hall. His recital gave a much better opportunity of appreciating his powers. He played Franck's sonata with Charlton Keith, Bach's chaconne alone, and some other solos with piano accompaniment.

Technically, his performance ranked high and his powers of musical expression only seemed less than his technical ability because his judgment is not yet fully formed. He showed exuberance and enthusiasm for his music and the wealth of tone, variety of color and sureness of phrasing bore remarkable evidence of his ability.—Times, May 25, 1914.

Prior to Saturday Frank Gittelson's only appearance in London had been at Mme. Melba's recent concert at Albert Hall, and, though his playing then made a fine impression, it is also, of course, hardly to be expected that a violinist should be able to show of what he is really capable on such an occasion or in so vast a building. At his recital at the Bechstein Hall on Saturday afternoon he had better oportunities, and he availed himself of them to the full. A pupil of Prof. Carl Flesch, he has been trained in a good school, and he allies a thoroughly sound technic with much natural ability.

His tone was of great purity and beauty, his part playing was admirably clear. In Cesar Franck's sonata, where liberties might be permitted up to a certain point, he seemed less inclined to take them, and the performance, in which he was associated with Charlton Keith, while quite straightforward, was one of great dignity and musical beauty.—Telegraph, May 25, 1914.

FRANK GITTELSON.

A very interesting violin recital was given at Bechstein Hall on Saturday afternoon by Frank Gittelson, an artist very reserved in expression, but still strongly capable of allowing one to feel that there is even more in his performance than any careless recognition of its merits might presume. His reticent treatment of the Cesar Franck's sonata was only a superficial quality. Deep down his imagination was at work, and the realization of the work was exactly in the spirit that the Belgian master might have conceived. —Pall Mall Gazette, May 25, 1914.

A clever new violinist, Frank Gittelson, was heard at Bechstein Hall on Saturday afternoon. He has a fine warm tone and excellent technic, and his playing reveals a good deal of poetic feeling and temperament. There was much to be admired in his playing, with Charlton Keith at the piano, of the Cesar Franck sonata of which a romantic and finished rendering was given. In the Bach chaconne and Saint-Saëns' "Rondo Capriccioso," Mr. Gittelson further showed his gifts to great advantage.—Daily Chronicle, May 25, 1914.

A previous hearing at the Royal Albert Hall on the occasion of Mme. Melba's recent Sunday concert had prepared those who then heard him for thoughtful and refined violin playing by Frank Gittelson at his first recital on Saturday afternoon in Bechstein Hall. A program of an everyday character may form, by reason of its familiarity, a more exacting test than one out of the ordinary groove. The Cesar Franck's sonata for violin and piano, Bach "Chaconne," and Saint-Saëns' "Rondo Capriccioso" were the chief features on Saturday. They fell well within the young violinist's resources. He has a full and at the same time persuasive tone, and, on the whole, an excellent idea of the meaning of interpretation. With the sympathetic cooperation of Charlton Keith as pianist, the playing of the sonata was worthy of the work.

It will be interesting to hear Mr. Gittelson in a less conventional program.—Morning Post, May 25, 1914.

At Bechstein Hall Frank Gittelson, the young American violinist, gave his first London recital. He is a good artist, produces a full tone, phrases clearly, and plays sympathetically. Moreover, he seems to enjoy the music he interprets. Such were the characteristics of his rendering of a sonata by Cesar Franck, Bach's "Chaconne" and Saint-Saëns' "Rondo Capriccioso."—The Referee, May 24, 1914. (Advertisement.)

The Great Demand For
Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
For Recital and Concert
is shown by the fact that over fifty per cent of her entire season of 1914-1915 is now booked. For the remaining dates early application should be made to her sole managers
FOSTER & DAVID
500 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK CITY

MADAME ANITA RIO

CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO

after six years of operatic successes in Europe, will return to this country in September for Concert and Oratorio Engagements. :: :: :: :: ::

Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street, New York

HARRISON WALL JOHNSON
CONCERT PIANIST
Minneapolis

MME. MARIE RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

GEORGE
DOSTAL
DISTINGUISHED BOHEMIAN TENOR
First American Concert Tour Season 1914-1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, NEW YORK

MANUEL
QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH
VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

THE representative music and piano houses of the country are the Krakauer agents.
Those who purchase Krakauer pianos receive a double guarantee, the guarantee of the dealer whom they know personally or by reputation and the guarantee of the manufacturer who has been making the Krakauer pianos for nearly fifty years.
The prices are consistent with the quality.
Send for a beautiful art catalogue showing the handsome Krakauer styles.
KRAKAUER BROS., 195 Cypress Ave., NEW YORK

De Treville at the San Jose Mission.

Yvonne de Treville acknowledges that she takes the greatest delight in the "all out doors," and it is easy to realize what a fascination the charming rural aspects of the missions of the Southwest must have for her. The mission shown in the accompanying cut is that of San Jose at San Antonio, Texas, one of the structures which was built many years ago when that territory was under Mexican or Spanish dominion and the mission fathers were attempting to civilize the natives and used these massive buildings for forts as well as for religious exercises. It is also easy to realize how the fascination of the antique in these ancient places must attract an artist, who, like Mme. de Treville, has gained a complete mastery not only of modern art, but of the arts of former centuries as well, as shown in her famous costume recital, "Three Centuries of Prime Donne."

YVONNE DE TREVILLE WITH HER LITTLE CARETAKER OF SAN JOSE MISSION, IN SAN ANTONIO, TEX., WHERE MLLE. DE TREVILLE HAS BOOKED HER COSTUME RECITAL FOR DECEMBER 8, 1914.

A Von Ende Musicale.

A large audience heard the recital given by Mr. LaBonte at the Von Ende School of Music, New York, Wednesday, July 22, in that school's series of summer session concerts. Mr. LaBonte was assisted by Maurice Veder, a young Dutch violinist.

Mr. LaBonte gave an important group of Strauss, Brahms and Schumann songs and his exquisite art was highly appreciated. The Von Ende School of Music has added Mr. LaBonte to its voice department. The young singer has the gifts of an earnest musician and a serious artist.

On Friday, July 24, the Von Ende School held its second summer musicale and sociable for its many visiting students.

Hans van den Burg will present a few of his pupils in a piano recital on Wednesday, July 29, at four o'clock.

The program of Mr. LaBonte's recital follows:

Befreit ..... Richard Strauss
Morgen ..... Richard Strauss
Allerseelen ..... Richard Strauss
Ständchen ..... Johannes Brahms
Mr. La Bonte.
Sonata, op. 4 (adagio) ..... Mendelssohn
Mr. Veder.
Ein Schwan ..... Eduard Grieg
Im Kahne ..... Eduard Grieg
Ich liebe dich ..... Eduard Grieg
Die Lotus Blume ..... Schumann
Ich grolle nicht ..... Schumann
Mr. La Bonte.
Preislied from Meistersinger ..... Wagner
Mr. Veder.
Eleanore ..... Coleridge-Taylor
The Hour Glass ..... H. T. Burleigh

You may have an ideal accompanist in your home at all times.

One that never tires.

Plays to suit your temperament and with a touch and technique beyond compare.

The GULBRANSEN "Non-Visible Player of NO Effort" does all this for you.

Installed within your own piano without the slightest injury to tone or appearance of same.

We furnish you with a complete accompaniment repertoire, using special hand-played rolls, which may be recorded by any artist you may select.

Full information, special to musicians, upon request.

GULBRANSEN-DICKINSON COMPANY

505 FIFTH AVENUE,
AT 42nd STREET,
NEW YORK CITY

Factories New York :: Chicago

JULIA CULP'S RARE ART AND SPLENDID PERSONALITY

Mrs. Sawyer Gives Graphic Description of the Genius and Lovable Nature of the Great Dutch Singer.

Antonia Sawyer's most valuable asset is her unfailing enthusiasm. This successful manager has shown unusual judgment in the selection of her artists and it is, of course, largely due to this fact that her career has been so entirely free from failures. But it is also due, unquestionably, in no less a degree to her own artistic instinct, and to that boundless enthusiasm which she shows for artistic eminence and perfection. Being a musician herself, Mrs. Sawyer is unusually well able to judge of artistic excellence, and the enthusiasm which is felt in her every word when she speaks of her artists is not the enthusiasm of the business woman, but the enthusiasm of the keen lover of art. When, on rare occasions, she does permit herself to speak of her artists, she expresses herself in such terms that one cannot but feel the genuine feeling of devotion she has for the highest tenets of the musical art.

It is not very often that Mrs. Sawyer can be induced to talk about any of the artists she manages, but the other day she was approached by a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER upon the subject of Julia Culp, and asked, in the absence of this great artist, to describe her work and to give some suggestion of her opinions and likes and dislikes in matters of music.

"It will be impossible for me to do her justice," said Mrs. Sawyer; "whatever I say of her must be less than the truth. It is impossible to understand Mme. Culp's art even after having heard her many times in public, without having seen her at work. Her rehearsals with her accompanist are wonderful. It is, indeed, almost an indescribable pleasure to be present while she is preparing her programs. Her principal fondness in music is for the German school."

"Naturally, one might suppose that, since she is Dutch."

"No, it is not exactly that, either," said Mrs. Sawyer.

"You mean that it is less her nationality than her personality?"

"Her personality! Yes! Her beautiful, strong, serious personality! That is it; that is what makes her so dearly love the classics of the German school, and that is what makes her interpretation of these works so incomparably fine. That personality of hers possesses a wonderful depth and you realize it more and more when you see her at work. First of all, she studies her music carefully, thoroughly, away from the piano. She reads it and feels it. She immerses herself in the spirit of it until her feeling becomes identical, and certainly, I believe, just as powerful, as was the feeling of the composer when he was inspired to the writing of it. In this way she works out every detail."

"But, of course, she must have her rehearsals with the piano?"

"Yes, but even these rehearsals are more serious studies than are the rehearsals of some artists. Mme. Culp's study of a song is very far removed from being akin to a vocal exercise. Even in the rehearsals with her accompanist, if any point is in doubt, she will stop and silently think it over to herself, thinking over the meaning of the words and of the music and all their co-relationship. It is from this habit, undoubtedly, that her wonderful interpretative powers arise.

"In speaking of the German school," continued Mrs. Sawyer, "Mme. Culp has told me that it seems to her the most natural in its meaning. The relationship of the music and the poem in the classical works of that school appears to her to be perhaps more direct than in other schools. The Germanic instinct, the desire above all to bind the musical setting and the poetic thought with a tightly forged link so that they are indisseverable, has led the German composers, in the opinion of Mme. Culp, to a higher form of art than the composers of any other school.

"It is probable," added Mrs. Sawyer, "that it is also Mme. Culp's great genuineness and honesty of spirit that strengthens her love for the work of the masters of this school, which is, above all things, genuine; for the great Germans have never at any time consulted public opinion or public likes and dislikes, or the possibility of success or failure in the construction of their works, or even in the selection of poems for their songs. It has been, therefore, a question of the highest standards of their art, and it is, in Mme. Culp's interpretation of these songs, no less so. For the same reason, perhaps, Mme. Culp is also very fond of the best and most seriously inclined of English and American songs. Among the American composers, she is singing the works of MacDowell and Carpenter.

"But if you want me to talk about Julia Culp," continued Mrs. Sawyer, "I cannot speak of her art alone. She is such a quiet, womanly woman with such wonderful magnetism, that it is impossible to talk of her without these characteristics coming to the mind and demanding expression. They may affect her art."

"Of course, they do. An artist's characteristics are the very best of his or her art."

"Yes," said Mrs. Sawyer, "this is the very best of Julia Culp's art: her perfect womanliness is felt, when you know where to look for it, in everything that she does. She possesses an extremely kindly nature. This shows itself in her private life particularly when she feels that she has been hasty or impatient in any way. If that ever happens, and it is rare enough, she is sincere in her regret and does everything to prove to you that her impatience was only a passing mood. It would be impossible and unthinkable that this splendid woman could harbor vindictiveness or ill will. And the association of this with her art is, after all, not difficult to feel. She is so lovable that she is ever anxious to please. Indeed, every time she goes on the stage, her anxiety to do herself the fullest justice is as great as it must have been at her very first performance on any stage.

"She likes to have me," added Mrs. Sawyer, "stand at the door of the stage, and her first greeting to me always when she comes out, is the question, 'How was it: was it all right?'

"She speaks English very perfectly and writes it no less so. She always writes to me in English," continued Mrs. Sawyer, "but she has learned it more with a desire for knowledge than with any wish to use it in a social way.

"She devotes all her life to music and cares very little for social entertainments. It is difficult to induce her to go out much. She is exceedingly gracious and kind without the least evidence of affectation when she does meet people in a social way, but she has often said to me that she finds the demands of her art so great that if she is to do her duty by it, she cannot permit herself many social pleasures.

"She is a thorough musician and has arranged some old Italian arias which no one else has. These will be used by her this next season."

As to the modern French school, Mrs. Sawyer says that Mme. Culp cares little for it as a rule, although there are some exceptions and these she uses. She has made a careful study of the whole school and selected those which seemed to her of real value.

"Now, I think I have talked enough," said Mrs. Sawyer; "if you want to know more, wait until Mme. Culp gets to America. She will be here early in the fall and then perhaps you can get her to talk about herself."

The Way to Rest.

It is indeed strange how strenuously a man will "play," while he is on his "vacation," and how he will work, especially for sunburn. To Walter Anderson, the energetic concert manager, applies only the forepart of the above remark, although one might venture to say that he will have all the sunburn that is his due when he returns in the fall.

WALTER ANDERSON AT MATTAPOISETT, BUZZARD'S BAY, MASS.

Mr. Anderson who is "resting" at Mattapoisett, Mass., which is on Buzzard's Bay, is shown in the accompanying picture, apparently resting from his many labors, but appearances are deceitful and it would not be surprising to learn that he simply sat down to have his picture taken and then hurried away to catch some more big fish. Mr. Anderson says that he caught over fifty pounds of fish the other afternoon and as he has always been known to tell the truth, it may be assumed that this is not merely a "fish" story. That same eventful day, he swam across Mattapoisett harbor, a distance of one and a half miles, which only goes to bear out the statement that Mr. Anderson is "playing" very hard this summer.

Besides fishing and swimming, Mr. Anderson enjoys the fine boating and the lovely roads along which he motors.

The Junior Fleschs.

A snapshot is shown herewith of Carl Flesch, the violinist, and his three interesting kiddies, posing for a picture at the beach resort where the Flesch family is spending the summer. The famous artist looks happy, as well he might in the possession of three such charming children.

CARL FLESCH AND THE FLESCH TWINS, CARL AND FRITZ, NOT FORGETTING THE YOUNG DAUGHTER, ANNETTE.

Carl Friedberg, the Accomplished Artist.

Carl Friedberg, the German pianist, whom Americans will have an opportunity to hear next season, is recognized in Europe not alone as one of the leading pianists, but as a composer also. He has written a number of piano and chamber-music compositions and many beautiful songs, which have been used by prominent singers on their concert programs. Of late he has been conducting, and has substituted many times for some of the leading orchestra and chorus leaders, in various German cities like Frankfurt, Wiesbaden, Cologne, etc., but his time is too limited to devote much to either composing or conducting.

Friedberg is also a very accomplished linguist, and besides his own speaks four languages fluently. It took him just about four months to learn to converse in Italian and Spanish, while English and French are like his own mother tongue to him.

Friedberg began taking piano lessons when only four years of age, and shortly after that he met Anton Rubinstein, who heard the child play, and is said to have predicted a great future for him.

Everett Poses.

George Everett, the young American baritone, is enjoying the novel experience of posing for a portrait bust for one of the foremost sculptors in England. Paul Montford, with whom Mr. Everett is also studying. The bust is to be put in the Royal Academy of Arts.

Mr. Everett will leave England the end of July, for his home in Chicago.

"I'd like to rent your hall, please."

"What for?"

"Well, you see, we're organizing a fraternal society called the Sons of Moving Picture Veterans of the Mexican War."—Exchange.

KATHARINE
COODSON
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
KNABE PIANO

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG
Summer Course for Teachers, Amateurs and Professionals by these famous artists. TORONTO, CANADA.

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St., :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapolis, Minn.

The MEHAN Summer School for Teachers and Singers
July 7—Aug. 15. Appointments By Mail
Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 15
SUITE 70, CARNEGIE HALL, TEL. 5946 COLUMBUS

The Eminent Austrian Pianist
MME. MARIE VON UNSCHULD
Piano Recitals and Lectures on Technic by Motion Pictures
EUROPEAN CONCERT BUREAU, 1320 F St., Washington, D. C.

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
133 West 80th St. Tel. Schuyler 3786 New York City
Mr. Regneas will teach but 3 days weekly during July and August.
No interviews granted excepting by appointment.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

JOHN McCORMACK
CELEBRATED IRISH TENOR
In America Entire Season 1914-15
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Personal Management: CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

Maurice Aronson Studio Notes.

The distinguished Berlin pianist pedagogue, Maurice Aronson, his wife, the concert pianist, Vera Kaplun-Aronson, and their little daughter, Astrid, are summering at Bad Harzburg, where they occupy the Villa Schönfeld, Burgstrasse 15. Mr. and Mrs. Aronson have completed a most successful season of teaching and concertizing and have found the richest recognition in their respective activities. Mr. Aronson is accompanied by a number of his pupils, who are anxious to continue their studies during the summer, and by several teachers who avail themselves of the summer vacations to come to Europe and to profit by the instruction of this experienced pedagogue.

MAURICE ARONSON, VERA KAPLUN-ARONSON AND THEIR LITTLE DAUGHTER, ASTRID.
Photographed at Bad Harzburg.

Since a teacher's success is judged solely by the results of his instruction, it is most gratifying to state that some of Mr. Aronson's pupils have been heard during the past season with orchestra and in recital in Berlin, Vienna, Budapest, Constantinople, Halle, Bielitz, Zoetlingen, Hanover, Waldenburg, etc. To the preparation of concert repertoires and in the guidance of instructors, Mr. Aronson is enjoying an enviable reputation. Most gratifying is the loyalty of Mr. Aronson's pupils, who, after years of absence, return invariably to him for additional instruction and coaching.

On September 1, Mr. Aronson resumes his instruction at his Berlin studio, Bozener Strasse 8, where he may be addressed for any desired information.

Klibansky Pupils in Europe and America.

Artist pupils of Sergei Klibansky, both in Europe and America, are making steady advance in artistic careers. They are singing in church and concert in America and in opera in Europe. A partial record of the activities of five is as follows:

July 15, at "Sunnycrest," the Port Washington home of Ida Harris, of England, a prominent feature was the singing of Erich Lucas, pupil of Sergei Klibansky. He possesses a voice of marked dramatic quality and extensive range and completely won the audience with his pleasing personality and artistic singing. Mr. Lucas will continue study with Mr. Klibansky, preparatory to an operatic career, which seems assured.

G. A. Lehmann was engaged to sing the solo in the First Mennonite Church, in Philadelphia, Sunday, July 19.

Virginia Estill has been engaged as substitute in the Greene Avenue Baptist Church, Brooklyn.

Robert Henry Perkins, now at the Court Theatre at Darmstadt, Germany, achieved a great success as Adam in Weingartner's new opera, "Cain and Abel."

Marie Louise Wagner left July 21 for Europe to enter grand opera in Germany.

Hamlin in Cassel.

George Hamlin, the American tenor, goes to Cassel, Germany, August 1, where he will remain for some time, adding several German roles to his operatic repertoire.

Steinway

THE Steinway is the preferred piano of today. It is a mechanical and an artistic triumph—the master work of four generations of the world's greatest piano makers.

The fame of the Steinway has been won

through merit alone. Why not let this well-won fame decide your choice in the purchase of a piano?

The name of the Steinway dealer nearest you, together with illustrated literature, will be sent upon request.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
Subway Express Station at the Door.

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND THE ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Pegujar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1914.

No. 1792

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 7. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johuson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Andersou, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dohbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeh, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
LONDON—
Mrs. Evelyn Kaesmann,
5 Portland Place, Loudon W.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY—
Miss Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florianigasse 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tidehöhl, Arbatte, 34 Denesehny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
BRUSSELS, BELGIUM—
Luella Anderson, 52 rue de l'Ermitage.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatau 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

A full account of the California Music Teachers' Association convention held recently at San Diego will appear in the MUSICAL COURIER next week.

This year's Maine music festivals will take place at Bangor, October 1, 2, 3, and Portland, October 5, 6, 7. Full details as to programs and participants are to be found on another page of this issue.

Reports of Mme. Tetrazzini's tremendous success in London at her Albert Hall concert recently continue to reach this country. It was the most brilliant and best attended concert ever given by the diva in the English capital.

There will be seats for $1.25 at the Century Opera House next season. Whether the extra twenty-five cents is because of or in spite of the fact that there will be fewer performances in English than formerly, the Messrs. Aborn do not state.

At the annual competition of the piano pupils at the Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin this summer, the prize, a Blüthner grand piano, was awarded to Marguerite Mahn, of Chicago, a pupil of Moritz Mayer-Mahr. Miss Mahn is the first American to win this much coveted honor.

Sigmund Spaeth, a well known writer on music (author of "Milton's Knowledge of Music," etc.) and formerly connected with the editorial department of G. Schirmer, has been appointed music critic of the New York Evening Mail, succeeding Emilie Frances Bauer, who filled that position ably for several years.

And still the opera prizes come and go. The Edith McCormick prize of $4,000 for the best Italian lyric opera (the competition was inaugurated by Mrs. McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, during her visit abroad a year ago) has just been won by Giovanni Pennachio, with his "Errica." The work will be produced in Parma early in the fall when Cleofonte Campanini gives his annual stagione there.

Stuttgart is to have a new symphony orchestra, which has been founded by Hofrat Kaim, who also was the founder of the Kaim Orchestra, of Munich, for many years one of the leading orchestras of Germany. For the first season, opening August 16, the new orchestra at Stuttgart will give a series of four subscription concerts led by different conductors of note. The repertoire for the initial season will include all of the Beethoven symphonies.

R. E. Johnston has arranged with Jan Kubelik, the celebrated violinist, to bring to America for thirty concerts, beginning January 4, the Sevcik String Quartet, known as one of the best organizations of its kind in Europe. The Sevcik Quartet will make its first appearance in New York at Aeolian Hall, on Tuesday afternoon, January 5. It is a cultured body of musicians whose performance of chamber music always has given pleasure to the most exacting audiences abroad, both because of the technical accomplishments exhibited and the admirable ensemble accomplished.

The next season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, its thirty-fourth, will be one of the longest it has ever had. Rehearsals are to begin September 28 in Boston and on October 1 the orchestra leaves on a Western trip as a prelude to the opening of its regular season in Boston. Between October 1 and May 8 the orchestra will give 120 concerts; forty-eight of these will be given in Boston, ten in New York, five in Brooklyn, eight in Cambridge, six in Providence, three each in Hartford, Worcester and New Bedford, and single concerts in various cities in New England. It will make two Western trips, the first of which will be in the first eleven days of October, consisting of ten concerts and the second in the last week of January, consisting of six concerts.

Where is the current program so poor to do reverence to the works of John K. Paine, only a few years ago one of the leading American composers? Was he overestimated, was he only tolerated, or is the present generation ignorant and neglectful? Come, messieurs les critiques, give us your learned dictums on the subject.

Park Commissioner Cabot Ward favors a Nordica Music Pavilion in Central Park rather than a Nordica monument. He can hardly be blamed, for his preference probably is based on a realization of the many miserable examples of sculpture which now deface Central Park. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who has been spoken of as the artist to do the proposed Nordica statue, is a woman of taste and culture, and the works which have come from her hands so far would be an ornament anywhere. However, Commissioner Ward may not know that. The trouble with a Nordica pavilion is that it would not be associated permanently in the public mind with the name or fame of the late singer. After awhile the structure would be sure to be called merely "The Pavilion" and in the end thus practically lose its commemorative purpose.

No answer need be made to the stupid argument of the gentleman in a German paper that it is unnecessary for foreign artists to advertise their American tours in America before coming to this country. The European successes of foreign artists are not known on this side of the water unless the MUSICAL COURIER speaks of them, any more than the New York or Chicago or San Francisco success of a Lhevinne, a Kreisler, an Amato, a Flesch, or a Gerardy, is chronicled in the London Telegraph, Paris Figaro, Berlin Tageblatt, Milan Seccolo, St. Petersburg Novoe Fremya, Vienna Nachrichten, or Stockholm Aftonbladet. By preliminary advertising of his American tour and reprinting of his foreign press notices a European artist makes apparent his standing abroad, facilitates the work of introduction and booking by his American manager, and influences the prices secured for his appearances here. We notice that the gentleman who begs European artists not to advertise in America accepts advertisements for his paper from American artists touring in Europe. We do not understand the gentleman's point of view or his complicated ethics. Of course, in the last analysis, an artist must stand or fall by his performances, but who believes that Carl Flesch, for instance, would have secured such brilliant orchestral bookings in America and been received with such respect from the moment he landed on these shores last fall if his large European reputation and the reports of his triumphs there, as recorded in the columns of the MUSICAL COURIER, had not preceded him here continually for several years? Flesch scored his phenomenal American hit because of his marvelous playing, but it would be idle to deny that his proper introduction to the American musical public was effected through the dignified and illuminating advertising campaign of his managers, chiefly in the MUSICAL COURIER. Then, too, there is Leonard Borwick, and what the Wellington (New Zealand) Triad said about him during his recent visit there: "Leonard Borwick is giving recitals in Australia again, and confirming everybody's earlier estimate of his exquisite art. But again Mr. Borwick's advertising is far too modest. It is true that overmuch display is repugnant to the taste of a man of refinement; but this is a workaday world, and the man who would keep up in the race with his competitors must occasionally stoop to their tricks."

A CONCERT TOUR OF THE VOLGA.

By Arthur M. Abell, Special Representative of the Musical Courier on the Tour of the Volga Made by Sergei Kussewitzky and His Symphony Orchestra.

III.

Wonderfully beautiful was the view of Nijni-Novgorod as we approached it on the morning of May 3. The main part of the city is situated on a bluff overhanging the river, with the gray walls, over thirty feet high, of the old medieval Kremlin forming a most picturesque foreground. At Nijni the river was about seven miles broad, it being much wider than usual because of the spring freshets. The Oka, also an important stream, flows into the Volga here, and the greater part of the town is situated on the right bank of the Oka. Gorod means town, Novgorod means new town, and Nijni means lower. So Nijni-Novgorod translated into English means simply "lower new town." The city has for centuries been famous because of its great annual fairs, which are held on the left bank of the Oka, opposite the city proper. More than 400,000 persons attend these fairs each summer and an immense amount of merchandise is sold her annually. Last year the business done amounted to 260,000,000 roubles ($130,000,000). The fair lasts from July 15 until August 25, and during this period the streets of the old town present a most remarkable appearance, for here the East and West meet. Tartars, Calmucks, Mongolians, Siberian hunters and fur traders with enormous quantities of furs, Persians with carloads of beautiful carpets, and Jews from Tiflis, with their long "kaftans," mingle with the traders from Western Europe, who distribute to all parts of the West the wares brought to Nijni-Novgorod from all part of the East.

When we were in Nijni-Novgorod the space occupied by the fair was completely inundated. One of the accompanying photographs shows the principal building half under water. These fairs no longer have the importance they had in olden times, before the introduction of railroads, but the business done there is still very considerable, as the above figures testify.

What an extraordinary history this district of Novgorod has had. More than six centuries before Columbus set sail westward on his memorable voyage of discovery—in the year 862—Rurik, chief of the tribe of the Rus (from whom came the word Russia), made Novgorod (from which the present city took its name) the capital of the empire which he founded; and there his descendants reigned for seven centuries, until the first Romanoff was crowned in 1613. Rurik's son, Igor, added to his father's domains by conquest and even went to war against Constantinople. His widow, Olga, the first woman to bear this name, now so popular throughout Russia, was baptized at Constantinople and introduced Christianity into Russia. Her grandson

(1) Kussewitzky on the deck of the "Imperator." (2) The ancient Kremlin at Nijni-Novgorod. (3) General view of Nijni-Novgorod with the Volga in the background. (4) The "Imperator" (chartered by Kussewitzky especially for the Volga tour) anchored in midstream. Note in this picture the swift current of the Volga, six miles an hour at this place. (5) W. Dehe, the soloist of the first concert at Nijni-Novgorod. (6) The fine, large municipal theatre at Nijni-Novgorod, in which the Kussewitzky concerts were given. (7) The principal building of the Nijni-Novgorod fair, which is always under water during the spring freshet. (8) Where the great annual fair is held at Nijni-Novgorod.

Wladimir was the first man to become sole ruler over all Russia. He was surnamed the Great, because of his conquests and beneficent measures. He founded schools, made Christianity the official religion of the empire, established towns, and at his death divided the country among his twelve sons. It was under Wladimir's rule that the Byzantine style of church architecture was introduced. This was about 980. The beautiful Gothic style of church architecture, which was introduced into Central Europe a couple of centuries later, never gained a foothold in Russia, and to this day the Byzantine style, with the five handsome domes in the form of a Greek cross, still prevails.

At the beginning of the thirteenth century came the sweeping Mongolian invasion from Eastern Asia under the terrible Khan. In the gallery at Moscow are some wonderful paintings by the great modern Russians, illustrating scenes from this invasion. These men have pictured these events on canvas with astounding vividness and primeval force. These pictures grip one like a vise. This terrible invasion was followed by internal war, famine and pestilence. In the year 1230 no less than 42,000 men died of the plague at Novgorod. The country progressed slowly, however. All Russia now looked to Constantinople as its model of civilization and took its initiative in art, literature and religion from that city. For centuries after Constantinople fell into the hands of the Turks, in 1453, Russia still based her civilization on the ideas imbibed from the city of Constantine. It remained for Peter the Great to break with the Byzantine policy by opening the door of Russia to Western Europe, after the founding of St. Petersburg in 1703. During the middle ages Nijni-Novgorod was many times ravaged by fire, war, famine and pestilence. Perhaps the most atrocious of the many inhuman acts of Ivan the Terrible was the slaughter of 60,000 citizens of Nijni-Novgorod in 1570 for having revolted from his tyrannical rule. The whole history of Russia, even down to our day, has been one continued story of bloodshed. And the end is not yet come, for among the intelligent, educated elements we found a widespread spirit of restiveness and secret hatred of the existing government.

The theatre at Nijni-Novgorod proved to be a fine new building. The town itself consists for the most part of old wooden houses. The auditorium of the theatre seats about 1,200 people and was filled practically to the last seat. At Nijni Kussewitzky gave two concerts, as the crowds who wished to hear his orchestra could not be accommodated on one evening. It must be remembered that these towns along the Volga, before the coming of Kussewitzky, had never heard a first class symphony orchestra. In fact, most of them had never heard any orchestra at all, so his concerts were naturally looked upon as very remarkable events.

The program of the first concert on May 3 was as follows:

Symphony No. 3, E flat, Eroica.....Beethoven
Symphony, Manfred, first movement .....Tschaikowsky
Variations on a rococo theme for cello and orchestra .....Tschaikowsky
Soloist, W. Dehe.
Suite, Is Sredinch Wekov .....Glazounow

Kussewitzky was in splendid form, having had one day's rest since the last concert, and he and his men gave a magnificent performance of the "Eroica" symphony. Kussewitzky's interpretation was quite individual. He has his own ideas of tempi, in particular. I never heard the scherzo taken so fast, but it was given with wonderful clearness and precision. Very impressive also was the genial conductor's rendition of Tschaikowsky's "Manfred." The soloist of this concert was W. Dehe, the first cellist of the orchestra, who gave a finished and refined rendition of Tschaikowsky's rococo variations. Dehe has a sweet, vibrant tone, a fluent technic and a great deal of warmth. He was loudly applauded and encored. Kussewitzky was lionized again.

Very interesting were the audiences in these Volga towns and conspicuous in the auditorium were the many different uniforms. At least ten per cent. of the men wear uniforms. In the first row at every concert sat the governor of the town in a brilliant uniform, and near him sat the chief of police, also conspicuous for his dress. Certain seats in the first four rows of the parquet were always given up to the government and municipal officials. Every official wears a uniform. Even the students wear uniforms, quite similar to those worn in Germany one hundred years ago. All these various uniforms, with their wealth of color, added greatly to the picturesqueness of the scenes in the theatres.

The following day our party spent the greater part of the time in seeing the town. Two new guests arrived on this date, May 4—Prof. and Mme. Oskar Bie, of Berlin. Bie is the operatic critic of the Börsen-Courier, the author of numerous books on music, including a history of the opera, a very interesting book on the dance, and a very remarkable work on the piano and its masters. The program of the second concert, which was given on the evening of May 4 at Nijni-Novgorod, was as follows:

Second symphony in C minor.....Scriabine
Prelude to Parsifal .....Wagner
Concerto for piano and orchestra in E flat.....Beethoven
Soloist, Edouard Risler.
Symphonic poem, Mazeppa .....Liszt

The theatre was well filled again and the music hungry public absorbed every note of this long and taxing program with the keenest of interest and attention. Scriabine in his symphony avoids the characteristic Russian idiom found in Rimsky-Korsakow, Tschaikowsky and others; he speaks a cosmopolitan world-language and eschews local color. He has strong, pregnant and individual themes, and his instrumentation is magnificent. It is music that flows along broadly and majestically, like the Volga. There is no real scherzo in this work, but its place is taken by a movement called tempestoso. Rhythmically the principal theme of the finale suggests the opening of the "Meistersinger" overture. The andante, with its broad, flowing cantbile, is beautiful. As a whole, the symphony lacks contrasts, particularly rhythmical contrasts. It is all too massive. Furthermore, the work is too long for the ideas offered. In structure it is inferior to the Rachmaninoff symphony, but the ideas are more original and more poetic. Kussewitzky was thoroughly en rapport with the work and it could scarcely have had a better rendition than he gave of it.

Risler again created a furore with his transcendental performance of the Beethoven concerto. He was recalled again and again, and the aplause did not subside until he had contributed four encores. The program was brought to a conclusion with a very brilliant performance of Liszt's "Mazeppa." After the concert our steamer lay in midstream until daybreak, when we set sail for Kazan, 380 versts below Nijni-Novgorod.

(To be continued.)

A WORMS' NEST.

Worms are said to be nesting in Paganini's violin kept under a glass case at Genoa. Why not let some of the modern Paganinis like Flesch, Burmester, Zimbalist, Elman, et al., play on the precious instrument and so keep it from mouldering? A violin exhibited under a glass case is a silly spectacle, for it was made primarily to be played upon and not to be merely looked at. The fact that the violin in question is Paganini's would make its public performance all the more valuable, if the Genoa authorities have sentimental and historical motives in mind.

BUSY LONDON.

In the New York musical midseason, daily newspaper critics are fond of alluding to themselves in print as "jaded" and of pretending to bemoan their fate at being compelled to attend so many concerts. However, New York is not the busiest musical center in the world, even during the height of the tonal period. Berlin's concerts outnumber ours threefold. And then there is London, whose musical activity in the month of June, for instance, is horrific. As a specimen week, the following is cited, being the schedule for the seven days beginning June 28 last:

SUNDAY.

Albert Hall.—Clara Butt and Kennerley Rumford: Special concert, 3.30 p. m.

MONDAY.

Covent Garden—"La Tosca."
Drury Lane.—"Le Rossignol," "La Legende de Joseph," "Cleopatra."
Albert Hall.—Empress of Ireland memorial concert, 3 p. m.
Bechstein Hall.—Mme. Carreras and Signor Boni, 3.15 p. m. Mlle. Autran's vocal recital, 8.15 p. m.
Aeolian Hall.—Violet Anderson and Auriol Jones, 3.15 p. m. Misses Fenning and Corries: Violin and piano recital, 8.15 p. m.
Steinway Hall.—Katie Bacon: Piano recital, 8.15 p. m.

TUESDAY.

Covent Garden.—"Samson et Dalila."
Drury Lane.—"Daphnis et Chloe," Cleopatra," etc.
Bechstein Hall.—Yvette Guilbert's recital, 3.15 p. m. Herr Ebell's piano recital, 8.15 p. m.
Aeolian Hall.—Percy Granger: Piano recital, 3 p. m. Society of Women Musicians, 8.30 p .m.
Steinway Hall.—Clarice Howard: Vocal recital, 3.15 p. m.

WEDNESDAY.

Covent Garden.—"Aida."
Drury Lane.—"La Khovantchina."
Queen's Hall.—Solomon: Orchestral concert, 8 p. m.
Bechstein Hall.—Marjorie Adam: Piano recital, 3.15 p. m. Miss Wallace and Miss Benaton: Recital, 8.15 p. m.
Aeolian Hall.—Mr. Binyon's song recital, 3.15 p. m.

THURSDAY.

Covent Garden.—"Don Giovanni."
Drury Lane.—"Coq d'Or," "Les Sylphides."
Aeolian Hall.—Daisy Kennedy's violin recital, 5.30 p. m National Union of Railwaymen: Concert, 8 p. m.

FRIDAY.

Covent Garden.—"Pelleas et Melisande."
Drury Lane.—"Nuit de Mai," "Oiseau de Feu."
Bechstein Hall.—Nina Phocas: Vocal recital, 8.15 p. m.
Aeolian Hall.—Margaret Wild and Herbert Fryer, 8.15 p. m.

SATURDAY.

Covent Garden.—"Mefistofele."
Drury Lane.—Dylan.

LOUDON CHARLTON RETURNS.

Loudon Charlton was a passenger on the steamship Finland, arriving Tuesday of last week from Antwerp. The New York concert manager has spent ten weeks abroad seeing various artists whose tours he will manage this forthcoming season, and others who will visit America the season after. Mr. Charlton is especially enthusiastic over the success scored in Paris by Felice Lyne, and he believes the little American prima donna will prove a pronounced favorite on the fall tournée now being arranged in this country. In Munich, Mr. Charlton saw Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the Russian pianist, whose American concerts are nearly all booked. Clara Clemens Gabrilowitsch, "whose voice and art have improved immeasurably during her residence abroad," according to the manager, will come to America with her distinguished husband, and will be heard in several recitals. There are three other prominent pianists on the Charlton list—Tina Lerner, Josef Lhevinne and Harold Bauer, who returns from Australia for a limited number of engagements to supplement his twelve appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Other Charlton artists are Edmund Burke, the Irish baritone; Jacques Thibaud and Marie Caslova, violinists; Oscar Seagle, baritone; Francis Rogers, baritone; Caroline Hudson-Alexander, soprano; Marie Morrisey, contralto, and the Flonzaley Quartet.

PARIS OPERA CRISIS.

Business is bad at the Paris Opéra. Our Paris office reports that there seem to be just as many people going to the Opéra there as ever, but that is not enough to keep the balance on the right side of the ledger, even with the subsidy granted by the State. It costs money to run grand opera in Paris, as several men, including Gabriel Astruc and Eben D. Jordan, have found out within the last year, and the system of financing the Opéra is a most peculiar one. The government grants a subsidy, but not enough to cover the deficit which is sure to exist every year, so that the directors in the present case, Messrs. Messager and Broussan, are obliged to form a syndicate of rich friends, well wishers or patrons of music who contribute money towards the expenses of the Opéra, and, it is to be presumed, receive therefore more or less tangible favors from the directors. A directorate, however, which will expire on January 1 cannot, of course, grant favors of lasting value to its friends and supporters, and as a consequence its friends and supporters are not putting up any more money. The entire capital of the "Société Messager and Broussan" amounting to 1,600,000 francs, is said to have been used up and there is no more forthcoming. Hence Messrs. Messager and Broussan are not going to wait for the first of January, but will get out the first of September, the earliest date possible. The crisis has been brought to an end by the simple expedient of inducing Monsieur Rouché, the new director, to take up his duties on the first of September instead of the first of January. It is to be presumed, too, that Monsieur Rouché did not have to be "induced" very greatly.

THE LETTERS OF ASHTON.

"Truth, Wit and Wisdom," and "More Truth, Wit and Wisdom" are two volumes of letters to the press written by Algernon Ashton from the year 1887 to the year 1907, now collected and published in book form by Chapman & Hall, London.

Nothing illustrates better the power of the press to make known a man's name than these two volumes of letters. There are 525 of them in the first volume, and 656 in the second, making 1,181 in all. Many of these letters have been copied by other newspapers from those that first published them. At the lowest possible estimate the name of Algernon Ashton appeared 2,000 times in the newspapers of England and America during the twenty years in which these letters were written. The result is that the name is known throughout the British Isles and to very many in other parts of the English speaking world. Had Algernon Ashton confined his attention strictly to the composition of symphonies, quartets, sonatas, and many high class works in other forms his name would not be better known than that of any serious composer who wrote great works and let his reputation take care of itself. But where other composers have had various hobbies Algernon Ashton has made it his hobby to write letters to the newspapers. Thus it has happened that the hobby of Algernon Ashton has brought his name before the public in an extraordinary way. His musical compositions have been reviewed in these columns from time to time and probably will be spoken of here again. It is therefore unnecessary to say any more at present about the composer. Let us consider the letter writer.

From a practical and businesslike point of view this collection of 1,181 letters represents an enormous expenditure of time and energy for nothing. But what are all hobbies? Is golf remunerative? Do billiards bring in cash? Surely the man who visits at much trouble and expense the graves and monuments of the dead and calls the attention of the world to those who have fallen in the race is deserving of more honor than those who drive a little ball across the field or tug at a college oar. Algernon Ashton does not limit himself to music. He writes about everybody and everything, though he is never happier than when meditating among the tombs. Needless to say, his letters would never have been so extensively printed if they were not of interest to the general reader. It is impossible here to give an adequate exposition of this English composer's enormous and seemingly inexhaustible fund of information. His memory is an encyclopædia of dates and facts which he quotes with the most disconcerting nonchalance. And as he spent his boyhood and his schooldays in Leipsic he speaks and writes German as his mother tongue. We might expect that the letters of this musician should have weight among musicians. But we think we do Algernon Ashton more justice by showing what his influence is outside the musical world.

On March 21, 1906, he wrote the following letter to the Daily News, of London:

"SIR—I feel sure there is no more honored tomb in the British Isles, nay, in the whole world, than that of William Ewart Gladstone, whose mortal remains were laid to rest in Westminster Abbey on May 28, 1898. Is it not therefore more than surprising, and even disgraceful, that so illustrious a man should, nearly eight years after his death, still have, apparently, but a temporary stone of perishable material placed over his grave? The great statesman's wife, who followed him to the tomb just two years later, lies buried with him. . . . The inscription is fast becoming obliterated in consequence of the numberless visitors who daily tread over this memorable sepulchre. The figures 1900 have already practically disappeared. The Westminster Abbey authorities should lose no time in placing a really worthy gravestone over the remains of the immortal Gladstone and those of his noble consort."

This letter was reproduced by the Standard, the Evening Standard, St. James' Gazette, the Evening News, Public Opinion, London Argus, Birmingham Evening Dispatch, Western Daily Mercury, Manchester Guardian, Manchester Courier, Liverpool Courier, Liverpool Post and Mercury, Sheffield Daily Telegraph, and Newcastle Daily Chronicle, which is strong evidence of the esteem in which Algernon Ashton's letters are held by British editors. And now for the results. On May 15 the composer wrote another letter to the same Daily News:

"SIR—Some two months ago I ventured to call attention to the very unsatisfactory state of the tombstone in Westminster Abbey which covers all that is mortal of William Ewart Gladstone and Catherine Gladstone. On Saturday last I took occasion to pay another visit to this memorable sepulchre, when I found to my great satisfaction that not only had the stone been thoroughly cleansed, but that the faded inscriptions had also been entirely recut, and rendered perfectly clear again. I therefore wish to express my sincere thanks to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster Abbey for so readily listening to my appeal. May I now venture to hope that the neglected graves of William Pitt, Charles James Fox, Lord Castlereagh, who lie buried near to the illustrious Gladstone, may soon undergo a similar restoration?"

Their graves were at once attended to, partly, no doubt, because Ashton's letter was copied by twenty of the leading British newspapers.

If more proof is needed to show how highly Algernon Ashton's work is valued, the letter written by Lord Curzon, the ex-Viceroy of India, to furnish it. Lord Curzon, though representing the British sovereign in India, and with the care of over 250,000,000 of the King's subjects on his hands, had found time to read Ashton's letters, and wrote the composer: "Will you allow me to say that the work which you voluntarily undertake in calling the attention of a heedless age to the memorials of the past, and in pleading for accuracy of thought, reference, and recollection, seems to me a very valuable one, and I hope you will not give it up."

We have gone out of our way to quote letters that have no bearing on music in order to give our readers a glimpse of Ashton's breadth of view. But the two volumes of letters are full of the most valuable musical information. Algernon Ashton's position as a composer gives his musical utterances a weighty authority.

HERE'S ONE.

In a recent issue of the MUSICAL COURIER there appeared this editorial paragraph:

Is any American violinist desirous of filling a position as second concertmaster in the Municipal Orchestra of Baden-Baden? Here are the enticing conditions: "Income, 2,200-2,800 marks ($550-$700), increasing every year with ten per cent. difference between the beginning salary and the maximum. For solo performances ten marks ($2.50) extra will be paid; for participation in chamber music concerts thirty marks ($7.50) an evening. Sixty marks ($15) allowed for clothes and twenty-five marks ($6.25) for strings annually. In case of official appointment in the course of the second year of service an extra income is assured, namely, 100 marks ($25) if the appointee is married, eighty marks ($20) if single. Participation in pension. Trial demanded; railroad fare third class paid by the town." Who'll apply?

We append a letter received by the MUSICAL COURIER, which proves that modesty among musicians is not yet extinct, no matter what cynics are inclined to say. The term "fair change" undoubtedly was meant to read "fair chance," and obviously was not intended to be a jest:

Taftville, Conn., July 24, 1914.

DEAR SIR—Yours of July 21th, will send you the advertisement which I seen in the Violin World in the July copy, would like to go if you gave me a fair change thats what I was allwas think about, would like to go to the other side.

Waiting for your ans.

Yours truly,

MR. EDWARD HEINRICH,
P. O. Box 271, Taftville, Conn.

OPERATIC FESTIVALS.

Operatic festivals are keeping the European music mart active. In Bayreuth, the session began on July 22 and will continue until August 20. At Munich the performances will run from July 31 to September 15, and for the first time include "Parsifal." The Salzburg Mozart celebration dates are from August 12 to August 20. Dresden's Royal Opera joins the festival givers this year with a course running from August 23 to September 20 and including "Parsifal," "Tannhäuser," "Meistersinger," "Lohengrin," "Ring" cycle, "Salome," "Ariadne auf Naxos," "Rosenkavalier," "Barber of Seville." The chief conductors are to be Muck and Strauss.

SAN FRANCISCO ORCHESTRA.

San Francisco is to open its orchestral season on October 23. There will be ten concerts, and the programs are to include, of unhackneyed material, symphonies by Sibelius, Glazounow, Mahler, Bruckner, Perlet and Kalinnikoff, an overture by Bantock, suites by Glazounow and Foote, and miscellaneous works by Ravel, Dukas, Liadow, Ippolitoff-Ivanoff and Humperdinck.

Frank Choisy, of Geneva, Switzerland, announces that he has invented two devices which will make it easier to play the piano and the violin.

LONDON'S WEEKLIES ON STRAUSS.

Very cleverly the London Bystander remarks that Richard Strauss' recent "The Legend of Joseph" is "the Parsifalization of the Russian ballet," and justifies the comparison by the explanation that "Joseph" is "frankly insincere." London Truth, on the other hand, bludgeons Strauss for the character of his libretto and refers to some of its scenes as "disgusting"—notably the seduction episode and the "Nuptial Dance," which "represents symbolically how the Bridegroom on the wedding night unveils the Bride." Summing up "Joseph" from the side of the libretto, Truth's finding is this:

In point of fact, of course, the whole thing is frankly salacious—an unblushing speculation in lubricity, rendered not less but more unpleasant by the pages and pages of inflated rodomontade with which the authors have set forth for the benefit of the public the profound ethical significance and inner meaning of it all. The deplorable thing is that a composer of Strauss' standing should lend himself to such cheap and nasty sensation mongering—and if one cannot add that it is surprising, too, this is merely because he has unfortunately done the same thing before so often.

As to Strauss' music, Truth considers it to represent "a decline in the composer's powers which is almost unbelievable," and estimates the "Joseph" score to be "unutterably commonplace and uninspired."

The foregoing opinion is shared in also by the London Spectator, to wit: "The score is the feeblest that Strauss has yet given us, being for the most part a rehash of 'Salome' and 'Elektra' with occasional explosions of diatonic platitude, which in any other composer would be called downright vulgar." As a whole, the Spectator considers "Joseph" to be "sophisticated animalism," and fears that if the work becomes popular in America, Strauss may, at the instigation of his evil literary genius, Hofmannsthal, seize the occasion to compose a "Legend of Judas Iscariot in Chicago" or of "Ananias and Sapphira in San Francisco."

John F. Runciman in the Saturday Review adds his voice to the chorus of criticism. He thinks that Strauss has not written ballet in Joseph, but "an insignificant music drama with the words missed out." Runciman further describes the work as "something between a Strauss symphonic poem and what he will be writing in a year or two for a kinema palace. . . . The music is a failure right through . . . because it lacks powerful and truly expressive themes and coherent development and because the means employed throughout are outrageously out of proportion to the thing to be done."

LUCY DOODLE RUBECULA.

This is not the name of a hair tonic or a new symphonic poem. It might, in fact, be called a piece congress; for it is a compound of three pieces, otherwise songs.

"Lucy Locket" is the name of an old English song usually attributed to the composer Arne.

The political wisdom of the fathers of the Revolution who shook the dust of England from off their colonial feet was great. Their musical taste, however, was of a lower order. But perhaps we wrong the signers of the Declaration. Perhaps it was only the common ordinary people of the period who selected the national songs. As there was no MUSICAL COURIER in those dim and distant eras of our national career we can hardly blame, but only pity, the taste which found a relish in the tune of "Lucy Locket" and adopted it as one of the pillars of our national temple of folksong, changing the stupid English words to the classical chastity and ideality of "Yankee Doodle."

This accounts for our extremely funny and uncopyrighted "Lucy Doodle."

Having mastered their violent laughter and wiped away the accumulated tears, our readers may wonder what "Rubecula" means.

"Rubecula" is the Latin for robin. A literary jester named Ed. C. Hawtry has made a Latin version of the nursery rhyme:

The north wind doth blow,
And we shall have snow,
And what will poor Robin do then,
Poor thing?

By a curious coincidence the Latin poem fits the tune of "Yankee Doodle" ("Lucy Locket").

Finally, some of our readers may recall an editorial in these columns on the tempered scale, in which it was stated that any tune could be written on a single note if enough accidentals were employed. Acting on this suggestion Clarence Lucas furnishes us with the tune of "Yankee Doodle" written only on the one note C, with all the variations of pitch indicated by means of accidentals. For the sake of clearness the sign of double sharp has been omitted.

To this "accidental" transcription of "Lucy-Locket-Yankee-Doodle" the Latin words of "Poor Robin" have been fitted.

A friend of ours who is unfortunately devoid of humor says this version should be called "Lucy Lockjaw"—a meaningless criticsm. He might as well have named it "Lanky Poodle," for all the sense he has!

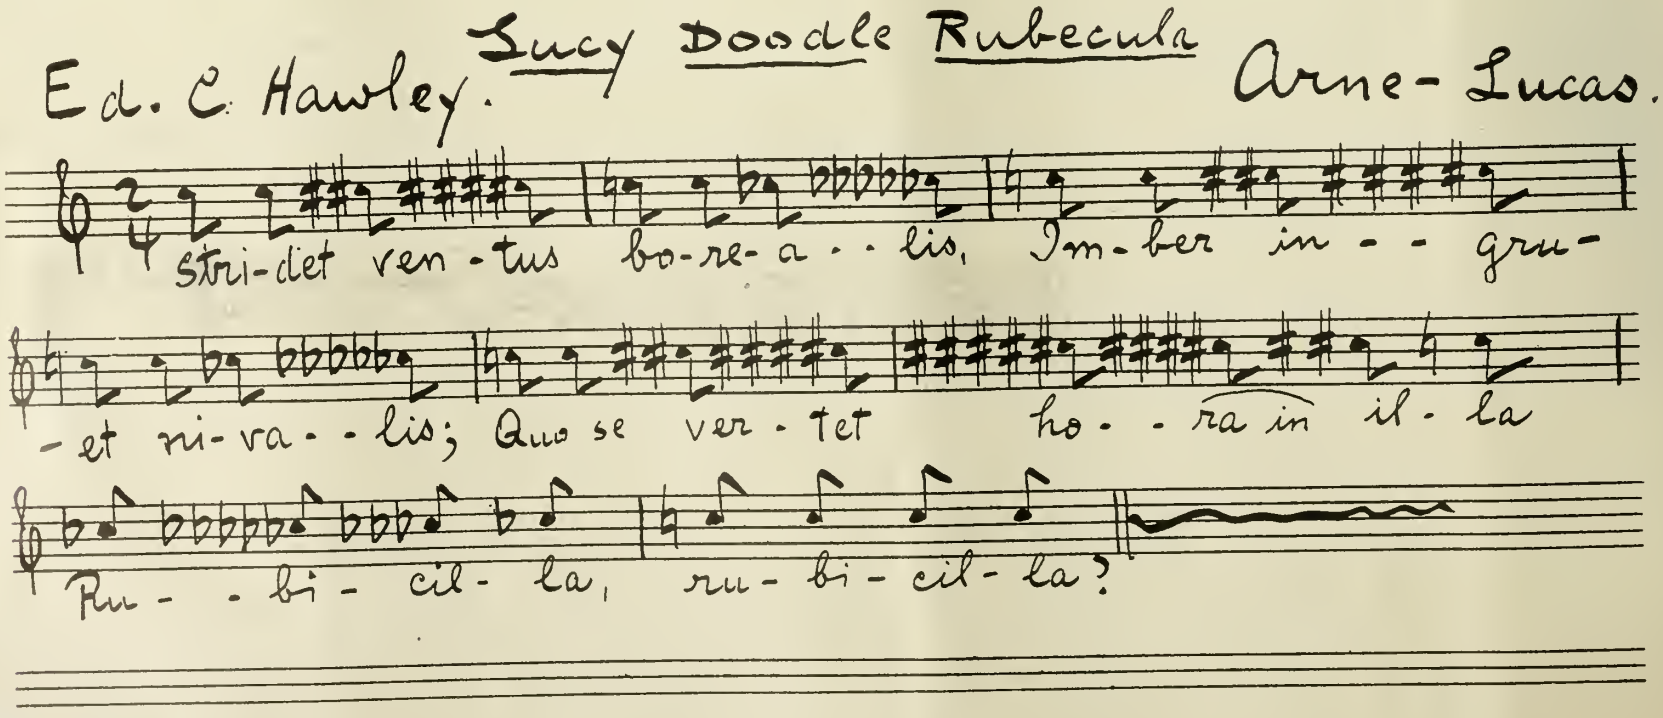
THE "DIVINE ART."

When a music critic, lecturer, or any one else begins to spout on the subject of music as "a divine art which expresses what mere words cannot say," put him down at once as a person who has no musical conception of music and hides behind a platitude which when analyzed is found to mean nothing. As the world does not know of what music consists intrinsically, it follows logically that the world is ignorant of whether or not words are able to create the same effect as music. Some poems, some speeches, some spoken dramas and some novels have stirred the world emotionally (and reached the understanding of more people) than any piece of music ever written. To execute a great statue, write a great piece of literature, or paint a great picture is as much of a "divine" art as music. To design a wonderful building or bridge, to build the Panama Canal and to invent telegraphy, electric light and flying machines also are "divine" accomplishments.

WE GIVE IT UP.

The London Saturday Review, which knows almost everything, writes in its issue of July 11, 1914: "The audience greatly enjoyed the exquisite opera of Mozart on Tuesday night; and it happily refrained from that exuberant applause which is all right after a music-hall turn, but all wrong when it comes to Wagner or Mozart." Will the London Saturday Review, which knows almost everything, kindly tell us why it is not all right to applaud exuberantly when it comes to Wagner or Mozart? We have searched our own limited mind, but cannot find the answer.

WOMEN DESIRE RECOGNITION.



In England the Women's Freedom League has prepared a list of distinguished women to back up its petition to King George to reward with titles "the many noble and public spirited women who render invaluable imperial and social service throughout the dominions." The point is a good one and ought to be well taken by the King. In the list, the musical women mentioned are Ethel Smyth and Clara Butt.

A SENSIBLE CRY.

A sensible cry comes from the Rev. George D. Hadley, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Jersey City, N. J. He says: "The best way to celebrate the centennial of 'The Star Spangled Banner' next October would be for some one to rewrite it."

PHILADELPHIA PENSION FUND.

The Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra now has a pension fund for its members.

Musical Want Ads.

Wanted—Pianist to travel with small company headed by prima donna and to play solos and accompaniments. Expected to open the program and to play in such a manner as to make the audience wish for the appearance of the prima donna. He must refuse an encore for himself if one is desired, attend to the checking of the prima donna's trunks, carry her hand baggage and poodle, fight her battles with the waiters at the hotels, permit her to scowl at him publicly when she makes mistakes at concerts, and consent to have his salary withheld when there is only enough money in the house to pay the fee of the prima donna and the profit of the manager.

Wanted—Young, pretty and gifted singer for opera house. Must be able to sing all the roles in the soprano repertoire if called upon at any time with two hours' notice, and be uncomplaining if never called upon at all. Should be patient and hopeful while the aged female members of the cast monopolize all the roles in which the young soprano might make a hit. Rapid ultimate advancement promised for applicant prepared to stay thirty years. Must not object to being chucked under the chin by conductors and patted affectionately by the manager and the leading male singers. Salary very small for the first eighteen years, but standing room for all performances goes with the position.

Wanted—Concert violinist who will not tell newspaper reporters the financial value of his fiddle, will not continue to draw his bow across the strings after the tone has ceased to sound, will not play the Vitale chaconne with organ accompaniment, nor the Schubert "Ave Maria" or Dvorák's "Humoresque" as an encore, will not pretend that his instrument is out of tune when he has been playing with false intonation, will not call Paganini "Pag," and will not perform Handel's violin sonatas and Mozart and Spohr concertos, except in the privacy of his study chamber, and will not refer to his violin as his "baby."

Wanted—For orchestra, violinist with at least five years' training under the best European teachers. Must know the entire violin literature and be first class general musician, with inclination for late hours, and willingness to play for $5 per night. Apply conductor, Schutzmüller's Picnic and Tango Orchestra.

Wanted—An operatic contralto content to sing contralto roles.

Wanted—Cellist, to act as such on transatlantic steamship when not fulfilling the duties of steward, swabbing the decks, stoking coal, taking bouillon to seasick ladies on deck and accepting tips in lieu of salary.

Wanted—Conductor who does not think that he can lead Tschaikowsky and Beethoven better than anyone else in the world, who feels genuine satisfaction when soloists at his concerts are encored, who does not consider himself a Brahms, Wagner, Schumann, Schubert, Mozart, Strauss and Debussy specialist, who (if he is a symphony conductor) is not convinced that he can lead opera better than those who are engaged in leading it, and who (if he is an opera conductor) is not sure that he can lead symphony better than those under whose baton it is given, who is content to perform music as the composer wrote it and not to reorchestrate, rearrange, abbreviate, and otherwise transform it, and who when an audience is applauding a composition, kindly abstain from clapping his concertmaster on the back and bidding all his men rise in acknowledgment of the ovation.

Wanted—Orchestral violinists who will not rap with their bows on the backs of their violins after a soloist's performance, whether it be good, bad, or indifferent.

Wanted—A concert pianist who after finishing a concerto will omit to shake hands with the conductor.

Wanted—Manager who is content to manage an unknown artist, exploit him with three-sheet posters, window cards and descriptive booklets and pay for them, to travel assiduously for the artist in order to book dates and pay all his own traveling expenses, to advertise him properly in the MUSICAL COURIER and pay for it, to pay for the artist's hotel, railroad, and cigarettes, to flatter him, to accept his abuse and stand his ill tempers, to hold himself personally responsible for every late train, for every bad notice the artist gets, for his losses at cards, for beer that is too warm or coffee that is too cold, and—under no circumstances to ask the artist for one penny toward the preliminary managerial expense incurred; and if he does, to submit smilingly when the artist brands him publicly as a bunco steerer, highway robber, and sandbagger.

Wanted—A press agent who does not press the truth.

Wanted—A tenor who hates to see his picture in the papers.

Wanted—A critic who does not call Beethoven "the Bonn master."

Base?

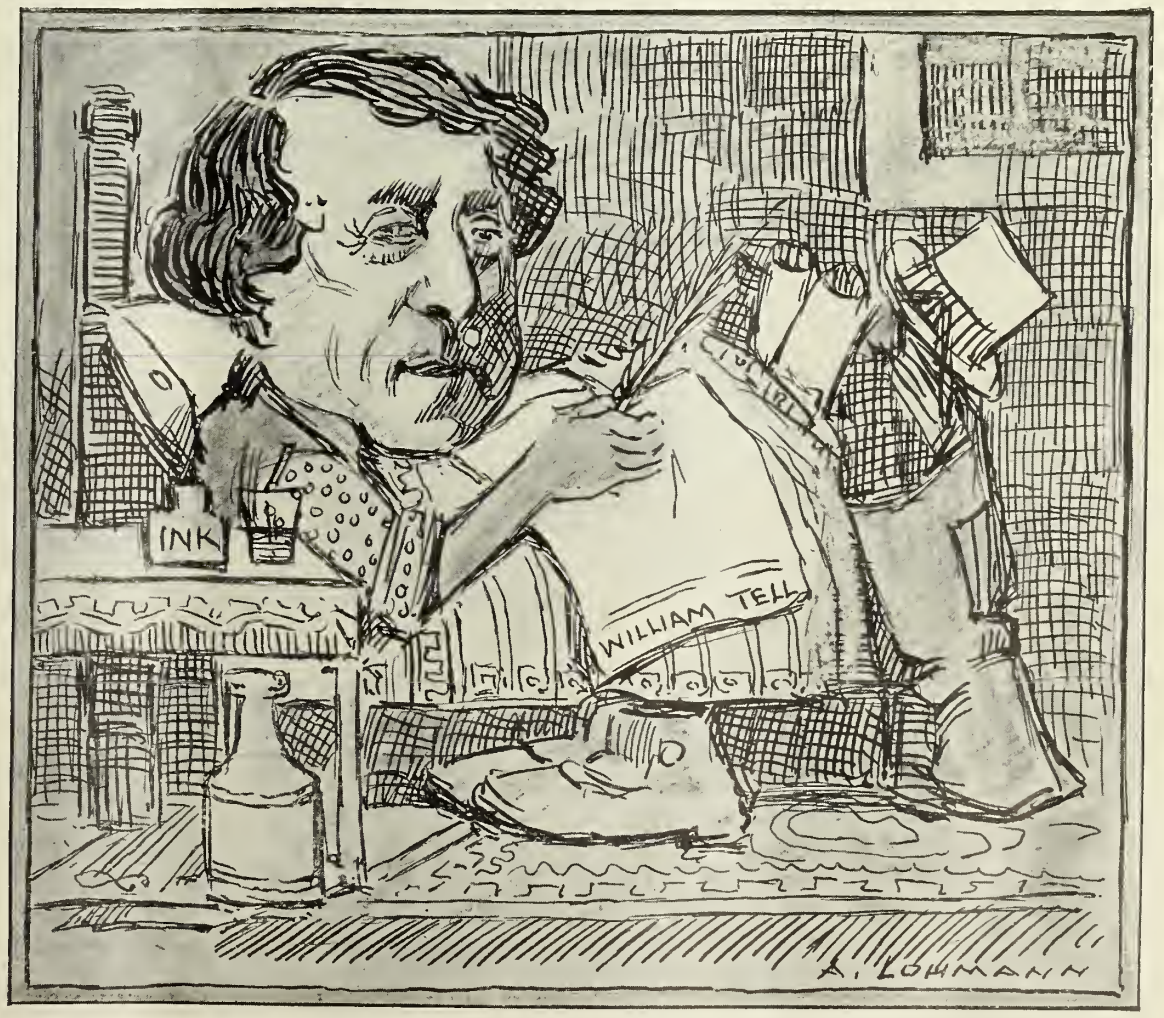
According to Pearson's Magazine, the lady who went into a music shop and asked for "low French songs" greatly embarrassed the new salesman.

Our Wheat Crop Offset.

A perusal of recent editions of Italian music papers shows that Italy's crop of new operas for the season 1915-1916 will total several thousand bushels.

The Musical Proofroom.

Adolph M. Foerster, of Pittsburgh, sends to this department some amusing musical misprints which he has been garnering recently from Pennsylvania newspapers. They include Mendelssohn's "Rondo Cappriosiossio," Saint-Säns' "Danse Macabee," Mozart's "Fantacise Minor," compositions by "Yensen" and "Chopsia," "Jan Titania," from "Mignon," some "Franzlieder," "Du bish die ruh," and "Schusucht," by Strauss.



Musical Sporting Notes (Illustrated).

In the first race at Empire City (Yonkers), July 24, Beethoven at 11 to 5 landed seventh in a field of nine horses, while on the same day, and at the same track, Lohengrin, in the third race, was second of seven horses running. His odds also were 11 to 5. Of Beethoven's performance the Morning Telegraph says: "He had scant speed and was never a contender." Lohengrin was beaten easily by two lengths. While we know nothing about the technicalities of horseflesh and are disinclined to make trouble for the owners or the stewards at Empire City, we wish to remark offhand that we have noticed how much better our two musical horses seem to be able to perform when the odds against their chances are liberal.

David Bispham, shown on the next page in his ring costume, challenges any Alberich, Kurwenal, Wolfram or Telramund in the world for the baritone heavyweight championship at catch as catch can Lieder singing, English text preferred. Bispham is the man who has helped to put the variety into vaudeville.

We would like to see Theodore Spiering salmon, managers hunting Fox and Buck, and Hans Seeling (pronounced sailing) a boat.

A concert artist writes: "If I wished I could send you for your musical sporting department the name of a manager who breaks all the world's records for long jumps. Last season he sent me from New York to a Northwestern city, HABITS OF COMPOSERS—I: THE RETIRING ROSSINI.

Rossini, the famous facile writer of opera, was particularly fond of working in his bed, propped up luxuriously on his pillow. It is related that while he was composing the overture to "William Tell" some of the manuscript sheets fell to the floor. Too lazy to pick them up, Rossini calmly began and finished another and quite different overture to "William Tell." The picture herewith presented shows Rossini posing courteously for the MUSICAL COURIER in order to show exactly how the memorable incident occurred. The moment selected was the one just before the manuscript fell to the floor.

with no stopover en route either way. The fee I received was $100 and my expenses totaled $98."

What with the recent prevalence of polo, we are surprised that no one resuscitated the time honored jest about the meeting between Paderewski and Captain Cheape, when the pianist was reported to have said: "You are a soul who plays polo while I am a Pole who plays solo."

And when Paderewski jumped at the sight of the bomb placed under his car in Colorado, might not that be called a Pole vault?

A Chance.

If there is to be war in Europe, let us lend some of the contenders who are poorly supplied with patriotic songs, our awful national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner." It might be shot to pieces.

Garden Products.

In the August American Magazine is an article on "The Opera Singer and the Public," by Mary Garden. It is full of novel and meaty reflections, some of which we quote herewith:

"My daily mail brings a score of letters."
"Is'nt it dear?"
"Talent does not come by intuition."
"One day."
"Everything that comes from Europe or any of the other countries of the world either stops in New York or passes throught on its way to the West."
"Think of it!"
"The Scotch and English are entirely different."
"If a singer has a well placed voice she can sing without any great effort."
"The minute I open my eyes I am wide awake."
"Sometimes I sleep nine hours."
"I have many magnificent men friends."
"I rarely ever meet."
"I used to wonder."
"I found myself."
"I hadn't."
"I was rather."
"I put."
"I reminded him."
"I laughed."
"I told him."
"I understand."
"I should think."
"I can."
"I can't."
"I was born."
"I suppose."
"I took."
"I studied."
"I changed."
"I left."
"I made."
"I went."
"I say."
"I met."
"I had."
"I sang."
"I learned."
"I knew."
"I needed."
"I remained."
"I did."
"I didn't."
"I was accepted."
"I created."
"I have."
"I have never."
"I worked."
"I undertook."
"I should think."
"I don't think."
"I don't love."
"I don't understand."
"I began."
"I like it."
"I was reminded."
"I did not realize."
"I went on."
"I saw."
"I never saw."
"I believe."
"I don't believe."
"I may."
"I would never."
"I really do."
"I am studying."
"I don't study."
"I am living."
"I must."
"I would leave."
"I thought."
"I would not be."
"I can only say."
"I spend."
"I never."
"I was singing."
"I'm an anarchist."
"I get."
"I open."
"I sometimes."
"I almost."
"I feel."
"I am."

DAVID BISPHAM TAKING HIS MORNING EXERCISE.

"I'm not."
"I do."
"I don't."
"I'm afraid."
"I consider."
"I'm sure."
"I used."
"I know."
"That is all."

LEONARD LIEBLING.

Borwick's Antipodean Triumph.

Leonard Borwick has been receiving ovations at the hands of the Australasian public and press during his present tour in that part of the world.

The Melbourne Argus says that although the city has heard "Bach's chromatic fantasie and fugue scored several time in recent years, we have not had it handled in such masterly fashion as by Borwick. Indeed, if he could only gives us a little more of the great cantor's music, it is quite possible Bach might almost become fashionable." In the Beethoven ("Appassionata" sonata) Borwick seemed to the Argus to be "even more impressive," for he gave "a memorable performance in which he knew how to make every phrase, every note tell." Debussy, Brahms, Chopin and Mozart were done "with a grace of expression and perfection of technic which fairly enchanted the audience. This, by the way, was again a very large, and almost needless to say, very enthusiastic."

What a Borwick recital means in Australia is best pictured by an extract from the Melbourne Punch of May 21, 1914: "Given a very large audience, brimming with anticipation, a very fine Steinway piano, and a small, fair haired, unassuming man of quiet demeanor, devoid of all eccentricity or mannerism, and we have the mise-en-scène to a condition of wild enthusiasm not perhaps approached under similar conditions—a piano recital—since the days of Paderewski." Furthermore, Punch refers to Borwick as being "boldly eloquent," and possessed of "an exquisite, Watteau-like form and texture in his tone and color scheme. By the magic of his tender, pleading touch, and caressing he woos even the most unbending adherents of torrid tone into meek submission to his will. Rarely have we heard a maestro of his marvelous mental accuracy, perfect sense of rhythm, and wonderful grip of shade, tone color and nuance."

Corroboration of the foregoing comes from Melbourne Table Talk, which says: "The charm and poetic conception of Leonard Borwick's interpretation of the great masters has once more taken the musical public of Melbourne by storm, and he has drawn full houses to the Town Hall. This is a big achievement to attain with a one man show, especially a piano recital, and it speaks volumes for the wonderful attraction and magnetism of Mr. Borwick's playing." By the same paper the artist is called "versatile and able to interpret one and all of the composers with the same charm." Other qualities lauded are the "singing touch," "great delicacy," "no lack of strength," "wonderful sympathetic insight." Summing up the Borwick art, Table Talk calls him: "The poet pianist."

Clarence Whitehill's Additional Engagements.

Clarence Whitehill who opens his season here at the Worcester, Mass., Music Festival in September next, when he is to sing Wolf-Ferrari's "New Life," and in the artist night concert, has also been engaged by the Apollo Club of Chicago for their "Messiah" performances.

Music and Arts School Recital.

Lillian Sullivan, contralto, and Eleanor Lois Fields, pianist, collaborated in a recital at the New York School of Music and Arts, July 23, giving a program of exclusively modern music, ranging from American to English, French, Russian and Polish composers. Miss Sullivan, of statuesque appearance and full toned voice, sang with fine expression, showing the attributes of the teaching of the director of the school, Ralfe Leech Sterner, who knows what he wants, and how to get it. Of Miss Fields' playing the MUSICAL COURIER has repeatedly printed flattering comments; suffice it to say she quite outdid herself on this occasion. Both young women were repeatedly encored during the performance of this program:

Adieu, forets (Jeanne d'Arc).....Tschaikowsky
Lilian Sullivan.
Caprice espagnol .....Moszkowski
Eleanor Lois Fields.
The Early Morning.....Graham Peel
L'esclave .....Lalo
Si Mes Vers Avaient Des Ailes.....Hahn
Irish Love Song.....Margaret R. Lang
Love, I Have Won You.....Landon Ronald
Lilian Sullivan.
Valse, A flat.....Chopin
Impromptu, F sharp.....Chopin
Etude, C minor.....Chopin
Nocturne, F sharp.....Chopin
Polonaise, A flat.....Chopin
Eleanor Lois Fields.
Air De Salome (Herodiade).....Massenet
Lilian Sullivan.
Faites-lui mes aveux (Faust).....Gounod
Lilian Sullivan.
Rhapsody Hongroise, No. 6.....Liszt
Eleanor Lois Fields.
Habanera (Carmen) .....Bizet
Lilian Sullivan.

Wolfsohn Artists in London.

The London Daily Telegraph, June 27, printed the following:

"To chronicle the concerts that crowd into every week in June is a heavy task; to attend more than a fraction impossible. Choice is hard, but among those by no means to be missed was the fine recital given by Elena Gerhardt at Queen's Hall. The singer received a magnificent reception and fully deserved it, for she was in superb voice and sang with wonderful feeling.

"Another brilliant vocal recital was that given by Alma Gluck, the adored of the States, who has just married Zimbalist, the violinist. Fortunately for the public, however, neither husband nor wife intends leaving the concert platform." (Advertisement.)

Schumann-Heink to Tour Florida.

A longing to hear Schumann-Heink in the South along the Atlantic Coast is about to be satisfied. A continuous demand from her admirers in that territory has resulted in the Wolfsohn Musical Bureau having set aside the time between February 1 and 15 for a visit to the principal Atlantic Coast cities and States. It has been seven years since Mme. Schumann-Heink has visited this territory and that a warm welcome awaits her is indicated by the rapid manner in which the available dates are being contracted.

Lehigh Valley Symphony Orchestra Concerts.

The Lehigh Valley Symphony Orchestra this year will confine their concerts to Bethlehem, Pa., exclusively, and will not visit the nearby cities as it has done in years past. For the coming season Conductor A. M. Weingartner is preparing five specially attractive programs which will enlist the services of Louise Homer, Olga Samaroff, Florence Hinkle, Frank Gittelson and Mme. Schumann-Heink as the soloists.

Constance Purdy to Sing at Dartmouth College.

Constance Purdy, the American contralto, who is most enthusiastic over Russian folksong in this country, was heard Tuesday evening, July 28, in another of her interesting costume programs at Dartmouth College. The artist will then leave for a brief summer vacation, which will take her to Ellsworth, Maine, for a few weeks, and then to her charming country residence at Norfolk, Conn.

Jules Falk Plays at Atlantic City.

Jules Falk, the violinist, played before 4,000 persons on the Steel Pier, at Atlantic City, N. J., last Sunday night, July 26. The noted artist played Saint-Saëns' "Deluge," adding as an encore a violin arrangement of Donizetti's sextet from "Lucia." He also played the obligato for Eileen Castle, soprano, who was the soloist of the concert.

As a national anthem the Star Spangled Banner will hardly know the difference after being officially recognized. —Boston Budget and Beacon.

SPALDING RETURNS TO AMERICA.

Distinguished Violinist Completes Wonderful European Tournee—Played Some of His Own Compositions with Success—Has Written New Songs and Violin Works—Will Spend Part of Summer with His Parents on New Jersey Coast.

Albert Spalding, the famous American violinist, who is proud of his country and of whom his country is very proud (for he has done much to spread the artistic fame of America abroad), arrived in New York, July 21, on the steamship Kronprinzessin Cecile. With him were his father and mother, who accompanied him to this country from Florence via Cherbourg, and with whom he is to spend a part of the summer at the beautiful Spalding residence on the New Jersey coast. They were met by Mr. Spalding's brother, by André Benoist, his accompanist, Mrs. Benoist, Antonia Sawyer, his manager, and a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER. Mr. Spalding was also accompanied by his precious violin, which he allows no one to touch except himself and those in whom he has the utmost confidence. Arriving on the pier, he entrusted this valuable asset to his art to Mr. Benoist, with the usual warnings of caution.

Naturally, under the circumstances, it was impossible for the representative of the MUSICAL COURIER to get anything like a regular interview from Mr. Spalding, but an account of his recent tour, given the MUSICAL COURIER by Mr. Benoist, who accompanied Mr. Spalding all through Europe, was published not long ago in these columns. Since completing his tour, he has spent most of his time in Florence. The trip from Florence to New York was quite uneventful, except that an iceberg was seen. As for his occupations on the steamer, Mr. Spalding said that he spent most of his time playing solitaire and reading psychology.

This return of the American virtuoso to his native shores is in a way triumphal, because of the wonderful tour that he has just completed in Europe. During that tour he played in twelve different countries, beginning in the north of Europe and going as far to the southeast as Egypt. He played in more than eighty concerts and a number of private recitals besides. His experiences were many and amusing, but, as he said, they were too long to recount on a steamship dock and would make a voluminous book. He mentioned, however, that he played recently at Perugia, his regular accompanist being absent. The accompanist who was provided for him was nervous and bungled things up badly, so that after trying a few pieces in that way Mr. Spalding told the accompanist to go ahead and play as he pleased and he would follow him.

ALBERT SPALDING.

During his stay in Italy he has been busy with composition. During his European trip he played a number of his own works with unvarying success; so much so that they had to be repeated frequently in response to insistent applause. The compositions on which he has been at work in Florence have been chiefly songs, and some pieces for violin and piano, which will probably be heard in America during the coming season.

During the summer, before his tour begins, Mr. Spalding has been engaged by the Edison Company to make a number of records, and this is sure to be news that will be of interest to his many admirers.

The sweetest music in the world is the duet played by the horn of plenty and the trumpet of fame.—London Music.

Maine Music Festival.

Seventeen autumns have come and gone since the first Maine Music Festival was held, and when the music lovers of Bangor and Portland again gather in their respective halls to listen to the annual tonal celebrations the officers of the Eastern and Western Associations will present another imposing array of artists to make the memory of the eighteenth season a pleasant and memorable one. There will be five concerts given in each city with the same soloists and the same chorus. At Bangor the concerts will be held on October 1, 2 and 3, while at Portland the dates will be October 5, 6 and 7.

The opening night will introduce Emma Eames and Emilio de Gogorza, assisted by Salvatore Giordano and Ernest J. Hill, tenors, the latter a local artist. The choral numbers on this occasion will include "Hiawatha's Feast," by S. Coleridge-Taylor; the "March Triumphal," by Elgar, and "Butterflies' Waltz," by Mildenberg.

"Elijah" will be heard the following evening, which will be known as "Oratorio Night," the soloists being: Artha Williston, soprano; Jean Vincent Cooper, contralto; Florence Anderson Otis, soprano; Cuyler Black, tenor, and Carl Morris.

The final concert will present a program made up of excerpts from the operas, "Faust," "Rigoletto," "Trovatore," "La Sonnambula," "Pagliacci" being among those already chosen. In addition to the chorus work, there will be solos by Nina Morgana, soprano, and Millo Picco, baritone.

Two matinee concerts will be given on the second and third days, at the first of which Helena Tardivel will play the Grieg piano concerto. At this concert will be heard also Florence Anderson Otis and Millo Picco in solo selections. In memory of the late Lillian Nordica, who, in addition to being a native of Maine, has many times sung at these Maine festivals, the orchestra will play the "Liebestod," from "Tristan and Isolde."

A popular program, with Emilio de Gogorza, who will be heard in Spanish and English songs, and Cordelia Lee, the violinist, will make up the second matinee concert.

As during the past three seasons, the orchestra will include the players from the Boston Opera.

Didn't Grieg Help?

[From the Phœnix.]

R. Ellis Roberts has translated Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" excellently, since the work pleases that competent Scandinavian, Edwin Bjorkman; and the book is published by Mitchell Kennerley in his "Modern Drama" series.

In a footnote to his translation, Mr. Roberts observes that "there seems to be no reason why Peer Gynt should not become as acclimatized to England as have Faust and Don Juan." With due respect to Mr. Roberts, both as critic and translator, there are solid reasons why "Peer Gynt" stands but a poor chance of becoming an English classic. Obscurity is not the least of these; the fourth act is undeniably boresome; many parts of the work are hard reading, even for scholars and critics; after the second act there is little dramatic interest; the machinery of trolls, bogies, etc., is alien to the English reader's sympathy, and to confess the whole truth, makes him tired, whatever may be its value to the Scandinavian folklorist. As a whole, "Peer Gynt" is very far from impressing one with the cumulative weight of a great work of the imagination.

But scarcely anything of Ibsen's can be dismissed as negligible, and this early work of his, in which the young lion is seen "pawing to get free his hinder parts," is surely no exception. There are wonderful flashes of poetry and insight and wisdom—even thus early the eerie Ibsen wisdom—to illuminate with elfin fires the long journey betwixt the first and the final curtain. And there is Ibsen's earliest "find," the incomparable Button Molder in the fifth act, who very nearly carries away all the sins of the work (I wonder what was Kipling's debt to him for "Tomlinson"). Nevertheless, Peer Gynt cannot win to the circle of the Greater Immortals and sit down with Faust, Hamlet, Don Juan, Gil Blas, Falstaff and the Knight of La Mancha. The rawness of his youth forbids it.

Friedberg-Serato Visit.

Carl Friedberg, German pianist, and Arrigo Serato, Italian violinist, who are to make their first American visit this forthcoming season, will arrive early in October. Their first concert will be at Pittsburgh, Pa., where they are booked together to open the concert season with a joint recital with the Musical Art Society in that city.

Florence Hinkle for Oratorio.

Florence Hinkle has been engaged to sing the soprano music with the New York Oratorio Society next December, and also to sing the Passion music with the Apollo Club of Chicago in March next.

"Pa, what is an accomplished musician?"

"One who sings songs that nobody can understand."—Detroit Free Press.

Myrtle ELVYN

RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE

Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915

Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicag

KIMBALL PIANO USED

CHICAGO MIDSUMMER NEWS.

Breezy Notes of the Week in the Middle West.

Chicago, Ill., July 25, 1914.

The Beethoven Trio, which consists of Jennette Loudon, pianist; Otto B. Roehrborn, violinist, and Carl Brueckner, cellist, will hereafter secure its own engagements through its own efforts. Inquiries should be addressed to M. Jennette Loudon, 620 Fine Arts Building, Chicago.

Treat at Walter Spry School.

Carl Faelten, the famous pianist and instructor of Boston, gave a piano recital at the Walter Spry Music School, Friday morning, July 17, before a capacity audience. Students were given a real treat by Mr. Faelten, who played the Beethoven andante, F major, the Raff "Giga con Variazoni," a group of Brahms works, including the "Capriccio," op. 76, No. 2, the "Intermezzo," op. 18, No. 2, the "Polonaise" B flat, "Nocturne" B flat, and the "Scherzo," op. 39, by Chopin. Mr. Spry informed his pupils and those who were present at the recital that such an interpretation as the various selections were given by Mr. Faelten was a lesson in itself. Mr. Spry was right; all those present at the recital could, to a marked degree, increase their understanding of the full value of the numbers—some of them seldom heard, as for instance, the Chopin numbers above mentioned which are seldom given now in public recitals. The recitalist met with the full approval of each one of his hearers and indeed the students of the Walter Spry School of Music were lucky to be invited to one of the most interesting piano recitals of the season.

The Chicago Band.

William Weil conducted the Chicago Band during the week at Jackson Park, Grant Park, Hamilton Park and Lincoln Park. These free concerts are becoming more and more in favor in Chicago and have proved a great help for educating the masses in enjoying the higher class of music.

Alexander MacFadyen at Majestic.

Alexander MacFadyen, the well known composer and the Musical Courier correspondent in Milwaukee, appeared during the past week here at the Majestic Theatre. Mr. MacFadyen, who is inscribed on the program as "the gifted pianist," deserves the appellation, and his playing met with the full approval of the public.

Lucille Stevenson Sings at Mandel Hall.

Lucille Stevenson, soprano, and Herbert Butler, violinist, were heard last Monday evening in the fourth concert of the University of Chicago summer series in Mandel Hall.

Opera Season at Ravinia Park.

The season of grand opera at Ravinia Park will open on Monday evening, July 27. Last week at Ravinia Park the Chicago Symphony Orchestra under Frederick Stock gave concerts twice a day as heretofore, while in the evening dancing divertisements were contributed by Dorothy Dickson and Carl Heisen in up to date ballroom numbers, and by Ted Shawn and Hilda Beyer in interpretative dances. On Sunday afternoon the "Marche Triomphale," by the well known Chicago composer and critic, Felix Borowski, was among the numbers inscribed on the program, and proved most enjoyable to a large gathering.

Library Gives Large Order to Summy Company.

The Chicago Public Library, as it was announced some time ago in the Musical Courier, will hereafter loan scores and standard pieces in every branch of music literature. The Chicago Public Library has given to the Clayton F. Summy Company, of Chicago, the very large order necessary to carry out this work, which is now being filled by that well known Chicago firm of music publishers.

Devries' Student Engaged for Sinai Temple.

Alfred A. Kanberg, a professional student of Herman Devries, has been engaged by Arthur Dunham as tenor soloist for Sinai Temple.

Clayton F. Summy's Vacation.

Clayton F. Summy, with his wife, will enjoy his summer vacation in Minneapolis, visiting their daughter, Mrs. Purcell, who has a fine residence overlooking the Lake of the Isles. Mr. Summy will be back in Chicago early in September.

Karleton Hackett Abroad.

Karleton Hackett, the eminent critic, is now writing from Europe for the Chicago Evening Post, for which paper he has been the regular music editor for many years. Mr. Hackett is combining business and pleasure, and his articles on the various big European festivals as written by him are proving most interesting to the readers of the Post. Mr. Hackett will be back in September, at which time he will resume his teaching at the American Conservatory and also continue his work as musical editor on the Post.

Bush Temple Conservatory Concert.

Wednesday morning, July 22, a representative of the Musical Courier called at the Bush Temple Conservatory and enjoyed his visit greatly, since it enabled him to be present at the last of the five weekly interpretation classes, which on this occasion was given by Charles W. Clark, baritone, and Grace Stewart Potter, pianist. The lyceum hall of the Bush Temple Conservatory was crowded even though the interpretation classes are given for normal class students and, generally speaking, outsiders are not invited.

Charles W. Clark was heard in a German, French and English group. Little need be said here about Mr. Clark, only that he sang each song superbly and gave unalloyed pleasure and his work itself constituting one of the best interpretative lessons ever afforded the students. As announced several times in these columns, Mr. Clark is now connected with the Bush Temple Conservatory, and indeed Mr. Bradley, the astute director of the school, may well be proud to count in the rostrum of his faculty the name of the distinguished American baritone.

Grace Stewart Potter, who since last year joined the faculty of the Bush Temple Conservatory, played for the first time since her return from Europe, this due to a prolonged illness during the winter months. Miss Potter has completely recovered from her ailment and her playing was all that could be desired. She studied five years abroad under, among others, Theodor Leschetizky, Frau Bree, Moszkowski and Busoni. Her first four years of serious study were with Kenneth M. Bradley, and this was followed by three years with Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, under whom she was assistant instructor. Miss Potter was heard in a varied program before the interpretation class and she disclosed a facile technic, beautiful tone, and her interpretations revealed a deep and serious student, besides showing her to be a tasteful and graceful interpreter of the piano literature. She belongs to the romantic class of pianists. Her readings were interesting as well as original and poetic, yet virile. The addition of Miss Potter to the faculty of the Bush Temple Conservatory has certainly strengthened the already very strong piano department at that institution.

Greetings From Abroad.

This office acknowledges post card greetings sent from Paris by Gertrude F. Cowen, the well known New York manager, and one from Leon Sametini, the gifted violinist.

Midway Gardens.

The Midway Gardens management has announced that Saturday afternoon performances by the National Symphony Orchestra have been dropped from the schedule and will not be resumed until September. The Midway Gardens' abstinence from concerts on Saturday afternoon may possibly be due to the exodus of Chicagoans to Ravinia Park to hear the Chicago Symphony Orchestra at one of the coolest spots to be found on a warm day.

Chicago Musical College.

Students of the Chicago Musical College School of Acting will give W. S. Gilbert's musical fairy tale, "Creatures of Impulse," in the Ziegfeld Theatre, Saturday morning.

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Mrs. STACY WILLIAMS
Voice Production :: Repertoire ::
In Europe June 15 to September 15
For information, prospectus, etc., address
Mrs. Williams, 405-406 Kimball Hall - Chicago, Ill

Lucille STEVENSON (TEWKSBURY) SOPRANO
Address: 4438 BerkeleyAvenue Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
Consisting of
OPERA, LECTURE RECITALS AND MELODRAMES and
THE CHICAGO PIANO QUARTETTE
Henriette Weber, piano; Fritz Itte, violin;
Carl Klammsteiner, cello; A. Van Der Voort, viola.
Specializing in Opera Programs.
Arrangements with Distinguished American Singers as Soloists
FOR TERMS AND DATES ADDRESS MISS H. WEBER
Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill., Phone Harrison 4868-4869

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

MR. and MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
Registration for Summer Term Now Open
Summer Address: 1434 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill. Phone 1105 Evanston

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President
SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rive-King, Guy Herbert Woodard, Grace Stewart Potter, Mae Julia Riley, Harold von Mickwitz, Frank S. Webster, Eleanor Smith, Ernest O. Todd, Mme. Justine Wagener, Edgar A. Nelson, Edward Dvorak, Adelaide G. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

August 1. The production will be staged under the direction of Redmond Flood and dances interpolated by students of the ballet school under the direction of Marie Jung. The entire production will be staged complete. Principal characterizations will be assumed by Adolph Richard, A. Redeff, Cecil Hall, Gertrude Chalker and Vola Anthony.

The regular Saturday morning recital of the summer series offered by the Chicago Musical College served to introduce a number of exceptionally talented pupils to the Ziegfeld Theatre audiences. This, the next to the last recital of the summer session, was given over to the piano, expression, violin and vocal departments, and the program attracted the largest audience of the term.

The forty-ninth annual season of the Chicago Musical College begins Monday, September 14, and advance registration indicates beyond all doubt that the coming year will mark the highest record of attendance ever attained by this institution. Next year Dr. Ziegfeld's school will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Muhlmann, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Knupfer, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Sametini, Mr. and Mrs. Sacerdote and Mr. and Mrs. Erickson will return from Europe the first week in September.

The Bach Choral Society of Chicago, of which John W. Norton is conductor, will hold its weekly rehearsals every Monday evening during the coming year in the recital hall of the Chicago Musical College. The first rehearsal will begin Monday evening, October 1.

Foster and David Artists Busy.

The artists under the Foster and David management are pretty thoroughly scattered on their summer vacations.

Olive Fremstad is at her camp in Maine preparing her programs for the extensive tour arranged for her beginning in Seattle, Washington, October 1.

Florencio Constantino is at Ashmont, Mass. Bernice de Pasquali will be in Europe until the middle of September. Mary Jordan is at Elberon, N. J.

Elizabeth Tudor will spend August and part of September with her parents in Ohio. Ruth Harris, with her father and mother, is camping in the mountains of Virginia. Florence Anderson Otis is at Swampscott, Mass. Anita Davis Chase is at Harwichport, Mass. The Misses Patten are at Asbury Park, N. J. Blanche Hamilton Fox, a new contralto under the Foster and David management, is at Roslindale, Mass.

Cecil Fanning and H. B. Turpin are both busy preparing many new programs for the coming season. They will spend part of August and September at Dayton, Ohio. John Barnes Wells with Mrs. Wells and their daughter, Dorothy, is in Delaware County, N. Y. Arthur Philips is summering at Darian, Conn. Clifford Cairns will spend his summer as a member of the exploring expedition organized by the Biological Survey of the United States government. They will spend three months in British Columbia collecting specimens of big game. Mr. Cairns will return to New York about October 15.

Samuel Gardiner is at Narragansett, R. I., for the summer. Alexander Bloch is now in Dresden, Germany, continuing his studies with Prof. Leopold Auer. Frederic Martin and Frank Ormsby are with their families in Pennsylvania.

Walter David, the manager, with his wife, Annie Louise David, is to leave New York on July 31 for a six weeks' yachting trip along the New England Coast. They will be the guests of Commodore and Mrs. Edgar Hammond, of New Bedford, Mass. Mr. David's vacation was originally planned for a much earlier time in the summer. The continued calls for dates for the Fremstad tour have kept him in the city until the present time.

During his absence the Foster and David offices will be in charge of their efficient secretary, Vera Bull.

Theodore H. Bauer with Big Hotel.

Theodore H. Bauer, formerly press agent of the Boston Opera Company, and more recently assistant manager of the National Opera Company of Canada, is now holding a responsible position in the executive department of the Hotel McAlpin, New York City, where he is greeting his many friends of the musical profession. Mr. Bauer enjoys his work immensely at the big hostelry, at Thirty-fourth street, Broadway and Sixth avenue.

Eleonor Peocock Under New Management.

The Concert Direction M. H. Hanson has undertaken the management of the American soprano, Eleonor Hazzard Peocock, whose success as a lieder singer has been so marked in Berlin and London.

LIFE WORK OF ZYGMUNT NOSKOWSKI, THE INITIATOR OF THE NEW POLISH MUSICAL MOVEMENT.

A Composer in All the Forms, Who Studied in Warsaw and Berlin—His Fine Workmanship—His Eclecticism—Some of His Compositions—His Fame in England—Noskowski's Musical Characteristics.

After Stanislaw Moniuszko, composer of several fine operas ("Halka," "Hrabina," etc.), who died toward the end of the last century, it was Zygmunt Noskowski (also no more among the living) who began a new era in Poland's recent history of symphonic music.

A native of Warsaw, born in 1846, his musical talent revealed itself in his early youth, when as a schoolboy he composed dances, lieder to the words of Polish poets, etc.

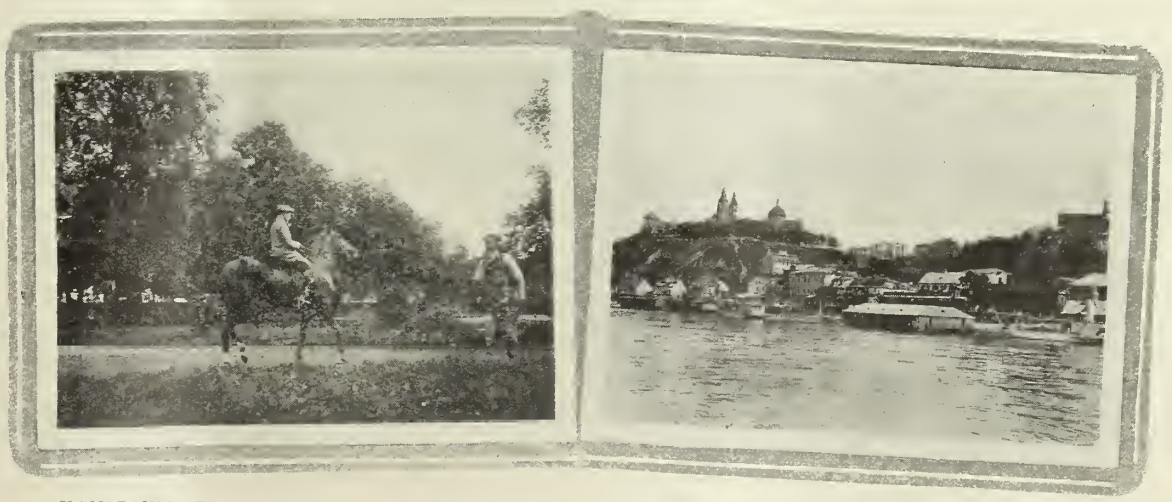
ZYGMUNT NOSKOWSKI.

At the institution of the Warsaw musikverein, he received his theoretical instruction through Moniuszko, then professor of composition. Later Noskowski went to Berlin, where under the direction of Friedrich Kiel he spent a further thorough period of study lasting several years. The first fruit of this work was a symphony in A major, performed at Berlin, which aroused the attention of the critics and resulted in Noskowski being called to Konstanz as municipal director of music. A second composition dating from that time, a beautiful quartet for piano, was much appreciated by Franz Liszt, who himself performed it at Weimar and got it printed for publication.

Returning to his native country Noskowski received the direction of the Warsaw Musikverein besides, later on the classes for composition at the conservatory. As a composer Noskowski wrote in all the forms. Outside his earliest symphony, above mentioned, he composed two others, one in C minor ("Elegy") and one in F major, called "From Spring to Spring," the latter consisting of four movements representing the seasons, and in spirit differing widely from his former ones.

Noskowski's concert overture "Morskie Oko" ("The Eye of the Sea") was his first symphonic work received generally into the repertoire of the orchestras abroad. In it he paints the impressions made by the wonderful lake, usually called the "Pearl of the Tatra Mountains" (Galicia), with its surrounding scenery. Success was achieved also with his "Steppes," a symphonic poem along large and powerful lines, containing extremely melodious themes, fresh harmonies, striking contrapuntal combinations, and brilliant scoring.

One of the most valuable symphonic works by Noskowski is "From Life," tableaux artistiques in the form of free variations on the theme of Chopin's popular Prelude in A major, illustrating scenes of native Polish history. In this piece is displayed the full and ripe fruit of Moskowski's great theoretical knowledge, as well as his real inspiration in original form, novel and beautiful harmonies, scoring, and in the technic of making his music sound artful and yet transparent.



Also a number of stage works came from the busy pen of Noskowski. About eight of them were written in an easy and accessible style, destined chiefly for suburban and provincial theatres. Then there were two greater operas, "Livia Quintilla," of minor value, and "The Sentence," a decidedly individual composition, far from any imitation of Wagner or the younger French and German schools.

Further works are three string quartets, and one with piano; cantatas for solo voices, chorus, and orchestra; two cantatas for male chorus only; a suite of krakoviaks (one of the Polish national dances); one volume of Polish volkslieder; dozens of compositions for piano, two and four hands; a lieder-book for children, containing about seventy songs; many orchestral transcriptions of Moniuszki's lieder, etc. All his compositions for four hands are more widely known in England—there most of them were published—than in the native country of the composer.

Original features of Noskowski's music are a form frequently quite new, yet always clear and excellently shaped; symmetry in the architectonic particulars; a decided originality of themes, imperfect sympathy with the general mood of the work; much humor in his characteristic compositions; and, above all, masterful contrapuntal construction. Although by technical preparation and artistic disposition of a classical trend of taste, Noskowski never was a slave to any school, but rather an eclectic in the finest understanding of the word. His great gift for creating with facility even those of his works most complicated polyphonically, reminds one of Mozart, as, for instance, the overture, "Sketches in Charcoal." Noskowski wrote the composition in a few hours.

He died a few years ago, deeply mourned not only by his pupils, but also by the whole Polish nation, to whom he left so rich a heritage.

S. M. H.

KANIGOWO, THE ESTATE OF THE COUNTESS DAMBSKA, DISTRICT OF PLOCK ON THE VISTULA.

GENERAL VIEW OF PLOCK ON THE VISTULA, Where the MUSICAL COURIER Warsaw correspondent is a guest at the estate of the Countess Dambska.

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, 437 Fifth Ave. M. H. Hanson New York

BOSTON BREVITIES.

Notes Telling of Current Happenings in and Near the Hub.

Boston, Mass., July 25, 1914.

Returning from a sojourn spent twixt the murmuring pines and the breaking waves to the city's midsummer lethargy, one finds one's thoughts far away from the ordinary routine of existence and the penning of weekly paragraphs concerning music and its devotees.

ETHELYNDE SMITH'S PLANS.

From Camp Wawonaissa, on the shores of Lake Winnepesaukee, Ethelynde Smith sends word of a highly successful song recital which she gave on July 10 at Newbury, Vt. At the close of the recital, which attracted a most appreciative audience and at which Miss Smith was heard in twenty-seven songs beside encores, she was re-engaged for a return date next season with the same club. Her plans for next season also include a Western trip to start in November with re-engagements and new bookings in Pennsylvania, New York, Illinois (including two or three in Chicago), Wisconsin, Kansas and Idaho. Upon her return from this trip Miss Smith will appear in various cities throughout the East, thus completing a very busy season.

STEINERT SERIES TO BE REPEATED.

The Steinert series of four concerts at popular prices will be renewed next season in Worcester, Mass.; Providence, R. I., and Portland, Me. The four concert companies are scheduled as follows: John McCormack with Donald McBeath, violinist, and Edwin Schneider, accompanist, November 3, Portland; November 4, Worcester; November 10, Providence. Alice Nielsen and Rudolph Ganz, December 8, Providence; December 9, Portland; December 11, Worcester. Evelyn Scotney, Jeska Swartz, Umberto Sorrentino and Howard White, December 28, Portland; December 30, Worcester; December 31, Providence. Julia Culp and Albert Spalding, January 25, Portland; January 26, Providence; January 27, Worcester.

SOUTHBRIDGE, MASS., AND ITS MUSICAL MENTOR.

Through a friend's observing eyes it has been brought to my attention that those who labor off the beaten path on the musical map deserve fair meed of praise no less than the renowned in the great musical centers. In Southbridge, Mass., a town of 14,000 inhabitants in the lovely hills of southern Worcester County, Mrs. H. N. Carpenter has labored hard for many years to bring the joy and romance of music into the lives of the townspeople—almost all of them employed in the local mills and factories. From the age of seventeen, when she played the organ in the church and conducted an old fashioned singing school, through her period as supervisor of music in the public school to her present activities as the teacher of music of the town, Mrs. Carpenter has done much to influence and awaken the taste for music in the citizens of Southbridge. So interesting was the work of her large class of pupils at their recitals given on June 22-23 that the above mentioned friend sent word of it to this column, expressing the hope that mention might be made of this earnest and sincere devotee of the sacred music.

BLANCHE FREEDMAN.

Slezak's Two Families—Human and Animal.

It does not signify anything in particular that Leo Slezak, the big Czech tenor, looks pleasanter in one of the accompanying pictures than the other. The responsibility is only greater perhaps in one instance than in the other. In fact if one notes carefully he will see that a spirit of seriousness characterizes the expression of each member of the larger group.

SLEZAK IN NEW ROLES.

Leschetizky Celebrates His Eighty-fourth Birthday.

Theodore Leschetizky, the famous piano pedagogue, and Mme. Leschetizky have been stopping in Berlin for two months, where he has been undergoing treatment for his eyes with Dr. Bernhard Pollack. The noted pianist celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday on June 22. Among the pianists who called in person to congratulate him on that day were Teresa Carreño, Alberto Jonas, Arthur Schnabel, Marguerite Melville, Howard Wells, Ignaz Friedmann and Richard Buhlig.

Friedberg to Play with St. Louis Orchestra.

Among some of the most important orchestra dates in Carl Friedberg's forthcoming concert tour, will be an appearance with the St. Louis Orchestra, under Max Zach, for which plans have been made for the artist to play the Brahms' concerto, as Friedberg is recognized in Europe as one of the greatest interpreters of Brahms music. He will also play some seldom heard music by the same composer at his first Carnegie Hall recital.

Dr. Franklin W. Hooper Is Ill.

Prof. Franklin W. Hooper, director of the Brooklyn Institute, is reported to be seriously ill at his family homestead, at Walpole, N. H. He is feeling the effects of his many months of hard work, his illness being the result of a nervous breakdown. The MUSICAL COURIER unites with those who know and respect him in trusting that he may have a speedy and complete recovery.

"Boris Godounow" scored tremendous favor with the Breslau public.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL
European Tour, July, 1914—Jan. 1915
American Tour, - after Feb. 1, 1915
Address THEODORE SEYDEL, 70 Westland Ave., Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies
In London Until July 28,1914
Address Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS.

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDEN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York Personal Representative

FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
in his last Liederabend met the same unqualified success which attended his first recital. There is a radiance and warmth in his artistic and intelligent delivery which affects his audience most happily.—Der Reichsanzeiger, Berlin.
Concert direction Wolff, Flottwellstr. 1, Berlin.
Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall, New York.
Available for concerts in America, February to May, 1915

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

MME. ROSA OLITZKA
CELEBRATED RUSSIAN CONTRALTO
Engaged as Soloist, Great Texas Saengerfest, May 11 to 14, 1914
AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIOS and MUSICALES
Manager R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
For Terms, Dates, etc., Address temporarily, care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the U.S.

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Special SUMMER COURSE for Teachers and Professionals. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR, 51 W. 76th St. N. Y.

Gluck-Zimbalist London Criticisms.

London's high estimate on the art of Alma Gluck, the charming soprano, and Efrem Zimbalist, the distinguished violinist, is clearly set forth in the following press opinions covering recent appearances in the British capital:

Many Referee readers have pleasant recollections of the finished singing of Alma Gluck, and these were pleasantly renewed yesterday at her recital at Queen's Hall. She sang with a perfected technic and unfailing purity of tone that were most pleasure giving. Handel's "O, Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" and "Lusinghe piu care" were beautifully rendered. A Russian peasants' song by Mr. Zimbalist so delighted the audience that it was repeated. The purity of the singer's style was particularly noticeable in an aria from the "Czar's Bride," by Rimsky-Korsakoff, which was given unaccompanied. Among some songs sung in English, "Sylvelin," by Sinding, "Chimes," by Carrie Lola Worrill, were most fascinatingly interpretered. The accompaniments were played by Mr. Zimbalist in a most sympathetic and unanimous manner, but then Mr. Zimbalist and Miss Gluck were recently made one.—Referee, June 21, 1914.

There is a peculiarly ingratiating freshness about Alma Gluck's voice that gives to her singing a charm as irresistible as it is individual. This charm was very noticeable in the group of songs with which she began her recital at Queen's Hall yesterday afternoon; and as these songs covered a wide range of style they put Miss Gluck's versatility beyond reach of question. Her reading of the air "O, Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" from Handel's "Semele," was unreservedly beautiful, both in tone and in sentiment; and the coquettish vivacity shown in Pergolesi's "O Serpina Penserete" was equally captivating. There is a delightful quality in such songs as Schubert's "Du bist die Ruh." Miss Gluck was accompanied with unfailing tact by her husband, Efrem Zimbalist.—Sunday Times, June 21, 1914.

Alma Gluck gave a recital at Queen's Hall Saturday afternoon, singing through a varied program in a manner which suggested that her vocal resources had been considerably strengthened since she appeared here a year ago. One saw clearly the success of her method in the sustained style required in Handel's "O, Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" and again in Schubert's "Du bist die Ruh," where the pure tone was so very well maintained.—Times, June 22, 1914.

Something less than a year ago, when she made her first appearance in London, at the Albert Hall special Sunday concerts, Alma Gluck was referred to in these columns in terms of unmistakable praise. The medium of the classical song recital is not the quickest way to win popular recognition in the absence, presumably, of some more comprehensive opportunity. Miss Gluck made her reentree by a song recital at Queen's Hall on Saturday afternoon. Her audience was a discriminating one, and, given that at the outset. the true artist has only to be patient and wait. It is not easy to mention a singer whose voice is at once so clear and impeccable in intonation. As far on as her third group the artist sang an excerpt from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Czar's Bride" without accompaniment, and her sense of pitch was throughout flawless. After some mellifluous Italian examples Miss Gluck passed to Schubert, Schumann and Brahms and were perfect vocally, the poetic value of the songs would very likely have been greater in more intimate surroundings. A song in Russian by Efrem Zimbalist, the afternoon's accompanist, had to be repeated. The artist's versatility being further shown in such songs by Rubinstein, Charpentier, Sinding and other composers. Time can scarcely fail to add warmth and color a little more generously to a voice that is already remarkable.—Morning Post, June 22, 1914.

A complete artistic success must be recorded of Miss Gluck's song recital yesterday afternoon. Miss Gluck's voice is a well trained soprano possessing considerable flexibility, and particularly good in the upper notes. In a well chosen selection of songs, the recitalist showed her capacity to enter into and bring out their varying sentiments, and among the more notable items one might mention her interpretation of Schubert's "Du bist die Ruh" and Handel's "O, Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" for their air of absorbed calm, and in a lighter vein the three songs by the French composer, G. Charpentier, an interesting excerpt from Pergolesi's old Italian "La Serva Padrona." Mr. Zimbalist, the well-known violin virtuoso, filled the office of accompanist with singularly unobtrusive taste, besides coming forward as a composer with a Russian peasant song, which, most sympathetically rendered by Miss Gluck in that language, proved the hit of the afternoon, the audience refusing to be satisfied until it had been sung a second time.—Scotsman, June 22, 1914.

There is really no explaining the moods and taste of the London musical public. At times their enthusiasm goes beyond bound; at others they display an apathy to almost indifference. The purity of Miss Gluck's voice, and round warmth of tone, her clarity of diction whether in Italian, German, French, English, and even Russian songs, as well as a perfect ease of delivery, made her performance a memorable one, and her range of songs from Pergolesi to Rimsky-Korsakoff, was wide enough to satisfy the most blasé of her audience.—Jewish World, June 24, 1914.

That clever singer, Alma Gluck, made her reappearance at Queen's Hall on June 20, in a program which very successfully avoided the beaten track. That, of course, was a merit in itself, while it also had the additional advantage of proving the singer's versatility. The remarkable clarity of her tones and her refined manner of performance came out particularly well in songs by Rubinstein, Rimsky-Korsakoff and Charpentier, and in lighter lyrics. Miss Gluck showed as she has done before that she is an artist accomplished far beyond the ordinary, who has just the qualifications necessary for the perfect performance of music of which grace and charm are the chief essential. But her singing throughout the program was delightfully fresh. No notice of the concert would be complete without some reference to the share taken in it by Efrem Zimbalist, who accompanied with admirable taste, but his name was not to be found on the program.—Queen, June 27, 1914.

At a recital in Queen's Hall on June 20, Alma Gluck gave a long program, including songs by Pergolesi and Handel sung in Italian, and German songs by Schubert, Schumann, Brahms and Rubinstein, French songs by Charpentier, and songs in English by Worrill, Sinding, Saar, Schindler and Cottenet were given, and each one were deserving, did space permit of individual mention, both from the charm of the song itself and the singer's rendering of it. Miss Gluck's voice is a sweet soprano of exceptional range and perfect intonation. Her diction and phrasing is wonderfully clear, and she makes beauty of tone a first consideration. Schubert's "Du bist die Ruh'," taken very slowly, and Brahms' "Feldeinsamkeit" were beautifully sung in point of tone and feeling, and Schumann's "Der Sandmann" in regard to delicate simplicity; but if any proof were needed of the singer's consummate ability, it was her rendering of a charming "Peasant Song" by E. Zimbalist, which was sung in Russian, and the aria from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Czar's Bride," the latter being a perfect exhibition of unaccompanied singing. Handel's "O Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" "Priere," by Charpentier; "Chimes," by Worrill, and "Little Gray Dove," by Saar, are also worthy of special mention. Although his name was not on the program, M. Zimbalist acted as accompanist, his playing being marked by a sympathetic elegance and lightness of tone which suited the singer admirably.—Musical News, June 27, 1914.

On June 20 a large and appreciative audience, laden with innumerable floral offerings, was the order of the day at Queen's Hall, and right well did the concert-giver deserve the attention bestowed upon her. A group of German lied by Schumann, Schubert and Brahms alone stamped the program as an exceedingly interesting one, which she interpreted with charm and considerable intelligence, as well as a number of songs by Handel, Sinding, Zimbalist (sung in Russian), Charpentier, Worrill, Saar and others. Miss Gluck is a young lady with a charming personality, and can boast of the possession of a light soprano voice of pleasing timbre.—Musical Standard, June 27, 1914.

As though anxious to avoid challenging comparison with other lieder singers, Alma Gluck sang very few German songs in the course of the recital she gave with Mr. Zimbalist at Queen's Hall on Saturday afternoon. In the light lyric music Miss Gluck is a singer who has few rivals to fear, and her interpretations of numbers by Massenet, Ravel and Paladilhe were, frankly, irresistible for their delicacy and tonal beauty. Miss Gluck's enunciation was faultless, and her mezzo voce high notes had a freshness of quality that was indescribably fascinating. Mr. Zimbalist adopted the rather unusual plan of giving Vivaldi's A minor concerto with accompaniment of organ and pianoforte. By so doing he got much more color, and, at times, much more palpitating sentiment than would have been possible from the pianoforte alone. The reading of the solo part was delightfully accurate and delightfully spirited. The tone was fine and ingratiating, the definition superlatively clean, and the delivery sincere and unaffected. Messrs. F. B. Kiddle and Charlton Keith were the accompanists.—The Daily Telegraph, June 29, 1914.

It was a delightful concert that these two well-known artists gave at Queen's Hall on Saturday afternoon. Alma Gluck's claim to high rank among singers is established. In German sentimental lyric she secures an effect so intimately musical that criticism of her interpretation is practically disarmed. There is, however, despite her name, something peculiarly Latin about her musical temperament, and she is at her best in songs combining crystalline clarity with the lightest lyrical touch. If there is a dash of humor thrown in, so much the better. "Tout Gai," from Revel's set of Greek folksongs, won instant success.

Mr. Zimbalist's share of the program opened with Vivaldi's concerto in A minor, as arranged by Tivadar Nachez, with accompaniment for organ and piano, played respectively by F. B. Kiddle and Charlton Keith. The combination put his sense of tone color to a severe test, but the three timbres were happily blended, thanks to the artistic discretion of the players. It is scarcely necessary to speak of Mr. Zimbalist's playing of the Bach chaconne. In such music as this he is probably the best representative of Professor Auer's teaching, though, of course, the musicianship he has acquired en dehors of violin playing has contributed to give his interpretation its remarkable breadth.—Pall Mall Gazette, June 29, 1914.

Alma Gluck and her husband, Efrem Zimbalist, gave a joint recital at Queen's Hall on Saturday. The former was in good voice, and in many songs in many languages gave an admirable display of her vocal and temperamental gifts. Her husband's song, "Peasant Song," by request, and which found so much favor at her previous recital, was again enthusiastically received. Her singing, too, of "Suwanee River," with Dvorák's "Humoresque," arranged and performed by Zimbalist, was charming, and the old song in its new dress was quite effective. Hebrew, Cuban and Scotch songs found the gifted singer at her best, and were sung with a charm of voice and style that made them very attractive. In a concerto in A minor (Vivaldi-Nachez) and Bach's chaconne, Zimbalist found a happy medium for the display of his executive and interpretative gifts.—The Evening Standard, June 29, 1914. (Advertisement.)

Copyright by Mishkin Studio, New York.
EFREM ZIMBALIST. ALMA GLUCK.

The von Ende School of Music of New York

Herwegh von Ende, Director

The establishment of a high standard in musical education has been synonymous with the work of this institution.

FALL CATALOGUE NOW READY

For Information and Dormitory Reservations, address the Secretary, Box 7.

The von Ende School of Music

New York

Von Türk Rohn's Return Postponed.

Baroness Olga von Türk Rohn, the brilliant Austrian soprano, who achieved splendid success last season in her American concert tournee under the Metropolitan Musical Bureau's management, reports from Vienna that her return to this country for the 1914-15 season will be delayed until August 13. This change of plan upsetting a proposed earlier return, is due to several conflicts which arose in her Vienna concert dates, due to the assassination of the late Archduke Ferdinand, heir to the throne of Austria-Hungary. Three postponements were the direct result of this tragedy, as the famous old Austrian capital has been in a stage of chaos since the catastrophe occurred.

The Baroness, who was a favorite in the royal house of Emperor Francis Joseph, had received various medals of honor and costly gifts from its different members. Shortly before her departure from America she received a summons to sing before the late Archduke upon her return to Austria. This audience, had fate not intervened, would have occurred three days after the tragic outcome of the so called Servian plot, which has since brought about the Austria-Servian complications.

HOWARD E. POTTER HAS RETURNED FROM EUROPEAN TRIP.

Well Known Concert Manager Tells the Musical Courier About His Visits with Prominent Artists.

Howard E. Potter, treasurer of the Melba-Kubelik tour last year, and the recently appointed business manager of the Music League of America, returned on the steamship Imperator, Wednesday, July 15, after a six weeks' tour in Europe, where he visited Paris, Milan, London, Prague, Berlin and Hamburg.

Approached by a member of the MUSICAL COURIER staff, Mr. Potter gave an interesting account of his trip, which was one of both pleasure and business.

"I ran down to Paris first," began the impresario, "where I met Edmond Clement, who was previously under my management. The French tenor was just leaving for a vacation in Switzerland.

"I found Gabriel Lapierre, the pianist of the recent Melba-Kubelik tour, superintending the finishing of his new home in Paris—especially the magnificent new music room. Incidentally, Mr. Lapierre is busy coaching his pupils from all over the world.

"Louise Gunning, whom you will remember was formerly on the American light opera stage, is over in Paris now studying very diligently for the grand opera stage.

"Another who is busy coaching a number of American singers in Paris is Frank Waller, one of the conductors of the Boston Opera Company, at the Champs Elysées Theatre. Among those working with him is Reba Dale (Ruby Shotwell Piper).

"I don't know whether you are interested in this particular art, but two dancers, who were attracting much attention—in fact, they were quite the dancing sensation of Paris—were appearing at the Cafe de Paris, Pre Catalan, and at most of the soirees given in Paris. These were Margaret Hawkesworth and Basil Durant. Their dancing was particularly attractive because of its refinement. You know Miss Hawkesworth is the daughter of Mrs. R. W. Hawkesworth, who has charge of the Chansons Crinoline at Hotel Plaza, New York, and the Thes Dansants in many of the larger hotels in New York, Pittsburgh, Boston, Washington and Richmond. Miss Hawkesworth and Mr. Durant appeared at a soirée given by Jean de Reszke. Then they made a hurried trip on the steamship Vaterland and appeared at the home of Mrs. Arthur Curtis James in Newport, R. I., just one week after the Paris appearance."

SNAPSHOTS TAKEN IN EUROPE BY HOWARD E. POTTER.

(1) Estelle Wentworth (middle), soprano of the Freiburg Opera, on steamship "Imperator," with Mary Bradin (left), of Prague, and Mrs. Howard E. Potter (right). (2) Howard E. Potter returning from Europe on steamship "Imperator." (3) Efrem Zimbalist snapped in London while standing in front of a Queen's Hall billboard announcement of a Gluck-Zimbalist joint recital. (4) The Kubelik girls in their bathing pool in Kolin, Bohemia. (5) Kubelik and his children in front of their own playhouse. (6) Anita Rio in her garden at Lake Como, Italy. (7) Kubelik reducing? (8) Kubelik enjoying a swim in his lake. (9) Kubelik relaxing. (10) Sevcik and Kubelik's mother leaving after the christening of Kubelik's boy and celebration of Kubelik's thirty-fourth birthday. Kubelik and Suchy standing. (11) An important trio: Left to right: Sevcik, Suchy, Kubelik. This was the only time these three were ever photographed together.

"I suppose you must have heard much discussion of the Boston Opera Company in Paris."

"Yes, indeed. The Boston Opera Company at the Champs Elysées Theatre made a great impression in Paris. In fact, no such chorus singing is said to have ever been heard there before. Of course, the American colony was largely in attendance at the performances.

"From Paris I went to Milan to visit Anita Rio and her husband, J. Armour Galloway, who is one of the leading vocal teachers in Italy. Mme. Rio has a wonderful lyric soprano voice and her success in Europe has been tremendous. She has been singing in the important opera houses there for the past six years and is eagerly anticipating her coming American tour. Since she has been in Europe, Mme. Rio has greatly increased her repertoire, which now includes all the newest songs and arias. In Italy she has been accorded honors following her operatic and concert appearances which have been quite unheard of for Americans. In fact, she has received many medals and decorations for her artistic work. In several concerts of note, she was the first American singer to be chosen. She is an exceptional linguist, and her Italian is so nearly perfect that she is often taken for a native. I recall with distinct pleasure a delightful visit with Mme. Rio and her husband at her villa on Lake Como. She expects to return to America in September.

"From Milan I went direct to London, where I attended many notable concerts, but I was very much surprised to discover that the same stars drew a much smaller attendance there than in New York. I listened to one of De Pachmann's most delightful piano recitals of the season and also to a concert by Alma Gluck and Efrem Zimbalist, which likewise proved a great success.

"In London and Paris I saw Paul Reimers, the very popular tenor, who is having a splendid season abroad, and will return here next season for many concert and oratorio performances.

"Berlin came next in my itinerary. It was there that I had a most enjoyable visit with the MUSICAL COURIER representative, Arthur M. Abell, and, too, I went with George Hamlin to one of those delightful American picnics which occur every July 4. On this occasion four hundred and nineteen members of the American colony spent the day just outside the German capital city enjoying American sports (particularly baseball), a splendid dinner, and a boat ride back to Berlin."

"Your Berlin visit was then one more of pleasure than of business."

"Yes, but I did not stay there long, for I wanted to go down to Prague to see Jan Kubelik. You see, July 5 was an eventful day in the Kubelik family. It was not only the famous violinist's thirty-fourth birthday, but it also celebrated the christening of the latest arrival to the household —a boy. The other five children are girls. Sevcik, Kubelik's teacher, who acted as godfather, and Prof. Suchy, head of the Prague Conservatorium, who is the violin teacher of the Kubelik twins, were among the guests.

"One of the accompanying photos is the first ever taken of Sevcik, Suchy and Kubelik together.

"Kubelik has a really beautiful estate here and after luncheon, we went out to enjoy some of its attractions. A bathing party was arranged, the five girls in a pool, and later the men went to the lake on the Kubelik estate in Kolin.

"One of the large rooms in the Kubelik home is fitted up with the violinist's trophies. Mme. Kubelik is herself something of an artist, and her artistic touch was noticeable in the arrangement of these.

"Hamburg was my next point of interest. There I was the guest of Ottilie Metzger and her husband, Theodor Lattermann in their spacious home. The Lattermanns had just returned from a hunting trip which proved very profitable to the home larder and to the collection of hunting trophies, which occupied an entire room in their home. I verily believe that Mme. Metzger cares more for her hunting trophies than those which she has won by singing, for similar to Kubelik, Mme. Metzger has her trophy rooms."

"What did she shoot?"

"Oh! I don't know all the things she shot, but there certainly was an abundance."

"And is this distinguished couple coming to America during this coming season?"

"For a short time. Owing to their strenuous duties at the Hamburg Opera, they will be unable to tour in America for more than the month of February. Their first recital will be in Aeolian Hall, New York, February 9. After her recent American tour, Mme. Metzger devoted her time to appearances at the Hamburg Opera, where, you will remember, she is the successor to Mme. Schumann-Heink. From her appearances in America last year, you know Mme. Metzger has a wonderful voice of wide range and excellent quality. Her husband, Mr. Lattermann, is the leading bass-baritone of the Hamburg Opera and also has a voice of unusual beauty, power and a range which covers three octaves, even in quality throughout. So well is it adapted both to bass and baritone roles that at the Hamburg Opera, he has been able to sing the bass role of an opera one month and the next month that of the high baritone in the same opera. These two are also very highly educated and are two of the most popular of the younger singers in Germany today."

"On your return on the Imperator, were you accompanied by any celebrities?"

"Yes, there were Otto H. Kahn, E. T. Stotesbury and Estelle Wentworth. Miss Wentworth used to sing in light opera here in America, but she has been singing in grand opera in Germany recently. At present she is on her farm in Northern New Jersey, but in September she expects to return for her season at the opera in Freiburg. Mr. and Mrs. B. Friedman were also returning from a visit to Mrs. Friedman's brother, Ignatz Waghalter, in Berlin, who is one of Germany's leading conductors. Mary Bradin, of Newark, was returning home on the same boat for a short holiday. She has been studying violin with Professor Suchy in Prague."

Julia Claussen Re-engaged by Chicago Opera.

The accompanying picture shows Julia Claussen, who has just been re-engaged with the Chicago Grand Opera Company. The snapshot was taken in front of the Paris

JULIA CLAUSSEN IN PARIS.

Opera House. The man in the background looks very much like Max Zach, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, but it is not he.

A Peocock Program.

Eleanor Hazzard Peocock's program of songs, which she gave at the Michigan State Normal School, Ypsilanti, Mich., Wednesday evening, July 1, is given below:

Der arme Peter.....Schumann
Der Nussbaum.....Schumann
Wohin.....Schubert
Serenade.....Schubert
The Princess.....Grieg
Der Gartner.....Hugo Wolf
Elfenlied.....Hugo Wolf
Herbst.....Haille
Scene and aria from Faust.....Gounod
  The King of Thule.
  Jewel Song.
What the Chimney Sang.....Griswold
My Laddie.....Thayer
Two Antebellum songs—
  Swing Low, Sweet Chariot.
  Steal Away.
Three English ballads—
  The Shower.
  The Primrose.
  Twickenham Ferry.

Hugo Kaun's New Symphony.

Hugo Kaun is just putting the finishing touches on his new symphony, No. 3, which will shortly be published by Julius Zimmermann, of Leipsic. The work has already been secured by six orchestra societies for performance next season. It is dedicated to Nikisch.

The Austrian stage is becoming rapidly Americanized.—New York Press.

FLORYN OPERA PRODUCING CO., Inc.
1482 Broadway, Room 1105
Three Opera Bouffe Co's in repertoire
Applications in writing from Aspirants with good voices and talent will be considered

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 W. 34th St., New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music
Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

FLORENCE TRUMBULL
PIANISTE
Vorbereiterin (ASSISTANT) to Theodor Leschetizky
VIII Laudongasse 22 - - - Vienna, Austria

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE Coloratura Soprano
GRAND OPERA PRIMA DONNA
Season 1914-15 Now Booking Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals
European Address: - - - 68 rue de l'Aurore, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - - - - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

BRITISH COMPOSERS TO CONDUCT OWN WORKS.

Invited to Lead at the Promenade Concerts in London—Covent Garden Season Drawing to a Close—Recent Performances—Other Operatic News and Gossip on the Banks of the Thames.

5 Portland Place, W.,
London, England, July 17, 1914.

Following the precedent of last season's series of promenade concerts, the directors of the Queen's Hall Orchestra again have invited the British composers to conduct their new works which are to be given during the forthcoming season. Those who have availed themselves of this invitation are eight in number, namely: Sir Frederic Cowen, Percy Pitt, Frank Bridge, Rutland Boughton, Oskar Borsdorf, Percy Grainger, Henry Geehl and Eugène Goossens, Jr.

SOLOISTS AT PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Of the artists re-engaged for the series of promenade concerts beginning next month at Queen's Hall are to be found the names of Ellen Beck, Esta d'Argo, Ada Forrest, Carrie Tubb, Phyllis Lett, Doris Woodall, Gervase Elwes, Frank Mullings, Thorpe Bates, Murray Davey, Peter Dawson, Herbert Heyner, Robert Radford, Charles Tree, Arthur Catterall, Sidney Freedman, Louis Pésckai, C. Warwick Evans, Max Darewski, Walford Davies, Tosta de Benici, John Powell, Cyril Scott, Johanne Stockman, Théodor Szántó, Albert Fransella and Alfred Kastner. Those who are to make their debut appearances at this season's series of concerts were mentioned in these columns last week. It may be mentioned, also, that the list of new compositions listed for this year were enumerated. As affirmed in the official circular, the leading members of the orchestra remain practically the same as before, and adhering to an admirable custom several of them will appear (as mentioned above) as soloists, composers, and conductors in the course of the season. Arthur Catterall again leads the orchestra; Frank B. Kiddle still acts as organist and accompanist, and Sir Henry J. Wood will conduct the entire series of concerts. And as from the year of their inception, the concerts will be under the management of Robert Newman.

COVENT GARDEN SEASON.

In many of the essential points pertaining to the giving of opera, the Covent Garden season of grand opera which will terminate the 28th day of this month, has been one of unqualified success. In reviewing the repertoire and noting its range, in realizing that among the artists there have been some of the greatest of the day, and in giving full credit to the excellent orchestra—always a feature of the operatic performances at Covent Garden, and to the ability and musicianship of its conductors, which also have included some of the great ones of the day, it may readily be seen that the Royal Opera has maintained a very high standard in all that it has undertaken this season. And mention must be made of the general improvement in the staging of particularly the new works in which the details of coloring, furnishings, costumes, and of the general ensemble have been carried out in no stinted manner, but rather on the lines of the generous and sometimes the lavish. The first performance of Zandonai's latest opera, "Francesca da Rimini," a performance that was awaited with no little expectation, was given July 16, with Mme. Edvina as Francesca, Signor Martinelli as Paola, Signor Cigada as Giovanni, and Signor Paltrinieri as Malatestino. The opera was conducted by Ettore Panizza, and was one of the most beautifully staged operas put on in many a season.

It is hardly necessary to go into any rehearsal of the story of Francesco and Paolo, it is too well known for that. The libretto, however, it may be mentioned, has been adapted by Tito Ricordi from the poem by Gabrielle d'Annunzio, and the music is by Riccardo Zandonai, whose opera "Conchita" was produced at Covent Garden two seasons ago. This later work by Signor Zandonai is a great improvement in every respect over that of "Conchita." The libretto gives greater opportunity in the first place, and then the composer has developed, or made use of a more vocal and flowing line for the voices. The orchestration in many instances is superb, the mood of the story and the situation always sustained and in the accompaniment to the many recitative passages occurring throughout the work, a distinctly individual and thoroughly musical orchestration is gratefully recognized as being perfectly in accord with the sense and character of the text.

It is a marked feature of the work in all its four acts that the music is felt to be in absolute sympathy with the spirit of the poem. The work impresses as being, by far, the best of all the modern Italian operas offered by the younger Italian composers of the day. It was a very fine first performance. The opera was conducted with skill and fine musical taste by Signor Panizza, who also conducted its premiere at Turin in February of this year.

MME. EDVINA AS FRANCESCA.

Many delightful impersonations has this delightful artist given Covent Garden audiences since her London debut some few seasons ago, but in none has she reached the high standard of histrionic and vocal achievements attained by her as Francesca da Rimini. For one thing the role offers her greater scope, both histrionically and vocally as well as for the expression of deep emotional and musical feeling. And she brings to her characterization of the part the air of refinement, culture and intelligence. As she is an ideal Melisande—a role which requires like qualities, so is she an ideal Francesca. And the music lies well in her voice, which she manages with so much art, singing the softer passages with so firm a restraint, and as occasion demanded voicing so tremendous a note of intensity and passion. In no role that she sings is the beauty of her voice so fully brought into prominence.

MARTINELLI AS PAOLO.

This truly fine singer made a strikingly handsome Paolo, and sang his lines with rare musical distinction. In the first act, beautifully staged, Paolo is seen approaching the ter-

Photo by Claude Harris, London, W.
SOLID GOLD PLATE PRESENTED TO MME. MELBA BY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF AUSTRALIA.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Maytair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Malda Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N.W.

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
BECHSTEIN HALL STUDIOS, LONDON
Private address, 40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

race of the palace of the Polentani, and a very romantic figure he makes seen through the magnificent wrought-iron gates through which Francesca eventually hands him a rose as a token of her approval of him. In this scene some very fine ensemble music is introduced as well as a solo for the viol da gamba. It is not, however, until the third act that Signor Martinelli's fine voice has proper opportunity, when in an effective duet with Francesca he imparted the note of the heroic, quite the note of the "grand passion" into his singing at the finish of which number part of the "house" started a tremendously spontaneous applause, but which, as so often happens nowadays at Covent Garden, was crushed out by the other part which objects à la Bernhard Shaw to any applause during the performance, and not any afterward either, because one has then to get on one's wraps and get home, or get something to eat before the curfew rings. But again in the last act Martinelli sang in glorious voice and acted his part with grace.

OTHER MEMBERS OF THE CAST.

Signor Cigada was excellent in the role of Giovanni, his voice is full and round, and he has the artistic sense. Signor Paltrinieri is a fine actor; his voice, a tenor of somewhat thin quality, was not exactly suited to in character to the role of Malatestino, but he acted the part with surety and abandonment. Some very lovely music is written for the "soldiers' chorus" in the second act and for the female voices in the third.

CLARA BUTT AND HER TWO SONS.

Ray, the elder (on right) and Victor. After a long absence in Australia, Clara Butt and her husband, Kennerley Rumford, appeared at the Royal Albert Hall last Saturday week and received a great welcome, which "The Bystander" heartily endorses.

"DON GIOVANNI" GIVEN.

The second performance of Mozart's delightful work was given July 15. The cast and conductor was as follows:

Donna Anna.....Emmy Destinn
Donna Elvira.....Elsa Stralia
Zerlina.....Maggie Teyte
Leporello.....Jean Aquistaface
Don Ottavio.....John McCormack
Masetto.....Pompilio Malatesta
Il Commendatore.....Murray Dovéy
Don Giovanni.....Antonio Scotti
Conductor, Giorgio Polacco.

It was a very brilliant and enjoyable performance. Great credit is due Conductor Polacco for the masterly manner in which he kept his forces in hand. The whole performance went with a splendid rhythmic swing and graceful precision. Mme. Destinn sang the difficult music of the Donna Anna role with wonderful fluency and characterization. Mme. Stralia was an excellent Elvira, Maggie Teyte a charming Zerlina and John McCormack all he should be as Don Ottavio. In the difficult role of Leporello Signor Aquistaface proved himself an artist of undeniable ability in his acting of the part as well in the singing of it.

QUINLAN OPERA COMPANY.

Thomas Quinlan, the indefatigable, announces a third world tour and a preliminary English season opening at the Theatre Royal, in Birmingham, for a two weeks' engagement, October 12. Among the artists engaged to date may be mentioned: Sopranos and contraltos, Perceval Allen, Jeanne Brola, Evelyn Hutchinson, Florence Morden, Agnes Nicholls, Alice Prowse, Gladys Ancrum, Mabel Dennis, Adelaide van Staveren, Edna Thornton; tenors and baritones, John Coates, Maurice d'Oisly, Hector Goldspink, Frank Millings, Sydney Russell, Spencer Thomas, William Anderson, Graham Marr, Charles Magrath, Charles Mott, Robert Parker, Robert Radford, Robert Veevers, Arthur Wynn; conductors, Thomas Beecham, Richard Eckhold and Tullio Voghera. The preliminary repertoire will include "Tosca," "Meistersinger," "Madama Butterfly," "Louise," "The Valkyrie," "Tristan and Isolde," "Carmen," "Twilight of the Gods," "La Boheme," "Lohengrin," "Aida" and "Parsifal." Special preparations are being made for "Parsifal" in the costumes and scenery to be utilized and, like the entire repertoire, it will be sung in English. Mr. Quinlan will open his season at Birmingham with "Parsifal." John Coates will be the Parsifal and Edna Thornton the Kundry. Signor Voghera will conduct.

RUDOLPH ENGBERG
BARITONE
Available for Oratorio and Recital
SEASON 1914-1915
For Terms and Dates Address
ALMA VOEDISCH, 3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

THE GLASTONBURY FESTIVAL.

Early in August the Glastonbury Festival will begin a series of interesting musical, dramatic, and dancing performances, at Glastonbury. The object of the festival, as announced in the official circular, "is to help to consolidate the interest which has been aroused in the scheme for building a British playhouse for national music-drama." The foundation stone is to be laid by Sir Edward Elgar at the end of August.

The principal performers include Perceval Allen, Olive Power, Irene Lemon, Gladys Fisher, Agnes Thomas and Muriel Boughton, Mrs. Tobias Matthay, Gervase Elwes, Arthur Jordan, Frederic Austin, John Ellis, George Painter, Edward Carpenter, Margaret Morris, Margery Drew, Beatrice Filmer, Charles Kennedy-Scott, David Scott, Arthur Trowbridge, Rutland Boughton and others. A special concert with dramatic and choral dances is among the features of interest. Margaret Morris will produce new dances to the music by Granville Bantock, and the fine music from the "Valkyrie" will be danced by a company of forty dancers under the direction of Miss Morris. This closing scene from the "Valkyrie" will bring forward Perceval Allen as the Brünnhilde and Frederic Austin as Wotan. The Grail scene from "Parsifal" will also be danced by members of Miss Morris' company. A music drama in two acts by Fiona Macleod and Rutland Boughton entitled "The Immortal Hour," will be given by torchlight, and other events will include some children's operas and an Arthurian concert which will include the Tintagel Prelude from the "Birth of Arthur," by Reginald Buckley and R. Boughton.

MOODY-MANNERS OPERA COMPANY.

The Moody-Manners Opera Company opened for a short season at the Prince of Wales Theatre, July 13. The opera chosen for the opening performance was Wilhelm Kienzl's opera, "Der Kuhreigen" or "The Dance of Death," as the Moody-Manners company announce it. It is an opera of little or no attraction and in the wretched English translation it appeared to be very much worse than in its original tongue. Mrs. Moody sang very sweetly some melodious airs and Frank Christian, a tenor of some possibilities, was now and then given a chance to show what he might do under happier circumstances. Later in the week "Faust" was given with Walter Hyde in the title role; Mr. Manners as Mephistopheles, Kitty Brownless as Marguerite, Phyllis Archibald as Siebel, and M. Bertram as W[illegible] better performance in many ways than that of the opening night.

Aylmer Busst conducted and the ensemble was well disciplined and not unrhythmic. Walter Hyde made a very creditable Faust and Mr. Manners, as Mephistopheles, was cast in one of his best parts. The other members of the cast have not had experience enough in the devious pathways of the boards to avoid the inevitable difficulties besetting their way, and not a few misadventures resulted from inexperienced miscalculations.

NOTES.

The engagement of the noted Russian dancer, Mme. Balachowa and Michael Mordkin at the Empire will terminate this coming Saturday. Several new dances were introduced this week including some Norwegian national dances danced in national costume and to attractively arranged music. Both dancers have had a great success at the Empire during their engagement, which has extended over several weeks.

The season of opera at Covent Garden, which will close (as above mentioned) July 28, will include among the operas listed for these closing days, the first performance of Falstaff, which will be given under Signor Polacco. The Drury Lane season will close on Saturday of next week. Joseph Holbrooke's "Dylan" is to be heard again tonight, and some performances of the Russian ballet are to be given. It is rumored that one of the Continental managers will give a six weeks' season of grand opera at Covent Garden, opening there in November. This cannot be verified at the present.

EVELYN KAESMANN.

Engagements for Grace Potter.

Grace Potter, the young American pianist, has gone to the mountains in Colorado for the summer months, where she will prepare her repertoire for the winter season. Her manager, S. E. Macmillen, of New York, reports several fine engagements for her.

GRACE POTTER.

Serato to Play at Metropolitan.

Arrigo Serato, the noted Italian violinist, has been engaged for the Sunday evening concert at the Metropolitan Opera House, December 27. This will be one of the events of the season, as he is said to be the first Italian violinist to appear there.

Serato has many friends among the Italian members of the Metropolitan, especially Arturo Toscanini.

To write at all it is necessary to do both good and bad work—the proportion is what matters.—The Phoenix.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKING
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

Oliver Ditson Company.

A PARTIAL LIST OF THE PIANO WORKS published by Oliver Ditson, Boston.

PIANO CLASSICS: First series, edited by Dr. E. Prout, Saint-Saëns, H. Clough-Leighter, Brahms, Rafael Joseffy, Carl Tausig, Liszt and others.

Bach, C. P. E.—"Solfegietto" in C minor.
Bach, J. S.—"Fantasia" in C minor.
Bach, J. S.—First "French" suite in D minor.
Bach, J. S.—"Gavotte" in B minor from violin sonata.
Bach, J. S.—"Italian" concerto.
Bach, J. S.—"Loure" in G, from cello suite.
Bach, J. S.—"Minuet," "Anglaise," "Gigue" in B minor.
Bach, J. S.—"Sarabande" and "Passepied" in E minor.
Bach, J. S.—"Solo" for harpsichord.
Bach-Gounod—"Ave Maria."
Boccherini, L.—"Menuetto-Grazioso."
Dussek, J. L.—"Morning" rondo.
Field, John—"Fifth Nocturne."
Frescobaldi, G.—"Corrente," in A minor, and Canzona, in F.
Frescobaldi, G.—Aria, "La Frescobalda."
Gluck, C. W. von.—Gavotte from "Iphigenie."
Handel, G. F.—"Air a la Bourré," in G.
Handel, G. F.—Dead March, from "Saul."
Handel, G. F.—"Harmonious Blacksmith."
Handel, G. F.—Largo from "Xerxes."
Hummel, J. N.—Rondo in C, op. 52.
Martini, P. G.—Gavotte, "Les Moutons."
Moscheles, I.—"Rondo espressivo," op. 71.
Paradies, P. D.—"Sonata" in A.
Paradies, P. D.—"Toccata" in A.
Pergolesi, G. B.—"Nina," Siciliana.
Rossi, M. "Corrente" in B flat.
Scarlatti, D.—The "Cat's" fugue.
Searlatti, D.—"Pastorale."
Scarlatti, D.—"Sonata III" in G minor.
Scarlatti, D.—"Sonata XVII" in A.
Scarlatti, D.—"Sonata XX" in B minor.
Weber, C. M. von—"Invitation to the Dance."
Weber, C. M. von—"Mouvemente perpetual."
Weber, C. M. von—"Polacea brillante" in E.
Weber, C. M. von—"Rondeau brillante" in E flat.

There is also a series of easy classics for young pianists, as carefully edited and as well printed as the more important works in the "Piano Classics." Among the easy classics are to be found:

Beethoven—"Minuet in G."
Dittersdorf, K. D. von—"German Dance."
Gossec, F. J.—"Gavotte in D."
Handel, J. F.—Minuet from "Samson."
Mozart—"Andante con expressione."
Mozart—Minuet from "Don Giovanni."

Among the more modern series is one made up of Russian works for the piano. Some of these compositions are suitable only for concert pianists of considerable skill. But there are others which are well within the scope of the average good amateur:

Alabieff, Alexander—"Nightingale."
Aleneff, E.—"Valse" in D flat.
Balakirev, M.—"Lark."
Karganoff, G.—"Adieu," melody.
Karganoff, G.—"At the Brook."
Karganoff, G.—"Berceuse" in D flat.
Karganoff, G.—"Berceuse" in E.
Karganoff, G.—"Nocturne" in D flat.
Karganoff, G.—"Petite valse" in E.
Karganoff, G.—"Serenade" in D flat.
Karganoff, G.—"Valse" in A flat.
Liadow, Anatole—"Mazurka" in F sharp minor.
Liadow, Anatole—"Music Box."
Liadow, Anatole—Two "Preludes."
Rachmaninoff, Serge—"Barcarolle" in G minor.
Rachmaninoff, Serge—"Humoreske" in G.
Rachmaninoff, Serge—"Melodie" in E major.
Rachmaninoff, Serge—"Melodie" in E minor.
Rachmaninoff, Serge—"Nocturne" in A minor.
Rachmaninoff, Serge—"Polichinelle."
Rachmaninoff, Serge—"Prelude" in C sharp minor.
Rachmaninoff, Serge—"Prelude" in G minor.
Rachmaninoff, Serge—"Serenade" in B flat minor.
Rachmaninoff, Serge—"Valse" in A.
Rubinstein—"Fourth Barcarolle" in G.
Rubinstein—Wedding music from "Feramors."
Rubinstein—"Kamennoi-Ostrow."
Rubinstein—"Melody in F."
Rubinstein—"Polka Boheme."
Rubinstein—"Romance in F."
Rubinstein—"Romance in E flat."
Rubinstein—"Turkish March" from Beethoven's "Ruins of Athens."
Rubinstein—"Valse Caprice."
Schuett, Eduard—"A la bien-aimee,"
Schuett, Eduard—"Cantabile."
Schuett, Eduard—"Canzonetta in D."
Schuett, Eduard—"Gavotte humoresque."
Schuett, Eduard—"Reverie."
Schuett, Eduard—"Romance in G flat."
Schuett, Eduard—"Valse mignonne."
Schuett, Eduard—"Valse lente."
Youferoff, Serge—"Elegie in F."

SIX LITTLE TONE SKETCHES FOR THE PIANO. By Carl William Kern:

"Three Blind Mice," "Punchinello," "Oh, My Kitten," "The Hunter at Reigate," "Dreams," "Three Wise Men of Gotham."

JULIA
CLAUSSEN
THE GREAT SWEDISH CONTRALTO
OF THE
CHICAGO GRAND OPERA COMPANY
LONDON COVENT GARDEN ROYAL OPERA
STOCKHOLM ROYAL OPERA
IN AMERICA, SEASON 1914-15
Pacific Coast Tour October and November
Management: ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago, Ill.

These are charming little pieces for the young, carefully edited and ready to set before the pupil.

POPULAR MARCHES FOR THE PIANO, by various composers.

There are about forty of these popular marches, of which Viviani's "Silver Trumpets" is a good example.

COMPOSITIONS FOR THE PIANO. By John M. Steinfeldt:

"La Petite Fileuse," "Toccatina in G," "Chanson d'Amour," "A Forest Violet," "Berceuse," "What the Old Mill Told," "Country Dance," "Village Wedding Procession," "Intermezzo in A flat," "Lupita."

These pieces are of moderate difficulty for the fingers and do not demand a very highly cultured taste on the part of the pianist.

MELODIOUS STUDY PIECES, mostly of the third and fourth grade of difficulty, by modern composers, such as Stephen Heller, Wollenhaupt, Merkel, and other less widely known composers.

There are thirty-one of these pieces listed in series I of these Melodious Study Pieces.

Easy salon music, third series, consisting of some two dozen more or less popular pieces by composers who understand the tastes and requirements of the average parlor pianist.

MODERN PIANO MUSIC. Fifth series:

Cui, César—"Gondolier's Love Song."
Godard, B.—Gavotte in B.
Leschetizky, T.—"Andante," for left hand alone.
Leschetizky, T.—"Arabesque."
Leschetizky, T.—"Consolation."
Leschetizky, T.—"Melodie a la Mazurka."
Meyer-Helmund, Erik—"Arabesque."
Moszkowski, M.—"Air de ballet" in G minor.
Moszkowski, M.—"En Automne."
Pierné, Gabriel—Serenade in A flat.
Raff, J.—"Villanella."
Saint-Saëns—"Mazurka" in G minor, op. 31.
Saint-Saëns—"Mazurka" in G minor, op. 24.
Saint-Saëns—"Le Cygne" (The Swan).
Scriabine, A.—"Nocturne" in D flat.
Scriabine, A.—"Prelude" in C sharp minor.
Scriabine, A.—"Two Preludes."
Sibelius, J.—"Romance" in D flat.
Sinding, C.—"Grotesque March."
Sinding, C.—"Serenade."
Tschaikowsky—"Valse des Fleurs."
Thomé, F.—"Souvenir" in C.

For the works by Mili Balakirev and Serge Rachmaninoff published in this series, see list of Russian works.

The sixth series of modern piano music is not yet complete. At present it contains nineteen compositions:

Borowski, Felix—"Valsette" in G.
Delbrück, G.—"Berceuse."
Delibes, Leo—Mazurka from "Oppélia."
Durand, Auguste—"Second waltz," op. 86.
Drdla, Franz—"Souvenir."
Dvorák, A.—"Humoreske" (two editions).
Godard, B.—"Jonglerie."
Grünfeld, Alfred—"Romance" in F sharp.
Hollaender, Alexis—"Waltz" in C.
Humperdinck, E.—"Evening Prayer and Dance of the Angels" (Hänsel und Gretel).
Lasson, Per—"Crescendo."
Moszkowski, Moritz—"Scherzo-Valse."
Olsen, Ole—"Butterflies."
Olsen, Ole—"Fanitul."
Schytte, Ludwig—"Alla Marcia."
Setaccioli, Giacomo—"Canzone-Serenata."
Simonetti, A.—"Madrigale."
Zarzycki, Alexander—Mazurka.

"Three Miniature Dances," by Percy E. Fletcher, are not only graceful and musically attractive to the student, but are also extremely well written and correct in style, each one according to its title. Each phrase of the gavotte, for instance, begins on a third beat and ends on a first beat. In each of these little dances the hand of a good musician is in evidence: "A Dainty Gavotte," "A Jolly Jig," " A Merry Hornpipe."

"OLD CURIOSITIES, THREE FANCIFUL SKETCHES." By Percy E. Fletcher: "The Old Spinet," "The Dresden Shepherdess," "The Spinning Wheel."

These are dainty and characteristic pieces which should enjoy a wide popularity among teachers.

"Indian Sketches," by Carl Orth, is the collective title given to two fantastic compositions with a good deal of barbaric color in them as well as definite melody. They are good of their kind and they certainly suggest the wild and open life of the plain and forest. They are called "Indian Chief" and "Winniwawa," and they constitute the composer's op. 1.

We may mention, in conclusion, that many of the best of the piano works given in these lists are also to be had in four hand arrangements.

All of the music reviewed in this list is in sheet form and is supplementary to the superb collection of the Musicians Library, of which some twenty-four volumes are filled with compositions for the piano.

OBITUARY.

John Aiken Preston.

John Aiken Preston, the noted concert pianist and organist, whose home was in Boston, Mass., died on Wednesday, July 22, in Munich, Germany. It is a strange coincidence, that Mr. Preston was the accompanist for the late Mme. Nordica on several of her concert tours at the beginning of her career.

Mr. Preston was born in Dorchester, Mass., May 31, 1856, and during his lifetime was identified with the work of musical uplift in and near the city of Boston. He played as piano soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his last active musical work was as organist at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, now the Cathedral Church of St. Paul. Mr. Preston was a great admirer of Wagner and his works, and was one of the subscribers to the fund with which the theatre was built at Bayreuth for the first presentation of "Parsifal" and for other Wagnerian performances. He will be sincerely missed by his host of friends and acquaintances, both musical and social.

Samuel Swift.

Samuel Swift, a music and art critic, died last week at the New York Hospital, aged forty-one. He was born in Newark, N. J., received a college education, later became an organist, and coming to New York embraced the profession of a music critic, writing at various times for the Mail, the Sun, and the Times. He also was a contributor to the magazines and other periodicals and did general newspaper work. In June, 1896, Mr. Swift married Ellen Mary Faulkner, of Leicestershire, England, who survives him.

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Mrs. Henry Smock Boice has artist singers before the public who are the best possible advertisement of her method of teaching. Not long ago a member of a women's quartet, the only one not studying with Mrs. Boice, called her up and said she wanted to study with her. She has been doing so and is loyal to her teacher of several years past, but feels she will gain by the change; indeed, her fine voice responds excellently to Mrs. Boice's teaching.

Max Jacobs, the violinist, assisted by a tenor, Ira Jacobs, pianist and composer (whose vocal and violin works were performed for the first time on this occasion), and by his young and talented pupil, Dorothy Marx, violinist, united in a concert at Far Rockaway, L. I., July 15. A program of piano, vocal and violin works, mostly by living composers, was performed, to the great delight of a good sized audience. The Ira Jacobs vocal and violin works created a fine impression, and altogether the concert was a musical event of importance.

F. W. Riesberg, organist, and Bessie Riesberg, violinist, played their instruments at the morning service of the Congregational Church, in their home town, Norwich, N. Y., July 19. Flattering comments were made by the large congregation on the performance of the following music:

Voluntary—
Nuptial Song ..... Wagner
Wild Rose ..... MacDowell
Anthem, O Lord How Manifold ..... Barnby
Offertory, violin and organ, Celebrated Melody ..... Goltermann
(G string alone.)
Anthem, The Radiant Morn Hath Passed Away ..... Woodward
Postlude—
Love Sorrow (violin solo) ..... Kreisler
Parsifal Melodies ..... Wagner
Toccata ..... Bach

A special summer course of six weeks' study for singers and teachers is in progress at the University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt., this summer. John W. Nichols, the well known tenor and teacher, has charge of the vocal department, and his wife, pianist, teaches piano. The cool climate and beautiful surroundings of Lake Champlain make Burlington an attractive place for study; students and teachers find it an enjoyable place to work. Study with such competent artists is a boon to those wishing to "brush up" during the vacation. Mr. and Mrs. Nichols expect a very busy season at the university this summer.

Dr. A. Madeley Richardson's lecture, entitled "A Visit to the Choir Room of Southwark Cathedral in the Year 1908," has met with great appreciation, and he has consented to deliver it again at the annual convention of the National Association of Organists, Ocean Grove, August 11. The vocal illustrations will be rendered, as usual, by Dr. Richardson's daughters, Mary, Hester and Elfrida Madeley Richardson.

Louise Gerard Thiers sends greetings from Munich, Germany, and says:

"Why don't they give "Die Entführung" and particularly "Cosi fan tutti" at home? It is so delicious. The "Marionetten Theatres" here are a revelation, Mozart, Gluck, etc. . . . Am having a glorious time and am taking a fine Rhine trip, on my way to Paris.

Earnestly yours,
L. G. T."

Rose Schulze Berge, solo soprano of Central Baptist Church, New York, is spending the summer at Twilight Park, Haines Falls, the Catskills, with a small but very important portion of her family.

Lucille Love, of the Ziegler Vocal Studios, is in Seattle, Wash., appearing in "The Gold Seal Mystery" at the Alhambra Theatre. She does a "barefoot dance" in an attractive flowing robe costume, with loose curls, etc., in connection with her role. A local daily paper devotes a column of space to an interview with her, quoting her experience and success in New York, where she will return in the early autumn.

John W. Nichols has been engaged as soloist for the Chicago Mendelssohn Club and also for "The Messiah" with the Chicago Apollo Club, December 25 and December 27. Mrs. Nichols and he also give their joint recital at Columbia University, as previously, on December 10, and a similar recital November 17, for Lawrence Conservatory, Appleton, Wis. November 12 they appear together before the Twentieth Century Club of Marshalltown, Ia. This summer finds them engaged in teaching and giving public performances for the University of Vermont, in Burlington, where Mr. Nichols has charge of the vocal department.

Umberto Sorrentino writes from Paris of his interesting journey, sending a birdseye view of the "City of Light," taken from the Eiffel Tower. He will return to New York the end of September.

Eleanor Patterson, the American contralto, sang with success in Lock Haven and Berwick, Pa., a fortnight ago. These were the last two concerts of her present trip. Sunday, July 19, she sang at Ella Wheeler Wilcox's musicale at her home, Short Beach, Conn.

Mrs. Walter H. Robinson, of New York, was the organist for the Trudeau-Garretson wedding at St. John's in the Wilderness, Paul Smith's, Adirondack Mountains. Mr. Robinson and Mrs. Robinson have had charge of the music at this church for a dozen years past.

Grace Donohue, of St. Paul, was the first student to receive the degree of bachelor of music at the University of Minnesota.

An attempt has been made on the part of the management of the Kennywood, Pittsburgh, park Sunday concerts, to present music which appeals to all tastes.

Recent San Francisco (Cal.) musicales included a two-piano recital under the direction of Mrs. Oscar Mansfeldt, she being at the second piano in each number. Those appearing were Maurice Robb, Hazel Horst, Mildred Potter, Edna Goeggel, Edna Montague, Marie Campbell. Another musicale represented student work under the direction of Mary Alverta Morse. About twelve singers appeared in the program.

Silvio Lavatelli, the cellist, was guest of honor at a recent musical evening, given by Mr. and Mrs. Pasmore, of San Francisco, Cal.

Anna von Meyerinck has been appointed special teacher of music at the Tamalpais Union High School at Mill Valley Junction, San Francisco, Cal., and will be in charge of a sight-reading class, an orchestra and chorus.

Gov. Walsh, members of his staff and other State and city officials attended the opening of the Singing Fest of the Fidelia Musical and Educational Association. The association is connected with the Fidelia Club, of West Roxbury, Mass.

'VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

The nineteenth annual pupils' recital of the Southern College of Music was held at the Tulane Theatre, New Orleans, La.

Gertrude Herold, Mrs. J. A. Hoskins, Harry Brooks, Florence French, Mrs. Cecil Stuller, Blanche Potter, Mrs. V. E. Moore and Leila Gardinier furnished the musical numbers at the MacDowell Club concert, Baker, Ore., late in June.

Norwegian music interests especially Margaret Wilson, the President's eldest daughter. Miss Wilson is a pupil of Ross David, Carnegie Hall, New York.

Mabel Linton entertained a few of her pupils at a musical literature meeting last week as the closing event of her season. A buffet luncheon followed the program and among those present were Catharine McElroy, Katherine Floecker, Gertrude Phillips, Marjorie McCarty, Georgia Long, Margaret Johnson, Rose Killian and Gertrude Smallwood.

Albert Dooner, a Philadelphia composer, was represented on a recent program of the Wassili Leps' Orchestra, at Willow Grove Park, Philadelphia. The composition played is an overture, heard for the first time in public. Last year Leps played two Dooner compositions.

Alexander Sebald, the violin virtuoso, has been appointed concertmeister of the Philadelphia-Chicago Opera Company. He was a protege of Franz Liszt and was concertmeister of the Royal Orchestra at Budapest. He made several tours of Europe with the Gewandhaus Orchestra, Leipsic, and at Berlin and Leipsic played all the sonatas of J. S. Bach for the violin alone and the caprices of Paganini—forty-two different movements—entirely from memory. He was also concertmeister of the Royal Orchestra at Berlin.

Through means of a fund raised by a number of well known business men of the city, the Salt Lake City public will have opportunity to hear a band concert each Saturday evening during the summer season.

Semi-weekly open air concerts are given under the auspices of the Outdoor Art League and other Louisville Ky., civic organizations.

Nowata, Okla., has an all saxophone band.

Marian Powell, daughter of Alma Webster Powell, of New York, was the soloist at Ida Webster Gaylord's pupils' piano recital, Women's Clubhouse, Springfield, Mass., on a recent date.

The following participated in a concert given in the Gloucester Street Convent, under the auspices of the tertiaries of St. Dominic, Ottawa, Canada: T. Stringer, E. Bambrick, L. Moran, Nettie O'Boyle, Margaret Walsh, Illda Fitzpatrick, Alice O'Leary, F. P. Bennett, Gertrude Stringer, Muriel Smith and Master Harry Fitzpatrick.

The annual meeting of the Clayton County Society of Musicians was held at Garnavillo, Ia., the week of July 4. Judge James O. Crosby, who is more than eighty-six years of age, is the president of the society.

Virginia Boston, of Nashville, Tenn., who won a gold medal for efficiency in the classes of Mattie Ezell last winter, appeared in a recent recital.

Dorothy Bacon, who has been instructor of music at Ashland (Ohio) College, has resigned her position and will study music abroad next year. Ruth Whitehead, of Dayton, Ohio, will occupy her place.

Violin classes of Winnifred Lynch gave their fourth annual recital in Wakelin Hall, Springfield, Mass. The pupils were assisted by Arthur Lynch, tenor; Anna Laporte, pianist; Helena Toepfert, reader, and Arline Lynch, cellist. Among those who took part were Charles Hickey, Rose Delaney, May Kirkpatrick, Walter Wilson, Mary Markey, Cornelius Sullivan, John Moriarty, Leo Menard, Stanley Smith, Kathryn Norris, Robert Lynch, Alfred Welsh.

Pupils of Emma Bosshart gave a June piano recital at York, Pa.

Rosina O. Jordan, a McKeesport, Pa., girl, who was graduated recently from the Thurston special school, was selected as piano soloist to the National Association of Women's Clubs at East Liverpool, Ohio. Miss Jordan is also a vocalist.

Janesville, Wis., has a Moose band too.

Pupils of E. M. McCarthy, Rochester, N. Y., gave a July musicale at her studio.

The men's and the women's glee clubs of Simpson College, Indianola, Iowa, composed of sixteen members each, have been making an 8,000-mile tour. Ellis G. Rhodes, vocal instructor, and Everett M. Olive, teacher of piano, are the directors of the trip, and Mrs. Rhodes and Mrs. E. M. Shaw, the chaperones.

The following taken from the Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald echoes the compendium of sentiment which open air concerts, both band and orchestral, are arousing throughout the United States:

"I have never seen a crowd that seemed to enjoy good music more than that which gathered at Avondale Park Sunday," said an old citizen.

"We sometimes hear the remark that the people want to listen only to the so-called popular music. Well, Sunday's program, while not classic—severely classic music would be a mistake—contained only compositions of artistic merit.

"The concerts in Capitol Park on Tuesday and Friday nights attract big crowds and few persons, indeed, who attend complain of too much high class music."

Margaret Shalliday, of Chattanooga, Tenn., sang at the American Woman's Club in Berlin, Germany, at a concert given by Frantz Proschowsky. Other Chattanooga vocalists who have recently studied abroad are Eloise Baylor and Saba Doak.

Recent Portland, Ore., recitals were given by pupils of Lina Linehan, voice and piano, and Bessie M. Purdy, piano.

Birmingham, Ala., has a Music Study Club of three hundred members. Through this club the Southern city will be enabled to hear many famous musicians next season. Edgell Adams is the chairman of the program committee.

Choral music in Toronto includes the Mendelssohn Choir, Dr. Vogt founder and conductor; the National Chorus, Dr. Albert Ham, conductor; the Oratorio Society, Dr. Edward Broome, conductor; the Schubert Choir, H. M. Fletcher, director. In connection with the Schubert Choir are the two choirs of the People's Union, which are under the same leadership.

Other Toronto choirs are the Madrigal Society, conducted

HINSHAW
Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE
Berlin Wagner Ring Festival,
June 23rd to Aug. 21st
American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE
Management, R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

Articles of general musical interest, with or without pictures, will be examined by the Musical Courier if sent on approval, accompanied by stamped envelope for the return of the manuscript. In the event of its acceptance, such matter will be paid for at space rates. Address all manuscripts to The Musical Courier Company, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, Southeast corner of Thirty-ninth Street.

by Francis Coombs, the Hambourg Choral Society, which this year had a Jewish chorus of four hundred voices; J. M. Sherlock is the director; the Sons of England Choral Society of eighty voices, Penhall C. Rees, conductor; and the Glee Singers conducted by Albert Downing.

Ruby Manning's piano recital occurred at her home in Nashville, Tenn., on a recent afternoon and evening.

Five thousand people are said to have been in attendance at the first band concert of the season in Menasha, Wis., recently.

John Adam Hugo's piano pupils in Bridgeport, Conn., gave a recital in Warner Hall, July 2. Four of Mr. Hugo's works were played by the pupils.

Virginia Watson Hatley, wife of a sawmill owner and real estate dealer, Prescott, Ark., has composed the music to James Whitcomb Riley's "The Brook."

Mrs. B. H. Gottsman, soprano; Robert C. Stearms, violinist, and Marie Hansen, accompanist, assisted Marie McCourt's pupils at a July, Washington, D. C., recital.

Pupils of Harold S. Briggs, assisted by Karl Schueller, tenor, gave a recital in Scranton, Pa., late in June.

Arthur George, baritone, of Toronto, Canada, is spending the summer in Italy with his sister Margaret.

The second annual Provincial Music Festival was held in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada. The city of Saskatoon won all nineteen prizes. The other twenty-six prizes were distributed among the various cities and towns in the Province. The judges were Dr. A. S. Vogt, of Toronto; W. H. Hewlet, of Hamilton, and Rhys Thomas, of Winnipeg.

Edmonton won at the seventh annual festival of the Alberta Music Competition Association, held in that city.

Pupils of Mary Geyer, Irene Segar, Mary Blue and Charles A. Ridgeway gave a recital at the Dayton, Ohio, Conservatory of Music, in early July.

Mme. Hassler-Fox Praised.

L. M. Ruben, the well known manager, of New York, has sent the following communication from Highmont, N. Y.:

"Mme. Hassler-Fox, the American contralto, achieved another great success and added to her constantly increasing list of admirers by her splendid singing here on Sunday evening.

"Mme. Fox was the soloist with the symphony orchestra playing here under the direction of Mr. Zaveleff, assistant conductor of the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra. All of the singer's numbers were enthusiastically received by a large audience, composed considerably of Metropolitan Opera subscribers, and she was repeatedly recalled. Mme. Fox sang in French an aria from 'Samson and Dalila,' and, later on, a group of songs in French and English by Luckstone and Leoni. Her admirably clear diction caused marked comment.

"Everyone was charmed with her expressive, finely schooled voice, personal beauty and presence, and unaffected manner. Mr. Zaveleff has re-engaged Mme. Fox, and she will appear with his orchestra in some concerts in New York next winter."

More Borwick Engagements.

Leonard Borwick has been engaged for two concerts with the New York Symphony Orchestra, the first in January, and for a pair in the early part of March.

LOS ANGELES MID-SEASON EVENTS.

Lyric Club Holds Annual Election—Mrs. Catherwood's At Home—Russian Music Given—Music Teachers' Associations Meet—A Pupils' Recital.

1110 West Washington Street,
Los Angeles, Cal., July 13, 1914.

The annual election of the Lyric Club was held in Symphony Hall last week. The officers and club entertained at a social tea and a program was given under the direction of Isabel Isgrigg, chairman of the music committee. The officers elected were: Mrs. Henry P. Flint, president, who will serve a second term; Mrs. John W. Thayer, first vice-president; Mrs. W. R. Tanner, secretary; Mrs. George Sloan, financial secretary; Mrs. J. R. Mathews, treasurer; Mrs. Frank Collier, librarian; Mrs. Carl Johnson, assistant librarian, and the following directors: Mrs. William H. Jamison, Mrs. J. W. Eccleston, Mrs. J. R. Moyse and Ella B. Hanna, president of Harmonia Club.

J. B. Poulin, who has directed the club for the past ten seasons with such marked success, will continue, and Mrs. Henrion M. Robinson, whose wonderful accompaniments have been the inspiration of the club for several years, will again be the official accompanist. The music committee for the year will be: Eleanor D. Smith and Kie Julie Christin to assist Miss Isgrigg; voice, with Mrs. George McIntyre as chairman, assisted by Mrs. C. A. Post and Maude Carolyn Gilbert.

Last at Home of the Season.

Jane Catherwood closed the season with a final "at home" Monday evening, June 29, at which she entertained about two hundred guests. Departing from her usual custom a formal program was given, in which Mrs. Catherwood was assisted by Raoul Laparra, pianist and composer; Robert Alter, cellist; W. H. Mead, flutist, and Kassa Bailey, accompanist.

Mr. Laparra has won a very warm place for himself during his sojourn this year in Los Angeles, and it was a great treat to be able to hear him once more, as he will probably leave the latter part of the summer. His great genius as a composer and his brilliant pianistic talents have been much admired; his modest personality and sincerity have not been the least factors in his pronounced success.

Robert Alter came from Boston last September and is a great acquisition to the musical circle. He was connected with the Boston Symphony for a number of years, and was a pupil of Alfred Schroeder; his performance on this occasion proved him to be a cellist of very pronounced ability, the possessor of a beautiful and vibrant tone, together with genuine musicianly interpretation.

W. H. Mead, for many years one of the leading flutists in Los Angeles, played the obligato for Mrs. Catherwood's Echo Song, giving great pleasure with his artistic work.

Miss Bailey, the accompanist, is a young girl, a pupil of Philo Becker, who shows the gift necessary for truly artistic accompaniment.

Next season Mrs. Catherwood will resume these monthly musicales and receptions.

Music Teachers' State Association.

The local Music Teachers' Association gave its monthly program on Friday night, July 3. This will be the last until next October. A very delightful program was given by Mary West, pianist, and Robert Alter, cellist. Mrs. West is a pianist of exceptional ability, who has had the advantage of not only studying but teaching abroad.

State Association Convention.

The Musical Courier correspondent is on the point of leaving to attend the State Association Convention at San Diego, a full report of which will be sent next week.

Russian Chamber Music Program.

Before leaving for San Diego, Jaroslav Zielinski and the Misses Fuhrer, assisted by Miss Cieselska, soprano, gave a program of Russian chamber music at the home of Mr. Zielinski, on Sunday afternoon, July 12.

Minnie Hance's Pupils in Recital.

Minnie Hance presented the following pupils in a song recital Wednesday afternoon, July 8, at the Y. W. C. A. Building: Mmes. Robert Bacon, Ethel Mason, Gene Crossman, Thomas Capell; Marie Louden, Ruth Godsmark, Alfreda Holtzgrafe, Helen Gridley, Alice Nelson, Annie Laurie Terry, Rose Stammer, and Tracy Budington. A long and elaborate program reflected credit on both teacher and pupils. Lorna Gregg's accompaniments afforded great pleasure.

Jane Catherwood.

Charlton Praises Contralto and Pianist.

On Loudon Charlton's recent trip abroad nothing impressed the New York manager more than the marked advance which Mme. Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch had made in her art since her departure from America. The wife of the Russian pianist has always been the possessor of a contralto voice of unusual depth and clarity, but its qualities, according to Mr. Charlton, have been made immeasurably finer under the painstaking coaching to which it has been subjected in the last two or three years. Mme. Gabrilowitsch will be heard not only in individual recitals, but in several joint appearances with her distinguished husband.

"As a lieder singer," declares Mr. Charlton, "I firmly believe Mme. Gabrilowitsch will soon occupy a conspicuous position. Her voice is a large one and of a very unusual quality, while she uses it with unmistakable artistry. When Mr. Gabrilowitsch makes his first Aeolian Hall appearance in January, Mme. Gabrilowitsch will share the program with him, and I feel confident her singing will make a deep impression."

Included among the American cities where recital appearances have already been booked for Gabrilowitsch, in addition to orchestral engagements with practically all the leading symphony orchestras, are Pittsburgh, Chicago, New Orleans, Grand Rapids, Holyoke, Hartford, Utica, Baltimore, Washington, Albany, Dobbs Ferry, Boston, Brooklyn, Buffalo St. Louis, Duluth and Northampton.

A typical tribute to the art of Gabrilowitsch was that paid by Reginald de Koven, when the pianist was last heard in Carnegie Hall. "I was so absorbed in the artistic interpretation of the music," wrote Mr. de Koven in the World, "that the mere mechanics of it passed me by—a compliment of itself to the player. Yet I should mention Gabrilowitsch's pure, compact and discreet dynamics, skillful pedaling and wonderfully suave, mellow, singing tone, and delicacy and fluency of execution. Altogether I have not enjoyed as much or been moved more by any piano playing this season, and if constant applause may be taken as a token the audience was entirely to my way of thinking."

Mme. Samaroff's American Tour.

Olga Samaroff will open her next American tour with the Philadelphia Orchestra in Philadelphia, November 6 and 7. Her reappearance in Boston will take place in Symphony Hall on the afternoon of November 15. She will also play in Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo with the Philadelphia Orchestra. Later in the season she will play with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and also with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. Mme. Samaroff's southern tour which will open on March 1 in New Orleans, will continue until the 17th.

WANTED

WANTED—European and American artists for fall and winter bookings. Address H. C. Lahee, 218 Tremont St., Boston, or 425 Fine Arts Building, Chicago.

ORGANIST WANTED—There is a vacancy for an organist in a large city in New York State in one of the leading churches. Salary $900 or more according to the man. Address "L. S. M.," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth avenue, New York.

WANTED—There is a splendid opportunity for a good piano, violin or singing teacher to connect with a musical institution of the highest standing in one of the leading cities of the United States by investing moderate sum in the institution. Only men or women of superior ability, culture and refinement considered. Steady income assured to the proper persons. All communications confidential. Send photo, credentials, telephone number and complete particulars to "Cooperative Opportunity," care of Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

PIANIST of reputation desires a position as accompanist in a studio, on tour or in chamber music. Pianos furnished free by a leading piano house. Address "Pianist," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

WANTED—Organists for moving picture houses. Must be able to play piano also. Steady employment assured, with good salary. Address "Organist," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

CELENE LOVELAND
Pianist
4620 LAKE PARK AVE., CHICAGO
Phone, Kenwood 5871

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot
BOOKING EVERYWHERE
East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

Vocal Studio and Opera School (Italian Method)
KARL SCHNEIDER
PHILADELPHIA: 1705 Chestnut St. October to May.
MUENCHEN, Germany: 9 Friedrich Str., June to Sept. 15

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND THE ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 5 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1793

HERWEGH VON ENDE

Director of the Von Ende School of Music of New York, and Several Prominent Members of the Faculty

(1) Herwegh von Ende, director and teacher of violin. (2) Anton Witek, violin soloist and concertmaster Boston Symphony Orchestra. (3) Sigismond Stojowski, Polish pianist, composer and pedagogue. (4) Albert Ross Parsons, dean of American Piano Teachers. (5) Vita Witek, well known pianist of Berlin. (6) Adrienne Remenyi, authority on voice culture. (7) Lawrence Goodman, pianist and teacher. (8) Hans van den Burg, composer, pianist and pedagogue. (9) John Frank Rice, teacher of violin and theory.

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

CLIFFORD DEMAREST, F. A. G. O.,
ORGANIST—COMPOSER.
Recitals—Instruction.
Church of The Messiah, 34th St. & Park Av., N.Y.C.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
BOICE.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

EUGENIE PAPPENHEIM,
THE CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Culture in All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101 W. 78th St., New York City.
Telephone: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners. Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
'Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.
Special Summer Course.

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
Will teach during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano.
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West, Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York.
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet.
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th St.

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Street
Complete musical education given to students from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza.

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMOND,
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Correct Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 5. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1793.

MUSIC TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION OF CALIFORNIA MEETS AT SAN DIEGO.

Annual Convention Well Attended—Attractive Musical Programs—State Legislative Bill Articles Passed—Alameda County Gets Next Convention.

San Diego, Cal., July 25, 1914.

The annual convention of the Music Teachers' Association of California was held at San Diego, July 13, 14, 15, 16. The loyal San Diegan will express commiseration for any one not privileged to live in this delectable spot. The probabilities are that no visitor to this convention will deny that it would be a fortunate circumstance that would make him or her a resident of this beautiful city, but as all can not be so blest there was expressed the pleasure and privilege of even a short visit. Not one of them but had words of praise and commendation for this attractive city, its cordial and talented inhabitants, and the royal treatment received.

No words are too strong to use in praising the music teachers of San Diego for the manner in which the convention was handled and conducted, and the artistic showing made by the local musicians certainly is cause for congratulation. In their programs they evidenced the right to take a position with any city in the West, regardless of size.

Also, a matter worthy of special mention and praise is the fact that this successful four days' meeting was put through by musicians of San Diego without any help, financial or otherwise, outside their own body, with the exception of the four music firms who contributed a share to the expenses. So successful was the venture that the guarantors will not need to be out of pocket, as the concerts carried an admission charge to the public and the receipts were more than sufficient to defray the outlay. The credit for this belongs to the fact that there was harmonious cooperation of all interested and especial devotion on the part of the few most responsible, who have worked without ceasing against many odds. Their reward is the brilliant success of what was conceded to be the best convention ever held. To the officers of the San Diego Teachers' Association and the chairmen of the convention committees is due the largest credit, but they were assisted ably by the other members of the committees of the association in general. The San Diego Music Teachers' Association officers are as follows: Albert F. Conant, president; Mrs. Zay Rector Bevitt, vice president; Willibald Lehmann, secretary; Le Roy E. Hammond, treasurer. Trustees—Florence Schinkel Gray, Blanche Lyons, Paul McCarty. Chairmen of convention committees: Program committee—Willibald Lehmann. Press committee—Mrs. Zay Rector Bevitt.

THE MAGNIFICENT ORGAN IN THE FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST, SAN DIEGO,
Where the organ concerts of the convention were given.

Photo by Lee N. Passmore, San Diego, Cal.
VIEW OF THE PLAZA AND THE U. S. GRANT HOTEL, WHERE ALL THE MEETINGS WERE HELD.

Finance committee—Albert F. Conant. Reception and banquet committee—Gertrude Gilbert. Membership committee—Mrs. L. L. Rowan. Printing and publication committee—Tyndall Gray.

Monday, July 13.

All day Monday and for a week previous the teachers from the North began gathering in San Diego. Quite a number took this opportunity for a vacation in connection with the convention, and the opening reception and program of Monday evening brought a large representative gathering of both the visitors and the residents. The ballroom of the U. S. Grant Hotel was well filled and greetings were cordial and hearty. The San Diego reception committee, with Gertrude Gilbert, chairman, was on hand, and everybody was looked after in the most kindly and cordial manner. After greetings had been exchanged and introductions made, all sat down to listen to a brief program, which served as a graceful introduction to the musical feast of the week. The reception program was given by the San Diego Mando Orchestra, Le Roy E. Hammond, director; Mrs. L. A. Vierson, soprano; Florence Norman-Shaw, violin; Florence Schinkel Gray, accompanist.

There are certain people who claim there is no place for the smaller instruments, but Mr. Hammond's little orchestra proved otherwise, for the ensemble work was excellent and the results delightfully graceful and melodious. Mrs. Vierson's group of songs included two Mozart numbers, the "Sky Lark" of Handel and three numbers by California composers. Her work is most artistic and finished and her voice has a beautiful lyrical quality.

Miss Norman-Shaw is one of the local musicians of much experience and success, having her own school, which she calls the Leipzig Violin and Piano School. She disclosed a big tone of freedom and musicianly understanding. Mrs. Gray is one of the best known and admired pianists in this part of the State.

After program, punch was served and all stayed to chat and become acquainted.

Tuesday, July 14.

This was in many ways the record day of the convention. First, in point of number, six concerts and two lectures in one day, and had they not been so uniformly interesting and instructive, might have proved overtaxing. As it was, they were a sheer delight, from the opening address of welcome by Albert F. Conant, president of the San Diego Music Teachers' Association, and the response by Henry Bretherick, president of the State association, to the last concert of the evening.

Mr. Conant, the president of the association, after extending greetings to the guests and welcoming them in the name of San Diego as well as the Music Association, said:

Musicians as a class have not always recognized the value of co-operation. Dealing as we do with the expression of emotion, sometimes our own emotions become involved and our aims and ambitions become personal rather than universal, but as the late Dr. Emerson, of the Emerson College of Oratory, used to say, "You cannot add to the general illumination of the world by putting out another man's lantern," the world today demands producers. Many are engaged in the necessary work of producing the material things that have become necessities to the present day civilization. It is the musician's privilege to add to the aesthetic wealth of the community; we are indeed fortunate in living in an age when these principles are becoming universally seen and acknowledged. Business men are beginning to learn that their competitors help to create a demand for the things they themselves have to sell. Musicians also are awakening to this fact; we too have something to sell; to sell it there must be a demand for it; to create this demand we must show our customers that we have something worth having.

It is therefore the policy of the San Diego Music Teachers' Association to welcome new musicians to this city. If the music they produce is good, they help create a demand for music, thus they cease to become competitors or rivals, they become our partners, helping us to sell our wares.

Mr. Bretherick said in reply:

It is not to be expected that we can vie with the Eastern cities as to the number of members in attendance at conventions. Our cities are too far distant and the individual expense too costly for that; but as to the program matter presented and in its performance, we have not feared comparison, and it has been generally conceded that our time thus spent together has been exceedingly profitable.

Music teachers' State associations, East and West, are impelled onward with a desire for greater activity, not simply for the pleasure of doing things, but rather with the higher impulse of raising the standard of the musical profession generally, and California is expected to fall in line, and so, at this convention we intend to consider some movements in this direction.

The most difficult questions considered at the various State conventions have been:

(1) Shall standardization of the music teachers be a national or a State issue?

(2) Shall the regulation of music teachers be governed by set examinations?

(3) Shall the standard requirement be "minimum" or "essential"?

(4) Shall the first move be simply registration of those now employed in the teaching profession, upon their own sworn statement of preparation?

Doubtless all teachers consider themselves as educators; but are all teachers capable of imparting such knowledge as will build up true musical culture, in a thoroughly systematic manner from an

A REMARKABLE PICTURE OF THE PLAZA IN SAN DIEGO, SHOWING THE ELECTRIC FOUNTAIN AND THE U. S. GRANT HOTEL BEYOND.

Photo by Lee N. Passnine.

Photo copyright, 1914, by the Panama-California Exposition.

PANAMA-CALIFORNIA EXPOSITION AT SAN DIEGO. THE PRADO FROM THE ETHNOLOGY BUILDING.

The Prado extends across the grounds from the main entrance to the back and each side is a covered colonnade, broken only at the cross streets, giving a protected walk almost the length of the grounds.

NORAH DREWETT
THE FAMOUS PIANIST
SEASON 1914-15
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

HINSHAW
Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE
Berlin Wagner Ring Festival, June 23rd to Aug. 21st
American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE
Management, R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

A GROUP OF SAN DIEGO MUSICIANS WHO HELPED MAKE THE CONVENTION A SUCCESS.
From left to right they are: Gertrude Gilbert, Paul McCarthy, Blanche Lyons and Loleta L. Rowan.

SOME OF THE LOCAL AND VISITING OFFICERS OF THE CALIFORNIA MUSIC TEACHERS' STATE ASSOCIATION IN CONVENTION AT SAN DIEGO, CAL.

They are from left to right, sitting: John C. Manning, president San Francisco Association; Albert F. Conant, president San Diego Association; Henry Bretherick, State president; Alexander T. Stewart, president Alameda County Association; Vernon C. Spencer, Los Angeles Association. Left to right, standing: Florence Schinkel Grey, Willibald Lehman, Caroline Little, W. H. Latt, Jane Catherwood, Florence Norman-Shaw, Frederick Schliewen, Mrs. Alice Tarnham, Jane Washington Pierce, Mrs. Zay Rector Bevitl, H. W. Patrick, Mrs. Davis.

ducational standpoint? The negative answer to this has brought bout the present activity.

If some standard of conformity or essentials, in preparing a stuent for teaching can be adopted, there will be a great saving of aste effort, time and money.

The desired result cannot be achieved at one stroke, either by ction on the part of teachers' associations or by legislation, but a eginning now, if in the right direction, is going to produce a arvelous transformation before another decade has passed.

Any action that will bring music teachers into closer sympathy ith each other's work is a good movement. All our activities thus ir have been of a voluntary nature, which most people consider e most worthy motive force.

They have been instituted and perpetuated by sincere workers ho were impelled by a desire to induce co-operation of sufficient rength as to enlist the support of the entire teaching profession. This has been successful only in a very small degree.

If a legislative movement is instituted, it will compel observance om the willing and unwilling alike.

This would not materially interfere with organized bodies, for ey can continue to insist upon such a standard for membership, degrees, as they may desire, and accept as members only those hose qualifications fulfill the conditions. The whole purpose of this movement is one of stimulation, not elimination, and is to be undertaken with the conviction that those who do not enrich their minds through a practical and continuous course of study will surely soon exhaust their teaching material or "stock in trade," while those pursuing the opposite course will not only remain fresh and resourceful, but will grow and develop.

Following Mr. Bretherick's remarks a concert was given by the San Diego members, which was so excellent and performed with such vivacity and virility that it started the day with a snap and spirit that did much to carry us through the long sessions. I wish that space allowed for as detailed a review of these concerts as I should like to give, but am forced to write briefly. However, there was not a single uninteresting number on this program. The number by Helen Engel Bosworth, violinist, and Claude Webster, pianist, was an unalloyed pleasure. Mrs. Bosworth is young and exceedingly gifted, having apparently all the essentials for a real violinist. Beside the true and beautiful tone and adequate technic, she possesses in abundance the temperament that holds the audience, the elusive something that is always demanded of the violinist. She should go far.

Mr. Webster in all his numbers showed decided gifts of both interpretation and execution. Mr. Raimondi, the

MABEL STROCK,
The brilliant young New York soprano who appeared in recital at the California Music Teachers' Convention.

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT FOSTER & DAVID
500 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK
DATES NOW BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915

clarinetist, I heard play last winter with the People's Orchestra in Los Angeles, and at the time I stated that it is a pity the clarinet as a solo instrument is not heard more frequently; his work is beyond criticism and aroused great enthusiasm.

Mrs. Bosworth's last number, "Liebeslied," is written by Alice Barnett-Price, a local composer-pianist, who accompanied Mrs. Bosworth, and it is a fine violin work. It was hard to realize that each of these two young girls is the mother of two children, and they are a living commentary on the modern woman.

Loleta L. Rowan, the vocalist on the program, is one of the favorite singers of San Diego and possesses a contralto voice of unusual scope, which shows excellent schooling, and she possesses rare qualities of interpretation. She was ably supported by the accompaniments of Amy Vincent.

Tuesday, 11.15 a. m., Zay Rector Bevitt, of San Diego, gave a lecture on "The Dunning System of Improved Music Study for Beginners," which she illustrated by a group of children. This was exceedingly interesting and she gave the little folks new tests in sight reading and transposition that would have taxed many an older person. Everybody enjoyed the glimpse at this phase of music work, for which Mrs. Bevitt is so remarkably adapted. It is plain to be seen that she dearly loves children and thoroughly understands the problem she wants to work out, and this accounts largely for her phenomenal sucecsss in this line.

Tuesday afternoon, at 1.30, one of the great treats of the convention was experienced in the organ recital given at First Church of Christ Scientist, by Albert F. Conant, who was for many years organist at the Christian Science Mother Church in Boston. Mr. Conant has the rare quality of temperament often missed in organists; he chose for this program Otto Malling's "Christus," which bears the subtitle "Twelve Tone Pictures for the Organ," which was an admirable vehicle to display his qualities of musicianship and his interpretation and the resources of the beautiful instrument in this church. The expression "tone pictures" is a fitting description of this composition. Not in years have I heard an organ work which combined the beauty of tone color and emotional variety as well as the possibilities of the instrument in any such degree.

Adding greatly to the impressiveness of the work were the readings preceding each number of the scriptural quotations upon which they were founded, by Laura C. Conant, whose exquisite interpretation and clarity of diction proved a joy, the result being a real spiritual as well as musical uplift. The two compositions of Paul Bliss, "Mary the Mother" and "The Return from the Cross," sung by Margie L. Webber, fitted perfectly into the program and added considerably to its beauty, as Mrs. Webber gave an excellent vocal and interpretative rendition.

Recital by Mabel Strock.

When it was learned that Estelle Heartt Dreyfus, of Los Angeles, was unable to give her program of Russian songs on Tuesday afternoon, much disappointment was expressed, but a very fortunate coincident saved the day. It happened that Mr. and Mrs. Albert Conant were entertaining as their guest Mabel Strock, of New York, and at the last moment this charming and gifted singer was able to supply a program to take the place of that which Mrs. Dreyfus was to have presented.

Although a stranger and little known to most of her audience, Miss Strock had scarcely begun her first number when all realized that here was a singer who thoroughly understood her art. Her voice is warm and vibrant and most beautifully poised, showing a thorough understanding of tone production, and at all times completely under the control of the singer. This gives her the opportunity to express the shades of feeling and emotion prompted by a thoroughly intelligent mind and a deeply spiritual and emotional nature. Her program from beginning to end displayed these qualities, and every one felt it was a great privilege to have heard it.

It was quite fitting that Miss Strock should appear during this session, as she is in reality a California girl. Her home was Riverside, from which much artistic talent has come, notably Mareclla Craft, who returns next year after great successes in Europe. Miss Craft is a friend of Miss Strock, and it was through the former's influence and advice that Miss Strock first went East to study. After remaining a while in Boston under Charles Adams she went to New York, where she has worked with Victor Harris and Mme. von Feilitzsch, the latter a coach of many artists. She will return to New York in September, where she will resume her church position in the Memorial Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, and will take up work in recital, oratorio and concert. Miss Strock has no aspirations operatically, although she is apparently well fitted for it.

Miss Strock is a girl of high ideals and conscientious devotion to her art, and will continue in the success she has already attained wherever she has sung in the East. Her program was as follows:

Aria, Lusinghe piu care (from Alexander).....Handel
Der Nussbaum.....Schumann
Frühlingsglaube.....Schubert
Ungeduld.....Schubert
Aria, Vissi d'Arte (from La Tosca).....Puccini
Chanson Provencale.....E. Dell' Acqua
Pourquoi.....Tschaikowsky
Air de Lia (from L'enfant Prodigue).....Debussy
The Lass with a Delicate Air.....Dr. Arne
Her Rose.....C. Whitney Coombs
The Willow.....Goring Thomas

This report would be incomplete without mention of the remarkable accompanying of Willibald Lehmann.

Orchestra Concert.

At 4.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon an orchestral concert was given by the popular Symphony Orchestra of San Diego, Chesley Mills, director, assisted by Blanche Lyons, soprano. This was listened to with keen interest by visiting musicians, as it was understood that this orchestra is new, having played but seven concerts previous to this one, its first season closing this past spring. Notwithstanding the faet that he was obliged to employ many substitutes, as some of his musicians had scattered, Mr. Mills proved himself to be possessed of the essential qualities for a conductor. He held his players together remarkably well, and the whole program was given with a verve and spirit that was most refreshing. It was really difficult to believe that this organization had been working so short a time, and too much credit cannot be given both to conductor and members. Mr. Mills is a very young man and this is his first work as a symphony conductor, but he directs with authority and understanding, and deserves every encouragement, for he has the nucleus of a good orchestra, the confidence of his men and the undoubted ability to create a fine organization.

Blanche Lyons was for two years the soloist with Ohlmyer's Band at Coronado, is a favorite with the San Diego public, and made herself equally so with the visitors. Her voice is a brilliant coloratura of much power.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Tuesday Evening Program.

At 7.45 a short vocal recital was given by Marion Vecki, baritone, of San Francisco, with Mrs. Marion Vecki at the piano. Nothwithstanding the fact that Mr. Vecki had just arrived after a long tedious journey and was obliged to go on the platform without dinner, he won for himself a very cordial place. He is possessed of a fine voice, used especially well in dramatic numbers.

At 8.30 o'clock a sonata recital was given by Nina Fletcher, of Boston, violinist, and Florence Schinkel Gray, of San Diego, pianist, which constituted one of the treats of the session. Miss Fletcher has made herself known throughout the country by her appearances on the programs of Mme. Schumann-Heink, and plays with a rare degree of finish and a technical proficiency.

Mrs. Gray is an artist of splendid schooling, possessed of the qualities of mind and heart necessary to make the piano enjoyed as well as admired. The ensemble revealed a close sympathy as well as much hard work. They played the Beethoven F major sonata and the Cesar Franck.

This closed a day of rare pleasure, given almost exclusively by San Diego artists, and was sufficient to give them a place second to none.

Wednesday, July 15.

Wednesday morning a program of Russian composers was given by the Fuhrer-Zielinski Trio, of Los Angeles, composed of Bessie Fuhrer, violin; Lucy Fuhrer, cello; Jaroslaw de Zielinski, piano, assisted by Mercedes Ciesielska, soprano. Mr. Zielinski is well known as one of the most erudite musicians in America, possessed of one of the finest musical libraries, and his programs are always an education as well as a pleasure. Especially interesting are his Russian programs because of his intimate acquaintance with most of the composers as well as their works. On this occasion the program was no exception and gave the greatest pleasure. The Misses Fuhrer have been well known through their connection with the Women's Orchestra of Los Angeles, Miss Bessie being the concertmaster and Miss Lucy the first cellist for several seasons. The members of this trio have been working together for some time, with the result that their work possesses the necessary sympathy and fluency for good concerted playing.

Miss Ciesielska made a decided impression with her beautiful voice and rare dramatic gifts. She was dressed in Russian costume, which added greatly to the effect. I understand she is preparing for the operatic stage and venture to predict a great success for her in that line.

Georg Krueger, of San Francisco, gave a piano recital at 11 a. m.

Another Sonata Recital.

At 1.30 p. m. Mary Passmore and George Stewart McManus, both of San Francisco, gave a recital of violin and piano sonatas which in point of beauty and absolute sympathy left nothing to be desired in concerted work. It was the universal verdict that their work was beyond criticism.

Miss Passmore's tone is exceedingly warm and broad and she possesses far more than mere technic. Mr. McManus has brilliancy, delicacy and power and the understanding of dynamic values necessary to ensemble work. They played the Brahms A major, Mozart G major, Richard Strauss E flat major, and a better contrasted group would be hard to select.

Vernon Spencer-Anthony Carlson Recital.

At 2.45 p. m. a piano and vocal recital by Vernon Spencer, pianist, and Anthony Carlson, basso, was the offering. Mr. Spencer is a well known educator, composer and pianist, and his playing is most satisfying. Especial interest was felt in the "Six Poetic Children's Pieces" of his own composition, which are altogether charming and fitted to appear on the program of the adult as well as the child.

Mr. Carlson is one of the most artistic singers on the coast and possessed of a magnificent voice. His numbers were much enjoyed, and Gertrude Ross added greatly to the program by her artistic accompaniments. This program was as follows:

Second Ballad, B minor.....Liszt
Mr. Spencer.
Drei Wanderer.....Hermann
Ich trage meine Minne.....Strauss
Vergebliches Ständchen.....Brahms
Das Meer hat seine Perlen.....Vernon Spencer
Mr. Carlson.
Six poetic children's pieces, op. 21.....Vernon Spencer
Etude, D flat major.....Liszt
Etude, op. 25, No. 12.....Chopin
Mr. Spencer.
Novembre.....Tremisot
Romance.....Debussy
L'Angelus.....Folksong of Lower Brittany
Marine.....Lalo
Mr. Carlson.
Sonata Heroic (in one movement).....Campbell-Tipton
Mr. Spencer.
Where E'er Ye Walk.....Handel
I'll Sail upon the Dog Star.....Purcell
The Banjo Song.....Homer
Danny Deever.....Damrosch

Lecture-Recital on Paganini.

At 4 o'clock Ralph John Wylie, violinist, with Ramona Rollins Wylie at the piano, gave a lecture recital on "Paganini, the Superman." Mr. Wylie is one of the best informed musicians in Los Angeles and possesses an unusually fine command of English. This, together with his gifts as a violinist, fitted him to make an interesting exposition of this great charaeter in musical history. It is to be regretted that the delay in the previous programs

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR—SEASON 1914-15—NOW BOOKING
STEINWAY PIANO USED
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York

and the necessity for the closing at 5 o'clock obliged him to cut short somewhat this interesting program. Nevertheless it was much enjoyed by a large number, who admired equally Mr. Wylie's brilliant playing and interesting discourse.

Panama-California Exposition Grounds Visited.

At 5 o'clock automobiles were waiting at the U. S. Grant Hotel entrance to take the visiting delegates on a ride about the city and through the grounds of the Panama-California Exposition, to be held in San Diego beginning January 1, 1915. This latter was a great privilege and unbounded delight and enthusiasm were expressed for what had been accomplished in the last few months. To an Easterner it would be utterly incomprehensible, for what was a barren desert five months ago now shows profuse vegetation, vines that climb two stories high, tall trees and a mass of flowering and growing things. They have truly made "the desert to rejoice and blossom as the rose." The visitors saw the site and foundation of the great organ presented by Mr. Spreckels, which will be the central feature of the musical programs, many of which will be given in the open air. The organ and the orchestral stands will face an open plaza seating many thousands.

The beauty of the buildings, which will all be of the Spanish or Mission type, most of them arranged about courts, and the laying out of the grounds in keeping with the architecture, present a consistent and characteristic type that is becoming associated with California.

The evening was given over to the banquet in the dining room of the U. S. Grant Hotel, when a large number of the delegates, both local and visiting, gathered about the long tables. Richard Schliewen was the toastmaster and started each toast with a few witty words. Those responding were State President Bretherick, County President Conant, Alexander T. Stewart, president of the Alameda County association; John C. Manning, president of the San Francisco County association; Willibald Lehmann, secretary of the local organization; Jane Catherwood, of Los Angeles; Vernon Spencer, of Los Angeles; Mrs. Zay Rector Bevitt, of San Diego; Blanche Ashley, of San Francisco; Jaroslaw de Zielinski, of Los Angeles, and Samuel Savannah, of San Francisco, State recording secretary.

Thursday, July 16.

At 9 a. m. a lecture was given by Florence Schinkel Gray, of San Diego, on "The Principles of the Weight System of Tone Production for the Piano," which was listened to with deep interest. Mrs. Gray explained the system evolved by Mme. Carreno, in which the weight of the arm and the body are used to take the place of the old pressure system. Mrs. Gray has gone deeply into this subject and presented it in a most convincing manner, explaining the benefits in relaxed tension and strain and improved beauty of tone to be secured in this manner. Mrs. Gray's own tone work and her success as a teacher are arguments in its favor.

A concert by Los Angeles members was to have followed this, but owing to Miss Winston's illness, who was to have sung, the program was considerably altered.

Theodor Gordohn, violinist, of Los Angeles, played five original compositions for violin as follows: "June," "September," "Russian Lullaby," "Russian Love Song," "Mazurka Caprice," which were most attractive and disclosed genuine creative talent. The "Lullaby" had to be repeated. It is an exquisite melody. tender and full of Slavic pathos, but each one of them was excellent.

Mr. Gordohn plays with so much feeling and color that his interpretations added greatly to the compositions. The difficult accompaniments were played by Vernon Spencer.

In place of the balance of the program W. H. Lott, of Los Angeles, gave an exhaustive paper on "Choral Music," a subject with which Mr. Lott is thoroughly conversant by actual experience as well as in theory, and which he presented in a very convincing manner.

For State Legislative Bill.

At 11 o'clock a general business meeting was held, which was marked by an entire lack of controversy or disagreement and dispatched promptly. It was unanimously voted to hold the meeting next year in Alameda County. A discussion was held upon the advisability of a classification of members, but it was voted to postpone any action for the present.

The articles for the State legislative bill were passed. They are as follows:

First: That all persons who are practising music teaching in the State of California shall, within six months after this bill becomes a law, register themselves as music teachers with the Secretary of State, who shall issue a certificate to the applicant. That the fee for such registration and certificate shall be two dollars.

Second: That in making application for registration the applicant must state what his claims are to the right to teach music. With whom, where and how long they have studied. What diplomas, if any, they possess.

Third: That before presenting any such statement for registration it must be sworn to by the applicant before a notary public.

Fourth: That any false statement of failure to register shall be a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $500 or imprisonment for one year, or both.

Fifth: That every registered teacher must display in a public and prominent place within their studio a certified copy of their sworn statement in registering, to be subject to a misdemeanor, punishable as for false statement.

Sixth: That any person can obtain a copy of any teacher's statement through the Secretary of State upon application and payment of fifty cents.

The reports of the various county superintendents were read by Mr. Savannah, the secretary, when the authors were not present. With words of kindly advice to the membership concerning the consideration of the articles of classification, by Mr. Bretherick, the State president, the meeting was adjourned.

In speaking of the meeting for next year, Alexander Stewart, president of the Alameda County association, said that they were preparing large plans and hoped to make the meeting of 1915 a national affair. Details of these plans will be given later.

Organ Recital by Ernest Douglas.

At 2 o'clock an organ recital by Ernest Douglas, of Los Angeles, was given in First Church of Christ Scientist. Mr. Douglas was assisted by Emma Porter Makinson, of Los Angeles, soprano. Owing to the fact that Mrs. Makinson had to catch a train her numbers were given first, otherwise the program was as printed.

Mrs. Makinson is especially fitted to sing the Cadman songs, as she was the first woman artist to introduce his songs and has been closely associated with him during his career. She was for many years in Pittsburgh and is a singer of sterling ability. She made a most favorable impression and responded to two encores.

Mr. Douglas is organist at St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral in Los Angeles and a man who thoroughly understands his instrument. His own numbers disclosed him to be a composer of decided merit. The entire program was fine and was listened to by an audience that taxed the capacity of the church.

Following the organ recital Elizabeth Simpson, of Berkeley, gave an illustrated lecture on "A Year in the Life of a Piano Student," which was both witty and instructive. Miss Simpson is exceedingly gifted both as a pianist and a lecturer, and was listened to with keen appreciation.

After this lecture the numbers omitted from the morning program by Fannie Dillon, pianist, and Grace Widney Mabee, soprano, of Los Angeles, were given. In introducing Miss Dillon, who played six preludes of her own composition, Mr. Spencer said that he considered Miss Dillon one of the greatest composers in America today; that she bore the unusual record of never having written a teaching piece nor a popular song, but that her work was all the result of the inspiration of a genius and in no way commercial. Mrs. Dillon's compositions cover quite a field and she has written several symphonic works. These six preludes are thoroughly pianistic and are big material. They were received with genuine appreciation.

Mrs. Mabee sang the aria "Avesto," from "Polyeucte," Gounod; "Care Selve," from "Atlanta," Handel; "Dawn in the Desert," "Sunset in the Desert," by Gertrude Ross; "Thou Art So Like a Flower," "Summer Night," "At the Cradle," by Vernon Spencer.

Mrs. Mabee's voice is beautifully smooth and sympathetic and she sang this difficult group in an impeccable fashion, and they were trying songs to sing, too.

Mrs. Ross played her accompaniments in her always musicianly style, and together their work was thoroughly satisfying. Mrs. Ross' songs which Mrs. Mabee sang are being much used by artists and are original and characteristic.

Mr. Spencer's songs have just been published and are extremely modern and very difficult for the singer, but are possessed of the qualities that should win them a permanent place in song literature.

As the hour was so late the round table and symposium originally planned for this day were omitted.

Evening's Program.

The last program of the session was a concert by the San Francisco and Alameda County association members, who gave a really exceptional program. Every number was splendid and the program possessed a variety that was grateful. Miss Simpson's exquisite work made us all regret that we should not have heard her more. Miss Little disclosed a rarely beautiful voice, with a warm mezzo quality but a very wide range. She sang with fine feeling and diction. In the Brahms sonata in D minor Mr. McManus and Miss Pasmore only deepened the splendid impression they had already made.

In the "Pagliacci" prologue Mr. Vecki proved again that he belonged on the operatic stage, as this number showed decided dramatic talent together with an unusual voice.

Mr. Krueger closed the program with a piano group.

This ended the serious program, but when Alexander Stewart announced that there had been an oversight and certain numbers had been omitted, every one suspected a surprise. In this no one was disappointed. When he introduced Ignatz Paddyrestoff a roar greeted the appearance of this noble gentleman, who was soon discovered to be none other than Elizabeth Simpson, of Berkeley, who gave an exceedingly funny impersonation of the noted Pole. Following this Emmy Destinn was [illegible] sing "Carmen." "She" proved to be George McManus, and his costuming as well as his rendition in German of the famous aria caused every one to scream. It was really a performance worthy any vaudeville stage. Marion Vecki only increased the impression of his dramatic gifts by his singing of "My Cousin Caroos," which was exceedingly clever.

Mary Pasmore closed the program with a very ludicrous interpretation of "Obstination." Every one agreed that the closing part of the program was most fitting and a great relief of spirit.

Thus ended one of the most successful conventions the music teachers of California have ever held.

JANE CATHERWOOD.

Why Engagements?

T. Foster Why, bass noble, will sing the bass roles in Handel's "Messiah" and "Acis and Galatea," which are to be given on August 6 and 11 respectively by the Columbia University Chorus at the university, New York, under the very able direction of Walter Henry Hall. These engagements will mark Mr. Why's third appearance with this notable society and conductor in less than six months. This not only shows Mr. Why's great popularity with this organization, but is also a proof of his worth as an artist of the highest caliber.

Mr. Why and Mme. Rost Why, contralto, have been engaged by the Columbia University Institute for a joint recital, to be given March 12, 1915. Needless to say, this recital will be a success, and the accompanying of Mme. Rost Why will be a unique feature of the event.

Just at present Mr. and Mrs. Why are enjoying themselves on an island in Great South Bay, where they spend a good share of their time indulging in their favorite pastime, fishing. So far luck has been with Mrs. Why, for she caught a fine nine and a half pounder the other day.

Some recent press opinions of Mr. Why's solo work in "Elijah" follow:

Mr. Why, who essayed the dominant role of Elijah, is a singer, evidently well trained in the school of oratorio. His voice . . . has uncommon purity of tone.—Philadelphia North American.

T. Foster Why's mellow bass was heard to advantage in the role of the prophet, and his solo passages drew continued applause. Especially enjoyable was his singing of the air, "Is Not His Word Like Fire?" in which the composer adopted a somewhat freer and less formal style than is characteristic of the remainder of the oratorio.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

T. Foster Why carried through the monologues of Elijah in a melodious, light baritone-bass. His leading-in of the chorus, "Thanks Be to God," at the close of the first part of the oratorio, should have pleased the conductor as it pleased the audience, which was appreciative.—Philadelphia Inquirer. (Advertisement.)

Unusual Recital of Van Den Burg Pupils.

The recital at the von Ende School of Music last Wednesday afternoon, July 29, presented a number of pupils of Hans van den Burg in an interesting program, consisting of Beethoven, Schubert and Chopin numbers.

Recitals by pupils of any one teacher are likely to be tiresome, since the majority of music students are bent upon copying their favorite master or imitating their teacher. But every recital by pupils of Van den Burg gives evidence of his rare ability to develop individualities of those studying under him.

Their playing was remarkable for crispness and clearness, for beauty of tone, for wholesome, well tempered strength, for thoughtful, dignified interpretation, for virile conception and brilliancy of performance. But not one resembled the other except in musicianly quality.

The Misses Bonito, Golden and Maudsley and Messrs. Bender and Nesbit are musical personalities in the making, whose further development it will be very interesting to watch.

Riga, Russia, may not have symphony concerts next season, owing to the lack of patronage suffered last winter.

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street, New York

DONALD CHALMERS Basso
29 Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, N.J.
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

GRAHAM REED
BARITONE
115 Carnegie Hall - New York

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées), Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI.) Paris

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Studio: 10 Rue Herran, Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

ELISABETH LECTURE—RECITALS MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
French and English Readings
America, October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
(especially for opera students)
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4. rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Seul professeur de chant diplomé par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi
151 Rue de Rome.

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
Mme. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris

American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

SINECURE FOR MUSICIANS TO END AT PARIS OPERA.

New Director Rescinds Luxurious Privileges and Requires Rigid Attendance and Real Rehearsals on Part of Orchestra—Americans in Paris.

[All inquiries referring to American musicians and music as well as matters of interest to American visitors in Paris, or such as contemplate a visit to France, may be addressed to H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beauséjour, to whom tickets should also be sent by those who desire their recitals or concerts to be attended.]

Paris, July 21, 1914.

Musical doings in Paris in the middle of July are very exciting—just about as exciting as the monologue of Gurnemanz in the first scene of "Parsifal."

The only thing which stirs the interest is the fact that the new director of the Opera, Jacques Rouché, has already run up against a snag, even before he has begun his actual duties. This time it is the orchestra. The men want more pay and less work. M. Rouché is inclined to meet the demands for more pay as far as possible, but there are certain abuses in connection with the presence of the members of the orchestra at their desk which he very rightly wishes to abolish. As it is at present, each player has a right to remain absent from single performances at certain intervals and the management is obliged to pay a substitute. Further, each player has at stated periods the right to provide a substitute at his own expense and can do this without notifying the management in any way. The consequence is that after rehearsals of an important new work the conductor may at the first performance find before him half a dozen players who never have seen a note of the music which they are to play.

MUSICAL TENNIS IN PARIS.

Left to right, standing: Fred Protheroe, tenor; George Suffle, baritone; Mr. Claffey, organist; Myrilla Annis, soprano; Charles de la Platé, bass. Seated: Mrs. de la Platé, soprano; H. O. Osgood.

No wonder that the average standard of the performances at the Opera is not any too high. M. Rouché wishes to compel the players to give notice in advance of their intention to be absent so that the management itself may attend to providing a proper substitute. This does not seem to be an unreasonable demand, but still the players are opposed to it. Further, each player is required to attend only forty rehearsals in the whole year without special payment; for more than forty rehearsals he is paid so much per rehearsal.

As for the payment, it is true that it is not particularly high. The best yearly salary paid is 3,950 francs (something less than $800), but at the same time, by taking advantage of his leave of absence and of his right to provide a substitute, the player is compelled to play only 156 times in the course of the year, which works out at the rate of a little over 25 francs, or about $5 a performance, which is good pay for the kind of playing which one generally hears at the Opera.

There are some other funny provisions as well. For instance, if the bass drummer devotes his strong right arm alone merely to banging he is simply paid his regular salary, but if he tinkles the triangle with his left hand the same evening, he receives a bonus of 10 francs. If the bassoon gentleman has to go to the trouble of laying down his instrument to take up the contrabassoon and play a few measures on it, it costs the management an additional $3, which is perhaps one reason why we so seldom have Wagner at the Opera.

It has been the custom to hold rehearsals only on the evenings when the Opera is closed, never in the daytime. M. Rouché proposes to exercise his right to hold rehearsals whenever he may please, night or day.

Be the outcome of this contention what it may, the whole matter seems most ridiculous to any one accustomed to the splendid discipline of a German opera house, and throws a strong sidelight on the reason why performances at the famous Paris Opera are not better than they are. It is a miracle, under the circumstances, that they are as good as they are. M. Rouché is making an honest and

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care Paris Office, Musical Courier)

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot. Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

DOCTEUR CONTA Cure and rejuvenescence of the voice by a special treatment of the mucous membranes of the nose and throat
OFFICE HOURS: 1 to 4
18 RUE DUPHOT, (Bd. Madeleine) PARIS

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

CHARLES W. CLARK
AMERICAN TOUQ SEASON 1914-15
BARITONE
Dr. Frederick Clark, Personal Representative
12 Rue Leonard de Vinci, :: PARIS

determined effort to raise the standard of his house, and it is certainly to be hoped that he will find some means of succeeding in spite of all difficulties.

John Heath for Paris.

Among those musicians who have been spending the spring months in Paris is John Heath, the American pianist, who played at a number of large private soirées, among them one at Mrs. Webb's and another at Mme. de Pommereau's. Mr. Heath has left to spend the summer at St. Sulpice, near Lucerne, on the Lake of Geneva, but he is so favorably impressed with Paris as a musical center that he will return again the first of September to make

VANNI MARCOUX AND HIS BRIDE ON THEIR WEDDING DAY.
Mme. Marcoux was formerly Madeleine Morlay.

this city his permanent headquarters. He will open a large studio here for his classes and also will be heard during the winter in recitals here and in a number of German and Austrian cities where his playing is already well known and admired. Mr. Heath formerly lived for a number of years in Vienna, studying there under Meister Leschetizky.

A Debut.

Monday evening, last week, the American soprano, Jessie Christian, effected her debut at the Opera here in the role of the Queen in "Les Huguenots." Though plainly nervous, Miss Christian made an excellent impression and was heartily and deservedly applauded after her big scene in the second act. She is a pupil of the late Master Giuliani. Her voice, while not of especially large size, is of excellent quality, and her vocal work is satisfactory in every respect. She was formerly one of the leading artists at the important provincial opera house at Bordeaux.

Paris Notes.

T. Arthur Russell, the well known concert manager of London, has been here for a few days.

Theophil Demetriescu, the young Roumanian pianist whose playing has already won for him an enviable name in Germany and in his native country, has been in Paris for a short visit. He was one of the few pupils whom Eugen d'Albert accepted during the last few years.

Director Hans Gregor and Mrs. Gregor (formerly the well known American opera singer, Della Rogers), who have been staying here for some time, have left for Ostend, where they will spend a month resting in anticipation of a very busy season next winter at Vienna.

Hanna Butler, the Chicago soloist and teacher, has left Paris for a motoring tour of several weeks through the chateau country and Switzerland.

The young singers shown in the snapshot of the tennis party all are pupils of prominent teachers here in Paris. Mr. Protheroe and Miss Annis study with Baron von Steege; Mr. and Mrs. de la Plate are with Arthur Alexander and Mr. Suffle is at the d'Aubigné studio. Mr. Claffey is the organist of the American Church in the rue de Berri, Mr. Suffle being the baritone of the choir there as well.

Seagle Busy in England.

The animated white object to be seen in the middle of the accompanying snapshot represents Oscar Seagle, the baritone, throwing one of his famous "corkscrew spitters." For one who is supposed to be taking a vacation, Mr. Seagle is about the busiest person imaginable. At his charming summer home, New House, Bramber, Sussex, on the English south coast, lessons begin very promptly after breakfast, continuing until lunch, after which Mr. Seagle "throws a few over" just to freshen up before the afternoon lesson, which continues until it is time for a very late tea. At least seven hours a day are necessary to take care of his large summer class, which is made up for he present of the following:

Eleanor Poehler, dramatic soprano, Minneapolis and New York.
Pauline Curley, lyric soprano, New York.
Marian Clark, soprano, New York.
Esther White, soprano, New York.
Alice Bingham, soprano, New York.
Anna Taylor Jones, contralto (University Quartet), New York.
Mrs. George Beck, soprano, Chicago.
George Nelson Holt, bass (Columbia School of Music), Chicago.
Gustav Holmquist, bass, Chicago.
Frank Steen, tenor, Chicago.
Rudolph Engberg, basso cantante, Chicago.
Edna Ver Haar, mezzo soprano, Chicago.
Ragnahild Holmquist, lyric soprano, Minneapolis.
W. B. Olds, baritone (Milliken University), Decatur, Ill.
Harry Phillips, basso cantante, Minneapolis.
Laura St. John Westervelt, soprano, Chicago.
Miss Lerche, mezzo soprano, Chicago.
Nancy White, soprano, Chattanooga, Tenn.
Elmer G. Hoelzle, tenor, Jacksonville, Fla.
Lucy Call, coloratura soprano (Metropolitan Opera Company), New York.
Elizabeth Reeside, lyric soprano (Boston Opera Company), Washington, D. C.
Alfred Braun, baritone, England.
William Andrews, tenor, England.
Miss Hasbrouch, soprano, New York.

OSCAR SEAGLE, PITCHER, FASTER THAN THE CAMERA.

Earle G. Killeen, baritone, Cedar Rapids, Ia.
Leon Rice, tenor, New York.

Vera Kaplun-Aronson's Recitals.

The concert pianist, Vera Kaplun-Aronson, wife of the Berlin pianist-pedagogue, Maurice Aronson, has most auspiciously introduced herself to German concert audiences during the past winter. Her appearance with the Philharmonic Orchestra in Beethoven Hall and her piano recital in Bechstein Hall, Berlin, have already been referred to in these columns as rare and most remarkable artistic successes. The critical opinions of the entire Berlin press coincided with those from such musical cities as Halle, Hanover, Goettingen. They all acclaimed Mme. Kaplun-Aronson as one of the most talented pianists of the day.

This very gifted young woman played Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto and a group of soli by the same composer in a recent Beethoven symphony concert at Bad Salzbrünn. The local press proclaims her a Beethoven interpreter of the truest type and praises the dignity of her readings, her sovereign technical mastery and her artistic phrasing and shadings. Her success is spoken of in various criticisms as "abundant, almost stormy"; "after this brilliant performance the artist was deservingly and enthusiastically hailed"; "earned the heartiest applause."

In the fall Vera Kaplun-Aronson will make her initial bow to London audiences and will appear with orchestra and in recitals at St. Petersburg, Moscow, Stuttgart, Mainz and other continental cities. In her artistic training Vera Kaplun-Aronson stands as a representative of the Berlin pianist-pedagogue, Maurice Aronson, her husband, whose pupil she was.

Von Ende Pupils' Success Abroad

Sergei Kotlarsky, the young Russian violinist, for more than ten years a pupil of Herwegh von Ende, of New York, is touring the French seaside resorts this summer and is having great success with the fashionable audiences and the critics.

Among the comments that were made in Lorient, where he concertized with the Philharmonic Society, were the following:

> The Russian violinist's rendition of the Mendelssohn concerto with the accompaniment of the orchestra, under the baton of M. Guiol, was that of the great artst. The suppleness of his bow, the marvelous clearness and precision of his technic, which seems to stop at no difficulties, and the irresistible swing and dash which reflects a remarkable temperament, brought the audience to their feet and he was recalled again and again, until he responded with the delightful gavotte by Bach.

In another concert, in which Kotlarsky assisted M. Guiol, himself a brilliant violinist, he distinguished himself as a conductor, the report saying:

> It is our duty to render sincere homage to the admirable manner in which the Russian violinist, Kotlarsky, conducted the orchestra; it was a remarkable instance of the Franco-Russian alliance in the domain of art.

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Bird Music.

This is a vocal quartet. Being birds of a feather, they flock together; but they do not always sing together. In fact, they show a shocking lack of rhythmical sense, though their tone compares favorably with some of the adenoid quartets that sing "The Old Oaken Bucket" at benefit concerts. The first soprano of this quartet is a perfect duck. The contralto, however, is unquestionably a quack. She is more of a diver than a diva and has a number of mannish ways which do not add to her attractiveness.

This photograph was taken at a costume recital of "Oh, for the Wings of a Dove." During the summer address all communications to "The Duck Pond," Willow Grove, Pa. On Thanksgiving Day, or Christmas at latest, the quartet will be disbanded, stuffed, roasted and eaten—

Photo by C. Lucas.
THE QUARTET.

With their feathers at rest in a pillow
And their bones in the soup, not the billow.

The Famous Prima Donna of the Paris Grand Opera
MLLE. ALICE VERLET
"With the exception of Mmes. Patti and Melba, no voice of exactly the same quality has been in this country for a long period. . . ."
—London Morning Post, March 22, 1909.
Will Tour the Season 1914-15 in U.S.A. and Canada and is now being booked for Concerts and Recitals.
By Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave.
New York

JOHN REBARER

CONCERT PIANIST

Address L. R. REBARER

420 Madison Ave. New York City

EMMA LOEFFLER

DRAMATIC SOPRANO

Concert
Oratorio
Recital

103 West 77th Street :: New York

Telephone 7928 Schuyler

After Nine Years in Leipsic

MRS. CARL ALVES

will resume residence in New York next August, beginning vocal instruction September 15

Applications may be made now with

C. WALDEMAR ALVES

48 West 90th Street -:- New York

We hear much regarding the "soul" of the piano. Whether this "soul" is found in the soundboard or the action, or in the combination of both, is fully described in literature prepared by Kranich & Bach. It is well to know something about the grand piano, if one is going to purchase one. Study the claims of the Kranich & Bach, which present many inventions that place these instruments in a position strictly individual.

KRANICH & BACH

New York

THE VON ENDE SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Progressive New York Institution Has a Faculty of Musicians of Rare Scholarship and Eminence—A School with Ideals.

With a view to maintaining the highest possible standard of musical excellence and thoroughness, the von Ende School of Music has inaugurated new schedules of studies and stringent final tests for certificates and diplomas.

Music is subject to the same laws of progress as any other art, and so is musical instruction. Systems unsuited to the spirit of the time and methods that cannot be made to respond to the individual's personal needs, have no place in the education of the generation growing up about us. A school of music recognizing this fact does not necessarily need to ignore all precedent and start on a quest of sensational innovations. The eclecticism of Handel, learning all there is to learn and then going his own way, is as wise a process to pursue now as it was in Handel's time. It is a safe principle to act upon both for the student and for the school. Upon such a sound and solid foundation rests the von Ende School of Music. It has retained the form and organization of the conventional conservatory, but it is alive with a new spirit. It is inspired by that new idealism which is springing up in our modern intellectual life as a hopeful promising young growth. A school with ideals, it attempts to establish between teacher and students that noble relation of comradeship and cooperation which makes for the inner satisfaction of both and for the success of the institution to which they belong. The school addresses itself primarily to students possessing the earnest desire to do serious, thorough-going work and it aims to give them a complete musical education without destroying their individuality.

Without any intention of establishing a cult of personality, Herwegh von Ende, the director, has been singularly lucky in selecting a faculty of musicians of rare scholarship and eminence. In a criticism of last year's closing concert occurred this significant statement:

"It is apparent that Herwegh von Ende, the director, has not alone succeeded in placing all departments under eminent pedagogues, but has carefully selected masters imbued with a highly artistic nature as well. The cold pedagogic atmosphere was entirely lacking and replaced by a warm artistic atmosphere not often prevalent in scholastic events."

Among the names associated with Mr. von Ende in his work only a few need to be mentioned to bring out that important feature of the faculty. Hans van den Burg, one of the most distinguished pianists, pedagogues and composers of Holland, combines qualities rarely seen in any one man: artist, scholar, man of experience, he has one of the best informed minds in many branches of knowledge and by his close association with the late Massenet, Charpentier, Verhoelst, Israels, Mesdag, Maris and other men prominent in the world of music and of art, brings into the school not a little of the intellectual atmosphere of the Old World. Lawrence Goodman, a pupil of Ernest Hutcheson and O. Boise, of Lhevinne and Busoni, is a musician of striking individuality and a most conscientious teacher. Jean Marie Mattoon has few rivals as far as scholarship and ability and devotion to teaching are concerned; for eight years a pupil of Leschetizky and for six years a teacher at the Brée Piano School in Vienna which is under his supervision, she is perhaps the foremost representative of her master's method in America. Albert Ross Parsons, musician, pedagogue and philosopher, is an artist and teacher the country is justly proud of, and has a following of pupils that give proof of his broad and timely eclecticism. Sigismund Stojowski, the Polish pianist and composer, whose name is known from one end of the country to the other, is another striking personality. Elise Conrad, Stojowski's first assistant, ranks among the school's teachers who have achieved the best results. Lastly there is Vita Witek, for many years pianist of the Berlin Philharmonic Trio, an ensemble player and an instructor of rare eminence, and one who also brings a distinct breath of genuine European spirit into the school.

The violin department of the school is hardly less remarkable. The success of Herwegh von Ende himself is due in no little measure to his gift of winning and keeping the friendship and loyalty of his pupils, a number of them having remained with him from the first year of his arrival in New York to the present time. Sergei Kotlarsky, who has been applauded by New York audiences when he appeared as soloist at orchestral concerts at Carnegie Hall and the Metropolitan Opera House, and who when a mere boy was on tour with Caruso, studied for eight years with Herwegh von Ende.

J. Frank Rice, who studied with Mr. von Ende for nine years, has now for seven years been his assistant, and is another example of that loyalty which is said to be rarer among musicians than members of any other profession. Mr. Rice is far more than a mere instructor of the violin; he is a thoughtful, earnest educator whose devotion to his profession is almost unique. Anton Witek, whose fame as soloist and teacher in Berlin, where he was for sixteen years the concertmaster of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, has followed him to this country since he entered upon the same position in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is another big personality associated with the school. Mr. Witek has also turned out pupils that are now spreading his fame as violin pedagogue, among them Frank Holding, who toured Australia with Nordica, Havlicek and others.

Aware of the great responsibility of training so delicate an instrument as is the human voice, the faculty is most careful to select for the individual student the teacher most needed and best adapted. Adrienne Remenyi, the daughter of the late Edouard Remenyi and a pupil of Duvernoy, the former director of the opera class in the Paris Conservatoire, had won the approval of Massenet, Gounod, Bernard, Godard and Ambroise Thomas before she came to this country to concertize with her father, but has of late years devoted herself entirely to teaching. Adrienne Remenyi has a following of loyal pupils who hold her in high esteem for her conscientiousness and honesty no less than for her knowledge, judgment and taste. As a teacher of French diction and as an interpreter of French music she is a recognized authority among musicians, and her success has been astonishing.

Other departments of the school are equally well provided for. At the organ presides Harry Rowe Shelley, in the ear training and sight reading class Mme. C. Trotin. The students of theory and composition have the advantage of instructors like Hans van den Burg, Harry Rowe Shelley and J. Frank Rice, whose ability to guide the learner through the world of harmony, counterpoint composition and orchestration, until they are able to dispense with teachers and rules, is unquestioned.

Herwegh von Ende is constantly on the alert for new additions to the faculty, and the engagement of Lewis M. Hubbard, eminent Liszt pupil, late director of the Lachmund Conservatory of Music, which has been absorbed by the von Ende interests; Alfred Ilma, operatic bass baritone of international fame; Henri LaBonte, tenor of most artistic and musicianly equipment, and Morris Lichtmann, assistant to Godowsky at Vienna for several years, are indications of the expansion this school is enjoying.

With a faculty so eclectic in its national makeup and a policy equally eclectic in its pedagogical methods, the school can hardly be rivaled for breadth of vision and for depth and solidity of achievement.

ADA SODER-HUECK

THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,

famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.

Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryan

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO

"Europe's Famous Song Bird"

Season 1914-15 Now Booking

Management

Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

MME. MARIE RAPPOLD

Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano

of the Metropolitan Opera Co.

Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915

Exclusive Management:

R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

"The perfection of Quartet playing."—London Daily Mail.

The World's Greatest Chamber Music Organization. The

FLONZALEY QUARTET

Tour 1914-15 Now Booking

Management: LOUDON CHARLTON, 868 Carnegie Hall, New

THE FAMILY TREE OF THE PIANO.

BY ARTHUR SHATTUCK.

IN this day and age, when everybody wants to know all about the family tree of nearly everybody else, and when it is more important to have one's name in "Who's Who" than it is in either Dun or Bradstreet, it seems to be high time for some one of the pianists to arise and set forth clearly just whence comes the piano.

Dried sinews stretched across the shell of a dead tortoise is a far flight from the concert grand piano of today, and yet it is from this primitive source that all stringed instruments may be traced, and further, it is generally acknowledged that the culmination of the stringed instrument has been reached in the piano product of the present.

The history of stringed instruments harks back almost to the event which holy writers chronicled by saying: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." Ever since the human race was young the record of its people whether written on parchments or graven on tablets of stone, contained much mention of stringed instruments.

David, the sweet singer of Israel, drove the glooms away from King Saul by playing a harp accompaniment to the songs he sung for the morose monarch. But students will find that David was almost a modern. A thousand years before David the Egyptians had many stringed instruments. In the deathless hieroglyphics of the pyramids are pictured the harp, the lyre and the guitar.

To Mercury, the winged messenger of the Egyptian god, Osiris, is ascribed the invention of the first stringed instrument. The hieroglyphics say that Mercury was walking along the banks of the Nile one day after one of the periodical inundations. The Nile had overflowed its banks and the land had been submerged, but now the water had subsided, and as Mercury walked along his foot accidentally struck against the shell of a dead tortoise. Across the inside of the shell the dead sinews were tightly stretched. Mercury picked it up and touched the sinews with his fingers. He was amazed to hear the sweet tones which the picking of the strings produced. He set to work to make a musical instrument, using the tortoise shell for the body and placing strings across it. When the instrument was finished he took it to Osiris. Then Mercury, the messenger, summoned all the Egyptians into the presence of Osiris, who commanded them to listen. When Mercury

"Struck the chorded shell,
They, wondering, on their faces fell
To worship the celestial sounds
Less than a god they thought there scarce could dwell
Within the hollow of that shell
That spoke so sweetly and so well."

No one knows how many strings Mercury had on his tortoise shell instrument. Some say three, for the seasons, as Egypt has but three—spring, summer and winter. Others say seven, for the days of the week, but the calendar was arranged later. In any event, the story of the hieroglyphics is substantiated by the fact that all the lyres of the ancient Greeks were ornamented with an engraving of a tortoise.

When the tomb of Rameses II was opened a few years ago a harp was found. Despite the fact that three thousand years had gone since it had been put to sleep beside its royal master, the harp was in an excellent state of preservation. The strings were of catgut and were in marvelously good condition.

Harps and other stringed instruments were played either by picking the strings with the fingers or a plectrum. The latter was a small piece of bone or metal, held in the fingers, with which the strings were snapped. Sometimes a short piece of wood was used to strike the strings.

ARTHUR SHATTUCK.

A step forward in the evolution of the stringed instrument was made in the Middle Ages when strings were placed across a box, thus introducing the idea of a sounding board. This invention, called the psaltery, was followed by the dulcimer, which was somewhat larger. A plectrum was used to play both. The keyboard was invented in the eleventh century. The first stringed instrument to use the keyboard was the keyed cithara, a box with a cover, having catgut strings arranged in the form of a triangle. A quill plectrum attached in a crude way to the end of each key marked the progress the piano of today had made in the thirteenth century.

PLASTER CAST OF THE HAND OF ARTHUR SHATTUCK, THE AMERICAN PIANIST.

Next came the clavichord. In shape it much resembled a small square piano without frame or legs. The strings were of brass, struck by a wedge made of the same metal which was called a tangent. The virginal, spinet and harpsichord followed the clavichord in rapid succession. They had strings of brass with quill plectra attached to pieces of wood. The virginal and spinet were almost identical, but the harpsichord was larger, and was, at times, built with two keyboards. There are several explanations as to why the virginal was so called, but the generally accepted one is that it was in honor of Elizabeth of England, the Virgin Queen.

In Shakespeare's time it was customary to have a virginal in all the barber shops for the entertainment of the customers. Probably to beguile the weary moments while waiting for the barber to say "Next!" Inasmuch as I am a disciple of Gillette and shave myself, I believe I would prefer to have the inevitable restaurant orchestra sent back to the barber shop where it historically belongs.

The spinet received its name from its Venetian inventor, Sebastian Spinetti. The harpsichord was very much like our present grand piano, only much smaller.

It seems almost incredible that the manufacturers of Queen Elizabeth's time did not discover the hammer action. According to court history, hammers were much in use, but not musically. This great invention was left to the Italian, Angelo Christofori, who in 1709 brought out a piano which forever did away with the scratching sound of the quill, thorn, brass or ivory plectra.

The piano did not receive a hearty welcome at first. It was looked on as a novelty. A playbill of Covent Garden Theatre, London, as late as 1767 announced: "Miss Anna Brickler will sing a song from 'Judith,' accompanied by Charles Didbin on a new instrument called the pianoforte." A few years later Boston was boasting of a number of pianos within the city limits. In a "write up" of the city, printed in one of the Hub papers in 1791, there appeared this sentence: "No less than twenty-seven of the wealthy families of this city have pianos in their homes."

New York seems to hold the record of having the first piano recital. A New York newspaper announced in 1774 that: "Herman Zedwitz, teacher of the pianoforte, who has just returned from Europe, will give a concert in the assembly rooms at the 'Sign of the Golden Spade.'" But those "good old days" must have been the "bad old days" for pianists, because this same New York newspaper a few weeks later contained another announcement which said: "Herman Zedwitz, teacher of the pianoforte who recently returned from Europe is prepared to take contracts by the year as chimney sweep. He guarantees to dust out perfectly the sooty interior of flues. None but competent boys employed."

The evolution of the piano from its primitive beginning down to today, when it is the one splendid instrument capable of representing the effect of a full orchestra, has always been of great interest to me personally. No home seems complete today without a piano. Music in the American home is the rule rather than the exception, and, best of all, the price of the modern piano places this king of instruments within reach of every one.

We citizens of the twentieth century are indeed lucky to be in the possession of a piano having a range of seven and one-third octaves. When I look at this musical masterpiece and then compare it with the poor instruments in the days of Haydn, Bach and Handel—well, I am mighty glad I am living today.

MRS. KING CLARK
Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave. New York

KATHARINE COODSON
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
KNABE PIANO

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist

SPALDING

Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST

Steinway Piano

THOMAS J. KELLY

Conductor Mendelssohn Choir.
VOCAL COACH
Lecture Recitals with Mrs. Kelly.
209 SOUTH 35th AVE., OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO

Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO

Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.

VOCAL STUDIO . 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teacb music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Micbel Sciapiro, violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR SHATTUCK
The Distinguished American
PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
Steinway Piano Used

Walter Petzet's Success.

Walter Petzet, the brilliant young pianist who is to assist Xaver Scharwenka in running his Master School of Piano Playing in Berlin, is not only a first rate pedagogue but he has also made a name for himself in Germany as a brilliant soloist. Appended are some criticisms on his playing from various important German papers:

Almost all the admirers, not only of the music pedagogue, hut also of the brilliant pianist, were present to do homage to him, the enthusiasm reaching its highest point after the Chopin B minor sonata. A gigantic wreath was brought to the stage and the applause was prolonged. While he was playing one forgot the performer and thought only of the power of the work.—Deutschland Weimar, March 12, 1913.

His playing is to be praised for his reliable and faultless technic, and for his sane, masculine sentiment. The Rheinberger toccata, an illustration of the development of all the fingers equally, must be mentioned as particularly praiseworthy. In Schumann's F sharp minor sonata the aria was rendered with the utmost delicacy of touch. The sterling musical nature of the pianist was also shown in the other numbers.—Frankfurter Zeitung, January 7, 1904.

Herr Petzet proved by his execution that he occupies an eminent position among modern pianists. The excellence of his playing, his virtuoso mastery of the technic, his well modulated tone and his objective conceptions, combined with his warmth of feeling, do not fail to make his performances highly enjoyable.—Karlsruher Zeitung, October 3, 1906.

Professor Petzet played the concerto with all of his great mastery. His big success was especially due to his real inspiration.—Badische Presse, June 26, 1909.

In Professor Petzet we made the acquaintance of a pianist who deserves the name of genuine artist. It is not necessary to speak of his technic, which is self understood in a modern pianist. The chief point is interpretation and we are frank to state that we rarely meet pianists with such fine and noble conceptions throughout. It was an unquestionahle success. The scherzo was played with enchanting elegance, and the finale with its difficult cadenza was given an excellent performance.—Neue Bad Landeszeitung, Mannheim, August 23, 1906.

In hoth works Herr Petzet showed himself as a ripe artist whose faultless technic is subordinated to the service of artistic expression.—Nürnberger Gencralanzeiger, Novemher 15, 1905.

(Advertisement.)

Heinrich Hensel Snapped.

Heinrich Hensel, the noted Wagnerian tenor, sends to the MUSICAL COURIER from Koenigstein, together with his greetings, this interesting picture—a snapshot of the artist and his small son. Mr. Hensel, who was recently granted a lengthy audience with the German Crown Prince, is anticipating a busy season in Chicago, beginning in the fall. "With Bodanzki as conductor," his letter continues, "Edyth Walker and I will assist the Wagnerian art to a great triumph."

HEINRICH HENSEL WITH HIS SON, SIX MONTHS OLD.

No Airs About Her.

"Airs!" exclaimed the proud mother, and shook her head vigorously. "My Elsie, for all her learning, hasn't any more airs, so to speak, than her poor old dad."

"Then she won't turn up her nose at her old friends?" queried the visitor.

"La, no!"

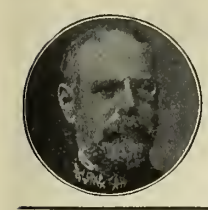
"How refreshing! Most girls who go through college nowadays will hardly look at you after they're graduated."

"Well, they ain't like my Elsie, that's all I can say," retorted Elsie's ma. "She's become a carnivorous reader, of course, and she frequently importunates music. But stuck up—my Elsie? Not a bit. She's unanimous to everybody, has a most infantile vocabulary, and, what's more, never keeps a caller waiting while she dresses up. No, she just runs down, nom de plume, as she is."—Newark (N. J.) Star.

On the Sea.

"For goodness' sake, captain, don't let that man sing!"

"Why not?"



"The passengers will think you are sounding the fog horn."—Fort Madison (Ia.) Evening Democrat.

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

The Sensation of the Year
CARL FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
January and February, 1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO
Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.
"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914
American Tour, March-May, 1915
OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English
Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

EFREM ZIMBALIST
Celebrated Violinist
— Will return to —
AMERICA
Season 1914-1915
For Terms and Dates available
Apply
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th St., New York
STEINWAY PIANO

SOUSA AND HIS BAND

"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"

Office: 1 West 34th Street

Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH

CONCERT VIOLINIST

anagement, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue. New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS

Hene Richard bas been made Director in the Conservetory end is eceisled by en able oorps of teachere. Gendetson Nelzorg hae elso been added to lhe Conservatory faoulty. For oatalog addrsee

MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO

Concert-Recital-Oratorio

Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN

America's Violinist

Season 1914-1915 Now Booking

Address:
THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York
Phone Murray Hill, 2239

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER

Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARY DENNISON GAILEY

VIOLINIST

Address, Russell Bridges, Empire Life Bldg., Atlanta, Ga

Yolanda MERÖ Hungarian Pianist

STEINWAY PIANO USED

Under the exclusive menegement of CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, New York City

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist

SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City

Baldwin Piano Used

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano

SARA HEINEMAN

Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume

In Europe During Summer

Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Baroness Evans

Von KLENNER

America's Representative of the GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD

Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914. Tradition. Languages. Repertoire. Diction. Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY

of NEW YORK

1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915

JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor

SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.

TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South

Prospectus on application to

FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

Emma Lipp Gives Delightful Recital.

The summer students of the Virgil Piano School, 42 West Seventy-sixth street, New York, enjoyed an exceptional recital given by Emma Lipp on Friday afternoon, July 24. Miss Lipp was in splendid playing mood and gave her listeners a most delightful treat. Her program was chosen from the works of several composers, which gave her a wide field for interpretation and variety of expression. The recital was also a signal illustration of one of Mrs. Virgil's policies of teaching, viz., keeping the technic of the player a trifle in advance of the requirements of the pieces he is studying. Mrs. Virgil maintains the strain upon the attention of the player of constantly coming to passages that require his utmost ability to play merely correctly. The audience on Friday certainly did not seem to feel that Miss Lipp's recital was just a technical display. Her opening group was composed of pieces which she had played in public before. The "Sprites of the Glen" was warmly applauded.

In the second group there were two pieces which she had never given before an audience, the "Rolled Chord" etude of Chopin and the tenth rhapsodie of Liszt. Both of these numbers she rendered with artistic finish and sincerity of feeling. The "Romanza Passionata" of Mrs. A. M. Virgil also made a very favorable impression.

The fourth group contained two pieces new to her repertoire: the Bach prelude and the G major nocturne of Chopin. The former was clearly and intelligently phrased, in fact the complex developments usual in Bach were very interesting as she presented them.

Miss Lipp made a great deal out of the Chopin nocturne. The first part she played brightly and gave the modulations the necessary color. The berceuse which forms the middle part requires a good command of tone and legato effect, which she possessed. After the "Sextet" from "Lucia" (for the left hand alone) she received a prolonged applause to which she responded with a "Concert Mazurka," by Mrs. A. M. Virgil, a brilliant composition especially well suited to the concert stage.

She rendered the "Water Lily," by MacDowell, with great beauty of melody outline and gave full value to its harmonic richness. She was particularly successful in conveying to her hearers a sense of the swaying of the flowers on the water and the cool placid effect at the close. Besides having complete technical grasp of "Man lebt nur Einmal," by Strauss-Tausig, she brought out the joyous lively spirit of the work very successfully.

Miss Lipp's recital showed her pronounced advance in power, depth of musical feeling and mastery of piano technic. She is also unusually skillful in her use of the pedal.

Alma Voedisch Busy Booking Artists.

Alma Voedisch, the well known Chicago impresaria, is shown in the accompanying photograph with Fred Graham, the Salt Lake City manager, with whom she booked

FRED GRAHAM, THE SALT LAKE CITY IMPRESARIO, AND ALMA VOEDISCH.

Julia Claussen, Sibyl Sammis MacDermid and James G. MacDermid for several dates.

Miss Voedisch informed the MUSICAL COURIER representative that Mme. Claussen is now in Sweden resting and that she will return to America early in October for her Pacific Coast tour, which is booking very well. Miss Voedisch also says that she will have another big tour for the MacDermids and the Oberndorfers. Miss Voedisch is now in California and will return to Chicago by early September.

Paul Tietjens Sails.

Paul Tietjens, pianist and composer (he wrote the music to "The Wizard of Oz" among other things), was a caller at the MUSICAL COURIER offices last week, prior to his sailing for Europe, where he will resume his musical work after a pleasant vacation spent in this country.

Elizabeth Cueny in New York.

Elizabeth Cueny, the St. Louis manager, now connected in a booking capacity with the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, was in New York last week. She prophesies a booming musical season for the Middle West in 1914-1915.

Steinway

MASTER musicians, past and present, have achieved their greatest successes upon Steinway Pianos.

The Steinway of half a century ago was the preferred instrument of the "maestro," because of its mechanical perfection and its melodious sweetness, sonority and power of tone.

The Steinway of today is an even greater musical marvel—and every Steinway Piano is a Steinway in all the attributes implied by that name.

The name of the Steinway dealer nearest you, together with illustrated literature, will be sent upon request.

STEINWAY & SONS

Steinway Hall

107-109 East 14th St., New York

Subway Express Station at the Door.

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Acolian Hall. New York City
Hardman Piano Used

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG
Summer Course for Teachers, Amateurs and Professionals by these famous artists. TORONTO, CANADA.

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapolis, Minn.

The MEHAN Summer School for Teachers and Singers
July 7—Aug. 15. Appointments By Mail
Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 15
SUITE 70, CARNEGIE HALL. TEL. 5946 COLUMBUS

The Eminent Austrian Pianist
MME. MARIE VON UNSCHULD
Piano Recitals and Lectures on Technic by Motion Pictures
EUROPEAN CONCERT BUREAU, 1320 F St., Washington, D. C.

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
133 West 80th St. Tel. Schuyler 3786 New York City
Mr. Regneas will teach but 3 days weekly during July and August.
No interviews granted excepting by appointment.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

JOHN McCORMACK
CELEBRATED IRISH TENOR
In America Entire Season 1914-15
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Personal Management: CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

Thibaud's London Encomiums.

How very successful Jacques Thibaud was on the occasion of his recent London recital may be gathered from the following excerpts from the leading English dailies:

We can hardly recall an occasion when the spell of his grave and delicate art was more potently exercised. There was dignity as well as grace in his reading of Beethoven's sonata in F, and he played a fugue by Bach with a rare grip of its impressive design. But the climax of the recital was reached in Chausson's "Poeme"—one of the most beautiful pieces for the violin. We could wish for no better interpreter than M. Thibaud, whose playing yesterday touched high levels of romantic fervor.—Daily Telegraph.

Thibaud played Bach's exacting fugue with a wonderful amount of spirit and his usual delicate accuracy.—Times.

M. Thibaud is one of those sympathetic players who never fails to give pleasure to their hearers. The richness and purity of his tone was as remarkable as ever.—Morning Post.

He is known as a violinist of unusual ability, and in the present instance he more than maintained his reputation. He was heard in a brilliantly expressive and executive performance of Beethoven's F major sonata, and later gave a broad and dexterous reading of the Bach fugue.—Standard.

The beauty of his tone is practically unrivalled.—Pall Mall Gazette.

There is always room for an artist like M. Thibaud, whose recital was attended by a crowded audience. His reading was perfect in its decision and refinement. The tone was seductively pure, and the chastened spirit of his interpretations showed the scholar and not the sentimentalist.—Globe.

Jacques Thibaud is a violinist always to be listened to with pleasure. His playing possesses the charm of never seeming to hint at the difficulties of his task. He extracts from his instrument a limpid stream of exquisite and sensitive tone, correct and finished in the technical sense down to the smallest detail, and yet instinct with life and individuality.—Westminster Gazette.

He can draw an extraordinary and "flutey" tone from the A and E strings and his execution is brilliant. His performances in London this season have placed him well in the front rank of living violinists.—Daily Graphic.

The distinguished violinist was in one of his most poetic moods, and his playing was a revelation in fancy and delicacy.—Observer.

This was one instance where one could listen with unalloyed delight.—Ladies' Field.

He played with a grip and clarity beyond praise.—The Lady.

(Advertisement.)

Theodora Sturkow Ryder on a Wrecked Boat.

In the accompanying snapshot is seen Theodora Sturkow Ryder, the well known Chicago pianist, and a friend standing on the remains of the excursion steamer Silver Spray, which was wrecked off the Hyde Park reefs, in Chicago, on July 18. The daily papers gave much prominence in their news section to this wreck, which, however, resulted in no loss of lives, steamers rushing to the rescue of the hundreds of passengers, who were transferred to safety on tugboats, police and excursion boats.

MME. STURKOW RYDER AND FRIEND ON THE WRECK OF THE EXCURSION STEAMER "SILVER SPRAY," WRECKED OFF THE HYDE PARK REEFS, JULY 18.

Spooner Not Afraid of War.

Because of his excellent singing at the concert given on board the steamship Mauretania, during his passage to Europe, Philip Spooner, the young American tenor, has booked two additional concert engagements, one in October and one later in the winter. On this occasion he was heard in an aria from "Rigoletto," and Johnson's aria from "The Girl of the Golden West," and the applause was so insistent that he was obliged to respond with two encores. At present Mr. Spooner is enjoying his stay in Europe, and does not seem to mind the great war scare which is threatening all of Europe.

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street, New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-1915
Management. ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA
Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus
"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Co... Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nell... Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertru... Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, Jo... Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fis... O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, Jo... H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerste... Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers n... before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone, Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishi... tor concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher ... famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom ar...
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, sopra... Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; M... Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. He... rich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althou... tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; M... Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; M... Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; ... Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreid... baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Léon Ra... basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st. St., NEW YO...

Plamondon Choral Society of Montreal.

Recently the Plamondon Choral Society, under the direction of Arthur Plamondon, the well known teacher, of Montreal, gave a series of popular concerts. These concerts were so successful that Mr. Plamondon next essayed a similar venture, but on a smaller scale, at Verdun, a suburb of Montreal, which was equally successful. The press of Montreal made the following comments upon the work accomplished by this choral society at the concerts in Montreal:

The two popular concerts given by the Plamondon Choral Society yesterday afternoon and evening at the Monument National were attended by a very large number of music lovers, who, judging by the unstinted applause, were more than pleased with this first attempt on the part of A. Plamondon to present at prices possible to the humblest music of a good standard. The chorus consists of about forty singers of both sexes and the training they have undergone during the past year or so has been productive of a fine concerted part singing that is worthy of commendation. Naturally, French composers are favored by this association, but Brahms and Schumann also figured on the program. . . . Of course, these concerts would be incomplete without "something worth while" from Mr. Plamondon, who sang "Legende," a ballad of considerable musical worth, the composer of which, Charles Baudoin, accompanied.—Montreal Daily Mail.

Arthur Plamondon's two popular priced choral concerts in the Monument National yesterday afternoon and last night were largely attended and most artistic. Mr. Plamondon established a precedent in selling tickets for ten and fifteen cents, thereby giving music lovers an opportunity to hear many fine works at practically no cost. Mr. Plamondon could not have expected to make money out of the venture and his enterprise is to be warmly commended.—Montreal Daily Star.

The two popular concerts given by the Plamondon Choral Society at the Monument National yesterday afternoon and evening were entirely successful. . . . The fact that so many items had to be repeated in response to enthusiastic applause was a proof of the appreciation with which the efforts of the participants was received. . . . The merit of the songs, combined with the effective interpretations given them by Mr. Plamondon, drew such sustained applause that both composer and singer were compelled to bow their acknowledgments repeatedly.—Montreal Gazette.

The many soloists did much credit to their capable teacher, Mr. Plamondon, who took part in the program, besides conducting all the choral numbers most effectively rendered and encored by these well trained singers.—Montreal Standard.

The two concerts given by the Plamondon Choral Society yesterday at the Monument National more than pleased the large number of music lovers who attended them and showed their appreciation of the first attempt of Mr. Plamondon to present at popular prices music of a high standard.—Montreal Evening News.

(Advertisement.)

Seattle's View of Paderewski.

There is no doubt about it. The reputation of Paderewski is on the wane, says the Seattle Town Crier. For two seasons past the critics have been hinting that his playing was not up to the Paderewski standard and gradually the feeling seems to be spreading that the capacities of the celebrated pianist have been much exaggerated. Critics in attendance at the recent concert of the London Symphony Orchestra where Paderewski played his own piano concerto (op. 17) are almost unanimous in their condemnation of the performance, many of them speaking in frank disapproval of his tendency to hammer in the forte passages. The composition, too, comes in for its share of adverse criticism. Viewed in the light of the new movement in composition, the work seems a bit commonplace and old-fashioned, according to some judges. "Granted," says one, "that he is a distinguished artist, a talented composer and a really first rate pianist, nevertheless he is no Paderewski." A shrewd bit of criticism this, for, as everybody knows nowadays, the true answer to Shakespeare's query "What's in a name?" is "Everything."

Shelley for Century Opera.

Howard Shelley, formerly press representative of the Manhattan Opera and Chicago Opera, has been engaged for the same position at the Century Opera, beginning late in August. Rufus Dewey, present press representative at the Century, has been promoted to fulfill the duties of publicity manager and to take charge of the Century Opera Program Magazine.

The Simon Holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto T. Simon, of Washington, D. C., now are at Klampenborg, a Danish seaside resort, after having been the guests for ten days of Sir Asger Hamerik at his villa in Copenhagen. The Simons will be in London about August 1, where Mr. Simon intends to prepare his programs for next season's concerts of the Motet Choral Society in Washington.

Stock Sails.

Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe last week, where he intends to visit Bremen, Berlin, Vienna, etc. Mr. Stock is to return to Chicago about October 1.

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

JEANNE DUFAU COLORATURA SOPRANO Concert Recital
CHICAGO-PHILADELPHIA GRAND OPERA COMPANY

VAN YORX THEO. ——— Tenor
Will teach throughout the Summer
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

BISPHAM
For Terms and dates Address All Communications to Private Address
44 West 44th Street, New York

GABRILÓWITSCH THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera
Management:
THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address

A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

NELSON AND HIS ORCHESTRAL BAND
OF MINNEAPOLIS
Assisted by Celebrated Soloists, Will Make a Concert Tour During Months of October and November, 1914. For dates address
OTTO L. HEEGER, Mgr., Shiffman Building - St. Paul, Minn.

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 West 34th Street, New York

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

FLORYN OPERA PRODUCING CO., Inc.
1482 Broadway, Room 1105
Three Opera Bouffe Co's in repertoire
Applications in writing from Aspirants with good voices and talent will be considered

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 W. 34th St., New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music
Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

FLORENCE
TRUMBULL
PIANISTE
Vorbereiterin (ASSISTANT) to Theodor Leschetizky
VIII Laudongasse 22 - - - Vienna, Austria

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE Coloratura Soprano
GRAND OPERA PRIMA DONNA
Season 1914-15 Now Booking Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals
European Address: - - - 68 rue de l'Aurore, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - - - - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana
GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

DENVER BREVITIES.

2735 East Colfax Avenue,
Denver, Col., July 20, 1914.

The orchestral concerts at Elitch's Gardens and at Lakeside continue during the summer, and many interesting programs are given.

Mr. Tureman's orchestra has been considerably strengthened by new musicians from Innes' Municipal Band, thus making that orchestra an exceptionally good one throughout.

Many local soloists have been presented at both series of concerts, among them Mrs. Edward Wells Collins, soprano; Rose McGrew Schoenberg, soprano; Jane Crawford Eller, contralto; Mrs. George McDonald, soprano, and Franklin Cleverly, pianist, with the Tureman Orchestra.

Mr. Cavallo, conductor at Lakeside, has also given some fine programs, presenting Bessie Fox Davis, contralto; Maud Norman Reilly, contralto; Vivian Perrin, contralto; Agnes Clark Glaister, soprano, all local soloists; Eleanor Shaw, pianist, and Alexander Saslavsky, violinist, both of New York City.

Among the summer visitors in Denver is William Orth, a well known musician, of Boston.

The following program of French songs and arias was given by Dolores Reedy Maxwell, contralto, assisted by Bell Fauss, accompanist, at the University of Colorado, Boulder, Col., on July 14, under the auspices of the French class of the summer school: "Il est doux" ("Herodiade"), Massenet; "Ouvre tes yeux bleus," Massenet; "Arioso," Delibes; "Il Neige," Bemberg; "Le Nil," Leroux; "Air de Lia" ("L'Enfant Prodigue"), Debussy; "Printemps Nouveau," Vidal; "L'Heure de Pourpre," Holmès; "A des oi eaux," Hüe; "Printemps qui Commence" ("Samson et Dalila"), Saint-Saëns; "Mignonette," Weckerlin; "Chère Nuit," Bachelet.

DOLORES REEDY MAXWELL.

John Rebarer Likes New York.

Following his arrival in New York, a couple of years ago, John Rebarer, concert pianist, has achieved great popularity with metropolitan audiences. He has become a real New Yorker and practises daily in his studio on Madison avenue, regardless of the heat; he insists that the metropolis is the finest summer resort on earth. The young artist is accustomed to the temperatures of torrid zones, however, and to him the much abused climate of New York is a delightful change.

JOHN REBARER.

Mr. Rebarer's Spanish ancestors spelt their name Ribera and the pianist's name is really Jean de Ribara, although he has insisted upon Americanizing it and calling himself plain John Rebarer.

Awful Punishment.

"Tommie, you've been a naughty boy, and you must be punished."

"Oh, please, mamma!"

"Go right upstairs with your father. He's going to take his cornet lesson."—Morris County Chronicle, Morristown, N. J.

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS
BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management:
LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management,
Iris Pendleton,
Philharmony Hall,
Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
in his last Liederabend met the same unqualified success which attended his first recital. There is a radiance and warmth in his artistic and intelligent delivery which affects his audience most happily.—Der Reichsanzeiger, Berlin.
Concert direction Wolff, Flottwellstr. 1, Berlin.
Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall, New York.
Available for concerts in America, February to May, 1915

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
For Terms, Dates, etc., Address temporarily, care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

MANUEL
QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH
VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the U.S.

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Special SUMMER COURSE for Teachers and Professionals. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR, 51 W. 76th St. N. Y.

EVAN WILLIAMS
— TENOR —
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 W. 67th St. Tel.: Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THF WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

Combination Recitals of Two of the Most Brilliant Young Artists of the Present Generation

ALICE EVERSMAN
AMERICAN SOPRANO
Has achieved emphatic successes as a member of the Chicago, Montreal and Karlsruhe Grand Ducal Opera (Germany).

YELENA VON SAYN
RUSSIAN VIOLINIST
Her fame as a violinistic celebrity of the first magnitude is artistically established in Europe; likewise in America.

Programs Selected from the Greatest Operatic and Instrumental Composers

Under the exclusive Management of W. L. Radcliffe, 406 Star Bldg., Washington, D. C.

A Festival Photo.

The accompanying snapshot was taken just outside the historic theatre (designed and built by Goethe) in Lauchstedt, Germany, where a successful operatic festival has just been held. One of the hits of the occasion was an

A WELL KNOWN TRIO "SNAPPED" AT LAUCHSTEDT.

"Orpheus" performance, conducted by Hermann Hans Wetzler, formerly of New York. In the picture he is shown at the reader's extreme left. The other figures are (center) Prof. Hermann Abert and Dr. Ernst Lert, the stage manager.

Reuben Davies Scores Another Hit.

The mere announcement that Reuben Davies, the young American concert pianist, was to give a recital on July 9 at Valley Falls, Kan., was sufficient to attract a large and enthusiastic audience.

Mr. Davies' popularity is well established, which fact is proven by the number of return engagements he is compelled to fill. His artistic playing, masterly interpretation, delicacy of feeling and faultless technic were greatly admired by those present at his recent Valley Forge concert. He opened the program with with the D minor chaconne, by Bach-Busoni, later playing concert etude, op. 36, by MacDowell, and chose for his closing number scherzo in B flat minor, by Chopin. Enthusiastic applause followed this last number, which compelled the young artist to give several encores.

Arthur Hirsch Agency.

The engagement of court orchestra conductor Bodanski with the Chicago Opera Company for three years has been perfected through the New York branch of the Arthur Hirsch agency.

Marion Green En Route.

Marion Green, the Chicago basso cantante, passed through New York last week on his way to Maine, where he expects to spend a month or so in rest and recreation.

OBITUARY.

Prof. Franklin W. Hooper.

From his summer home, in Walpole, N. H., comes the announcement of the death of Prof. Franklin W. Hooper, director of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. Professor Hooper was sixty-four years old.

Born in Walpole, the deceased received his early education in his home town and at the Antioch Preparatory School, in Ohio. In 1872 he entered Harvard. Graduating from there he took up scientific work and later became principal of the Keene High School, in New Hampshire, and stayed there until 1880, when he was called to Brooklyn as professor of chemistry and geology at the Adelphi Academy. In 1889 Professor Hooper assumed the position which he held at his death with the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

In that capacity the late educator displayed unusual executive ability and the institute flourished remarkably under his able and energetic guidance, particularly the musical department receiving an impetus which made it the leading force in the concert and operatic life of Brooklyn. Personally, Professor Hooper was an amiable and courteous gentleman, liked by all who came in contact with him.

He leaves a widow, a daughter, Mrs. W. F. Eastman, and a son, Franklin Dana Hooper.

The Chickering PIANO

WHEN a piano comes into your home with almost a century of victories crowning it with unchallenged leadership because of its great durability of construction, its faultless art and its marvelously rare and unexampled tone quality, a sigh of deep satisfaction is yours. The Chickering Piano is the choice of the discriminating.

Chickering & Sons
Div.—American Piano Co.
PIANOFORTE MAKERS
Boston, U. S. A.

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Peguiar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1914.

No. 1793

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building,
Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 7. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dobbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
LONDON—
Mrs. Evelyn Kaesmann,
5 Portland Place, London W.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Elsenstuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY—
Miss Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florianigasae 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböbl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
BRUSSELS, BELGIUM—
Luella Anderson, 52 rue de l'Ermitage.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

Bayreuthing is going on merrily at this writing.

Wagner wrote the music to a Parisian comic opera in 1840, but reformed later.

"Faust" was given in Esperanto recently, and listeners remarked that the music held its own.

The "human canary" simile now will have to be reversed. At a vaudeville theatre in New York a canary bird sings well known song tunes.

It is not difficult to understand the English rage for everything Russian in music when one considers how very different Russian music is from English music.

Epigrammatically, the Memphis Commercial Appeal remarks: "Modern composers are like sportsmen vying with each other to see who can breed the ugliest bulldogs."

Public performers who smart under the stings of the professional critics should remember Charles Lamb's saying, that the Italian fleas, had they been unanimous, would have pulled him out of bed.

Mme. Melba is in Australia at the present moment and will remain there until next January. She is to give some concerts in her native country, but the primary object of her visit there was to see her father, who has not been in good health for some time past.

Oscar Hammerstein has lost three sons within six months, Abraham, who died February 2; William, whose death occurred June 10, and Harry, who passed away Tuesday of last week. The last named had been associated with his father in the management of the Manhattan and Philadelphia Operas.

London Musical News admonishes the world not to get excited over the frequent sales and resales of the Covent Garden estate, for, remarks the English paper, "the opera house is not affected in any way. There are still thirty-four years to run of the lease, which is in the possession of the Grand Opera Syndicate."

Cleofonte Campanini has engaged for the Chicago Opera Company two well known members of the Paris Opera Comique forces, Margarethe Carré, soprano (wife of the former director of the Opera Comique and present director of the Comedie Française), who will sing several performances in Chicago toward the end of the coming season, and Marthe Chénal, whose Carmen is very well known in Paris, and will be heard in Chicago during the season of 1915-16.

A brief tour of the Middle West will be made by the Philadelphia Orchestra, beginning on Monday, November 30. The tour is to last only ten days, and the orchestra will be heard for the first time on that occasion in Indianapolis and in Buffalo. The other cities in which the orchestra will appear are Detroit, Ann Arbor, Cleveland, Oberlin, Akron and Erie. The soloists for the tour will be Olga Samaroff, Theodore Harrison and Thaddeus Rich, concertmaster. Arrangements have been concluded for the later appearance of the Philadelphia Orchestra in Washington, Baltimore, Wilmington, Atlantic City, and Reading, while the regular number of concerts will be given at the University of Pennsylvania and in Kensington. As is his custom, Leopold Stokowski, the conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, is preparing all of the programs for the Philadelphia series of concerts at his home in Munich. In addition to this he is rehearsing the orchestra that he will conduct at a festival concert in Munich on August 11. The soloist on this occasion will be Olga Samaroff, who in private life is Mme. Stokowski. She will play the Schumann concerto in A minor, and it will be her first public appearance in several seasons.

A report issued by W. J. Harris, director of the Bureau of the Census, at Washington, shows that last year 38,756,223 persons were engaged in gainful occupations in the United States. The investigator should have told, too, how many persons do work and receive no pay, for instance, singers and players who perform for nothing at private musicales and charity concerts, church organists who volunteer their services, and American composers who write symphonic music.

Max Bruch's famous choral composition, "Frithjof," for male chorus, has been a favorite with choral societies now for half a century. The fiftieth anniversary of its first performance, which occurred at Mannheim in 1864, will be celebrated on November 20 next, when "Frithjof" will be sung by the male chorus, Concordia, of Aix-la-Chapelle, under the personal leadership of the aged composer. "Frithjof" has had hundreds of performances both in the New and in the Old World.

Among rarely heard works which are to be given at the London Promenade Concerts this season are Ernest Schelling's "Suite Fantastique" for piano and orchestra, Granville Bantock's songs with orchestra entitled "Ferishtah's Fancies," César Franck's symphonic poem, "Psyche," and Korngold's "Overture to a Drama." During the series of promenade concerts the nine symphonies of Beethoven are to be played. Altogether, there are twenty-two symphonies listed for performance, which are, besides the Beethoven, Brahms' Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4, Tschaikowsky's Nos. 4, 5 and 6, Dvorák's "New World," César Franck's D minor, Haydn's "Le Midi," Mozart's Nos. 35 ("Haffner") and 41 ("Jupiter") and Schubert's "Unfinished."

In our Paris letter will be found some news of value to those who are interested in the discipline of grand opera companies. It appears that at the Grand Opera in the French capital it has been customary to allow orchestral players to remain away from performances at certain intervals and at other times to let them send substitutes to the institution without previous warning, thereby frequently putting the conductors in the position of finding at a premiere several orchestral members who had not taken part in the rehearsals. Other similar weird customs are mentioned by our Paris correspondent, all of them tending to make American grand opera managers smile. We manage those things differently in this country, and perhaps that is why the Paris Grand Opera has been steadily degenerating artistically while our operatic institutions never stop in their progress toward the attainment of ideal performances.

From the camp of the publishers of popular music goes forth the edict that hereafter singers no longer are to be paid for performing in public the productions of the music issuers. That will do away with the highly honorable, if strenuous, profession represented by the so-called "song boosters" who moved from restaurant to restaurant and dance resort to dance resort of an evening and raised their very distinct voices in noisy effort to create an interest in and stimulate the sale of those mushroom ballads of the moment which they were paid to perform. It is to be hoped that the publishers, while they are in a reforming mood, also will put the quietus on the horny handed gentry who make comic opera unendurable by encoring an untold number of times those musical selections designated (before the premiere) by the publishers as the "hits" to be "boosted." The custom is an insult to the intelligence of the public and to that of the publishers as well.

A CONCERT TOUR OF THE VOLGA.

By Arthur M. Abell, Special Representative of the Musical Courier on the Tour of the Volga Made by Sergei Kussewitzky and His Symphony Orchestra.

IV.

The Volga offered much of interest between Nijni-Novgorod and Kasan, that ancient capital and stronghold of the Tartars. The right bank is high, the left flat and the background is shut in with forests. The villages with their poor wooden huts would be very monotonous were it not for their beautiful churches. After leaving Nijni, steamers were constantly coming and going, as there is a busy passenger and freight traffic. The population along the banks of the river is no longer purely Russian, but has a large percentage of Finnish or Mongolian tribes.

Kasan numbers only about forty per cent. of Russians among its population; of its 175,000 souls, 30,000 are Tartars. The Tartars, a mixture of Mongolian and European, we found to be a picturesque and peaceful people. They are Mohammedans, and with great interest we visited one of their mosques. Kasan was the capital of the great Tartar empire that rose in this district after the dissolution of the "Golden Horde." The town was taken by Ivan the Terrible on October 2, 1552, after one of the most fearful sieges in the annals of warfare. It is said that the awful carnage drew tears from the eyes of the pitiless Czar himself. "They are not Christians," he said, "but yet they are men."

One building still survives from the ante-Russian times—the old Souioumbeka Tower. This is 250 feet high and commands a splendid view of the city and the surrounding country. During the siege of Ivan the Terrible the beautiful Tartar princess, Souioumbeka, flung herself from this tower in desperation at the loss of her native city. Kasan is situated at the meeting place of the Baltic, Caspian and Siberian trade routes, and for this reason it is favorably located for commercial activity. The town suffers, however, from one great disadvantage, for the Volga is gradually receding westwards and the city proper, which was formerly on the banks of the stream, now is some five miles distant from the river. The university at Kasan is famous for its instruction in Oriental languages. The museum there also contains interesting antiquities from the ruins of ancient Bulgary. The Bulgars were probably of Finno-Turkish extraction, but their exact origin is unknown. They settled on the Volga about the beginning of the Christian era and became very powerful, but their empire was later overturned by the Mongols. Subsequently they emigrated to that part of the Balkans where Bulgaria now is situated.

The steamboats are the only means of transportation between these towns on the Volga, for there are no railroads along the banks: The only way to reach Kasan from Nijni-Novgorod by rail is to go from Nijni to Moscow and thence to Kasan. This, of course, requires an immense amount of time. In any other European country but Russia, save perhaps Turkey, railroads would have been built long ago. The lack of enterprise in provincial Russia is astonishing. What few modern conveniences one finds come from abroad. For instance, we found the American sewing machines everywhere, even in the smallest Russian hamlet. American music machines and American revolvers also were to be found in every town along the Volga. Kasan has a street railroad system and is fairly well governed, accord-

ONE OF THE MANY MONASTERIES ON THE BANKS OF THE VOLGA.

BIRDSEYE VIEW OF KASAN, WITH THE VOLGA IN THE DISTANCE.

ECULIAR STYLE OF CHURCH ARCHITECTURE AT KASAN.

THE ANCIENT TARTAR TOWER, OVER 1,000 YEARS OLD, AT KASAN.

THE MUNICIPAL THEATRE AT KASAN, WHERE THE KUSSEWITZKY CONCERTS WERE GIVEN.

ing to Russian ideas, but measured by the standards that prevail in Germany, the city is a century behind the times. The municipality here, as in all these provincial Russian cities, does as little as possible for the welfare of the people.

Two concerts were given at Kasan, as the theatre could accommodate only about one-half of those who purchased tickets for the first. The municipal theatre has a fine large stage, much larger than any we had hitherto encountered. The auditorium, too, we found to be much more spacious than that of any of the theatres we had yet seen on the Volga. It seats about 1,500 people. There are four balconies, and the decorations are plain light blue and quite tasteful.

The program of the first concert at Kasan comprised the Beethoven "Eroica" symphony, Tschaikowsky's "Manfred" and "Rococo" variations for cello and Rimsky-Korsakow's "Spanish" rhapsody. Kussewitzky conducted with great fire and elan, making a striking impression on the inhabitants of this ancient town. The strings sounded particularly brilliant. All the contrabass players in Kussewitzky's orchestra are soloists and several of them are his own pupils, he being, as is well known, not only a great conductor, but also the greatest contrabass virtuoso of our times. His woodwind players also are first class, while the horns, too, are very fine. They proved to be quite infallible in the trio of the scherzo of the Beethoven symphony, notwithstanding the great speed at which Kussewitzky took the movement. He takes a faster tempo than even Richard Strauss. Kussewitzky, of course, has a great advantage in having his own private orchestra and in being able to train it wholly in accordance with his own ideas. An orchestra that is continually playing under different conductors becomes somewhat demoralized.

Kussewitzky's band today is undoubtedly the foremost symphony orchestra in Russia, and he is the leading conductor of symphonic music in that country. His style of conducting is elegant, forceful, plastic and temperamental. He has an instinctive feeling for the right tempi, he is a splendid drill master without, however, ever becoming pedantic and stereotyped by too much rehearsing. Some conductors, who drill a great deal, never see the forest, because of the trees; Kussewitzky sees the trees and afterward he gives us a grand sweep of the woods as a whole. As an interpreter he has many individual traits, but his conceptions always are seasoned with excellent taste. He has stored up within him a vast amount of energy, and it was inspiring to see his devotion to the cause, which never for one moment relaxed during the entire tour.

Rimsky-Korsakow's "Spanish" rhapsody, which he played at Kasan for the first time, is a brilliant, somewhat showy, piece. It was magnificently rendered and boisterously applauded by the music hungry public. The soloist at this first concert was W. Dehe, first cellist of the orchestra.

The program of the second concert consisted of Scriabine's symphony, Rimsky-Korsakow's "Easter" festival overture, the prelude to "Parsifal," Beethoven's G major concerto and Liszt's symphonic poem, "Mazeppa."

Edward Risler, piano soloist of the tour, left our party at Nijni-Novgorod and went to Moscow to meet Mme. Risler, who had come on from Paris to join us at the telegraphic request of the Kussewitzkys. The Rislers arrived at Kasan in time for the second concert the following evening, at which the great pianist was the soloist. He gave a broad, dignified and noble reading of the G major concerto. No one would have believed that he had not touched a piano for three days; in fact, his magnificent playing throughout the tour was a good deal of a riddle, technically in particular, considering the fact that he did almost no practising for a whole month. The house resounded with cries of "bis," and after many recalls Risler responded with the usual number of encores. One of them on this occasion was Weber's "Invitation to the Dance," which many in the audience seemed to know, for it gave them evident pleasure. From one of the balconies there came cries for Rachmaninoff's C sharp minor prelude. Kussewitzky made a tremendous hit with Liszt's "Mazeppa." I do not think I ever heard a finer performance of the work than he gave that evening. In driving back the seven versts to the steamer after the concert, the terrific tempo which our horses took recalled vividly the opening theme of "Mazeppa," which depicts the galloping of the wild horse over the steppes with Mazeppa bound to its back. These Russian horses certainly are spirited animals.

THE LANDING AT KASAN.

SNAPSHOT TAKEN FROM THE TOP DECK OF THE KUSSEWITZKY STEAMER, "IMPERATOR," SHOWING THE LOW LEFT BANK OF THE VOLGA AND THE GULLS WHICH FOLLOWED THE BOAT THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE JOURNEY.

We had now been on the river six days and had been proceeding the whole time almost due east, but just below Kasan the Volga turns abruptly and flows almost due south until it reaches the Caspian Sea. Below Kasan the Volga and the Kama meet, and so broad is the expanse of the lower river that for a time the Volga appears only as a tributary. The meeting of the two immense streams is like a boundless sea. The water of the Kama is much clearer and brighter than that of the Volga, and for a long time its flow can be distinguished from the turbid waves of the latter.

The mighty Kama is the southern boundary of an immense wild district known as the "land of the woods." Between it and the Unsha it empties into the Volga. Above Nijni-Novgorod most of the country is covered with dense forests. It is a sparsely settled territory, and in former times it proved an admirable refuge for sectarians fleeing from persecution.

After leaving Kasan, the character of the country changed rapidly. Above all, the dull grayness of it gave way to beautiful, fresh green. The banks on our right became higher and more thickly wooded and the traffic on the river also increased. Of special interest were immense rafts of logs from the north, on which a whole village of people lived for weeks during their long journey. The bosom of the river, too, is studded with small, picturesque islands. The most beautiful scenery of the whole voyage is just below Simbirsk. Even the left bank, usually flat, is higher here, and the right rises into craggy, wooded heights with fantastic outlines, which are known as the "Jegonlevski," "Gretchonlevski" and "Mordvashanski" hills. They are very picturesque and reminded me somewhat of the highlands of the Hudson.

It was in these hills that the buccaneers housed, who in olden times infested the lower Volga. Turgenieff has given a stirring picture of these pirates and their formidable leader, Don Cossack Stenka Razine, who once terrorized the river folk. When he swept by with his black craft at night one could hear "screams and cries, furious cursing and laughter, the strokes of oars and the blows of axes, the slamming as of doors and sea chests, the clank of chains, drunken songs, the grinding of teeth, inconsolable weeping—and then pitiful, despairing silence."

Turgenieff also conjures up a fascinating picture of the black craft moored to the shore and the buccaneers sprawling around enormous camp fires. Up to the last century, these hills formed a nest of pirates. Here from an outlook on the cliffs, they kept a watch for merchant vessels, and as soon as one was spied, the banks echoed with the ominous cry, "Sarin na kitchku!" The cries struck terror to the merchant captain and crew, who fell on their faces and the freebooters took what they pleased.

Simbirsk is a picturesque old town of about 40,000 inhabitants situated on high hills about a half mile back from the river. There is a beautiful promenade on the bluffs in front of the city, commanding a splendid view of the Volga, which can be seen winding its way like a great sheet of silver for a distance of thirty miles to the south. Simbirsk has some very good buildings in the center of the town, but the streets on the outskirts are probably the same as they were three or four hundred years ago. The houses are built entirely of wood, sometimes of logs only, and are very primitive, both in their exterior and interior aspects.

The theatre at Simbirsk was burned down a couple of years ago, so our concert was given in a building which had been erected temporarily. It was built entirely of wood and was very plain as to interior, but the acoustics were excellent. The orchestra never sounded better than on this evening at Simbirsk. The audience, which filled the theatre to the last seat, was an intelligent, well behaved and most enthusiastic one. The program consisted of

A MONUMENT TO THE SOLDIERS WHO FELL IN THE SIEGE OF KASAN UNDER IVAN THE TERRIBLE IN 1552.

A TYPICAL VOLGA STEAMER.

THE VOLGA AT THE MEETING WITH ITS GREAT TRIBUTARY, THE KAMA; THE RIVER HERE LOOKS LIKE A SEA.

the Rimsky-Korsakow overture, "Easter Festival," Rachmaninoff's symphony in C minor, the prelude to "Parsifal," Beethoven's G major concerto and Liszt's "Mazeppa."

Both Kussewitzky and Risler were tendered ovations, and the great pianist contributed four encores, as usual. In fact, it was always with indignation that the public saw the piano removed, so great was Risler's popularity everywhere. On returning to the steamer in our little open carriages, we were nearly upset; although the road was steep and bad, our driver went at full speed. It was a thrilling experience to ride through the night behind such horses. After the usual late supper and merry-making until about three o'clock in the morning, we set sail for Samara, our next stopping place, where two concerts were to be given.

(To be continued.)

H. O. OSGOOD WRITES.

Paris, July 21, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

There are some points in connection with the editorial entitled "Echoes of the Wagner Suit," which appeared in the MUSICAL COURIER for July 8, which are very interesting to me.

I may say, parenthetically, that I lived in Munich nearly five years, was a repetiteur at the Royal Opera there for two years and a half, and represented the MUSICAL COURIER for nearly three years. Ernst von Possart is quoted as saying: "It is for Justizrat Troll (counsel for Cosima Wagner) to prove in what way the question as to whether Isolde Beidler is a daughter of Wagner or von Bülow is connected with the building and the management of the Prinzregenten Theatre."

It is self evident that there is absolutely no connection, and I do not believe the further statement of Dr. Troll to the effect that this unpleasant affair of the Wagner family is having the slightest tendency to drive people away from the Bayreuth performances to the Munich ones, for I recall the experience of some acquaintances several weeks ago who had great difficulty even then in obtaining a few seats for some of the Bayreuth performances.

However, I am afraid Dr. Troll hit much nearer the mark when he went on to connect the Prinzregenten Theatre with a real estate transaction. I believe personally that the Prinzregenten Theatre was founded with the idea of doing honor to Wagner's name, but it is hard for me to account for the situation of the building itself, and I do not like to think that it might possibly have been planted where it is for the purpose of enhancing the value of the surrounding property, which was, at the time the theatre was built, being opened up for building sites by a land company.

There were many other much more accessible and beautiful sites for the erection of a building of so much artistic importance, but, nevertheless, the Prinzregenten Theatre was erected in the midst of what was then a tremendous empty field which had just been opened up for building purposes on the farther side of the river Isar, away from nearly all of Munich and far from any city conveyances. Even now there is only one line of cars which runs anywhere within ten minutes' walk, and only at the time of the festival are some special cars run over the loop extension which goes to the theatre. Instead of being, as it might have been, on a site (for instance, in the English Garden near the National Museum) in most beautiful natural surroundings and within most easy reach of the center of the city, the Prinzregenten Theatre stands on this bleak plain, some of which is still bare field, surrounded by plain apartment houses and with almost no trees in its vicinity.

In consideration of these facts, if anybody can tell me exactly why it was placed where it is, I shall be glad to know the reason. Understand, however, that I do not wish to fail to acknowledge in any way the general high artistic standard of the performances there, which I regard on the whole as averaging higher than those in Bayreuth.

Again, it is well to record the fact here that Herr Beidler, although residing in Munich for some years past, is in no sense a Munich conductor, though the newspapers have referred to him constantly as such. As far as I know he has never directed in Munich, certainly not at the Royal Opera nor at the Prinzregenten Theatre. He is not a conductor of overpowering importance in Germany, and his main claim to renown appears to be that of being Wagner's son-in-law.

A good joke, if true, is the reported determination of Cosima and Siegfried Wagner to present the Wagner "Temple" at Bayreuth to the German nation. Anybody who knows the "Temple" will realize that the dear German nation would be compelled very soon to lay out a most considerable sum of money on rebuilding that antiquated structure.

I am, faithfully yours,

H. O. OSGOOD.

GRAFT IN CITY MUSIC.

In spite of all the public discussions, artificial newspaper agitations, meetings held before and with city officials, the municipal music in New York parks never will be placed on the basis it should occupy, as long as politics and its attendant "graft" evils are allowed to influence the selection of players and leaders. Men like Franko, Sousa, Volpe and a few others are above criticism, of course, but some of the lesser conductors and many of the players heard in our parks are of an artistic calibre too lamentable to be discussed with patience. Musical friends, relatives and political henchmen of the city's aldermen must be "taken care of," as the phrase goes, when the municipal bands and orchestras are made up for the summer season. In some cases, where reputable leaders have complained and dismissal of the incompetents was about to take place, city officials in high positions have interfered to keep the threatened ones in their positions. To understand why the aldermen have such power in the matter it is necessary only to know that they are the men who must pass upon the matter of the city's annual appropriation for public music. Therefore they are enabled to manipulate the lever of patronage. Relief is not in sight at the present moment, for while the spoils system obtains in every other American institution, there is no reason to suppose that it can be banished from American musical conditions.

CONCERNING COPYRIGHT.

An interesting case on the ability to copyright a musical publication was decided in the United States District Court at Atlanta, Ga., denying the bill of complainant for alleged infringement of what was declared to be a copyright for revising, improving and remodeling a book known as "The Sacred Harp." The book was first published in 1869, and all rights had ceased before 1902, when the complainant issued a publication under the same name. The greater part of the improvements for which copyright was claimed consisted of adding alto parts to the songs contained in the book. It was charged that the defendant issued a book in which appeared the alto parts prepared and used in complainant's work in 1902. As originally published, "The Sacred Harp" contained only the soprano, tenor and bass parts, and complainant's revised edition was found to be practically the same as to these parts, with the altos the only new feature. In the book which was alleged to be an infringement, the court was satisfied that complainant's remodeled setting was substantially followed, and the question for the court's determination was the effect of the addition of the alto parts as affording a basis for legal copyright. The judgment on this question was against the complainant, the court ruling as follows:

"These altos that are prepared to the tunes in both complainant's and defendant's book, while probably made by musicians of experience and some skill, are not necessarily the productions of persons having the gift of originality in the composition of music. An alto may be an improvement to a song to some extent and probably is; but it can hardly be said to be an original composition, at least in the sense of copyright law. In patents we say that any improvement which a good mechanic could make is not the subject of a patent; so in music it may be said that anything which a fairly good musician can make, the same old tune being preserved, could not be the subject of a copyright."

PIZZICATO CON FUOCO.

A certain Alberto Bachmann—whom we do not know, because his name and fame are not recorded in the great musical dictionaries—has been threatening dire vengeance on Ovide Musin if this famous artist is not careful. Ovide Musin we know. Everybody knows him. He has been before the world's musical public since he won the gold medal of the Paris Conservatoire at the age of fourteen. He was acclaimed as a great artist in London as long ago as 1877. He followed the extraordinary César Thomson as professor of violin at the Liège Conservatory in 1897, and he has played his triumphant way around the world.

Alberto Bachmann, however, threatens to show the musical public what Ovide Musin really is as an artist and a teacher if the latter does not stop making remarks about the articles the former is now writing to the Musical Observer.

As we said before, we do not know who Alberto Bachmann is. He writes with all the confidence of youth. Even young men may make mistakes, as a statesman is reported to have remarked in the legislative halls. But he may be older than he seems to be, for he says he knew Sarasate as well as Musin knew him.

It may be one of our bad habits, but—somehow or other—we are accustomed to look on Ovide Musin as an authority on the violin and its literature.

It is going to take Alberto Bachmann some time to shatter our allegiance to the veteran Belgian artist and transfer our regard to himself. Why, he actually says there are no Belgian and German schools of violinists! According to him, Flesch and Kreutzer belong to the French school, and Spohr, Joachim and Wilhelmj to the Italian school!

What next? We expect to be told that there is no school of American journalism, and that we writers for the MUSICAL COURIER really belong to the English school of Shakespeare and Milton. Now, we do not care to say anything about Shakespeare and Milton, because they are dead—poor fellows—and cannot defend themselves. But we have our own opinion of ourselves just the same, and we suggest that Ovide Musin and Alberto Bachmann expend their wrath in a musical duel—one playing Tartini's "Devil's Trill" and the other Scarlatti's "Cat's Fugue," until their honor has been avenged. Then let them vow eternal friendship in a Pleyel duet.

At the same time, we cannot help wondering what would have happened to Alberto Bachmann if he walked into the burly August Wilhelmj's dining room in St. John's Wood, London, a few years ago and told him, "You are a violinist of the Italian school!"

Why not write to the famous German Paganini's eldest son, Anton Wilhelmj, violinist, Dublin, Ireland, and ask him how his father would like to be called an Italian virtuoso?

WAR AND ARTISTS.

With the clouded war situation in Europe came surmises from all quarters as to what would happen if the foreign male opera singers and other musicians now in their native countries were to be drafted into military service there and kept over the winter. In the opera field, Berger, Caruso, Amato, Polacco, Toscanini, Campanini, Bassi, Sammarco, Reiss, Hertz, Braun, Weil, Jörn, Gilly, Rothier—to say nothing at all of Gatti-Casazza—all are likely to be called upon if Germany, France and Italy require their citizens as reserves to help the soldiery. Andreas Dippel also is in Europe, as well as Henry Russell. Of the symphony conductors under contract in America, Kunwald, Stokowski, Muck and Stransky would be eligible in case of the calling out of reserves. Oberhoffer and Zach are naturalized in this country. Of the foreign artists to tour here next season, the following now are in Europe: Ganz, Gabrilowitsch, Sickesz, Thibaud, Flesch, Kreisler, Zimbalist, Slezak, McCormack. It is not pleasant to picture our opera singers serving as "food for cannon," in Napoleon's expressive phrase.

LOGICAL REASONS.

The reasons why grand opera requires social support and financial subvention never were more clearly or succinctly stated than by the Baltimore News recently, in these terms: "The truth seems to be that nowhere is grand opera, presented upon an adequate and proper scale, with the gifted and illustrious singers required, likely to be self supporting. Salaries demanded by the great artists are far too enormous, and without these great artists the people would not come at all. With this prodigious outlay there is the expense of a vast orchestra, a large chorus, dancers, dresses, scenery and an army of employees, both behind the curtain and in front of the house."

WOULD HELP COMPOSERS.

The general adoption of the recall advocated by Roosevelt would help composers. At some time or other Chopin would really have liked to recall his E flat nocturne, Mendelssohn his "Spring Song," Liszt his second rhapsody, Schumann his "Träumerei," and Schubert his "Serenade." If the measure is adopted among living composers, Rachmaninoff may be relied upon to recall his C sharp minor prelude, Moszkowski his "Serenade," Scharwenka his "Polish Dance" and Paderewski his "Minuet."

ST. PAUL ORCHESTRA'S PROBLEM.

From the St. Paul (Minn.) daily papers it appears that the symphony orchestra of that city is not having an easy time in securing its guarantee fund for next season. For the sake of St. Paul and for the sake of musical development generally in America it is to be hoped that the excellent orchestra of the cultured northwestern city will be continued and with a more substantial guarantee fund than ever before.

SPECIAL ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS PLANNED.

For next season our New York Symphony Orchestra is planning a series of five special concerts to illustrate the development of the piano concerto. The soloists who have been engaged are the five pianists, Borwick, Gabrilowitsch, Paderewski, Busoni and Hofmann. The idea is not an original one and has been exploited in Europe years ago by d'Albert, Risler, Busoni and others.

WAR MAY POSTPONE PANAMA FAIR.

It is expected that if the European war continues, the Panama-Pacific Exposition will be postponed until the spring of 1916.

THE ANGUISHED COMPOSERS.

From a musician whom the MUSICAL COURIER esteems very highly we are in receipt of the attached letter:

Los Angeles, Cal., July 27, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

While deploring with you that a man should be so cowardly as to write an anonymous defamatory missive (I refer to your article, "An Anonymous Letter," published in your issue of July 22, 1914), permit me to observe that when you let pity rule you are doing an injustice to some one who unfortunately, owing to a strange coincidence, might be taken for the author of that horrible, anonymous, typewritten letter. For instance, in my case, "having written operas" and "having not long ago changed my place of residence from one large American city to another," I might easily be the target of some unscrupulous calumniators.

Of course, you know that I have nothing to do with that hideous letter, but conjecture is going on here since the appearance of your exposé, and you would do an act of justice in giving the name of the fellow, or at least some more explicit indication, so as not to have others suffer in any way through unfortunate coincidences.

Cordially yours,
RICHARD LUCCHESI.

Mr. Lucchesi's point is well taken, but the MUSICAL COURIER cannot at this moment alter its decision in regard to withholding for the present the name of the writer of the execrable "anonymous" letter. It is hardly necessary to add that Mr. Lucchesi was not for a moment under suspicion, as he is a gentleman and a man who for probity always has ranked especially high in the musical profession. We feel sure that no one acquainted with Mr. Lucchesi possibly could have had him in mind as the writer of the letter we published in facsimile two weeks ago.

Communications continue to arrive in these offices regarding the subject of the Los Angeles $10,000 prize competition, but that is not surprising, as the enterprise is of such magnitude that the fierce light of publicity will continue to beat upon it, especially now that the works submitted for the prize are in the hands of the judges. Those persons, whoever they may be (for it seems that they are not to be made known publicly) should be oblivious alike to attack and insinuation and perform their duty serenely and conscientiously. There is no reason to suppose that they will be swayed by favoritism or in any other way act so as to cloud the fair fame of the city of Los Angeles or of the National Federation of Women's Clubs.

Several letters written to the MUSICAL COURIER protest against the rumored intended action of the opera prize committee in barring from the competition the operas of composers who have announced publicly that they have entered works in the contest. We think that such alarm is needless, as the Los Angeles committee has no known reason for indulging in any such unfair action. A careful reading of the rules of the competition does not reveal any edict forbidding a composer to mention the entry of his opera, and, of course, the judges intend to be guided by the published rules to which the contestants submitted in good faith.

Some of the composers entered have been the victims of misguided friends who rushed into publicity with announcements that were not authorized by those whom the enthusiasts sought to benefit.

It stands to reason that no reputable composer would publicly announce the entry of his work and risk the loss of prestige which would follow in the event of its rejection. That seems almost an elementary proposition.

From the Far North comes a communication in which some passages of interest read as follows: "A thing that looks fishy is that no later than a few weeks ago word was sent the composers that the sealed envelope containing the identity of the contestants must be mailed to Mrs. Jason Walker, and not with the manuscript to the Illinois Trust Company vaults in Chicago. That certainly is not fair and opens the way to scandal in case the result of the competition should not fall out satisfactorily."

Mrs. Jason Walker is one of the originators of the $10,000 prize scheme and its success is a matter that lies close to her heart. She is a woman of unquestioned standing, and if she has made a new ruling regarding the nom de plume envelopes she doubtless has a good reason for it and is acting with the knowledge of the judges.

The MUSICAL COURIER, not wishing to interfere with the work of the committee, wrote to Charles Wakefield Cadman, who has been spending some time in Los Angeles, asking for information regarding the points covered in the complaining letters received by us. Mr. Cadman answers as follows:

Drake, Colo., July 28, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Replying to your letter of recent date, I would say that I have been away from Los Angeles for several weeks and am not conversant with the situation on which you ask information.

I have not heard of any such ruling as the one you mention and do not believe that it has been made. I have met many composers here in the West, but not one of them has told me that he has entered an opera in the contest. I have read some rumors in the newspapers, but, like the rest of modern mankind, I do not believe everything I read in the newspapers.

It is dastardly of the letter writer you quote to cast aspersions upon Mrs. Jason Walker or her associates. Mrs. Walker and her fellow members are women of the highest moral force, intelligence and integrity, and I never have heard a word uttered against them by any one, nor the faintest suspicion voiced that they are being influenced by unworthy motives in their conduct of the prize competition.

Regarding your question about the judges, I do not know their identity, nor have I any conjectures on the subject. I can only say that had I a work of mine in the contest I would unhesitatingly submit it to Mrs. Walker, the other ladies and the judges, and feel that I would, in every sense of the word, get a "square deal."

Regretting that I am unable to give you the information you desire, I am, Very truly yours,
CHARLES WAKEFIELD CADMAN.

We are glad to be able to publish Mr. Cadman's letter, as it reflects exactly the sentiments of the MUSICAL COURIER.

APPALLING PROSPECT.

"The meatiest musical criticism," says Reedy's Mirror, "never is written by professional critics of music, but always by musicians themselves." Correct. The greatest—and only—music critics in the world were Weber, Schumann, Berlioz, Wagner and Liszt.

SAINT-SAËNS NOT COMING.

Camille Saint-Saëns informs the MUSICAL COURIER that he has no intention to come to America next season, as had been reported, in order to conduct some of his operas "or for any other purpose."

WE HOPE NOT.

Isidore de Lara, the composer, was one of the witnesses in the Caillaux trial. It is to be hoped that he will not set it to music.

SALUTE TO AUGUST OR ODE TO 1914-1915.

In truth it could be said
At this time of the year:
"Hooray! the season's dead!
Hooray! the season's here."

THE LEMARE INCIDENT.

There is much pother in many of our native circles because E. H. Lemare has been engaged to give one hundred of the three hundred organ recitals planned for the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco in 1915. The pother results because E. H. Lemare is not an American, and many of the native sons feel that as the festive occasion is commemorative of the completion of a task accomplished in America by Americans, the three hundred organ recitals should not have been so divided that one third of them will fall to the lot of a single foreign player while the other two-thirds are to be partitioned in small individual lots between many American organists.

The matter brought forth much discussion in the ranks of our country's organists. Their co-operative associations protested in motions and resolutions, their organ journals printed the motions and resolutions and commented sympathetically thereupon. Individuals everywhere were loud in indignant objection. From all sides letters were addressed to the Panama-Pacific officials, but brought no reply. Gradually it was learned that the sole arbiter in the matter (to whom all germane correspondence was referred by the officials) was the same man who engaged Lemare and in fact has entire charge of the music at the exposition. This man, George W. Stewart, vouchsafed no direct explanation of the vexed incident, evidently deeming his action its own justification, as the powers conferred upon him by the directors are arbitrary.

However, several Western newspapers printed semi-official explanations to the effect that in the engagement of E. H. Lemare no discrimination against American organists had been intended; that the exposition is an international one and therefore not to be restricted to American participation; and that before Mr. Stewart engaged Lemare for so many recitals he had consulted many of our native organists in order to find out whom they regarded as the best player resident in this country. Lemare, so says the same semi-official account, was the almost unanimous choice. Whether or not the explanation just quoted was authorized by Mr. Stewart the news papers in question failed to state.

The MUSICAL COURIER is in receipt of numerous letters from organists, protests from organ papers and a circular from the Society of American Musicians, of Chicago, all of them embodying the points set forth in the foregoing paragraphs. It appears from this correspondence that there is no determination to assail E. H. Lemare as an organist, but plenty of disposition, mostly on patriotic grounds, to criticise Mr. Stewart for giving so many organ concerts to a foreigner that he must practically be considered the "official" organist of the exposition. Nearly all the missives from organists to the MUSICAL COURIER assert that Mr. Stewart addressed no request to the writers, asking their view as to the best player resident in the United States. "If Mr. Stewart did undertake such a campaign of inquiry," says one Southern letter, "he must have confined it to the organists of San Francisco, for I have been in communication with my colleagues in all other parts of the country and not one of them had heard from Mr. Stewart."

It is a mistake for the exposition officials not to make a public statement regarding the whole affair and thereby end unseemly discussion which has extended even to the English newspapers. If the Lemare engagement is final, the American organists are wasting their efforts in grumbling at his selection; if it is not too late to make a change there should be an immediate readjustment of allotments for the organ recitals, without marked favoritism in the case of any individual player. Should Mr. Stewart say that he was given carte blanche to engage the best organist irrespective of nationality and that in his judgment Lemare represents such an artist, it is difficult to see what the American organists could answer, except in the way of an arraignment of the exposition heads for giving unlimited power to Mr. Stewart and not confining his discretion to American players.

The real objection to E. H. Lemare should not be on the score of his nationality, but is justified for reasons much more vital. His style of performance is such that the ordinary build of organ does not suit his idiosyncrasies and he usually has the instruments reconstructed for his peculiar needs. The Austin Organ Company has been commissioned to make a special organ for the exposition, and at its close the instrument is to be retained by San Francisco as a permanent municipal belonging. From reliable sources the MUSICAL COURIER learns that E. H. Lemare has succeeded in having the Austin firm build the console of the new organ in the manner best suited to his requirements. As the Lemare constructive changes are extremely radical and make it inordinately difficult for any other player to use the same organ employed by him, his influence in the matter of the Austin construction appears to be a very serious question. When Lemare was the municipal organist of Pittsburgh he had the console rebuilt according to his wish. Visiting organists always had trouble with the instrument. As soon as Lemare's successor was installed the latter had the Pittsburgh console ripped out entirely and another substituted, which answered to average needs.

It will be interesting to see how the San Francisco press handles the Lemare case and what Mr. Stewart will have to say when he returns from Europe, where he now is seeking, among other things, a conductor or conductors for the exposition orchestral concerts.

ADVERTISING FOR THE TEACHER.

One of the most difficult of problems is that of advertising efficiency. In the commercial world, as well as in the world of music, this is a problem which has occupied, and is still occupying, the attention of the greatest experts. If a merchant advertises any line of goods through various mediums —newspapers, magazines, etc.—he desires to know with certainty and accuracy which of these mediums is bringing the best results. The advertising experts on either side of the line, those who buy or those who sell advertising, are not, even among themselves, in accord on this matter. One will assert that the only useful means of general advertising display is the billboard, another will maintain that the billboard is quite worthless and no results can be obtained except by the use of handbills; a third will put all his faith in the daily papers, while yet another will hold to the magazines.

Let it not be supposed for an instant, however, that this is merely a matter of friendly argument or shop talk among those interested. Volumes have been written on the subject. Large and influential magazines are circulated for the interchange of ideas on this topic alone. Advertising managers are paid large salaries for their knowledge of it, and great agencies with branches all over this country and abroad are maintained by advertising commissions alone.

And gradually, by reason of the accumulation of statistics, an exact knowledge is being gained so that results may be foretold, provided, of course, that the advertiser carries out his part of the bargain. This is a most important factor, perhaps the most important factor of all. The advertiser's part of the bargain consists in furnishing goods as advertised at a price which represents their true commercial value. In other words, advertising, to be effective, must be honest advertising, and this honesty must be backed up by genuine business activity and preparedness.

And this is nowhere more true than with the musician, be he public performer or teacher. Instances come to the mind of artists who have advertised themselves for public performance, and have been tentatively approached by managers, with the only result that they were forced to acknowledge the insufficiency of their repertoire. In such cases the desire has simply destroyed the judgment, just as it has in the not infrequent, and always deplorable cases where the artist undertakes to perform in public in spite of the handicap of a defective memory. Another instance is that of the teacher who never is prepared to receive unexpected calls from newcomers.

Really excellent musicians frequently fail from some such causes. Sometimes it is because they will not advertise, sometimes because they are not prepared to obtain the maximum results from their advertisement. But it is those who will not advertise who are, in the long run, their own worst enemies. These are mostly teachers, for the public performer has to deal with a manager, who, being a business man, insists upon advertising as a necessity. But the teacher will often tell you that "he never heard of a pupil going to a teacher as a direct result of any advertisement" (just as if he had any reliable source of information on the subject).

If you read the magazines you have no doubt noticed the request printed across the foot of advertising pages: "In answering advertisement please mention the X Magazine." But have you ever stopped to consider how very few who are attracted by the advertisement of some commodity actually do mention the magazine? Can you imagine a person going to buy a Ford automobile or a cake of Sapolio and saying: "I saw your advertisement in the X Magazine?"

That is unthinkable and absurd. And yet these, like all other standard articles, are subject to the psychological laws which govern all advertising:

1. The excellence of the article itself.
2. Advertisement until the name becomes known.
3. Personal recommendation.

This is an irresistible combination, but none of the three factors of it will be successful in the long run or in a large way without the other two. Personal recommendation is of inestimable value, but will always prove quite ineffective unless the name of the article is known beforehand. You may say: "I use such and such an automobile," and recommend it as long and as loud as you please, but at the end of your argument your friend will shrug his shoulders with the remark: "I never heard of that make," and either forget all about it or think you have been taken in by an unknown (and therefore worthless) article and are defending it for the sake of your own self respect (none of us like to acknowledge when we've been fooled).

It is the same with public performances, from the greatest theatrical production to the smallest musical recital. A few will go out of curiosity, but the vast majority awaits the verdict of this few, hence the necessity of scoring a "first night" success. The verdict counts for much, but let any manager depend upon this alone and he is sure to fail. For the mind of the public must be put into a receptive mood, without which the strongest personal recommendation will prove barren of result. Hence the immense amount of advance advertising that is always done for every large theatrical venture; hence also the fact that, in spite of the greatest and best advertising, a production often fails unless it wins the popular verdict, for no amount of publicity can make success without the aid of the factor of personal recommendation.

All of which is equally and absolutely true of the teacher. A teacher may win in a small success in a small way without ever being known outside of the limited circle of his pupils, their parents and friends. And many a truly great teacher there is thus buried, and the value of true worth thus lost to themselves and to the world by their own narrowness of view. Many insignificant teachers who eke out a bare living in this way, and rarely, if ever, get a real talent on which to exercise their skill and ability in imparting knowledge, might be "big" teachers, known to all the world, and having almost the pick of the best talent for their pupils. What a boon that would be, apart from the money consideration, every teacher knows. One of the saddest of fates is to be condemned to expend real knowledge on the instruction of mediocrities—and that is the fate of the teacher who will not advertise.

MANAGER WAGNER TO EUROPE.

Charles L. Wagner, the manager, left on the steamship Aquitania, Tuesday, July 21, for Europe, and will return August 25. He announced before he sailed that Rudolph Ganz is to open his American tour September 25, at the Worcester Festival, and already has thirty-five engagements before Christmas. Ganz remains in this country until June 1, 1915. His first New York recital, at Carnegie Hall, is booked for October 18. Another Wagner artist, John McCormack, arrives here October 23, and opens his season at Louisville, Ky., October 26. His first New York appearance is to be at Carnegie Hall, October 31. Alice Nielsen, the third of Wagner stars, is continuing last winter's American tour through the summer and into the fall. She is filling a number of engagements during August, and will open her autumn season in early October in New England. She will give a New York recital in Carnegie Hall in January, 1915.

$10,000 PRIZE OFFER CLOSED.

The opera competition for the $10,000 prize offered in Los Angeles by the National Federation of Musical Clubs now is officially closed and the judges are expected to render their decision about October 1.

MANAGERIAL VISITORS FROM THE WEST.

Frederick J. Wessells, manager of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, is summering at Norwalk, Conn., and N. J. Corey, manager of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, is spending the warm season at Hewlett, L. I.

On Hearing "The Magic Flute."

I have seen wonders. I have freely gone
  In search of marvels and have found
More than I sought, and ever hastened on
  After the treasures that abound
In Eldorado. I have even gained
  The room between this life and dreams.
And I have dreamed of purity unstained
  By wonders of this earth, which teems
With beauty blossoming in mud, and life
  Dying of its living, and tears
Shaken out of hardness, and all the rife
  Thick pestilential plagues our fears
Beget upon our souls. Oh! I have dreamed
  Such beauty as would almost turn
My eyes away from earth, so rich it seemed,
  But that in human love I learn
The use of dreams, how there is no escape
  But, as a flying music, sing
To life of hope and courage proud to shape
  Unwieldly loves. And they do bring
A singing into thoughts. They fructify
  The seeds of feeling, blessings pour
Upon the thought and felt in their most high
  Union in poetry. They soar
Like bees upon their marriage flight; up, up
  Into the eager air. All this
I fiercely sought. And here I blithely sup
  In art as gracious as a kiss
My meed of truth, dreamed, felt and thought until
  The gift is there, the perfect fruit
Of love and art; through the creating will,
  Life conquered by the Magic Flute.

—London Saturday Review.

The Composer's Primer. (With Apologies to Life.)

What is a composition?

Some printed pages with the author's name on the outside cover.

How may an American composer be recognized?

By his unpublished symphonies and the great operas he intends to write.

What class of American composers predominates?

Those that do not make any money out of their published works.

What is a successful American composer?

One who has written a vocal ballad from which his royalties have amounted to nearly $400.

What is the favorite thought of the American composer?

"I could write that ragtime trash if I wished to, and make $100,000 in a year, but I don't wish to."

To assure recognition what should an American composer possess?

A family.

What is a composer-teacher?

One who makes his pupils play or sing his works.

What is an American composer?

A person who wears cotton shirts and is unable to sell his compositions.

What is a music-writer?

A person who sells his output.

What is a modern American composer?

One whose works sound like Debussy.

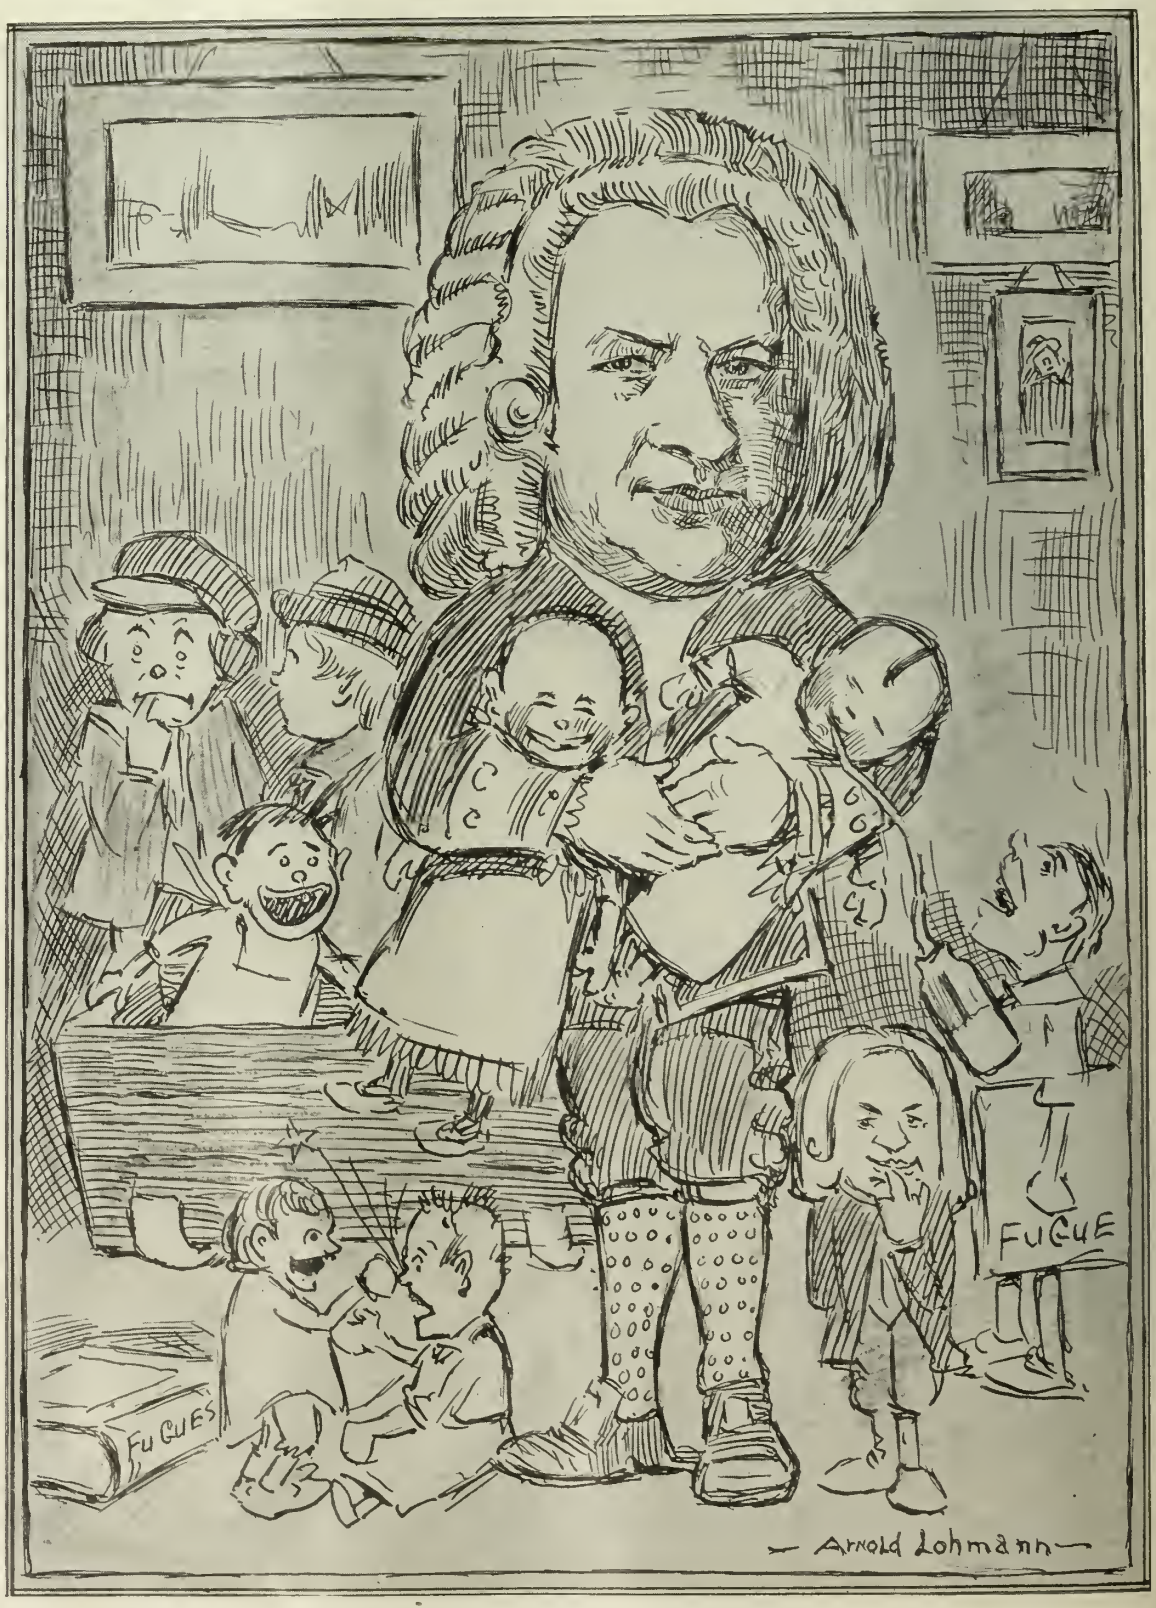
Why is melody necessary in composition?

It isn't; but the public is foolish to think that it is.

What is a sonata by an American composer?

A composition of forty pages or more which lies on the counters at music stores.

What class of American compositions are most appreciated by publishers?



Those they don't receive.

What is meant by "the Muse"?

Heaven only knows.

Are there any unsold American compositions?

Oh, yes; the best works by American composers are unsold. Ask them.

HABITS OF COMPOSERS II: BACH AT HIS FAVORITE PASTIME.
The composer was snapped for the Musical Courier just after he had thought of the theme for his "Coffee Cantata."

In composing music, what should the American composer bear in mind?

The butcher's bill.

Why do publishers return manuscripts?

Because they cannot be bothered examining them.

State another reason.

Because postage is inclosed.

How can an American composer impress his works upon the world?

Lay them upon the atlas.

Should an American composer take money for his compositions?

No; he should wait until he gets it, or he might be arrested.

What is fame?

Having the local paper write: "John James Smith's beautiful song 'Slumber,' is so effective that before its twelfth measure the entire audience was asleep."

What are children's songs?

Songs which it is hoped the grown-ups will buy.

Why should an American composer keep on composing in spite of trials, discouragements and lack of recognition, and why should he faithfully follow the musical career to the bitter end when he might win easy financial reward in any other field of endeavor?

Why should he?

A Compliment?

In a resume of the past year's musical season in Omaha, Neb., the Bee of that city says: "Leonard Liebling, the editor of the MUSICAL COURIER, passed through our year's symphony just as a short, unexpected solo sometimes happens in an unusual instrument, principally notable for the cadenza upon certain local themes."

A Gross Libel.

"It has often been said," remarks the Allentown (Pa.) Leader, "that Americans are not a musical race." Why, Leader, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. We have music writers in this country who can compose with one finger.

Corroboration.

Following fast on some paragraphs published in this column last week, and entitled "Musical Want Ads," comes an article in the London (England) New Weekly, which suggests journalistic telepathy. It reads as follows:

"By questioning the good taste of applause on the platform, a correspondent of the Daily Telegraph has set one thinking about many modern innovations in concert amenities. Development has been somewhat rapid. First conductors began to indicate by a graceful gesture that some of the applause was due to the orchestra, which, of course, nobody had ever doubted. Then the orchestra was made to rise at a given signal to acknowledge the ovation. Then the soloist ostentatiously shook hands with the conductor, or the composer shook hands with everybody within reach, while the players sympathetically rattled their fiddles. Conductors, too, have taken to applauding the soloist. In the instance quoted the conductor was the head of the institution in which the soloist was trained, so that the question arises in a somewhat acute form, but, on the whole, these platform episodes tend to assume a theatrical aspect which is not altogether pleasing. To describe it as addressed to the gallery would be unfair to the latter, as at most musical functions the gallery contains a very enlightened section of the audience."

The point about the enlightened gallery visitors is especially well taken. It applies especially in New York.

Smoked Tongue.

Some one who is crabbed and cruel suggests that opera in English is "Song Without Words."

Art in Australia.

Melbourne (Australia) Table Talk announces a great stride forward in art, to wit: "A beautiful number is 'The Funeral March,' one of Maud Allan's favorite dances. Its impressiveness was enhanced when the number was given in Christchurch, for she danced on real snow. Probably this has never been done in any other theatre in the world. So popular did the innovation prove that theatre goers requested the management to include it in every program during the season."

The Musical Punch.

"Are there any sweeter words in the English language than 'I love you'?" asked the young man at a musicale, who had just finished singing a romantic ballad. "Yes," answered the medium sized man with the blue glasses, "when the hostess says, 'Won't you have some refreshments?'"

Musical Sporting Notes.

We have been bitterly unjust toward Lohengrin in our accusation that before running a race he takes a peep into the betting ring and then adjusts his speed in inverse ratio to the amount of the odds laid against him. In the second race at Empire City (Yonkers, N. Y.) on Wednesday, July 29, Lohengrin, the favorite at odds of 8—5, won by a nose from a field of six horses. We take back everything we ever have insinuated against Lohengrin and bemoan our fate in not having placed a bet on the swift and gallant steed.

On July 30 Caro Nome was defeated at the Empire City races, but Otello won. He was favorite.

The musical horses, therefore, at 7—5, may be said to have done well last week. If only Beethoven would bestir himself for the honor of his great name and the sake of the pocketbooks of the Aschenbroed'l Club members, who to a man back the symphonic nag whenever he runs. Over $7 was lost at the Aschenbroed'l the last time Beethoven failed.

Here is a chance for a wager. Henry T. Finck quotes in the New York Evening Post the fable that "Paderewski can crack a pane of French plate glass a half inch in thickness by simply placing one hand upon it as in playing the piano and striking vigorously and suddenly with his middle finger." We claim that Paderewski can do nothing of the kind and we are willing to back our opinion with a dinner for six persons, the loser to pay, and the guests to include Paderewski and his ferocious middle finger. It is a matter of no importance whether or not Paderewski is able to break the glass in the manner described, but as he cannot do so, why assert to the contrary? Truth first, say we, and may the devil take the hindmost press agent.

Emma Trentini has received an offer from Barnum & Bailey to do her select double back and forward somersaulting act in their three ring circus. Mlle. Trentini is the tiny prima donna who leaps from grand opera into comic opera, from comic opera into grand opera, back again to comic opera, and now is reported to have announced that she is "ready for grand opera or vaudeville."

John Philip Sousa and Oscar Saenger own to an abiding admiration for pugilism, and Oscar even has admitted to a sneaking admiration for cockfights, which he used to attend in Manila.

Herbert Witherspoon was a champion high jumper when he attended Columbia University.

Wager Swayne, the Paris piano pedagog, won the 100 yards and 220 yards dashes at the intercollegiate contests when they used to be held at Berkeley Oval, near Fordham, N. Y.

Paul Bourillon, formerly tenor of the Boston Opera, at one time held the professional bicycle riding championship of France and Germany.

The trainer of the German Olympic team is said to have his eye on Alfred Hertz as a likely candidate for hurling the discus. "His arm movement is perfect," says the trainer, who studied Hertz's style at the "Ring" performances here last season.

The Managerial Maxim.

Laszlo Schwartz not only is the manager of Helen Ware and her husband beside, but also coins epigrams in the intervals between securing dates for his artist. In a series of "Managerial Maxims" which Mr. Schwartz sends to this department, these struck us as being unusually apt:

"Adagio movements in a concerto are inserted to give the artist a chance to count the audience.

"Great artists hardly need managers; beginners cannot get enough of them.

"The best contract is the one that has been played.

"If gambling is prohibitive, how is it that persons are allowed to embrace the artistic career.

"No music club disbands so long as there is $16 or more in the treasury.

"The cherry tree episode proves that George Washington never would have been a good manager.

"The best sellers—good managers."

The Sacred Ballot.

When universal public ownership in this country becomes a reality and grand opera passes under political control, just think what a Republican conductor could do when he is accompanying a Republican tenor.

Glorious Morning.

Six thousand five hundred school children played the violin not long ago at the Crystal Palace in London, 3,500 being heard in the afternoon, the others in the evening.

Talking Machine.

Vladimir de Pachmann continues to give his piano conversations, which leads the London Times to remark: "Opinion is divided upon Mr. de Pachmann's discourses, part holding him to be a species of genial madman, and part wishing that, if such is the case, he would bite some of the other pianists."

Mobilization.

The "Lohengrin" swan, "Siegfried" dragon, and "Magic Flute" snakes are being repainted at the Metropolitan.

Ultimatum.

If opera in English does not come very soon, Charles Henry Meltzer will declare war against the United States.

Latest War News.

Bach's canons are being used extensively in Germany

LEONARD LIEBLING.

PORTLAND MUSIC ACTIVITY SHOWS A STEADY GROWTH.

Oregon Metropolis Possesses Symphony Orchestra, Music Schools, Singing Societies, Musicians' Association, Vocal and String Organizations and Several Hundred Teachers.

445 Sherlock Building,
Portland, Ore., July 25, 1914.

Portland, which has a population of 270,527, according to the local directory, has shown a steady growth in the musical art and the outlook for the coming season is bright. The city has a symphony orchestra, an oratorio society, several music clubs, vocal quartets, string quartets, music schools, singing societies, concert managers, a chapter of the American Guild of Organists, some 375 music teachers and a musicians' association. A number of Eastern musicians have their eyes on Portland, according to a few letters received by the writer. They will not find an "open field" here, as one foreign vocalist seems to think. There is much competition in Portland, the metropolis of Oregon. The writer is not a professional musician; therefore he is in a position to welcome newcomers.

SOME PROMINENT MUSICIANS.

Among the prominent musicians and musical "live wires" of this city must be mentioned W. Gifford Nash, Dorothea Nash, Dr. Emil Enna, Charles Dierke, Beatrice Dierke, Rose Coursen-Reed, Lucien E. Becker, Robert Boice Carson, Carl Denton, George E. Jeffery, Mose Christensen, William H. Boyer, William M. Wilder, J. A. Finley, Clement B. Shaw, Rose Bloch Bauer, John Clarie Monteith, Franck G. Eichenlaub, Beatrice Hidden Eichenlaub, Lois Steers, Carl V. Lachmund, William R. Boone, Mordaunt A. Goodnough, Harold Bayley, Waldemar Lind, David P. Nason, Henry L. Bettman, William Wallace Graham, Mrs. Herman A. Heppner, Mrs. Ralph C. Walker, Aaron H. Currier, Jasper Dean McFall, Abby Whiteside, Marie A. S. Soule, Emma B. Carroll, Charles L. Sparks, Mrs. Carlin DeWitt Joslyn, Mrs. Warren E. Thomas, J. William Belcher, Mrs. Thomas Carrick Burke, J. R. Hutchinson, Ella Connell Jesse, Susie Fennell Pipes, George Wilbur Reed, George H. Street, F. W. Goodrich, Mrs. G. J. Frankel, Mrs. Russell Dorr, Mrs. E. E. Coovert, Charles L. Brown, W. E. McElroy, Elsie Bond Bischoff, Helen Flynn, Grant Gleason, Jocelyn Foulkes, Gio Tyler-Taglieri, Dr. Z. M. Parvin, Ella B. Jones, Mrs. B. Tait, Cora M. Blosser, Roy Marion Wheeler, Leonora Fisher Whipp, Hartridge G. Whipp, Ethel Edick, Elizabeth Johnson, Martha B. Reynolds, Laura Bertram, Lulu Dahl Miller, Annette Owens, E. O. Spitzner, Carmel Sullivan, F. Konrad, Charles Duncan Raff, Mrs. Edward Alden Beals, Ursula E. Young, Imogen Harding Brodie, Delphine Marx, Mrs. John F. Logan, Carrie R. Beaumont, Edgar E. Coursen, Ralph W. Hoyt, J. H. Cowen, Alex. Wagner, Mitylene Fraker-Stites, Mrs. Frank J. McGettigan, Lena W. Chambers, Mary Cahill Moore, Alice Brown Marshall, Virginia Spencer Hutchinson, Katherine Ward Pope, Charles O. Hargrave, Mrs. Fred L. Olson, Joseph Macqueen and J. L. Wallin. Each is working for the uplift of good music.

FRANCIS RICHTER SOLOIST AT BAND CONCERT.

Francis Richter, Portland's blind pianist, appeared as soloist with the Municipal Band, Charles L. Brown, conductor, on Thursday evening. He offered Bower's "Cathedral Chimes," with band accompaniment, and Liszt's "Rhapsodie Espagnole." Mr. Richter, who is a pupil of Leschetizky, played in his usual masterly style. A huge audience was present and the soloist was recalled again and again. The band, which has a complete instrumentation, made a good showing in Wagner's "Tannhäuser" overture, Bizet's "Carmen" and R. Chapi's Moorish suite, "The Courts of Granada." This capable organization has been booked for a series of sixty concerts in the local parks.

PORTLAND NOTES.

The writer is in receipt of an attractive circular announcing the merits of the Russian Bayan Quartet, Mabel Hammond, manager, of New York City. The organization is composed of Nina Dimitrieff, soprano; Constance Purdy, contralto; George Harris, Jr., tenor, and Ivan Petroff, bass.

F. X. Arens, the well known director, of New York City, visited Portland this week. He has a ranch at Hood River, Ore.

JOHN R. OATMAN.

Albert Schott a Parsifal.

Albert Schott, the well known tenor, now has added the role of Parsifal to his repertoire, and expects to sing it at several German opera houses before the commencement of his American concert tour next season.

NORFOLK MUSIC FESTIVAL.

Twentieth Annual Musical Entertainment Features Fine Artists in Splendid Program—Member of Musical Courier New York Editorial Staff in Attendance.

There are still some people and probably even a good many musicians who do not know exactly where Norfolk, Conn., is or why this town has become famous. Its position on the map is easy to describe. It lies in the Berkshire Hill region, almost on the northern boundary of Connecticut, and not far from the western end of the State. Its beauties and the beauty of the country in which it lies have been described in previous articles in the MUSICAL COURIER, and there is clearly nothing in that regard which can be added now. As was there told its settlement dates back from 1744, the first town meeting having been held on December 12, 1758, with forty-four legal voters. On December 28, 1758, the first sermon was preached, and two years later the church organization was effected with twenty-three members. At the crisis of the Revolution, begun at Lexington in April, 1775, seventeen years after the incorporation of the town, Norfolk furnished twenty-four men for the American army.

ANNIE LOUISE DAVID.

These things are interesting. It is also interesting to note that this town is the highest reached by railroad in the State of Connecticut, being 1,300 feet above sea level. Norfolk has also become a popular summer resort because of its agreeable climate and the beautiful scenery by which it is surrounded.

But none of these things would have made Norfolk famous, especially musically famous. For that it was necessary for that splendid mentality which abounds in this New England region to expand and develop, so as to make its own wants and desires known, first of all to the people of the adjacent localities, and then ultimately to the outside world. This was brought about by Mary Eldridge, a lady whose brilliant culture and education, combined with adequate means, have made it possible for her to carry out the expression of her own tastes and desires. This has been done through the giving in Norfolk of a series of splendidly brilliant concerts.

As has already been frequently told in the pages of the MUSICAL COURIER (see, especially, the issue of July 30, 1913), these concerts were begun twenty years ago, in 1894, for the purpose of providing funds for the Society of Home Missions. Every year since their inception these concerts have become more and more brilliant and musically of greater importance. As far as has been possible in consideration of the fact that these concerts have taken place in the summer months, the leading American and European artists have been brought to Norfolk and have given of their best for the benefit of the small audiences that the Congregational Church, where the festival is held, could accommodate. Mme. Schumann-Heink has six times appeared at these concerts for Miss Eldridge; David Bispham, Evan Williams, Dan Beddoe, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Jeanne Jomelli and a long list of others equally famous have been heard from time to time, some of them repeatedly, in the little Norfolk church during the last twenty years. And gradually the fame of these concerts has gone abroad, and if their success continues, it will certainly be necessary in the end to build a spacious hall in which to hold them, for they have long since outgrown the accommodations offered by the Congregational Church. The concerts have taken on in recent years the aspect of a true festival, and, like the MacDowell Festival at Peterborough, there is that atmosphere of idealism, which has always made Bayreuth seem so attractive to devotees of the Wagnerian school, and which alone could render any endeavor of this sort highly successful. For it is the spirit that preavils during such festivals, and not the big exploitation of music or of the artists, that must always prove in the end to be the highly valuable asset in all such undertakings.

EVAN WILLIAMS.

GRAHAM REED,
Baritone.

This spirit has been brought about in Norfolk by the truly devoted character of Miss Eldridge, who has given so much time and energy to this work; and it is due also to the broad hospitality, combined with genuinely unaffected intellectuality, shown by the people of this section, most of whom are descendants of old New England stock.

The idealism which distinguishes this region is perhaps best shown by the following verse, painted on a board, and nailed to one of the stately elms which shade the little triangular park at the crossroads in the center of the town:

THE VOICE OF THE ELMS.

Caesar saw fifty, we, an hundred years,
Still green, an hundred more we'll stand, like seers,

THOMAS H. THOMAS,
Tenor..

MARY ELDRIDGE AND MME. GERVILLE-REACHE AT THE NORFOLK FESTIVAL.

And watch the generations as they go
Beneath our branches in their hurried flow.

Were this written of the trees of Walden Wood it could not be more appropriate, and in it one seems to feel the peace, the intellectual detachment, of a Longfellow, an Emerson or a Whittier, seeking its joys in things of the mind rather than in the battlefield of the world.

The Norfolk of a hundred or even fifty years ago may have been merely a rural center, with its country store, its postoffice, its few straggling cottages, and all that went to make up the typical country town of old New England, just as it does the typical small town of today. But the modern Norfolk has lost all of these characteristics, and little now remains to remind one of them. The town is now spread out over a great area. Splendid roads, as smooth as the most fastidious automobilist could desire, wind in and out among the wooded hills, leading past detached and widely separated country homes such as can only grace the property of the millionaire. It is difficult, indeed, to believe that this splendid district, in appearance so like a fashionable suburb, is over a hundred miles from New York and still further from Boston, the nearest large cities.

DONALD CHALMERS.

Facing the little park with its stately elms is the church in which the annual concert is held. This is an ancient edifice, built over a hundred years ago on the site of the earlier building, which was destroyed by fire. The interior has been somewhat improved in recent years, especially in the building of a choir loft and very handsome, modern organ.

Two hours or more before the time scheduled for the beginning of the concert on Wednesday evening, July 29, a double line of music lovers began to form in front of the church door. From the belfry a quartet of trumpets, engaged from New York especially for this occasion, played a series of quiet melodies, their bright yet plaintive tones floating out softly on the evening air, as in the old days of early Protestantism when the hymns of Luther used to be heard from many a belfry in the cities and villages of the Fatherland.

Gradually the audience assembled, coming in from all directions, on foot and in carriages and automobiles, beneath the festooned electric lights with which the adjacent streets were decorated. There was a great air of expectation over all, and the program, like those of former years, surely warranted it, not only by reason of the splendid masterpieces to be performed, but because of the unusual array of artists. There were Mme. Gerville-Réache, the celebrated French contralto; Evan Williams, the ever popular tenor; Graham Reed, the brilliant baritone, and Donald Chalmers, with his sterling bass. There were Vera Barstow, the talented young violinist; Annie Louise David, famous for her playing of the harp; Bruno Huhn, who, on this occasion, appeared both as composer and accompanist; Charles Heinroth, organist and conductor; and finally there were Minnie Welch Edmond a local soprano, fortunate protegée of Miss Eldridge; Marie Stoddart, soprano; Gwyn Jones, contralto, and Thomas H. Thomas, tenor, who donates his services in assisting Miss Eldridge in the no small task of managing this affair, and, be it added, of making the artists feel welcome and of showing them a good time during their stay in this hospitable community.

The program opened with the overture, "Der Freischütz" (Weber), excellently interpreted by Mr. Heinroth. Following this Miss Edmond was heard in César Franck's "Panis Angelicus," accompanied by violin, harp and organ. This talented young soprano possesses vocal and musical qualifications which should insure success in her chosen field. A pupil of Bruno Huhn, her interpretations are wonderfully broad and effective, and in this air by the great Belgian master she infused a fine spirit of religious fervor. Miss Eldridge may well be proud of her protegée.

Evan Williams possesses a wealth of experience which renders well nigh perfect his interpretations of the works of the great classic masters, and the audience was fortunate in hearing him in Handel's recitative, "Thy Rebuke," and aria, "Behold and See," from "The Messiah."

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, NORFOLK, CONN.,
Where festival was held.

His treatment of these, both the recitative and the aria, was splendidly dignified, showed his unusual poise and breath control and the beauty of his tone.

No contralto has greater powers of passion and intensity of feeling than Mme. Gerville-Réache, and her [illegible] of Bizet's famous "Agnus Dei" must have been [illegible] to many who heard her upon this occasion [illegible] time. She was excellently accompanied by [illegible] and organ, and the depth and beauty of her tone, her faultless emission and the wealth of color and expressiveness with which this broad, flowing melody was given, were positively thrilling.

The final number of this religious part of the program was the "Sanctus," from Gounod's "St. Cecilia Mass," done by the double quartet with great sonority of tone.

Part second was again opened by Mr. Heinroth, who gave a masterly rendition of a "Preludium," by Jaernefelt, a work of marked originality evidently greatly to the taste of the audience. This was succeeded by the big Saint-Saëns aria from "Samson," "Mon cœur s'ouvre à ta voix," with which Mme. Gerville-Réache produced a deep impression. Delilah is one of this gifted artist's finest roles, and in this aria all of that deep passion which she has at her command was brought out with intense effect. After this Mr. Williams was heard again, this time in the quiet "Evening Hymn," of Reinecke, in which he was supported by the sextet. It is an effective piece, bringing out the solo voice with rare excellence, and containing also some solo parts for contralto, finely rendered by Gwyn Jones.

Vera Barstow and Annie Louise David then played together the "Meditation," from "Thais," both instruments producing great beauty and sonority of tone and scoring a decided success.

Miss Edmond is a young soprano whose talent is evident and she was heard to advantage in a group of songs: "O Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" Handel; "Good Morning, Sue," Delibes, and "Chanson Provencale," Dell' Acqua. She was particularly successful in the last of the three, and sang as an encore "The Last Rose of Summer" with a simplicity and grace that captivated her audience.

An unusually beautiful rendering was given the duet, "Nuit d'Ivresse," from Berlioz's "Troyens à Carthage," by Mme. Gerville-Réache and Mr. Williams. It was sung in French with excellently clear diction and sharp enunciation, and the plaintive and tender melodies of the great French colorist were rendered doubly effective by the beauty of vocal tone produced by both of these great artists.

It was hard to say which won the greatest success, Bruno Huhn, composer and accompanist, or Donald Chalmers, who sang his "Invictus" and received such a rousing welcome that he was forced to repeat it. He also sang "Lungi dal caro bane," by Secchi, in which the fine quality of his voice was well shown, but it was the "Invictus" that evidently most strongly appealed to his big, manly nature, and stirred the audience deeply.

That Mme. Gerville-Réache sings German as well as she does her own native French is not generally known, but no doubt of this could remain in the mind of any one who heard her splendid production of Schumann's "Ich grolle nicht" on this occasion. Her great range made it possible for her to sing it in its original setting, and she instilled into it all of that sad pathos which the words express. No less effective was her rendition of Bemberg's "Chant Hindon," but her great triumph was with Reynaldo Hahn's splendidly effective setting of that saddest of sad poems, "D'une prison," of the greatest of modern French poets, Verlaine. It is impossible to imagine a more intensely sad and passionate rendering of this song, and only an

AN INTERESTING GROUP "SNAPPED" AT THE NORFOLK FESTIVAL.
Left to right (standing): Annie Louise David, Marie Stoddart, Thomas H. Thomas (in front), Graham Reed (behind), Minnie Welch Edmond, Marie Eldridge, Charles Heinroth, Jeanne Gerville-Réache, Gwyn Jones, Vera Barstow, Bruno Huhn, Walter David. Seated: Evan Williams, Donald Chalmers, L. E. Behymer.

MINNIE WELCH EDMOND.

...ost possessed of Mme. Gerville-Reache's depth of feeling combined with her rare artistic mastery could accomplish it.

This was followed by a set of songs by Mr. Williams, of which perhaps the most effective were Cadman's "The Moon Drops Low," and Schubert's "Impatience," both of them done with Mr. Williams' well known mastery of style. Following the latter Schubert's "Serenade" was given in response to an encore.

The final number of this excellent program was Parker's "Harold Harfager," done with great brilliancy by the double quartet, organ, harp, violin and piano. It only remains to add that the sonority and fullness of tone produced by this quartet was certainly much added to by the fine vocal qualifications of Thomas H. Tomas, tenor, and Graham Reed, baritone.

The whole affair was an unqualified success.

Borwick Continues to Win.

The newspaper notices received in Melbourne, Australia, recently, by Leonard Borwick are of the most laudatory kind, two of them, from the Argus, serving as an example of how the great pianist impressed the antipodeans:

"We doubt, indeed, whether Mr. Borwick could do anything without showing the very perfection of tonal charm and flawless execution. The Chopin mazurka was a delicious bit of wayward and appropriate tone painting, and nothing more exquisite can be imagined than his treatment of the popular berceuse. In it Mr. Borwick was a true 'pianissimist," his tone having a whispering delicacy which set every ear at a stretch not to lose a single note. The

VERA BARSTOW,
Soloist at the Norfolk Festival.

'Butterfly' etude (repeated) was also a delightful experience, and the final of the bracket, the great scherzo in B flat minor, was given a splendid example of emotional expression combined with marvelous accuracy of technic – Mr. Borwick does the thrilling leaps to the high F with an exactitude of movement even an acrobat would envy. Much enthusiasm resulted, and as an extra the pianist gave Chopin's A flat waltz, and, as before, gave it inimitably. His other items were drawn from former programs; the most important was Brahms' F minor sonata. It was superbly played."

"Another great audience gathered in the Town Hall on Saturday evening to hear Leonard Borwick. Possibly it was the largest so far seen this season at a musical function, and certainly the most enthusiastic. The artist's program was, to some degree, made up of pieces well known to everybody. They were the pieces teachers had sighed over and the pieces pupils had cried over. They were, likewise, the pieces parents and friends had groaned over, when, after much painful practice, they came to be trotted out at the family gathering, the at home, and the speech night. Many of them, indeed, beautiful works of art as they are, had come to be looked on with abhorrence—the hundred, maybe thousand, times 'damnable iteration' had killed them for the time being. And here is where Mr. Borwick's services to art came in. He played the works in question so beautifully that long suffering teachers forgot their pedagogic agonies, and students realized that the florid work in Beethoven's rondo in G, the tricky arpeggio figure in Mendelssohn's 'Spring Song,' the syncopations of Schumann's 'Aufschwung,' the awkward stretches of the same composer's 'Nachtstuck,' and other difficulties in other pieces were not specially created by the composers to worry young players, but, mirabile dictu, were integral elements in the works themselves, and productive of much beauty if mastered. Furthermore, those who had had to listen to them so often without either the pleasure of giving instruction or receiving it came to see, or rather hear, that the much tortured music was, when properly done, in truth worth the hearing.

"So little wonder that when Mr. Borwick gave the pieces with the most entrancing tonal effects, a flawless finish of technic, and an emotional understanding which made them things to dream over, pedagogues pupils, parents—the whole audience, in fact—applauded the works and their creator, Mr. Borwick, with enthusiasm.

"But these, of course, only covered a part of Mr. Borwick's program. Most important in the matter of musical interest was Chopin's B flat minor sonata, a work which Mr. Borwick played superbly. Every one was, of course, eager to notice how Mr. Borwick would treat the 'Funeral March.' As Mr. Borwick has purity of style to a marked degree, he was able to make of it a wonderfully moving piece of work. An unforgettable performance came to a close with the ghostly finale. The pianist's other numbers came to an end with Liszt's twelfth rhapsody, done so brilliantly that, although Mr. Borwick had already conceded several extras, he had, tired as he was, to give still another."

The Jew in Music.

[From Puck.]

Nearly every great composer has been called a Jew some time in his career. Mozart (whose real name was Ozart, without the M) had Jewish features; when he was brought before Maria Theresa at Vienna, that great Empress sharply asked: "Has the child been baptized?" On being told he had, she said: "A genius must not be a Jew." Apochryphal or not, this is an interesting story, though not so much so as Rossini's witty request: "Don't bury me in a Jewish cemetery." Rossini was a Roman Catholic of Hebraic origin. Verdi looked Jewish; so did Weber—the latter "suspiciously" so. A. E. Keeton, in an article a few years ago in the London Contemporary Review ("The Jew in Music"), didn't hesitate to suspect Chopin—Szopen was the real Polish name, a Jewish one; Chopin's father hailed from Nancy, France, a city of many Jewish inhabitants; even Beethoven does not escape. Saint-Saëns had Jewish blood in him, as had Berlioz, Borodine, Arthur Sullivan (Seligman) and Bizet, the composer of "Carmen." Bach was more Jewish looking than Wagner, but was of Hungarian origin. Wagner's mother's name, Bertz, is Jewish; she was as Jewish in appearance as Geyer. Schumann's name is Jewish-German, but he was pure Saxon. Schubert was Austrian. Mendelssohn and Meyerbeer and Goldmark, of course, are Jewish. Richard Strauss is a puzzle. His name is unqualifiedly Jewish, his father looked like one (he was first hornist in the Munich Opera), but Richard is an out and out Bavarian. His mother was a Pschorr, daughter of the Munich brewer. The music of Wagner, Strauss and Goldmark is notably Oriental in color and intensity. All the celebrated singers and virtuosi were, with few exceptions, of Jewish origin: Thalberg, Rubinstein, Paganini (who looked as Jewish as the "Kol Nidrci"), Joachim, Wieniawski, Karl Tausig, Joseffy, Rosenthal, D'Albert, Busoni, Godowski, Pachmann, Lilli Lehmann, Milka Ternina, the Garcia family—Spanish Jews; Patti, on the Patti, not the Barili side; Josef Hofmann, Mischa Elman; the list is as long as from here to Jericho. No one need be ashamed to be a musician or virtuoso of Jewish origin, though I know some that are; they even change their names to fool themselves, but do not fool the world.

Macmillen Conquers Rome.

The Augusteo (in Rome), the ancient tomb of the Roman emperors, now is an ideal concert hall of vast dimensions, where the old walls of the former mausoleum

JEANNE GERVILLE-REACHE.
Soloist at the Norfolk Festival.

resound with the best music of the modern world. The famous Corea concerts, under the auspices of the city government and the St. Cecilia Society, are given there.

It was at one of these concerts that Francis Macmillen, made his initial bow to a Roman audience, which filled the huge Augusteo. On this occasion every one of the double tier of boxes, extending around the great circular structure, contained a scion of a noble Roman house.

Chief among Macmillen's distinguished admirers in Rome are the Duke and Duchess Lante della Rovere, who can boast of a lineage of seven Popes in the family. Their country seat, the Villa Lante, in former days housed at least two of the successors of St. Peter.

Another champion and friend is the Prince Orsini, scion of the powerful house of Orsini, which shared their rule with the Colonnas during the time of the Tribunes, and about whose family Marion Crawford has woven the romance of his best known novels dealing with ancient Italian history. In fact, it was in Prince Orsini's big touring car that Macmillen saw ancient Rome for the first time.

Other Roman admirers of Macmillen are the Count San Martino, Sgambati, the composer, and the young conductor of the Corea concerts, Bernardino Molinari.

INTERESTING GROUP PHOTO TAKEN AT THE VILLA LANTE, NEAR ROME.
1, Francis Macmillen; 2, Lady Matilda Lante; 3, The Duke Lante della Rovere; 4, The Duchess Lante della Rovere; 5, Prince Colonna; 6, Prince Orsini; 7, Lady Matilda Lante; 8, Count Chalani.

IN ALL THE KEYS.

An attractive concert was given recently in Houston Heights Christian Church, Houston, Tex., under the able direction of Mrs. N. J. Ackermann, musical director of the Central Christian Church, in which two local quartets, the Mozart and the Woodland, participated. The work of the soloists was excellent and greatly enjoyed by a representative audience.

Zion Evangelical Church, St. Joseph, Mo., which recently installed a new pipe organ, was the scene of an interesting recital and dedication service. Prof. P. W. Kost, the organist, was assisted by the church choir and several local soloists.

Among the pupils who took part in the piano recital of the Berkshire Music School, Pittsfield, Mass., were Virginia Blood, Agnes Hewitt, James Devanney, Margaret McSweeny, Ethel Bohan, Mila Doran, Henry Rondeau, Fredericka Palmer, Catherine Kelly, Martha Moseguard, Mary Connors, S. Florence Hickey, Rosanna O'Leary, Jennie Bolza, Margaret Shean, Helena Grogan, Alice Palmer, Walter Zink, May Carroll, Gertrude Lawrence and Mary Canavan. The pupils were from Grades 3, 4 and 5, and their work was uniformly good.

Members of Company H, National Guard, stationed at Honolulu, Hawaii, were treated to an excellent concert through the courtesy of Mayor Fern, which concert was held on the executive grounds preceding the military ball given by Company H. This ball was for the purpose of raising funds to furnish their company quarters.

Estelle Carey, soprano, and W. H. Hewlett, pianist, assisted the violin pupils of Arthur Ostler at their recital in Hamilton, Canada. The program, which was made up of sixteen numbers, was well selected and given serious thought by these students.

Two very interesting recitals were given recently at the Quincy College of Music, Quincy, Ill., by two students of piano at that institution. The recitals, which were an hour in duration, were given respectively by Enid Emily Ireland and Gloria Helena Brosi, and were well attended.

An enjoyable program was given before the members of the Ladies' Friday Musical Club, of Arcadia, Fla., among the numbers being solos by C. C. McDermont and Miss Polk, visiting guests of the club.

Selections for violin, piano and voice were heard at a recent recital given at Eugene, Ore., by the students of the University School of Music.

Gladys Hollingsworth gave a piano recital, assisted by Betty Frank and Royal S. Brown, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. S. Frank, San Diego, Cal.

At a benefit concert given in Houston, Tex., the work of the "Rusty Hinge" Quartet was heartily received and many encores demanded. Even to a casual observer it is plain to be seen that however "rusty" they may be generally, there can be no "rust" on their vocal chords.

Pupils of Jay Mark Ward gave a song recital in Rochester, N. Y. They were assisted by Helen Bastianelli, cellist, and Alice Wysard, accompanist.

Among the recent appointments on the staff of teachers at the Conservatory of Music of Columbia College, Columbia, S. C., are Jane W. Thomson, mezzo-soprano, head of the voice department, to be assisted by Cora Scheffer Anthony; Miss E. Goddell, teacher of piano and history of music; Helen A. Boynton, head of the violin department, and Alma Holm, teacher of piano.

Eleanor Shaw appeared of late as soloist with the Lakeside Symphony Orchestra, Denver, Colo., and scored a fine success.

Cooper, Ala., was the scene of the two days' session of the Chilton County Musical Convention, which achieved commendable success.

Margaret Brady, teacher of music at Bangor, Me., presented her pupils in two recitals, the first being given by the more advanced students, while the second was known as the junior pupils' program.

At the Rochester Conservatory of Music, Rochester, N. Y., nineteen members of the children's department were heard in recital.

Coming attractions next season for the members of the Fresno Musical Club, Fresno, Cal., include Olive Fremstad, John McCormack, Efrem Zimbalist, Josef Lhevinne, Alma Gluck, Maggie Teyte and Julia Culp.

Pupils of Grace Oosting, assisted by Ruth Rooks and Cora van Dommelen, vocalists, were heard in their annual recital at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Mrs. E. T. Munroe, piano teacher, of Omaha, Neb., recently presented her advanced pupils in recital. They were assisted by Mrs. N. T. Hause and Ethel Parsons, who were heard in several vocal numbers.

A piano recital was given by about half a dozen of the pupils of Mrs. Heinrich Jacobsen, of Rochester, N. Y.

Emma Lucy Gates, assisted by Marion Cannon, pianist, and Genevieve Malone, violinist, gave a recital before a well filled house at Tooele, Utah.

Alice Collins, of St. Albans, Vt., gave a vocal program in that city composed of humorous and dramatic selections She was assisted by another vocalist, Mrs. Guy F. Barker, and Jessie Barker and Charlene Felton, accompanists.

Piano pupils of Bessie Kelly were heard in recital at Bridgeport, Conn. Catherine Morrissey was the assisting vocalist.

Emma Lucy Gates and her assistants, Marion Cannon and Genevieve Malone, were heard recently in recital at Brigham City and Richfield, Utah.

A students' musicale was given recently by the pupils of Marie Estabrook, at Grand Rapids, Mich.

S. Henderson, Eva Cunningham, Alline Grauman, Marjorie Emmott, R. D. Officer, Ola Miller, Clara Duncan, Harry Gordon, T. Mancias, Aubrey Davis, Camille Briggs, H. Rason, all pupils of Thomas Harborne, of Houston, Tex., were heard recently in recital. They were accompanied by Theodore D. Meyer.

Pupils of Harriet O. Burroughs, of Bridgeport, Conn., were the participants in an interesting musicale given recently at the residence of Miss Burroughs.

Susan Tompkins Medrow, violinist, was soloist at a recent concert at Rochester, N. Y., when she was heard with the Park Band.

A musicale was given recently by the Pyle Coterie, a local organization of Wilmington, Del., in honor of the return of Dr. Joseph P. Pyle, who has been abroad.

Mrs. Everett Rapley gave a most enjoyable musicale at her country place, near Silver Spring, Md., with Gretchen Hood, soprano, as the principal soloist. Other solos were given by Miss Hyatt, soprano, and Lillian Coechling, violinist.

Edwin Arthur Kraft, city organist of Atlanta, Ga., gave recently an interesting organ recital in that city. He played selections by Wagner, Tschaikowsky, Fricker, Schubert, MacDowell and Kinder.

Accompanied by Mrs. Roscoe Shrader, the pupils of Miss Wales gave an interesting recital in Wilmington, Del., not long ago. The program was one of varied interest and was listened to by a large number of friends.

A benefit concert was given recently at the Shattuck School, Portland, Ore., and was a success, both artistically and financially. The program was under the direction of Dagmar Inez Kelly and reflected credit upon her efforts.

An interesting program was furnished of late by the pupils of Mrs. G. Lippitt, Washington, D. C., who were heard in recital, accompanied by Mrs. Lippitt and May H. Wilbur.

Martha B. Reynolds was presented in recital at Pacific University, Portland, Ore., giving an extensive program of numbers by Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Liszt and modern composers.

Walter Friar, violinist, has appeared recently with great success at Safford and other points in the Gila Valley, Ariz.

Mrs. J. Curtis Simmons, soprano, was soloist at the meeting of the Coterie musicale, Portland, Ore. Assisted by Florence Jackson, accompanist, she was heard in songs by Puccini, Massenet and Woodman.

Vocal students of Lulu Dahl Miller gave a pleasing musicale in Portland, Ore. Winifred Elliott played the accompaniments.

Germaine Schnitzer an Experienced Auto Driver.

Germaine Schnitzer, enjoying the delights of an open Packard car, recently drove her guests through New Jersey to Philadelphia, and after stopping there, to Atlantic City.

The young pianist enjoys driving immensely, and says she is as sure of herself and as much at ease at the wheel as when playing the Liszt E flat concerto.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
KUFSTEINER, ST. 6 BERLIN W., GERMANY

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

MAURICE ARONSON VERA KAPLUN
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 8

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent. For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

RUDOLF BERGER
FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

VERDI'S "FALSTAFF" IS ACCLAIMED IN LONDON.

Under Polacco's Direction the Sparkling Work Is Revived with Brilliant Success—New Movements to Help Composers—How Choral Works Are Killed—Notes.

5 Portland Place,
London, W., July 23, 1914.

A delightful representation of Verdi's "Falstaff" was given at Covent Garden, July 21, when the cast was constructed as follows:

Falstaff ..... Antonio Scotti
Fenton ..... Giuseppe Armanini
Ford ..... Armand Crabbé
Caius ..... Octave Dua

MRS. STACEY WILLIAMS (ON THE RIGHT) AND MRS. WILLIAM BROWN, JR.
Taken on the terrace at Keswick in the English Lake Region.

Bardolfo ..... Giordano Paltrinieri
Pistol ..... Adamo Didur
Alice ..... Claudia Muzio
Nanetta ..... Alice Zeppilli
Quickly ..... Louise Kirkby Lunn
Meg ..... Violet Hume
Conductor, Giorgio Polacco.

It was a charming performance in every detail. Delicate humor prevailed throughout the evening's performance in the dramatic action as well as in the delineation of the music. In the libretto arranged by Arrigo Boito from the Shakespearean play a faithful adherence is made to the original drama, both in the spirit of the play and in the general characterization. And the casting of the respective characters was excellent. One and all distinguished themselves in all they did. Claudio Muzio as Alice was the charming actress as well as good singer; Mm. Kirkby Lunn gave fresh evidence of her versatility; Alice Zeppilli was well fitted to her part and sang her lines with great taste; Didur as Pistol was the great artist in all he did; Signor Paltrinieri as Bardolfo did good work, and so on, throughout the list of artists engaged in the performance, the standard of individual merit was unquestionably of a very high order.

Of the conducting of Giorgio Polacco, only the highest praise is due for his brilliant and spirited conception of the opera. He obtained just the necessary lightness of quality and delicacy of ensemble work demanded by the character of the score, and the essential accent and note of precision obtained at all times. The difficulties of the work are well known and that so creditable a performance was given proved the merit of those to whom it was entrusted. Great enthusiasm prevailed and conductor and artists were called many times before the curtain. A second and last performance of the work will be given July 25.

Photo copyright by Mishkin Studio, New York.
GIORGIO POLACCO.

The Performing Rights Society.

There has been much discussion in the press the past fortnight over the question of the performing right controversy. Some concise and interesting remarks on the subject appeared in the Observer of Sunday, July 19, in the columns devoted to music. "While the principles of the new Performing Right Society appear fair and equitable from many points of view," said the Observer, "it is perfectly obvious that unless all the principal publishers are in agreement (the composer, naturally, goes the way of his publisher, otherwise he goes nowhere) little will result from any attempt to establish them in this country. In the lavish controversial correspondence that has occupied many columns of the Daily Telegraph during the week, an important point appears to have been ignored by both sides. In the past—and the idea is still maintained—much has been done to ensure popularity to the publisher's wares by the payment of singers who receive generally so much for so many times that particular items appear in their programs. The total result of this arrangement was that many songs were made fine properties for both composer and publisher for reasons altogether incommensurate with their artistic value. It is common knowledge, also, that publishers pay willingly to have all types of dance music and other slight work—which, if persisted in, might catch the public fancy—performed in places where light music may especially exercise its particular charm. Now it is presumably intended to withdraw the payments to singers or orchestral directors in theatres, cinemas, restaurants, etc., and exact some small contribution to the Performing Society's funds instead. The conclusion to be drawn is that there will be no more 'popular' new music from English sources for a very long time."

The Downtrodden Composer.

The following article is taken from the second issue of the new musical paper recently published in London as an adjunct to the Independent Music Club, of this city. The author, writing under the nom de plume of "Leonidas," is evidently quoting from actual experience on a subject of universal interest, and it may interest the many readers of the Musical Courier to see the article in its entirety. Under the title of "The Guardians of the Flame," it is as follows:

"One wonders whether kind, long suffering critics will recognize themselves under this title! Yet, if criticism is to be taken seriously, is not this exactly what they are—the self appointed guardians of the Flame? And as one reads the lives of great artists who have passed on, one realizes more and more the world of responsibility that lies in the critic's office. 'He was the first to recognize my work,' is the touching phrase that occurs in all these lives, and to that 'him' the whole wealth of gratitude from the lonely soul, starved of all appreciation, is poured forth.

"Friends, fame, sympathy and support may all come later with the years, and may all be mentioned with gratitude, but the supreme debt is to the 'him' who first believed in 'my work,' and was not afraid to say so. For a man's work, if born of true inspiration, is the travail of his soul—his link with the unseen—the most sacred and precious part of him.

"And now let us glance at the best existing conditions under which this precious thing, 'my work,' is brought before an ordinary British public for a first performance.

"We will suppose that it is a serious work for a chorus, solos and orchestra, lasting about half an hour.

"The conductor of a great choir has announced that works may be submitted to him with a view to performance during the ensuing season. So-and-So's work is among those sent up, and presently comes the astounding news that it has been accepted, and will be included in the program of such and such a date.

Photo copyright by Dover Street Studios, London.
EDMUND BURKE AS THE SEA KING,
In Josef Holbrooke's opera "Dylan," given at Drury Lane in June.

"So-and-So's first question is, 'How many rehearsals will there be, and may he attend them?'

"He is told that certainly he may attend them, and that there will be three, four or five rehearsals, according to the difficulty of the work.

"So far, so good. 'Who are the soloists?' he asks.

"To his delight the very best obtainable are mentioned. 'How many orchestral rehearsals?' he asks breathlessly. 'One only.'

"One only, on the morning of the performance, at which

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N.W.

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
BECHSTEIN HALL STUDIOS, LONDON
Private address, 40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

thirty-five minutes have been allotted to him as his proportion of the brief two hours.

"'But when do the orchestra and choir rehearse together?' he asks in agony.

"He is told, Never! They meet for the first time at the actual performance! No chance for changes of tempi, or expression marks. No chance to make the smallest alteration in the score, no chance for anything but a rigid beat, rigidly counted, and therefore no chance of success.

"'Is there no other way?' he asks.

"Only by paying for an extra orchestral rehearsal himself, he is told; and that would cost him £70!

"Of course, this is prohibitive, and the work is damned.

"Think of this, you guardian of the Flame, and in your condemnation, however just, try to distinguish between the disabilities of the work itself, and the disabilities of its production. Otherwise, the thing called 'My Work' is strangled at its birth, never to be heard again, for only giants, such as Wagner and Tschaikowsky, can survive such strangulation.

"And, after all, how did they survive?

"Because they had patrons, who believed in their work, and poured out money in order to help to bring that work to ultimate perfection and success.

"Now, why should not the club become this much needed patron to real art among its members?

"Why should it not also found an independent choir and orchestra to facilitate this difficult question of inadequate rehearsal?

"Why should it not also keep the critics so closely in touch with its members and their work that it can safeguard their interest when the time of performance comes, and prevent the misconceptions which so often arise merely from insufficient or misleading data?"

It all comes back to that one word, co-operation, and it is a matter for rejoicing that the subject will be dealt with at several musical conferences now being held in London.

NOTES.

Signor and Mme. Polacco will leave London the end of the month for Carlsbad, where they will take the cure, after which they will spend a few weeks at the mountains in Italy. In October they will leave for New York, where Signor Polacco will begin rehearsals toward the end of the month. Robert Maitland is spending a few weeks at Dieppe.

Isolde Menges, the talented violinist, has returned to St. Petersburg, where she is again studying under her teacher, Professor Auer.

Julia Hostater, who has frequently been heard in recital in London, has been engaged for a concert at the Gewandhaus, Leipsic, when the program will be conducted by Arthur Nikisch.

LIVERPOOL NOTES.

22 Fern Grove,
Liverpool, England, July 22, 1914.

The advance prospectus of our Philharmonic Society indicates that the coming season is likely to be even more interesting than the last. Following the precedent instituted a few years ago, the committee has arranged that the usual twelve concerts shall be directed by a rota of guest conductors, and the following eight gentlemen have been requisitioned: Albert Coates, Harry Evans, Emil Mlynarski, Gabriel Pierné (two concerts), Landon Ronald, W. Safonoff, Bernhard Stavenhagen and Henry J. Wood.

The orchestral works will include symphonic material by Beethoven, Brahms, Liszt, Grieg, Lalo, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Debussy, Ravel, Saint-Saëns, Strauss, etc.

The solo violinists named are Isolde Menges, Arthur Catterall and Henri Marteau; the solo pianists Stavenhagen, Rachmaninoff and Scriabine (the latter of whom will play the solo part of his "Prometheus" and of his concerto in F sharp minor); and the cello is entrusted to Pablo Casals and E. Beloussoff. A choral novelty by Pierné entitled "The Children's Crusade" is also promised a hearing under the composer's personal direction. There is, of course, to be a Wagner night under Wood's leadership. The vocal element will be represented by Florence Macbeth, Noordewier-Reddingius, De Haan-Manifarges, Lula Mysz-Gmeiner, Durigo, Esta d'Argo, Claire Dux, Caroline Hatchard, John Harrison, Paul Bender, Robert Radford and others.

There is some talk of Richard Strauss being inivted to preside over the orchestra and choir for one of the concerts, but nothing is definitely settled so far.

Happening to be in Edinburgh in the early part of this month I took advantage of the fact to attend a recital given on the new organ recently erected in Usher Hall, which building and contents are due to the munificence of the late Andrew Usher, a wealthy distiller of Edinburgh. The cost of the masonry and appurtenances totals something over $670,000, and the hall itself is a noble and permanent monument to one whose generosity was not by any means entirely posthumous. The instrument in question contains four manuals based on a pedale of fifteen, and is a very complete and effective specimen of a concert organ. Among the organists who have been invited to play on the new organ may be named Widor, the eminent Paris virtuoso.

THE LATE HARRY EVANS.

Although the death of Harry Evans has been daily expected for some weeks, it nevertheless came as a shock to a great many, who, hoping against hope, tried to delude themselves that the end was not yet, but as a matter of fact he breathed his last on the morning of July 24, leaving a widow and two young boys to mourn his loss.

Born in the town of Dowlais, South Wales, in 1873, the boy showed early his mental capacity and a well deserved scholarship paved the way for further advancement, until he ultimately graduated as a school teacher under the auspices of Bangor College. It was not until he arrived at the age of fourteen that he was able to command the use of a piano of his own, the instrument being presented to him by the congregation of the chapel where he had hitherto been employed as organist, or rather harmoniumist, and his assumption of the degree of Fellow of the Royal College of Organists being the crowning event of his twenty-second year. In due time Evans became a famous choir trainer, and many were the triumphs under his baton at the various Eisteddfod meetings in his native land and elsewhere, notably when he gained the first prize at the Liverpool Eisteddfod of 1900. This no doubt largely influenced his appointment as arweinydd of the Liverpool Welsh Choral Union, with which body of nearly 300 voices his name has ever since been closely associated. Neither Evans nor his choir spared time or trouble in the preparation of their work, and the performances always were characterized by enthusiasm and whole hearted endeavor.

It is perhaps premature to speculate on the future of this splendid organization, but it will nevertheless be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to find a musician capable of filling the void created by the untimely death of such a gifted musician and so amiable a character as the late Harry Evans.

W. J. BOWDEN.

Baernstein-Regneas as Artist and Teacher

Joseph Baernstein-Regneas, who is now teaching in his New York studio, imparts to his student and artist pupils the same method which has been the mainstay of his own phenomenal success on both sides of the Atlantic. Wherever this artist has appeared, whether in opera, oratorio, concert or recital, his perfect method of tone production, style of singing, and intelligent interpretation has immediately won the keenest interest. After spending some time abroad, Baernstein-Regneas found himself so successful in his teaching that he decided to return to America so as to launch young Americans on the road to the same success which he has himself enjoyed. Baernstein-Regneas accepts pupils who have never studied and gives them the rudiments of voice placing, after which he provides them with the necessary equipment to succeed in that particular branch of the work for which they are best fitted. He also accepts advanced pupils and has now with him in New York a number of artists already famous in oratorio, concert and opera. At this time of the year a great many teachers and church singers from different parts of the country who have only the summer months at their disposal come to New York for a course of study, and throughout the year many of the most prominent oratorio and concert singers of America work regularly with this eminent master.

Our First Music Masters.

Birds were our first music masters. Authorities on harmony have written volumes in search of the origin of the minor scale. If they had turned to the birds they might have discovered it without any search whatever. In every English copse, the cuckoo (who has but two notes at his command) sings a perfect minor third downward. Listen to our wood thrush's melody! His cluster of three notes forms a perfect minor chord.—Suburban Life.

The American people love a faker—even after he is found out.—The Phoenix.

THE RAVISHING RUSSIANS.
(From the London Tatler.)

THE ADORABLE KARSAVINA IN "LE COQ D'OR."
The Shemakhan (Tamara Karsavina) charms King Dodon (Adolf Bolm). The song bird in the front row to the left is Mme. Petreuka.

Helene Maigille Justly Enthusiastic.

Helene Maigille, head of the Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto, which will complete next Saturday (August 8) the summer session of seven weeks, is most enthusiastic over that course and the interest shown by the many teachers and students who came from various sections of the country to attend this school. The fall term will open September 14, and already there are many applicants who desire to begin their studies in the art of singing with this well known teacher.

Following is an excerpt from the coming fall catalogue:

"The inauguration of 'The Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto' was based upon a realization of the need for such a vocal institution.

"It is a school of singing where the true art of the 'old Italian school for the voice' will be taught—an art which has been almost lost in the maze of false ideas in vocal training promulgated during the past few years.

"In 'The Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto,' when the pupil—professional or student—is accepted, the pupil will be conscientiously taught a perfect understanding of the science of the old Italian school of voice production. The aim of the school is to teach the method of natural, scientific tone production, and its application to every phase of vocal art—diction, style, repertoire—and is paramount to every other consideration; for without a perfectly placed voice no aspirant or professional can expect to enter upon an artistic career and remain an illustrious example of vocal art whose voice has not become a perfect instrument.

"Teachers, students and soloists come annually to New York from every section of the United States and Canada seeking to pursue broader courses in voice culture and artistic singing—many returning to their homes and colleges greatly disappointed at not having acquired the broader culture they came so far to find.

"'The Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto' will teach the ambitious student, soloist or teacher a method of singing where ideals are not imaginary or ephemeral, but where the seeker after the truth in 'bel canto' will be taught the highest perfection in the true art of the 'old Italian school of singing,' which alone of all systems recognizes the physiological, natural and psychological laws governing tone production.

"Teachers and soloists need have no fear that in acquiring the fundamental principles of tone production they are placing themselves in the beginning class. Such a thought is very far from the truth. It is progression, not retrogression. Singers who have not a clear understanding of the natural laws in the production of the registers of the voice would find, in the study of the fundamental principles governing tone production, they would not only dignify their art by scientific study in this direction, but they would discover the secret of success of all great singers; and in acquiring an exact vocal method would not only preserve their own voices throughout their careers, but would teach to their students the method they would have acquired, in the assurance that they could also successfully guide the young students under their instruction to the fullest realization of their ambition, from their first lesson in tone production through to artistic finish and graduation.

"The teachers' course is especially designed for those intending to make teaching a profession or for those already engaged in the work.

"During the session tone production and diction will be the serious special features. Repertoire in English, French, German and Italian will be studied in relation to perfect voice placing and its application in pure diction to English and the foreign languages, and which will be found to be of inestimable value to teachers and soloists, for without perfect tone production all aims at style, diction and repertoire avail little to the aspiring singer, and is oftentimes a stumbling block in the path of the most conscientious teacher.

"Promises of seven successful weeks will be fulfilled.

"No student, teacher or soloist will return to his or her home, scholastic institution, church, or concert work with disappointment as a result of their sojourn in New York; but firm in the conviction that they have spent seven very happy and profitable weeks in study at 'The Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto.'"

In regard to Mme. Maigille and her methods of teaching the following well known people have spoken of her in glowing terms:

Rosina Laborde (teacher of Emma Calve and Marie Delna) said: "Nothing less than genius in the difficult art of developing voices."

From John McCoy, M.D., 157 West Seventy-third St., New York:

"It gives me very great pleasure to endorse Madame Helene Maigille as a gifted teacher of scientific voice production. I have observed her method on the beginner, the student, and the finished singer, and her results are admirable. Critical observation of her methods combined with laryngoscopic examination of her pupils' vocal apparatus proves to me that she possesses a thorough knowledge of the physical, anatomical and psychological laws governing tone production.

"I therefore regard her as one of the best exponents of the art of bel canto of the present day."

Respectfully submitted,

March 12, 1914. JOHN McCOY, M.D.

From Dr. George C. Stout, 1611 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.:

"It gives me much pleasure to recommend in the highest terms the voice culture methods of Madame Helene Maigille, whose work has been under my personal observation for the past three years, during which time I have examined the larynges of a number of pupils who were working under her. Her unusual knowledge of the physiology and anatomy of the parts seems to enable her to obtain her results without in any way impairing the delicate structures involved. In fact, the mechanical apparatus seems to be improved in every way after being subjected to her methods.

"With an admirable method, Madame Maigille combines that enthusiasm which is necessary to success."

November 12, 1913. GEORGE C. STOUT.

"Being fully conversant with Madame Maigille as a teacher of the voice, it gives me great pleasure to recommend her as one fully capable of naturally developing a voice, where others may have failed, due to unnatural and unphysiological methods." J. H. STERLING, M.D.

Brooklyn, September 3, 1912.

From F. Averay Jones, organist and choir director, St. Marks P. E Church, Philadelphia, Pa.:

"I always knew your voice method was great—now I am glad the world is beginning to realize it. Congratulations on your splendid success and my best wishes for its long continuance." As ever, sincerely yours,

September 15, 1913. F. AVERAY JONES.

From Frank H. Leonard, a prominent Christian Science Lecturer:

"For three years and eight months I had the privilege of daily lessons from Madame Helene Maigille in voice placing, diction and style. It is with enthusiasm that I endorse Madame Maigille's consistent and scientific development of the voice." FRANK H. LEONARD, C. S. B.

December 25, 1913.

The New York Times and Sun offer their meed of praise to Helene Maigille as follows:

For years Mme. Maigille has been regarded as one of the foremost authorities on voice placing and bel canto in this country or Europe.—New York Times.

Mme. Maigille, the great teacher of bel canto, has no superior and few equals in this country in voice placing and in the teaching of vocal art.—New York Sun.

Marie Altona "At Home" in London.

On Thursday, July 9, Marie Altona was "at home" to her friends in her studio in London, England. A fine vocal program was rendered by her pupils, among the noteworthy selections being the aria from "Madame Butterfly" and Goring Thomas' "Le Baiser," sung by Mrs. Johnston; the aria from "Samson and Delilah," "Mon cœur s'ouvre" and the first of Wolf-Ferrari's "Rispetti," given by Eva Smithes; the familiar "Lotosblume" and "Four by the Clock," rendered by Mrs. Stein. A number of other pupils also participated, their work being marked with fine style and interpretation.

Miss Altona was complimented on the sympathetic quality of her pupils' voices and was persuaded to sing the aria "Les Regrets," by Godard, also "Du bist mein All" and Hugo Rasch's "Noch einem Regan." Her guests were unanimous in their wish that Miss Altona might give another informale musicale in the near future.

Genevieve Bisbee Combines Work and Pleasure.

Genevieve Bisbee, the well known New York teacher of piano, is spending six weeks at delightful Crystal Brook Park, on Long Island, where she has a class of advanced and professional pupils. These pupils are indeed lucky to have the benefit of her capable instruction during the months when many teachers feel that they must have a complete rest from their work. Miss Bisbee is combining work with play so successfully that she feels no need of a complete relaxation. Among the pupils who are at present with her are Charles Frederick Naegele, Jr., who appeared many times with great success in public during last season, and Thomas Hood Simpson, who is the instructor in the piano department of Converse College, Spartansburg, S. C. Miss Bisbee expects to send Mr. Naegele abroad in the fall for two or three years, so during the summer he is finishing some work which she feels it is necessary to complete before that time.

Mme. Edvina's Plans.

It will be interesting news to the Chicago opera public to know that Mme. Edvina is to be heard in Chicago next season in the delightful opera, "Francesca da Rimini," which will be given there early next year for the first time under the direction of Campanini. Mme. Edvina will open her American season at Philadelphia in "Louise." After a holiday in South Wales and in Scotland, Mme. Edvina will leave for the United States in October. She scored a big success as Francesca, which by the way was the second role created by her at Covent Garden this season. It is a part in which her many gifts found ample expression and one particularly well suited to her vocally. As the London Observer of July 19 said: "Mme. Edvina, in splendid voice, as Francesca, was completely fitted, her performance being beautifully finished and splendidly studied."

European War Changes De Rigaud Plans.

War conditions in Europe have caused Clara de Rigaud, the well known vocal teacher of New York, to cancel her trip abroad this year, and the members of her Berlin class, which meets in September, will be disappointed to learn that the class will be discontinued this year. Instead, Mme. de Rigaud will spend the next two or three weeks at Musicolony, R. I., and begin work with her fall class on September 4, in her New York studio, at the Linlaugh, 2647 Broadway.

Laurette Duval, an artist pupil of Mme. de Rigaud, sailed on the steamship Touraine, July 22, and will give a recital at the Salle Erard, in Paris, shortly after her arrival. On August 15 she will make her debut, singing the role of Marguerite in "Faust."

IMPERIAL ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC AND DRAMATIC ART IN VIENNA

School year begins September 20th. (Admission at other times only by special arrangement)

Magnificent new building, with finest, most thorough and most modern equipment of any musical institution in the world. Eighty-five eminent masters.

Regular Courses in All Branches of Vocal and Instrumental Music. Fee $60 to $120 per year.

Opera School with its Own Specially Equipped New Theater for Rehearsals and Performances. Fee $120 per year.

MASTERSCHOOL FOR PIANO: Prof. Leopold GODOWSKY. MASTERSCHOOL FOR VIOLIN: Prof. Otto ŠEVČIK

Fee for Each Masterschool $160 per year

For Further Information Apply to the Office of the IMPERIAL ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC - - - - Vienna, III., Lothriugerstrasse 14

MAESTRO FRANZ EMERICH VOCAL INSTRUCTION and MADAME TERESA EMERICH

PUPILS PREPARED FOR THE OPERATIC AND CONCERT STAGE

Some Distinguished PUPILS of MAESTRO and MME. EMERICH:

CHARLES DALMORES, tenor, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden. Lohengrin of Bayreuth festival.
ADAM DIDUR, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
FRANCIS MACLENNAN, tenor, Berlin Royal Opera and Hamburg Opera.
*HANS TANZLER, tenor, Royal Opera, Karlsruhe.
CAVALLIERE MARIO SAMMARCO, baritone, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden.
PUTNAM GRISWOLD, basso, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co., Berlin Royal Opera and Covent Garden.
*MARGUERITA SYLVA, Carmen in the guest performance of Caruso at the Berlin Royal Opera.
MARGARETHE MATZENAUER, mezzo-soprano, Metropolitan Opera, New York.
*HELENA FORTI, soprano, Dresden Royal Opera.
MARY CAVAN, soprano, Hamburg Opera and Chicago Opera Co.
HEINRICH HENSEL, Dramatic Tenor. Hamburg, Stadt Theatre.

INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH AND ITALIAN

*The names marked * are those of pupils of Mme. Emerich.* 'Telephone Amt. Pfalzburg No. 2067 BERLIN, W.W. Nicelsbergerplatz 1

May Marshall Cobb and the Critics.

May Marshall Cobb, the young lyric soprano, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who has won distinction with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other leading organizations throughout the country, is the recipient of the following commendations from the press in different cities where she has been heard and always with great success:

May Marshall Cobb, the soprano soloist, gave the mad scene from "Lucia" in very effective style, both as regards the dramatic requirements of this exacting number and the formidable vocal gymnastics which it demands. She executed the difficult passage work of the cadenza flawlessly and with notable richness of tone and grace of interpretation. The artist received tremendous applause and was forced to repeat the number. In the second part Mrs. Cobb sang "Highland Mary," by Bartlett, and "The Birthday," by Woodman, and as an encore gave Homer's delicious "Banjo Song."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

May Marshall Cobb again won a distinct place by the artistic interpretation of her numbers. In the aria, "Mare! Potente Mare!" from Oberon, her vocal and dramatic ability were most clearly shown; and her lyric voice was also heard to advantage in the sextet from "Lucia" and Rossini's "Inflammatus," from the "Stabat Mater."—Beaver Daily Times.

May Marshall Cobb, of Pittsburgh, a gifted soprano, gave a delightful song recital before the Woman's Club. Her selections were well chosen from the catalogue of Chopin. Mrs. Cobb has a most pleasing lyric soprano, easy flowing and graceful, and made an excellent impression by her efforts.—Pawtucket (R. I.) Times.

May Marshall Cobb sang an aria from Handel's "Il Pensieroso," and songs by Gretry, Debussy and Henschel. She has a beautiful voice of lyric quality, and responded to enthusiastic applause with a song by Horatio Parker.—Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.

May Marshall Cobb, the Pittsburgh soprano, who sang with the Musical Festival Society Orchestra of New York on Friday night, strengthened the favorable impressions made on previous appearances. She is a singer of much charm and intelligence. Mrs. Cobb was compelled to repeat the finale of her aria and responded to several encores after her final group of songs.—Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.

Mrs. Cobb is adding to her popularity with every appearance. She is a singer of note, and the possessor of a very sweet and charming voice.—Connellsville Courier.

The singing of May Marshall Cobb, of Pittsburgh, was splendid and her numbers highly applauded, notably the aria from "Romeo and Juliet."—Uniontown Tribune.

May Marshall Cobb, in the difficult soprano solos, had a great deal of work to do, but proved equal to every demand upon her voice. It is of a beautiful, clear quality, and of great range, while her breath control is splendid. She has a most pleasing stage presence, and from her first number won her audience.—New Castle News.

The excellent program given by May Marshall Cobb last evening in Carnegie Lecture Hall was well received. Mrs. Cobb's work is always of the best and highly appreciated by all—especially by those who can appreciate what artists call "finish." Mrs. Cobb sang twenty-one songs entirely from memory, and her voice was as fresh and beautiful in the last song as in the beginning.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Wolff Festival Orchestra, assisted by May Marshall Cobb, gave one of the most varied and delightful musical events of the season. Mrs. Cobb, the soprano, sang the mad scene from "Lucia" in voice and style that elicited the warmest commendation. Her voice took the notes in the beautiful flute obligato with a clearness and precision that was splendid. In the second group of songs, her "Cäcilie," by Strauss, and "The Rosary," of Nevin, were received with an ovation.—Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.

The singing of May Marshall Cobb, of Pittsburgh, Pa., in the concerts at the Atheneum on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings was splendid. Mrs. Cobb has a delightful stage presence and a charming personality, and carried the audience with her from the first. Her numbers were interpreted with much taste. The "Romeo and Juliet" aria was repeated on Wednesday evening by request. Nantucket is fortunate in having such a treat of music.—Nantucket (Mass.) Inquirer and Mirror.

May Marshall Cobb took the soprano solos. She sang in good form, displaying a voice of considerable compass and strength.—Worcester (Mass.) Telegram.

May Marshall Cobb gave a song recital before a large and enthusiastic audience at Hamilton Hall, assisted by Carl Malschereck, violinist of the Pittsburgh Orchestra. Mrs. Cobb sang a number of songs which fully exhibited the beautiful quality and unusual range of her voice. During the evening she won a host of admirers in being able to sing a number of French, German and English songs. One of her best numbers was Strauss' "Cäcilie," a dramatic love song, which showed a wonderful reserve power and clearness of expression.—Pittsburgh Dispatch, December, 1909.

(Advertisement.)

Some Bathers.

In the accompanying picture there are shown Hazel Eden Mudge, soprano, of Chicago, with her professional pupil, Fern Grant, and a friend, who were "snapped" while bathing at Chicago.

HAZEL EDEN-MUDGE, SOPRANO, AND HER PROFESSIONAL PUPIL, FERN GRANT, WITH A FRIEND IN BATHING.

Marcella Craft's Munich Farewell.

Marcella Craft, the young California soprano, who for the past four years has been one of the leading singers at the Royal Opera in Munich, will open her American concert tour in November on the Pacific Coast, under the management of Concert Direction M. H. Hanson. After her last performance in Munich, on June 26, the [illegible] commented as follows on her departure:

Among the artists leaving our opera with the close of the season we must count the court opera singer, Marcella Craft, who is going to America, sang to us for the last time that part which she interprets with heart and soul, and with such delicacy of feeling and such genuine national coloring—Madame Butterfly. With this character she has won for herself as many true admirers as with her other roles—Mimi, Traviata, Secret of Suzanne, Sofie, and Margarete. In all these parts she carefully and strictly avoids that cheap display of virtuosity characteristic of our modern conventional opera princesses, and interprets the very spirit of these roles. She dives down to the very depths of that which is human in the character, and proves in every part she plays not only the perfect virtuosa, but also the thinking artist.

During the five years that she has been with us the singer whose soprano voice, with its unique timbre, so full of nerve and pith, did not at the very first show in its full splendor, has done full honor to her vocal teacher, Jacques Stuckgold. One fact is certain, the Royal Court Opera of Munich is losing a most valuable member in Marcella Craft, for she is not only a highly gifted artist who is at home in every part entrusted to her; Marcella Craft is far more than that! She is what very few artists are nowadays, she is a personality, an individuality in her art, both as a singer and as a dramatic artist. The well filled house enthusiastically applauded the departing artist, who was called to the footlights over and over again.—Münchener Zeitung, June 27, 1914.

Last night we witnessed the farewell performance of a departing member of our opera ensemble, in Madame Butterfly. It is strange that there was no official notice of this important fact from the office of our theatre informing us that a member of our opera ensemble was about to leave after five successful years on our stage. These authorities are not generally so silent, rather the opposite! But in spite of that strange silence, the theatregoing public of Munich knew that Marcella Craft was to appear before them for the last time in the part of Madame Butterfly, on the stage which she had taken by storm five years ago. And a sold out house proved to the young artist better than anything else could that she had indeed won the hearts of the Munich public, and showed her how deeply they felt the loss and regretted her departure.

When Marcella Craft, the pronounced favorite of the Kiel public, came as a guest to Munich with a view to being permanently engaged, there was but one opinion as to her great talents. The artistic public was unanimous in its praise of the young artist's wonderful gifts. And they were right. Marcella Craft's art has blossomed forth, and she now offers her audience the ripe fruits of true art matured by conscientious work and careful thought. Her conception and interpretation of such trying roles as Margarete ("Faust"), Mimi ("Boheme"), her Traviata, her Butterfly, speak to the heart. Nor was she less successful as interpreter of Strauss' characters, in some of which she is indeed magnificent. Her rendering of Sophie in the "Rosencavalier" is excellent; and though in the title role of "Salomé" her conception of the part differs from the usual one, there is not one of her rivals or critics but must admit that the manner in which the youthful artist has thought out the part and the manner in which she interprets it prove the deep earnestness and the concentrated thought bestowed upon the psychology of that character.

Not one but deeply regrets her going from Munich, leaving us to deplore the loss of an artist to whom her art is sacred, both in her capacity as a singer and as an actress. She is as modest as she is truly great—hence her success!

We are told that Marcella Craft is about to return to her home in America. May we cherish the fond hope that when she has earned her laurels there, and has thus risen in the eyes of America's "art critics and art connoisseurs" she will return to Germany and again delight us with her great art. We will tell her right now that she may reckon upon a more than hearty welcome here!

We must add that the manner in which Marcella Craft enacted the scenes depicting the heartfelt anguish of "poor little Butterfly," wedded to the characteristics of a little Japanese mother, went right to the hearts of the audience. She was herself and, as usual, did full justice to the trying part.—Münchener Neueste Nachrichten, June 28, 1914. (Advertisement.)

AMERICAN TOUR—NOVEMBER—MAY 1914—1915

WILLY BURMESTER

THE GREAT GERMAN VIOLINIST

Mr. Burmester will make his First Orchestral Appearance next season, November 6th, with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, playing the Paganini Concerto No. 1.

Other Orchestral Engagements are with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

STEINWAY PIANO USED

For dates and terms apply to CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

CHICAGO HAS SUMMER SEASON OF GRAND OPERA.

Six Weeks Will Be Devoted to Interesting Repertoire at Ravinia Park—Principal Artists Are from New York Century Opera Company—Other Timely Brevities.

Chicago, Ill., August 1, 1914.

The grand opera season at Ravinia Park opened Monday evening, July 27. The repertoire for the season of six weeks will include "La Boheme," "Martha," "Tales of Hoffmann," "Madama Butterfly," "Carmen," "Pagliacci," "Jewels of the Madonna," "Secret of Suzanne," "Mignon," "Faust," "Louise," "Tosca," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Manon," "Lucia" and "Lohengrin." The orchestra is made up of members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Carlo Nicosia. The principal artists are from the Century Opera Company, of New York. Beatrice la Palme, the well known soprano, heads the list of singers. Francesco Daddi, the buffo tenor of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, has also been engaged.

Esther Plumb's Summer.

Esther Plumb, the well known contralto, who is now under the management of Gertrude V. O'Hanlon, will spend most of the month of August in Davenport, Ia., and thereabouts. Previous to leaving for Davenport Miss Plumb made frequent trips to the same town to teach a vocal class and among her students are several who, during the fall, will give individual recitals. Miss Plumb also was doing some special teaching, going at intervals of two or three weeks to stay several days at the home of a prominent Detroit lady. As Miss Plumb expressed it, "Our lessons are mixed with much motoring and the visits are a delight."

This coming season Miss Plumb is going to make another trip to the Pacific Coast, the tour starting in February. The popular contralto already has been engaged to appear as Delilah in "Samson and Delilah" at Tiffin, Ohio, and her manager reports heavy bookings.

Marion Green in the East.

Marion Green, well known basso, has gone East to do some singing. He will visit New York, Boston, Prides Crossing and Portland, Me. He is now introducing a new song that was especially written for him by John A. Carpenter, who was inspired to write it by the success Mr. Green had with his "Don't Ceare," and it is in the Dorset dialect also.

Ernest Briggs to Book Tour for Irma Seydel.

Ernest Briggs announces that he will arrange an extensive American tour for Irma Seydel, the eighteen year old violinist, who is now having such success in European centers. Miss Seydel has been booked to appear with the Boston Symphony and New York Symphony Orchestras and has engagements in Canada and from Baltimore to Lincoln, Neb., including her Chicago recital, which will be given in the Metropolitan series at the Fine Arts Theatre, on March 14, 1915.

Next MacBurney Studio Recital.

Grace Ann Yager, soprano, assisted by John Doane, accompanist, will give the third program in the MacBurney studios on Monday evening, August 3. Her program will be made up of Shakespeare songs.

Jessie Devore at La Crosse, Wis.

Jessie Devore, violinist, played a return engagement at La Crosse, Wis., Normal School on July 23. Nicholas Devore, her husband, was at the piano and the numbers rendered included the Edward Grieg sonata in C minor, the Max Reger Intermezzo from sonata in A major, Svendsen's Romance, the Tschaikowsky Canzonetta, César Cui's "Orientale," Tor Aulin's "Humoresque," Fritz Kreisler's "Caprice Viennoise," Gena Branscombe's "A Memory," Romance by Nicholas Devore, and Felix Borowski's Mazurka. From reports at hand Mrs. Devore met with her customary artistic success.

National Symphony and Steindel Orchestras in Concert.

On Friday evening, July 24, a representative of the Musical Courier went to the Midway Gardens in order to listen to the heralded National Symphony Orchestra, and also to get a view of the newly built and as yet unfinished building, which surrounds the garden. Much honor goes naturally to the architect, who has built a most stupendous and artistic summer resort, which will give new eclat to the South Side and impress the visitors as being one of the most remarkable restaurants the world over. A quarter of a million dollars has already been expended on the buildings and probably another quarter of a million will have to be expended before all the buildings are completed. The representative was informed that on Saturday and Sunday 6,000 people are fed, and this without using any of the inclosed dining rooms, which are also beautiful. The building is modern in every respect; the statuary is in the so called cubist class and the lighting effects are marvelous, and everywhere the eye finds delight and repose.

As this writer did not go especially to the Midway Gardens to give a report of the gardens, but rather to review one of the concerts, this introductory note is deemed sufficient to show that the Midway Gardens has a restaurant which can be equaled but not surpassed in this part of the country. The same unfortunately cannot be said of the orchestra. On the date above mentioned a Wagner program was rendered in a manner which left very much to be desired. The representative was surrounded by South Side musicians, some of whom tried to influence his opinion of the poor playing heard by saying that "probably atmospheric conditions made the orchestra play out of tune most of the evening." As a matter of fact, the viola players were guilty of playing off pitch on more than one occasion and carried with them some of the brasses—a very poor choir, by the way, but not inferior to the balance of the orchestra, which, as a matter of record, can be classed only as a second rate orchestra, judging that body, of course, from their playing on this occasion.

The conductor, Max Bendix, may conduct light operas or lighter numbers well, but when it comes to greater works he seems to be ill at ease. His tempi was far from those we are used to in this part of the country from such masters of the baton as Campanini, Stock and we might say Arthur Nikisch, Emil Oberhoffer and many others, whose tempi as well as interpretations for Chicagoans are accepted as classic. On Friday last a huge audience was present, but in the part of the concert heard by this reviewer not one encore was given or even asked.

If the National Symphony Orchestra, which came to birth two months ago in Chicago, intends to stay as a permanent factor or as a summer orchestra, it must improve greatly, as certainly it does not compare favorably with the Steindel Orchestra, heard also by this reviewer last week at the Bismarck Garden.

The National Symphony Orchestra has a good concertmaster in Guy Woodward, likewise the Steindel Orchestra at the Bismarck has an excellent concertmaster in Alexander Sébald, who will act in the same capacity in the Chicago Grand Opera Company Orchestra this coming season. Outside of the concertmaster the National Symphony Orchestra players are weak, while Steindel's men are homogeneously good. It is true that the writer did not hear Steindel's orchestra in a Wagnerian program, but in light numbers, taken from popular operas or musical comedies, yet the orchestra at the Bismarck gave pleasure, and that is all one may ask from any orchestra during a hot spell. Steindel and his men were well rewarded in their efforts by numerous encores, which were richly deserved.

Bettina Freeman in Chicago.

It was reported on Michigan avenue last week that Bettina Freeman, one of the newly engaged artists for the coming Century Opera season in New York, was spending her summer vacation in Chicago. Miss Freeman has been singing dramatic roles at Covent Garden for two seasons. The rumor that Miss Freeman was in Chicago could not be either confirmed or denied, as her whereabouts are unknown to this department.

Arthur Middleton to Sing at University of Chicago.

A special recital will be given by Arthur Middleton, basso of the Metropolitan Opera Company, next Monday evening, August 3, under the auspices of the University of Chicago, at Leon Mandel Assembly Hall.

Opera Given in Esperanto.

At the Young Men's Christian Association auditorium on Thursday evening, July 23, Von Suppe's "The Beautiful Galathea," which translated in Esperanto is called

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Mrs. STACY WILLIAMS Voice Production :: Repertoire ::
In Europe June 15 to September 15
For information, prospectus, etc., address
Mrs. Williams, 405-406 Kimball Hall - Chicago, Ill.

Lucille STEVENSON (TEWKSBURY) SOPRANO
Address: 4438 Berkeley Avenue Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
Consisting of
OPERA, LECTURE RECITALS AND MELODRAMES and
THE CHICAGO PIANO QUARTETTE
Henriette Weber, piano; Fritz Itte, violin;
Carl Klammsteiner, cello; A. Van Der Voort, viola.
Specializing in Opera Programs.
Arrangements with Distinguished American Singers as Soloists
FOR TERMS AND DATES ADDRESS MISS H. WEBER
Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill., Phone Harrison 4868-4869

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

MR. and MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
Registration for Summer Term Now Open
Summer Address: 1434 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill. Phone 1105 Evanston

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President

SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rive-King, Guy Herbert Woodard, Grace Stewart Potter, Mee Julia Riley, Harold von Mickwitz, Frank B. Webster, Eleanor Smith, Ernest O. Todd, Mme. Justine Wegener, Edgar A. Nelson, Edward Dvorak, Adelaide G. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

"Belega Galateo," was given by a company made up of Bohemian singers. Mr. Chapek directed the orchestra.

NEW AMERICAN CONSERVATORY CATALOGUE.

The new catalogue of the American Conservatory, just received, is one of the handsomest books of that kind that has claimed the attention of this office. Not only is it unexcelled in design and workmanship, but it is good reading. From it one gathers that the conservatory has had a splendid year, resulting in the largest registration in its history, the number of non-resident pupils also exceeding that of the previous year. Several new members for the faculty have been engaged, the most important being that of Walton Pyre, as director of the School of Expression. Mr. Pyre is an artist of recognized standing, having filled stage engagements with some of the greatest dramatic artists of the day, such, for instance, as Otis Skinner, Ada Rehan, William Norris, Henry Kolker, Helen Ware and others. He has also had a large and successful experience on the lyceum platform as a reader. For the past few years Mr. Pyre has conducted an excellent school for expression and the drama at Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

An engagement of no less importance is that of Leon Marx, the distinguished violin virtuoso and teacher. Mr. Marx is well known as an artist.

Helena Stone Torger on, the accomplished harpist, will be a member of the faculty, also Harris R. Vail, a brilliant young pianist.

The new school year will begin Thursday, September 10.

Carl Bernthaler's Busy Summer.

Carl Bernthaler, the genial conductor of the Pittsburgh Festival Orchestra, who is shown in the accompanying snapshot gazing upward as though he expected a great inspiration to drop down upon him from the skies, has been very busy of late with the concerts which the orchestra has been giving on the Schenley lawn, Pittsburgh. These events are more popular than ever before, which is saying a great deal, for they have always drawn largely upon the music loving people of Pittsburgh.

CARL BERNTHALER FINDING INSPIRATION.

The soloists this year have been well known and thoroughly enjoyed. Among the recent vocalists was Emma Loeffler, dramatic soprano, who made a decidedly favorable impression upon the audience. Mr. Bernthaler is doing splendid work and Pittsburgh may well be proud of the Festival Orchestra and its conductor.

The Lady and the Lion.

These two interesting illustrations represent Djane Lavoie Herz, the well known Canadian pianist (who is to tour the United States next season under the Hanson management), visiting the "Marzacco" sculpture by Donatello, in front of the Palazzo Vecchio, in Florence, Italy, and the Fountain of Neptune (work of Ammanati, 1575) on the Piazza della Signoria, also in Florence. It will be seen that the doughty pianist is as little afraid of the leonine beast as she is of the mighty man of bronze. "The

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ.

At the Fountain of Neptunus, work of Ammanati (1575) on the Piazza della Signoria in Florence.

At the "Marzocco" by Donatello in front of the Palazzo Vecchio in Florence.

Mme. Rosa Olitzka
Celebrated Russian Contralto

ASSISTED BY

Kathleen Hart, Soprano
Exclusive Management West of Cleveland
By special arrangement R. E. Johnston

Elizabeth Rothwell Wolff, Soprano
From Royal Court Theatre Darmstadt.
Walter Henry Rothwell at the piano, condr.
St. Paul Symphony Orchestra

AND

Miss Edna Gunnar Peterson, Pianist

Mr. Albert Borroff, Basso-Cantante
Lecture Recitals, Oratorio

Mme. Cora Kempre, Soprano
Fresh from European Operatic Triumphs

Miss Esther May Plumb, Contralto
Recitals, Oratorio

Mr. Ridgley Hudson, Tenor
Rec tals, Oratorio

Miss Clara Williams, Soprano
Oratorio

Miss Celene Loveland
Piano Lecture Recitals

AND

Metropolitan Grand Opera Quartette

Exclusive management:

GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON
Cable Building Chicago, Ill.

only fear I ever know," says Mme. Lavoie-Herz, "is that I may not be able to give to my audiences all that I feel and all that struggles in me for expression."

Carl D. Kinsey Down on His Farm.

The accompanying picture was made on a post card and shows Carl D. Kinsey, business manager of the Chicago

"DOWN IN THE CORNFIELDS."

Apollo Club and the North Shore Festival, down on his "old farm" at Churubusco, Ind., plowing corn.

Zoe Fulton with Orchestra.

Zoe Fulton, the well known prima donna contralto, has been engaged to sing at the concert of the Pittsburgh Festival Orchestra on August 6. These concerts, which are given on the Schenley lawn, Pittsburgh, are among the most popular events of the summer and are attended by music lovers who are present in large numbers. At this concert Miss Fulton will sing two arias.

ZOE FULTON PICKING CHERRIES ON A FARM NEAR PITTSBURGH.

The accompanying picture shows Miss Fulton "down on the farm" near Pittsburgh, and from her well filled pail she is offering some lucky person a cherry.

Dudley Buck Continues Busy.

One morning last week a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER called at the studio of Dudley Buck, in Aeolian Hall, New York, for the purpose of having a little chat with this eminent vocal teacher, a pleasure which can rarely be enjoyed during the height of the winter season. Much to the caller's astonishment Mr. Buck was found to be fully as busy as though it were January instead of July. However, between lessons, Mr. Buck managed to spare a few moments to say a few words to the caller. When the latter expressed his surprise at finding Mr. Buck so busy in the middle of the summer, and asked whether it just happened that day or if this was the way it had been going on, he was informed that Mr. Buck had been teaching at this rate all summer, and was shown the schedule of the time to be devoted to teaching up to the middle of August. Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays until that period are entirely taken up with the many ambitious pupils who have remained in town this summer to profit by Mr. Buck's instruction.

Tuesdays and Fridays might also show such a list, but Mr. Buck felt that he was entitled to a little vacation slipped in between his working days. From August 15 to September 15 Mr. Buck is going to take a "real" vacation, and has promised Mrs. Buck not to go near 27 West Forty-second street during that time.

Among his many pupils Mr. Buck has had students who have become well known to the music loving public, not only of New York, but many other cities, both far and near. During the coming winter, many of his well known pupils will be heard, and from time to time the readers of the MUSICAL COURIER will be informed of their progress.

Kind Words for Opera.

No form of artistic enterprise has evoked so much controversy, so much envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitableness, so much pleasure, so much misery, as opera.—Felix Borowski, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Myrtle ELVYN

RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE

Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

Some Bispham Thoughts.

In a recent issue of the St. Louis Republic (July 19, 1914), there appeared the following:

Copies of The Republic containing the vocal standard as adopted by the Missouri Music Teachers' Association have been sent to several leading musicians in this country and Europe, with the request that they write for publication their views of any phase of the question in which they are interested.

A most interesting answer has been received from the great American baritone, David Bispham. His letter follows:

Your remarks anent the standard recently adopted by the Missouri Music Teachers' Association, as a guide to the qualifications of those about to become teachers of singing, interest me greatly and are most apt.

But suppose I were to present myself—unknown to the examiners—I wonder what would happen to me—for, as I was brought up among strict Friends—Quakers—I cannot play a note upon the piano; I do not accompany myself in even the simplest of my songs. So I should fail in the first requirement; and also in the second, for the little harmony I tried to learn was so much Greek to me, and worse than mathematics.

Suppose I had a friend at court who got me to sing before the examiners and they said, "Well, as he can sing he should be able to impart his knowledge to others; so he may have a certificate."

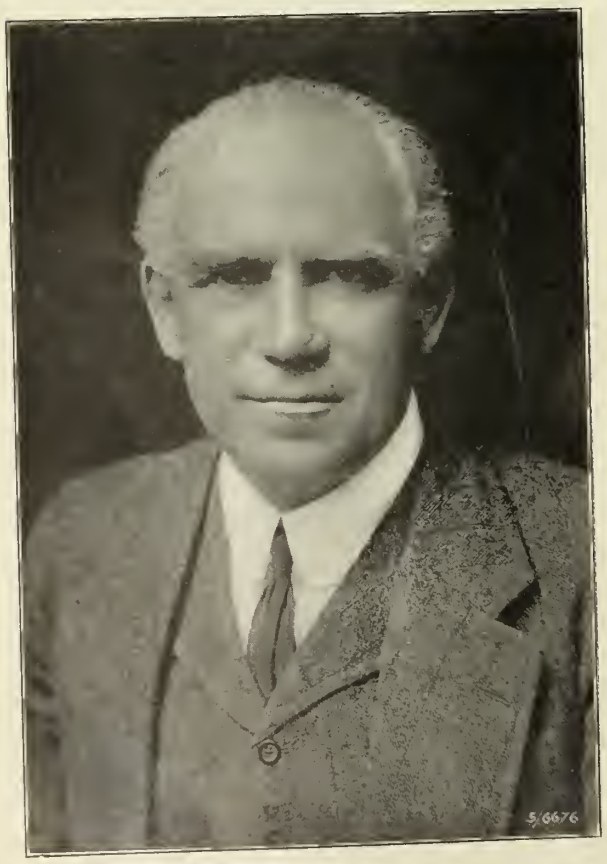
But when pupils came to me, what then? I have but a limited knowledge of the anatomy of the throat and nose, and do not think that a singer needs to bother at all about the names that have been given to the parts of his vocal machinery. So there again a pupil might well say: "This man can't write music, or play the piano, and he doesn't teach me about my throat; he is no good."

The latter assertion might prove to be correct, to be sure, but in reply to the others, I would say: "Young man, with years of interested hard work on a voice of limited range, I learned to play upon that instrument so that now I have a range, when at my daily practice, of three full octaves—from A flat to A flat."

I have had twenty-three years of constant work before the most exacting publics of Europe and America, in oratorio, opera, song recitals, acting and declamation, and I am as fresh today as when I began to sing professionally and can stand ten times the effort I could then. How can this be accounted for?

Why, I learned how to sing first, before I became a singer; I also learned what to sing and how to sing it; but much of that came later, and I am still learning.

When I am induced to give any lessons at all, I put an accomplished musician at the piano and devote my whole attention to the endeavor so to train my pupil that he may have his mind aroused to the necessity of learning how to sing, what to sing and how to sing it.



The field is very large and must be intelligently cultivated. The time has passed when mere voice will suffice. The singer must have intelligence and education, and should be a gentleman or a lady, able to hold his or her own in the company of the elect in the great world of art.

Singing is not a "get-rich-quick" occupation; it is one of the very hardest things in the world to do; but it looks so easy that it attracts multitudes, most of whom are totally unfit to appear before the public. These are generally taught by those who cannot sing themselves. But stop! Has the Music Teachers' Association thought about that?

If my opinion is worth anything it is this: The first and great requisite for a singing teacher is to know how to sing well. The next is to be honest and not, for the sake of gain, induce pupils to believe they can sing in public, for it is plain that not one in a thousand ever can hope to make a career.

And there are many other requisites than the excellent ones set down by the association.

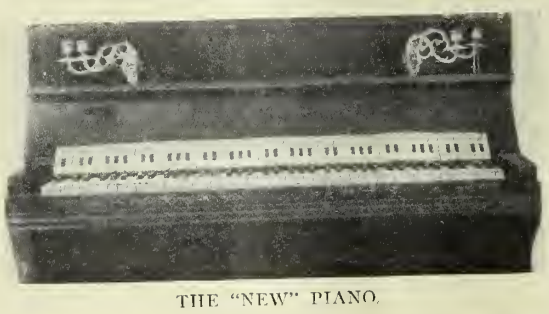
A MUSICAL COURIER representative interviewed David

DAVID BISPHAM.

Bispham on the subject of his letter written to the St. Louis Republic (as quoted above) and the celebrated baritone made these additional remarks:

"One of the strange things about singing is that so many people approach the subject with an utter lack of intelligence; and it is amazing that, among the requirements of the Missouri Music Teachers' Association for singing teachers, their ability as singers is not insisted upon. They are required to play a little on the piano, to know something of harmony, physiology and psychology; but to know how to sing? That is about the last thing in the world, seemingly, to be considered.

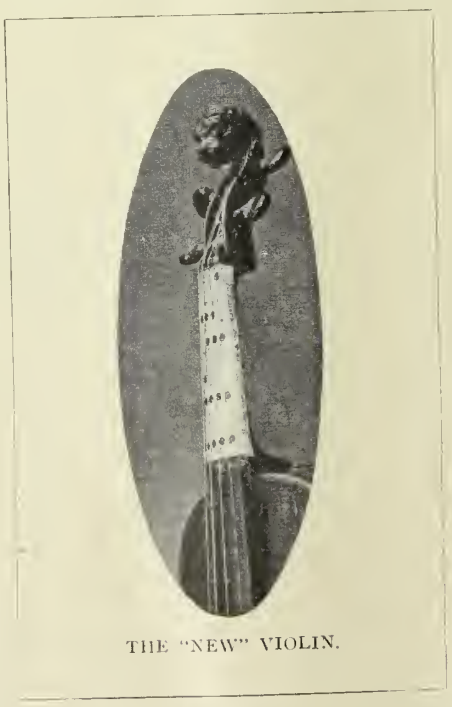
"I feel that the attention of all teachers of singing should be called to this, for in my opinion it is a very important matter. It is obvious that a teacher of the violin, piano, organ, or what not, must be able to play upon his instrument before setting up as an instructor of others; yet there are thousands of singing teachers who cannot, and never could sing.



"To learn to play the violin one must engage a good violinist, is it not so? How is that difficult instrument to be taught by an ignoramus? The idea is preposterous! Only a violinist can teach the violin, and it is but common sense to require of singing teachers that they shall be—or shall have been—singers of experience, and know how to use and train that most complex and perplexing instrument, the human voice.

"Here is a letter to me from a person connected with a well known school of music, asking my opinion as to 'whether a singing teacher should himself be a singer, and if so, why?' My answer, as may be expected, is 'Yes'; and, among the many reasons why, one of the foremost is that it is high time that we in this country began to discountenance the incompetence and charlatanism that is so prevalent everywhere, in all occupations. Besides, why shouldn't a singing teacher know how to sing?

"The attitude of millions who are casting about for a means of livelihood—without any fitness or preparation, for anything—seems to be, 'I cannot work, to beg I am ashamed. Oh, I know; I guess I'll teach singing.'"



A Mild Revolutionist.

Reports have been coming to America about the "invention" of Frank Choisy, a Swiss, who claims to have made

THE "NEW" PIANO.

the study of the violin and the piano easier by adjusting frets to the former and an explanatory numbered keyboard diagram to the latter. Pictures of the devices are shown herewith and after glancing them over old school music teachers will hardly find anything to alarm them into fear of the destruction of their profession.

THE "NEW" VIOLIN.

Mendelssohn in Waterloo Road.

The Church of St. John's, Waterloo Road, now appealing for funds for restoration, has an interesting association with Mendelssohn. The late R. J. Horsley, R. A., tells in his reminiscences how the great musician, while staying with a friend on Denmark Hill—in the house where he wrote the "Spring Song"—was induced to go to St. John's one Sunday morning and give a recital on the organ. On reaching the organ loft Mendelssohn was annoyed to find himself exposed to the full view of the congregation, and vented his displeasure in a thunderous improvisation which greatly startled the worshippers, used as they were to the "subdued" music then in vogue. Not being in the secret, they were still further surprised when the music ceased and the eccentric performer sprang up, clapped on his hat, and abruptly left the building. Westminster Gazette.

Sabatini's Views on Helen Bixby Wetzel.

Helen Bixby Wetzel, the young coloratura soprano who is now appearing with several Italian grand opera companies in Italy, is shown in the acompanying picture on board the steamer Saxonia.

Miss Wetzel's work has all been done in the famous old school of Sabatini in Milan. Maestro Sabatini in writing to her stated: "With your exquisite talents I predict a rapid career." He requested her to take the name of Antonelli, that of his aunt, one of the most famous singers of her day in Europe. Mme. Sabatini, who was one of the most beloved singers in Southern Europe and who has brought many singers to a successful career, says: "She has all the requisites necessary to make a good career—that is, a good voice, splendid agility, talent and a wonderful memory—and I love her for her courage, her innocence and her beautiful disposition."

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL ON BOARD THE STEAMER "SAXONIA."

Von Ende School Summer Recitals.

The fifth of the series of recitals of the summer session at the von Ende School of Music, New York, on Wednesday afternoon, July 29, at 4 o'clock, was a piano recital by pupils of Hans van den Burg, the following program being presented:

Impromptu ..... Schubert
Edith Louise Bonito.
Fantasie Impromptu, op. 66 ..... Chopin
Allegro from Sonata, op. 10, No. 2 ..... Beethoven
Arthur W. Nesbit.
Scherzo ..... Chopin
Etude, op. 25, No. 1 ..... Chopin
Lena Golden.
Prelude in C sharp minor ..... Chopin
Etude in G flat (on the black keys) ..... Chopin
Etude in C major ..... Chopin
Bernice Maudsley.
Ballade in G minor ..... Chopin
Harold Bender.

The sixth and last recital will be held by Lawrence Goodman today, Wednesday, August 5, at 4 o'clock.

Victor Harris and Gogorza.

Victor Harris sends to the MUSICAL COURIER greetings from Etretat and writes that he spent the month of June in Paris, where he gave a number of lessons, among them an hour daily to Emilio de Gogorza. He planned at the time of writing to remain in Etretat until the end of August and spend September in Scotland, returning to America on the steamship Aquitania, September 26. But this was written before the declaration of war, which will probably change Mr. Harris' plans. No doubt he may be expected home as soon as a transport can be found to bring him here.

Musical Terms.

Chairman (at concert): "Ladies and gentlemen, Miss Discordant will now sing 'Only Once More.'"

Sarcastic Critic: "Thank goodness for that!"

Chairman (coming forward again): "Ladies and gentlemen, instead of singing 'Only Once More,' Miss Discordant will sing 'For Ever and Ever.'"

The critic collapsed.—Royal Magazine.

"Ughlu," a romantic opera in three acts, by Adolf Piskácek, was heard recently in Prague.

The PROGRESS of AMERICAN MUSIC

[This department is designed by the MUSICAL COURIER to be as complete a record as possible of the public performance all over the world of the works of composers born in the United States. The department will be published weekly and contributions are solicited from any source whatsoever to help make the record all-encompassing. The clippings and programs sent must report concerts which have actually taken place and must be of recent date. However, advance notices and advance programs will not be considered. The data submitted must also include the place and date of performance and the names of the performers, and, before all things, it should be remembered that composers not born in the United States are ineligible for the MUSICAL COURIER list. All communications referring to this department must be addressed:—"American Composition Editor," MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.]

Buck, Dudley—"Te Deum in B minor" (organ), played by J. Clarendon McClure, First Presbyterian Church, Scranton, Pa., February 13, 1914.

Cadman, Charles Wakefield—"Legend" (organ), played by Charles H. Martin, Franklin Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Johnstown, Pa., February 8, 1914.

—"The Moon Drops Low" (song), sung by Elizabeth Luthringer, Pittsburgh, Pa., February 18, 1914.

—"At Dawning" (song), sung by Beatrice McCue, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, February 5, 1914.

Campbell-Tipton—"A Spirit Flower" (song), sung by Kathleen Howard, Chaminade Club concert, Providence, R. I., January 5, 1914;—sung by Oscar Seagle, Studebacker Theater, Chicago, January 5, 1914;—sung by Eva Egerter, International Musical Union concert, Paris, January 8, 1914;—sung by Betty Lee, Waldorf-Astoria, New York, January 12, 1914;—sung by H. S. Barnard, New Century Club, Detroit, Mich., January 12, 1914;—sung by Nina Bolman, song recital, Hartford, Conn., January 15, 1914;—sung by Ellison van Hoose, First Presbyterian Church concert, Bloomfield, N. J., January 15, 1914;—sung by Maude Fenlon Bollman, Wyoming Musical Club, Cincinnati, Ohio, January 20, 1914;—sung by Grace Kerns, Lowell Choral Society, Opera House, Lowell, Mass., January 27, 1914;—sung by Mrs. King Clark, Berlin, January 17, 1914;—sung by Herbert Mason, studio recital, New York, January 27, 1914;—sung by Edith Ayer McCullough, faculty concert, Bliss School, Oak Park, Ill., January 27, 1914.

—"Rhapsodie" (song), sung by Oscar Seagle, Studebaker Theater, Chicago, January 5, 1914;—sung by Alice Preston, Berliner recital, New York, January 7, 1914;—sung by Mildred Potter, Symphony Orchestra concert, Kansas City, January 6, 1914;—sung by Oscar Seagle, Cecelia concert, New York, January 20, 1914;—sung by Mrs. King Clark, Berlin, January 17, 1914.

—"If I Were King (song), sung by John Barnes Wells, Evanston Auditorium, Evanston, Ill., January 21, 1914;—sung by John Barnes Wells, Friday morning musicales, Hotel Statler, Cleveland, Ohio, January 16, 1914;—sung by John Barnes Wells, Hotel Astor, New York, January 29, 1914.

—"Sonata Heroic," "The Four Seasons," suite (piano), played by Paul Loyonnet, Salle Erard, Paris, January 9, 1914.

—"A Fool's Soliloquy" (song), sung by Charles W. Clark, song recital, Salt Lake City, Utah, January 9, 1914;—sung by Charles W. Clark, Seattle, Wash., January 25, 1914;—Cavallo Symphony Concert, Denver, Colo., January 6, 1914.

—"'Tis All I Ask" (song), sung by Robert Goetschalk, studio recital, Aeolian Hall, New York, January 27, 1914.

Carpenter, John Alden—"The Cock Shall Crow" (song), sung by Beatrice McCue, Stetson University Auditorium, Deland, Fla., February 12, 1914.

Foerster, Adolph M.—"Exultation," op. 37 (piano), played by Mrs. A. Gleason, Pittsburgh, Pa., February 18, 1914.

—"Postlude in D minor" (organ), played by J. Clarendon McClure, First Presbyterian Church, Scranton, Pa., February 13, 1914.

—"Prelude in D flat," "Nocturne in C minor," "Epigram in A flat," "Postlude in D minor" (organ), played by J. Clarendon McClure, First Presbyterian Church, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., February 1, 1914.

—"Out of the Deep" (anthem), sung by the choir, First Presbyterian Church, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., February 1, 1914.

—"Praise Ye Jehovah" (song), sung by Mrs. J. A. Harkness, First Presbyterian Church, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., February 1, 1914.

—"When All Thy Mercies," "Christ Our Cornerstone" (anthems), sung by chorus choir, Franklin Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Johnstown, Pa., February 8, 1914.

—"Epigram" (organ), played by Charles H. Martin, the Franklin Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Johnstown, Pa., February 8, 1914.

—"Alone" (song), sung by Carl H. Rupprecht, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.

—"At Night," "Calm Be Thy Sleep," "Song of Hope," "Row Gently, My Gondolier," "The Daisy," "In March," "The Water Lily," "Through the Wood" (songs), sung by Minnie Stowell Wallace, MacBurney Studios, Fine Arts Building, Chicago, February 9, 1914.

Foster, Fay—"Star Tracks," "Sleep Song," "Fairy Castles," "Winter Butterflies," "On Dress Parade" (songs), sung by Louise MacMahon, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, February 19, 1914.

—"Con Amore," "Maria Mia," "Serenade in Seville" (songs), sung by Ellison van Hoose, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, February 19, 1914.

Foster, Stephen—"Variations on Suwanee River" (organ), played by Charles H. Martin, Franklin Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Johnstown, Pa., February 8, 1914.

Freeby, Grace Adele—"My Dearest Wish" (song), sung by Isobel Carol, Mason Opera House, Los Angeles, Cal., February 5, 1914.

Federlein, Gottfried H.—"Scherzo Pastorale" (organ), played by Roland Diggle, Cathedral of St. John, Quincy, Ill., February 8, 1914.

Frysinger, J. Frank—"Meditation" (organ), played by Roland Diggle, the Cathedral of St. John, Quincy, Ill., February 8, 1914.

—"Benediction Nuptial" (organ), played by Roland, Diggle, the Cathedral of St. John, Quincy, Ill., February 22, 1914.

Gerrish-Jones, Abbie—"Song of the Archer," "Rabia," "Crossing the Bar," "Windy Nights," "Spanish Serenade," "My Dear Little Irish Rose," "Impatience" (songs), sung by Jack E. Hillman, California Club, San Francisco, Cal., February 24, 1914.

—"Somebody's Dear Eyes," "Cradle Song," "The Meadow Lark" (songs), sung by Maud Goodwin, California Club, San Francisco, Cal., February 24, 1914.

—"At the Piano," "Persian Lullaby," "A Song of May" (songs), sung by Harry Ardery, California Club, San Francisco, Cal., February 24, 1914.

—"If I Were Thou," "The Hepatica and the Bee" (songs), sung by Mrs. Joseph Keenan, California Club, San Francisco, Cal., February 24, 1914.

—"The Night Is Alive With Song," "Little Brown Eyes," "The Sleepy Chillun Tune" (songs), sung by Serena Bland, California Club, San Francisco, Cal., February 24, 1914.

—"Voice of the Violin," "The Water Sprite," "What Shall I Sing to Thee" (songs), sung by Mrs. Harry Hunt, California Club, San Francisco, Cal., February 24, 1914.

Gilberté, Halbert—"Two Roses" (song), sung by Grace Wheeler Duncan, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.

—"Two Roses," "Minuet Phyllis," "Allegro," "Ah, Love, But a Day" (songs), sung by Charlotte Lund, the Assembly Salon, Hotel Plaza, New York, February 19, 1914.

Grunn, Homer—"Life's Meaning" (song), sung by Mrs. L. J. Selby, the Ebell Club, Los Angeles, Cal., February 2, 1914;—sung by Mrs. L. J. Selby, Blanchard Hall, Los Angeles, Cal., February 27 and 28, 1914;—sung by Isobel Carol, Mason Opera House, Los Angeles, Cal., February 5, 1914.

—Hopi Indian Dance—"Tooalouwa," op. 16, No. 2, (orchestra), played by the Orpheum Symphony Orchestra, Los Angeles, Cal., January 26, 1914.

Hawley, Charles Beach—"O Praise the Lord" (anthem), sung by chorus choir, Franklin Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Johnstown, Pa., February 8, 1914.

—"A Song of Seasons" (song), sung by Beatrice McCue, Rollins School of Music, Winter Park, Fla., February 11, 1914;—sung by Beatrice McCue, Stetson University Auditorium, Deland, Fla., February 12, 1914.

Homer, Sidney—The Fiddler of Dooney" (song), sung by Carl H. Rupprecht, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.

Hugo, John Adam—"Appassionata," "Prelude to Spring" (violin), played by Roland Meyer, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, February 5, 1914.

Kernochan, Marshall—"You Love Me Yet," "Song of Ylen," "Lilacs," "Serenade at the Villa," "I Lived in the Land of Dreaming," "At the Window," "Song from Pippa Passes," "We Two Together" (songs), sung by Nina Dimitrieff, Fraternal Association of Musicians, Composers' Night, Craftsman Building, New York, March 3, 1914.

Kroeger, Ernest R.—"Egeria" (piano), played by Harriet Webster, Sterling, Colo., January 4, 1914.

—"Dance of the Elves" (piano), played by Ruth Orcutt, St. Louis, Mo., January 29, 1914.

—"My Darling" (song), sung by Madeleine Kershaw, Musical Art Hall, St. Louis, Mo., January 23, 1914.

—"Im Sternenglanz" (song), sung by Cecile Hunleth, Musical Art Hall, St. Louis, Mo., January 23, 1914.

—"Scherzo," op. 45 (piano), played by Grover Smith, Musical Art Hall, St. Louis, Mo., January 23, 1914.

—"Prelude in B Flat minor," op. 41 (piano), played by Alida Koch, Musical Art Hall, St. Louis, Mo., January 23, 1914.

MacDowell, Edward A.—"The Sea" (song), sung by Grace Wheeler Duncan, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.

—"Nautilus" from "Sea Pieces," "Bre'r Rabbit" from "Fireside Tales" (piano), played by Della Thal, Monmouth College Artist-Lecture course, Monmouth, Ill., January 20, 1914;—sung by Della Thal, Woman's Club, Sioux City, Iowa, December 27, 1913.

—"Thy Beaming Eyes" (song), sung by Beatrice McCue, the Assembly Salon, Hotel Plaza, New York, February 5, 1914;—sung by Beatrice McCue, Stetson University Auditorium, Deland, Fla., February 12, 1914.

—"To a Wild Rose," "At An Old Trysting Place" (violoncello), played by Frederick Preston Search, Auditorium, Interlaken, Ind., February 5, 1914;—played by Frederick Preston Search, Opera House, Dowagiac, Mich., February 4, 1914.

MacFadyen, Alexander—"Spring's Singing" (song), sung by Isobel Carol, Mason Opera House, Los Angeles, Cal., February 5, 1914.

Mead, Catharine Pannill—"The Little Dutch Garden" (song), sung by Beatrice McCue, the Assembly Salon, Hotel Plaza, New York, February 5, 1914;—sung by Beatrice McCue, artist course, Rollins School of Music, Winter Park, Fla., February 11, 1914;—sung by Beatrice McCue, Stetson University auditorium, Deland, Fla., February 12, 1914.

Nevin, Ethelbert—"Oh That We Two Were Maying" (duet), sung by Grace Wheeler Duncan, and Carl H. Rupprecht, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.

—"Mon Desir" (song), sung by Beatrice McCue, artist course, Rollins School of Music, Winter Park, Fla., February 11, 1914;—sung by Beatrice McCue, Stetson University auditorium, Deland, Fla., 1914.

—"Good Night" (organ), played by Roland Diggle, the Cathedral of St. John, Quincy, Ill., January 25, 1914.

Search, Frederick Preston—"Minuet in D major," "Arietta" (violoncello), played by the composer, Opera House, Dowagiac, Mich., February 4, 1914;—played by the composer, Auditorium, Interlaken, Ind., February 5, 1914.

—"Will-o-the Wisp" (piano), played by Robert Raymond Lippitt, Opera House, Dowagiac, Mich., February 4, 1914;—played by Robert Raymond Lippitt, Auditorium, Interlaken, Ind., February 5, 1914.

—"First Movement of the Sonata in G minor" (piano and cello), played by Robert Raymond Lippitt and the composer, Opera House, Dowagiac, Mich., February 4, 1914;—played by Robert Raymond Lippit and the composer, Auditorium, Interlaken, Ind., February 5, 1914.

(Continued on page 41.)

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
after six years of operatic successes in Europe, will return to this country in September for Concert and Oratorio Engagements.
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA.
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

Zoellner Quartet
Coast to Coast
Tour 1914-15
H. Culbertson, Fine Arts Bldg, Chicago

RICCARDO MARTIN
FAMOUS TENOR
Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
October, November, 1914. May, 1915
Management:
CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

WINNIFRED
BAMBRICK
Canadian Harpist
"—she has enormous virtuosity."
New York Herald
"—exhibits surprising vigor of style."
New York Times
"She aroused sincere enthusiasm."
Brooklyn Daily Eagle
Management: M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue -:- New York

BOSTON'S CURRENT NEWS.

Boston, Mass., July 31, 1914.

A new venture, conceived by two ambitious and talented young members of the Boston Opera Company, Thaddeus de Wronski, bass, and Ralph Lyford, assistant conductor, as they are officially known, now has reached the definite form embodied in the following. This is directly quoted from a circular letter sent out by the Boston Operatic Studios, 18 Haviland street, Boston; general director, Thaddeus de Wronski; musical director, Ralph Lyford:

"The prime object of the Boston Operatic Studios being to stimulate interest in grand opera through practical instruction, culture and routine in the various arts of the stage, it has adopted the following mode of providing several performances a year to the smaller cities and towns: The studios being in touch with well known artists in America and Europe and offering also great opportunity to young American singers and beginners, is ready to stage operas in any city or town in New England possessing choral and orchestral societies, which shall assist in the performance in the following manner:

"Such societies will receive from the studios the complete musical material of an opera one month in advance, during which time it may be studied under the direction of a local conductor, who will conduct the second performance of each opera. For the final rehearsals, a professional operatic leader will be sent to take charge and conduct the first performance. The artists will arrive only for the last rehearsal with chorus and orchestra. Thus without financial risk these societies procure their opera, an extraordinary musical routine, and at the same time enlarge the scope of their musical activities. The scenery, costumes, etc., will be provided by the studios.

"The idea is not new; it is indeed copied from the system of mounting operas employed in Italy. The important position which the Italians hold in the operatic field is due to nothing else than the great public interest in their performances. It is needless to point to the educational influence of such spectacles."

SECOND NORTH SHORE MUSICALE.

The second in the series of North Shore musicales arranged by Mrs. Hall McAllister takes place today at the home of Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, at Pride's Crossing. The artists are to be Ellen Keller, the talented young violinist of Boston and New York, and Marion Green, the well known basso of Chicago. Of particular interest on the program will be some new songs of John Alden Carpenter, written expressly for Mr. Green.

BLANCHE FREEDMAN.

Constance Purdy Sings at Dartmouth.

Tuesday evening, July 28, Constance Purdy, the American contralto, assisted by Mabel Hammond, pianist, gave a program of American, French and Russian songs as the second in a series of three summer concerts conducted as the Dartmouth College season's offering in Webster Hall. Miss Purdy was received by a large and enthusiastic audience, her popularity as America's foremost exponent of Russian folksong having long before preceded her to the college town.

Miss Purdy was heard in the following groups of songs:

AMERICAN.

When I Bring to You Colored Toys.....Carpenter
The Lament of Deirdré.....Gilbert
The Rose's Cup.....Ward-Stephens
Twilight.....Rummel
Song of the Deathless Voice.....Farwell

FRENCH.

Ballade des femmes de Paris.....Debussy
J'ai pleuré en rêve.....Hüe
Chanson hèbraique.....Ravel
Les Roses d'Ispahan.....Fauré
Mon cœur s'ouvre à ta voix.....Saint-Saëns

RUSSIAN.

Air from Russalka.....Dargomijsky
Two Children's Songs.....Moussorgsky
Daylight May Reign.....Tschaikowsky
The Water Lily.....Rachmaninoff
I Must Have Rejoicing.....Glière

Each number was heartily indorsed by her many admirers, but again, as usual, it was the Russian group, with Miss Purdy's own excellent translations, which aroused the keenest interest. Miss Purdy was in splendid voice and gave to each song rare interpretative qualities. Hers is indeed a subtle and beautiful gift, which, added to her remarkable personality and keen intelligence, surely is preparing a wide entrance into the realms of still greater success for this talented young artist.

Fanning-Turpin Bookings.

Cecil Fanning, the noted American baritone, and his accompanist and manager, H. B. Turpin, will arrive in New York City, today, Wednesday, August 5. They will spend the week in rehearsals for the musical sketch, "Irish Love," which was written and arranged by themselves; they also will attend to the bookings of their New York engagements. Thus far the latter part of December and the entire month of January have been allotted to the metropolis and vicinity for engagements. However, if indications have any significance this famous pair of artists will have to return to this territory several times to fill engagements during the coming season. The middle of August will again find them in the South, where they are filling an extensive summer tour throughout several States. On August 11, 12, 13 and 14 Mr. Fanning will appear as the principal soloist with the Monteagle Assembly, at Monteagle, Tenn. Last year Mme. Schumann-Heink was the star attraction at this great Southern festival.

Baroness Von Turk-Rohn Here.

Baroness Olga von Turk-Rohn, the Austrian soprano, who will tour in America during the coming season under the management of the Metropolitan Musical Bureau, of which J. J. Merschon is the head, arrived in New York this week on the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II. This artist has an active 1914-15 season booked in this country.

Far Preferable.

"His daughter can do anything she wishes with him."
"How do you know that?"
"You heard her sing, didn't you?"
"Of course. We all did."
"Well, she told me that her father is going to let her go abroad to finish her musical education."
"Well, if you were her father wouldn't you rather she would finish it abroad than here?"—Houston Post.

Russian churches have no organs. All the singing is done by male choirs à capella, that is, without accompaniment.—New York Evening Post.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL
Furopean Tour, July. 1914—Jan. 1915
American Tour, after Feb. 1, 1915
Address THEODORE SEYDEL, 70 Westland Ave., Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies
In London Until July 28,1914
Address Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDEN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicag

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singin
602 Pierce Buildin
BOSTON - MAS

FLORENCE MULFORD CONTRALTO
Of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Personal Address:
1104 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.
Phone, 525 W-Market
HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, 27 West 42d Street
NEW YORK

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"He (Borwick) has won a popularity greater and sounder than that of any pianist who has visited these shores."—Melbourne Argus.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

G. Schirmer.

A partial list of some of the new songs recently published by G. Schirmer, New York, and the Boston Music Company, Boston:

Children's Songs, by Carrie Bullard—"Lullaby Lane," "My Lammie," "The Moo-cow-moo," "The Seamstress," "Sport and Rest," "Things I'll Never Do," "Why?"

These seven songs are melodious and simple. Children will like the music and take the words seriously, no doubt; but to adults the quiet humor of the verses will appeal. In fact, it is altogether likely that these children's songs will be sung to adults more often than to children. We cannot imagine a writer writing this humorous nonsense for children, who take these things so seriously.

"Bes' of All," a darkey crooning song, words by Frederick H. Martens, music by A. Walter Kramer.

A number of characteristic negro effects introduced into a well written song. The result is satisfactory both as music and as a typical darkey song.

"In the Early Morning," an Easter song, with piano accompaniment and additional parts, ad libitum, for organ and violin, composed by Harry Rowe Shelley.

A long and dramatic song with a climax, by an experienced American composer.

"Christ Is Risen from the Dead," an Easter song, for a high voice, with piano accompaniment, composed by Edward F. Johnston.

There is dignity and breadth in this musicianly song. The counterpoint in the accompaniment is as effective as it is simple.

"On the Road," song for a medium voice, with piano accompaniment, composed by Mark Andrews.

Paul Laurence Dunbar's dialect verses have been well set. There is a plaintiveness in the melody and an uncouthness in the rhythm of this song which will express the half culture and half savage nature of the negro who is supposed to sing this sentimental ditty to his dusky sweetheart.

"Silhouette," a song for medium voice, words by W. E. Henley, music by Nicholas Douty. This is a very vocal song with an effective accompaniment. There is a touch of Russian melody and harmony in the first part of the song which gives place to the more conventional German manner in the refrain. It is a pity the poet introduced a comedy at the end, however, for the romance is shattered by it. The last two chords in the left hand part require a bass clef sign before them.

Three songs with piano accompaniment by Frank Seymour Hastings—"A Love Song," "Mavourneen," "A Summer Romance."

These are straightforward ballads of the approved English type, a little above the ordinary popular song and a little below the art songs of the better composers of the day. They are tuneful, agreeable and well enough written, and they will doubtless meet with the approval of many amateurs.

Four songs, by C. Linn Seiler—"The Spirit of Summer," "Nocturne," "For the Springtime," "Till I Wake."

In manner these songs resemble a good class of art song. In simplicity they are like the popular songs of the streets. The "Nocturne" accompaniment looks a little complicated at first, but in reality it is quite playable. These songs are therefore suitable to those whose tastes are more or less cultivated, but who are not burdened with so much technic that they want rhapsodies for their piano accompaniments. We commend this manner of writing songs.

Four songs, by Herbert E. Hyde—"As We Love," "If You Would But Love Me," "Beautiful Art Thou, My Love," "An Irish Song." These songs of passion have much to make them attractive to concert vocalists. They are conceived on broad lines, with great contrasts and great emotional outbursts. The accompaniments are not too difficult, though they are by no means easy to read because of their many harmonic changes and numerous accidentals.

"Autumn Song," by T. Hilton-Turvey. This is a very spirited and spontaneous song with an animated accompaniment and a fine climax at the end.

Two songs, by Stanley R. Avery—"I Saw the Moon," "'Twas Just a Year Ago." These are smoothly written and poetic songs with a certain elegiac sadness in them which will appeal to reflective persons.

Album of ten songs by Russian composers—"But Lately in Dance I Embraced Her," by A. Arensky; "Poisoned," by A. Borodin; "Three Birds," by C. Cui; "Three Holy Kings," R. Glière; "Slumber Song," by A. Gretchaninow; "When We Parted," by M. Ippolitof-Ivanof; "Song of the Hebrew Maiden," by M. P. Moussorgsky; "Dawn of Night," by L. Nikolayef; "Song of India," by N. A. Rimsky-Korsakow; "To Music," by N. Tscherepnin.

This album is engraved and printed in the Boston Music Company's best style and in conformity with the other albums of the Boston Music Company's Edition. Some of the songs have German words, and some have French versions in addition to the English text with which each song is supplied.

Five songs, by T. Tertius Noble—"Death the Revealer," "Love Embalmed in Tears," "Waiting for the May," "My Love," "A Birthday Song."

These well written and comparatively simple songs are more formal and restrained than modern and passionate. Yet they possess a charm of their own and they are entirely free from eccentricity and extravagance, on the one hand, and commonplace phrases on the other. They are evidently the product of a musician who understands the voice.

Sacred songs, by various composers—"Hark, Hark, My Soul" and "Now the Wings of Day Are Furled," by Harry Rowe Shelley; "As It Began to Dawn," by T. Whitney Coombs; "Like as the Hart Desireth the Water Brooks" and "Just for Today," by F. Flaxington Harker; "The Shepherd,' by T. Tertius Noble; "The Fatherland" and "The Shadow of the Almighty," by Edward Shippen Barnes.

These songs are as varied in styles as their composers are different. Some of them have elaborate piano accompaniments and others have simple organ accompaniments. The only connecting link among them is the nature of the words, which are sometimes taken from the Bible and sometimes from other sources.

Two songs, by Reginald De Koven—"When Dreams Come True" and "Love's Messenger." Both of these attractive songs display the melodic grace and unlabored harmonic manner of this composer, who has enjoyed a success far beyond that which falls to the lot of most American composers. These new songs are as good as any Reginald De Koven has published, and they ought to be as successful as any of the many he has written during the past quarter of a century.

Two songs, by R. Huntington Woodman—"Love Goes a-Hawking" and "My Heart Is a Lute." These are genial and naturally spontaneous songs. Their ease and animation, together with their simple melodies, make them grateful to sing and play.

Four songs, by Leo Smith—"O Oranges, Sweet Oranges," "To Helen," "My Mother Sea," "I Saw Thee on Thy Bridal Day."

There is something of the German ballad, as distinguished from the English ballad, in these four songs. They are not as difficult as Loewe's ballads or the songs of Wolf, but there is a good deal of the longing and romantic spirit of those famous composers in these new songs of Leo Smith. They are very singable and the accompaniments are not difficult.

Two love songs by Oley Speaks—"When June Days Come Again" and "Fair Rose." Oley Speaks has long been known as a successful writer of songs of this nature, and we cannot see how these two new songs can fail to add to his reputation. He pleads and coaxes, but never threatens or storms. His muse prefers the sunny paths among the roses to the cypress groves.

"Down the Vale," a song for high voice, by Attilio Parelli. A natural and easy flowing melody and a moderately difficult accompaniment full of dainty and unconventional effects are the characteristics of this excellent song.

Two songs, by Bruno Huhn—"The Dancing Girl" and "Summer Changes."

The first song is a brilliant and dashing waltz song with which a good soprano can rouse her audience. The second song is poetic and possesses much melodic charm. Both songs are short and fairly easy to sing.

Two songs, by Harold Vincent Milligan—"The Rose and the Bee" and "Love Me."

The accompaniments to these songs are as important as the melodies. In fact, the first song might have been composed as a piano solo and had the voice part added later. But the result is a harmonious whole. This bee accompaniment requires the singer to keep [illegible] time, which is usually contrary to the instinct of sing[illegible]

Four songs, by James H. Rogers—"Sea Fever," "[illegible] on the Highroad," "Wind Song," "Autumn."

These are delightful art songs which are free from exagggeration of any kind notwithstanding their frequent declamatory passages and their modern harmony. They are by no means difficult when compared with many of the modern songs of France and Germany.

Two songs, by Bradley Keeler—"Nightfall" and "Thine Image."

Both these songs are short, but they are long enough to reveal a composer who is full of the modern German idiom in his musical utterances. The accompaniments are difficult to read and often difficult to play. When properly performed by competent artists, however, these songs will hold their own on any program.

PROGRESS OF AMERICAN MUSIC.

(Continued from page 39.)

Shelley, Harry Rowe—"Forward Be Our Watchword" (anthem), sung by chorus choir, the Franklin Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Johnstown, Pa., February 8, 1914.

Sherwood, Wm. H.—"Exhilaration," "Autumn" (piano), played by Georgia Kober, Millard Avenue Woman's Club, Chicago, February 6, 1914.

Speaks, Oley—"To You" (song), sung by Beatrice McCue, artist course, Rollins School of Music, Winter Park, Fla., February 11, 1914;—sung by Beatrice McCue, Stetson University auditorium, Deland, Fla., February 12, 1914.

Strickland, Lily—"Pickaninny Sleep Song" (song), sung by Vernon Archibald, song recitals, New York, January 22, 1914.

Truette, Everett E.—"Suite in G minor" (organ), played by Joseph K. Dustin, Independent Christian Church, Gloucester, Mass., February 9, 1914.

—"Intermezzo" from "Suite in G minor" (organ), played by Frederick Maxson, Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, New York, February 5, 1914;—played by Albert L. Walker, St. Anne's Church, So. Lincoln, Mass., March 3, 1914.

—"Intermezzo" and "Grand Choeur" from "Suite in G minor" (organ), played by Jennie B. Parker, Congregational Church, Reading, Mass., January 19, 1914;—played by John D. Buckingham, Roxbury Presbyterian Church, Boston, December 7, 1913.

—"Mediation" from "Suite in G minor" (organ), played by Charles D. Irwin, Leyden Church, Brookline, Mass., March 11, 1914.

Ward-Stephens—"Schmerz der Trennung," "Devotion," "Chançon de Fortunio," "Summer Time" (songs), sung by Roma Devonne Hemstead, the Assembly Salon, Hotel Plaza, New York, February 5, 1914.

Warford, Claude—"The Tide of Life," "Sword Song" (Waiting), (songs), sung by Carl H. Rupprecht, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., January 30, 1914.

Warner, Frank Howard—Syrian Cycle: "I Love the Sunlight," "Violstring and Dulcimer," "My Olives Waver in the Wind," "Safe Guided by the Pharos Fire," "Amid the Ruined Janes of Baal" (songs), sung by John Barnes Wells, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, March 5, 1914.

Whiting, Arthur—"A Birthday" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Ashtabula, Ohio, February 24, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Troy Choral Club, Music Hall, Troy, N. Y., February 26, 1914.

Woodman, R. Huntington—"I Am Thy Harp" (song), sung by Vernon Archibald, song recital, New York, January 22, 1914.

Our Gold Supply.

Mizzi Hajos, the Sari in Henry W. Savage's production of the operetta of that name, has spent her summer in Europe, where she has made some interesting observations which she sets forth in a letter to the Savage office. Miss Hajos writes that it seems the ambition of every Austrian and Hungarian musician to compose an operetta that will become a hit in the United States. These composers, she says, look to this country for real financial returns. They have figured out, she explains, that a piece to be accepted by the American public must first have a European vogue, but for actual money they look to this side of the Atlantic. The fulfillment of their aim would be to write an operetta that scores on the other side and then have it produced in this country, where the money could come from. The career of "The Merry Widow" and "Sari," from which enormous returns have been realized, have turned the eyes of all young composers to the United States.

Leader Höberg has been making a success of the Royal Orchestra concerts at Copenhagen.

Articles of general musical interest, with or without pictures, will be examined by the Musical Courier if sent on approval, accompanied by stamped envelope for the return of the manuscript. In the event of its acceptance, such matter will be paid for at space rates. Address all manuscripts to The Musical Courier Company, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, Southeast corner of Thirty-ninth Street.

Louisville Plans for Next Season.

Active plans are being made in Louisville, Ky., for the coming musical season, according to the Louisville Post of July 24, which comments as follows:

"The plans for the coming musical season in Louisville are gradually taking shape, and Louisville is assured of a number of good concerts. Few plans are sufficiently advanced to make announcements wise, but Harry Marx has concluded his contracts with artists for a series of three concerts, and is already selling boxes and seats for the series.

"The three concerts which he has planned for his series are to be given by John McCormack, Helen Stanley and Frances Ingram in a joint concert, and Fritz Kreisler.

"John McCormack is one of the most distinguished of living tenors. He first attracted wide notice when he made his debut at Hammerstein's Manhattan Opera House in 1909, and made at once the greatest success. With Tetrazzini and Renaud he was the find of the year. The following season he sang in Chicago, and the year after that in Philadelphia, and his nights at the opera were always healthy for the box office. Recently he has sung mainly at Covent Garden, the London opera house. He has the record of the largest paid admission in the history of the concert stage. The record was made recently in New York. His Louisville engagement is for October 26.

"The second concert of the series is a joint concert with Helen Stanley and Frances Ingram. Miss Ingram is a contralto who has sung with the Chicago and Montreal Opera Houses. Miss Stanley is an American soprano, who during the past few years has acquired a wide reputation by singing almost all the leading soprano roles in the French and Italian operas with the Chicago Opera Company. The engagement for Miss Ingram and Miss Stanley is for the month of January, though the exact date has not yet been set.

"The final concert of Mr. Marx's series is that of the violinist, Fritz Kreisler, on March 2. No comment on Kreisler is needed. He is everywhere acknowledged as without a superior among violinists in this age of supreme violinists, and his concert in Louisville last January was as fine a recital as any ever heard by the Louisville public.

"Mr. Marx is charging $5 for a season ticket for the three concerts on the main floor. The tickets range in prices as low as $2 for the series. The boxes are $50 for the series. All of the concerts will be given at Shubert's Masonic Theatre."

Klibansky and Artist-Pupils.

Jean Vincent Cooper, Marie Louise Wagner and their teacher, Sergei Klibansky, are pictured in the group herewith reproduced, Miss Wagner being in white. Mrs.

TEACHER AND PUPILS.

Cooper has been engaged as soloist for the coming Maine Festival (William R. Chapman, director), in October. Miss Wagner left a fortnight ago for Europe, to begin an operatic engagement in Germany. Mr. Klibansky has issued invitations for a students' recital, due notice of which will appear in the Musical Courier.

Verdi Puzzled.

Giorza, the composer, who died the other day at Seattle, used to tell the following story: Once Verdi and I had apartments opposite each other in Milan. The street was narrow. It was warm and our windows were open. Verdi was writing one of his operas, and after writing one aria he sat down to the piano and played it. I decided to play a joke on him, so I closed the shutters, and when he got through I sat down at my piano and played the same thing. Then I peeped through the blinds and saw Verdi hanging halfway out of his window, looking in all directions. I heard no more from his piano. That evening, as we were walking together, he was much preoccupied, and I asked him what was the matter. "Well, Giorza," he replied, "I wrote a song this afternoon, a song that I was positive was original, and yet as soon as I played it some one in the neighborhood played the same thing. It worries me to think that I should believe another's composition was my own." Then I told him the truth, and he was happy.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Melba's Pullman Porter Critic.

One American experience recurs to me at the moment. I had been appearing in "Faust," at Washington, and, getting into the train after the performance rather tired, was not unnaturally annoyed at finding my stateroom unprepared. I called the colored attendant, who kept me waiting a long time before he condescended to appear.

"Why is my berth not ready?" I began.

He looked me up and down indifferently.

"I saw you play Margaret (Marguerite) this mornin'," he said defiantly, "an' I thought you weren't a bit o' good. You'll hev to wait. But Plankon (Plancon) was fine," he added as an afterthought.

Two years afterward I received a letter from this same ebony critic. "I heard you last night as Manon Lescaut," it ran, "and it was real fine. You beat the band. I take it all back."—Mme. Melba in Strand Magazine.

What Omaha Appreciates.

The one great concert event of the season was the Mendelssohn Choir concerts under Thomas J. Kelly in conjunction with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and visiting soloists.—Omaha Bee.

WANTED

ORGANIST WANTED—There is a vacancy for an organist in a large city in New York State in one of the leading churches. Salary $900 or more according to the man. Address "D. S. M.," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth avenue, New York.

WANTED—There is a splendid opportunity for a good piano, violin or singing teacher to connect with a musical institution of the highest standing in one of the leading cities of the United States by investing moderate sum in the institution. Only men or women of superior ability, culture and refinement considered. Steady income assured to the proper persons. All communications confidential. Send photo, credentials, telephone number and complete particulars to "Cooperative Opportunity," care of Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

PIANIST of reputation desires a position as accompanist in a studio, on tour or in chamber music. Pianos furnished free by a leading piano house. Address "Pianist," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

WANTED—Organists for moving picture houses. Must be able to play piano also. Steady employment assured, with good salary. Address "Organist," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

Vocal Studio and Opera School (Italian Method)
KARL SCHNEIDER
PHILADELPHIA: 1705 Chestnut St. October to May.
MUENCHEN, Germany: 9 Friedrich Str... June to Sept. 15

FORT LOUDOUN SEMINARY, Winchester, Virginia
For higher culture of young women. Delightful location in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Literary and Business Courses. Special advantages in Music, Art, Languages. Gymnasium and all outdoor exercises. Opens Sept. 17th. Terms $300. For catalogue, address MISS KATHERINE R. GLASS, Pres.

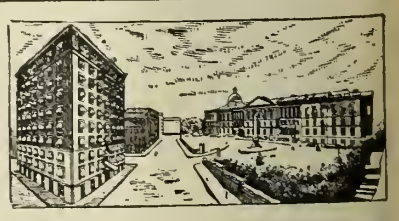
HOTEL POWHATAN WASHINGTON D.C.
HOTEL OF AMERICAN IDEALS
The Hotel Powhatan is the best, at the same time the newest, hotel in Washington.
Famous Pennsylvania Avenue, at the junction of 18th and H Streets, affords the site for this most luxurious and modern hotel.
Write for booklet with map.
CLIFFORD M. LEWIS, Manager

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

DAVID H. SCHRYVER Phone
Voice Production, Diction, Sight Reading, etc:
76 Rodney St., (20th Year) Brooklyn, N. Y.

EDWARD FREEMAN
SOLO PIANIST
Majestic Theatre, Erie, Pa.
(Limited number of Pupils accepted)

CARL BERNTHALER



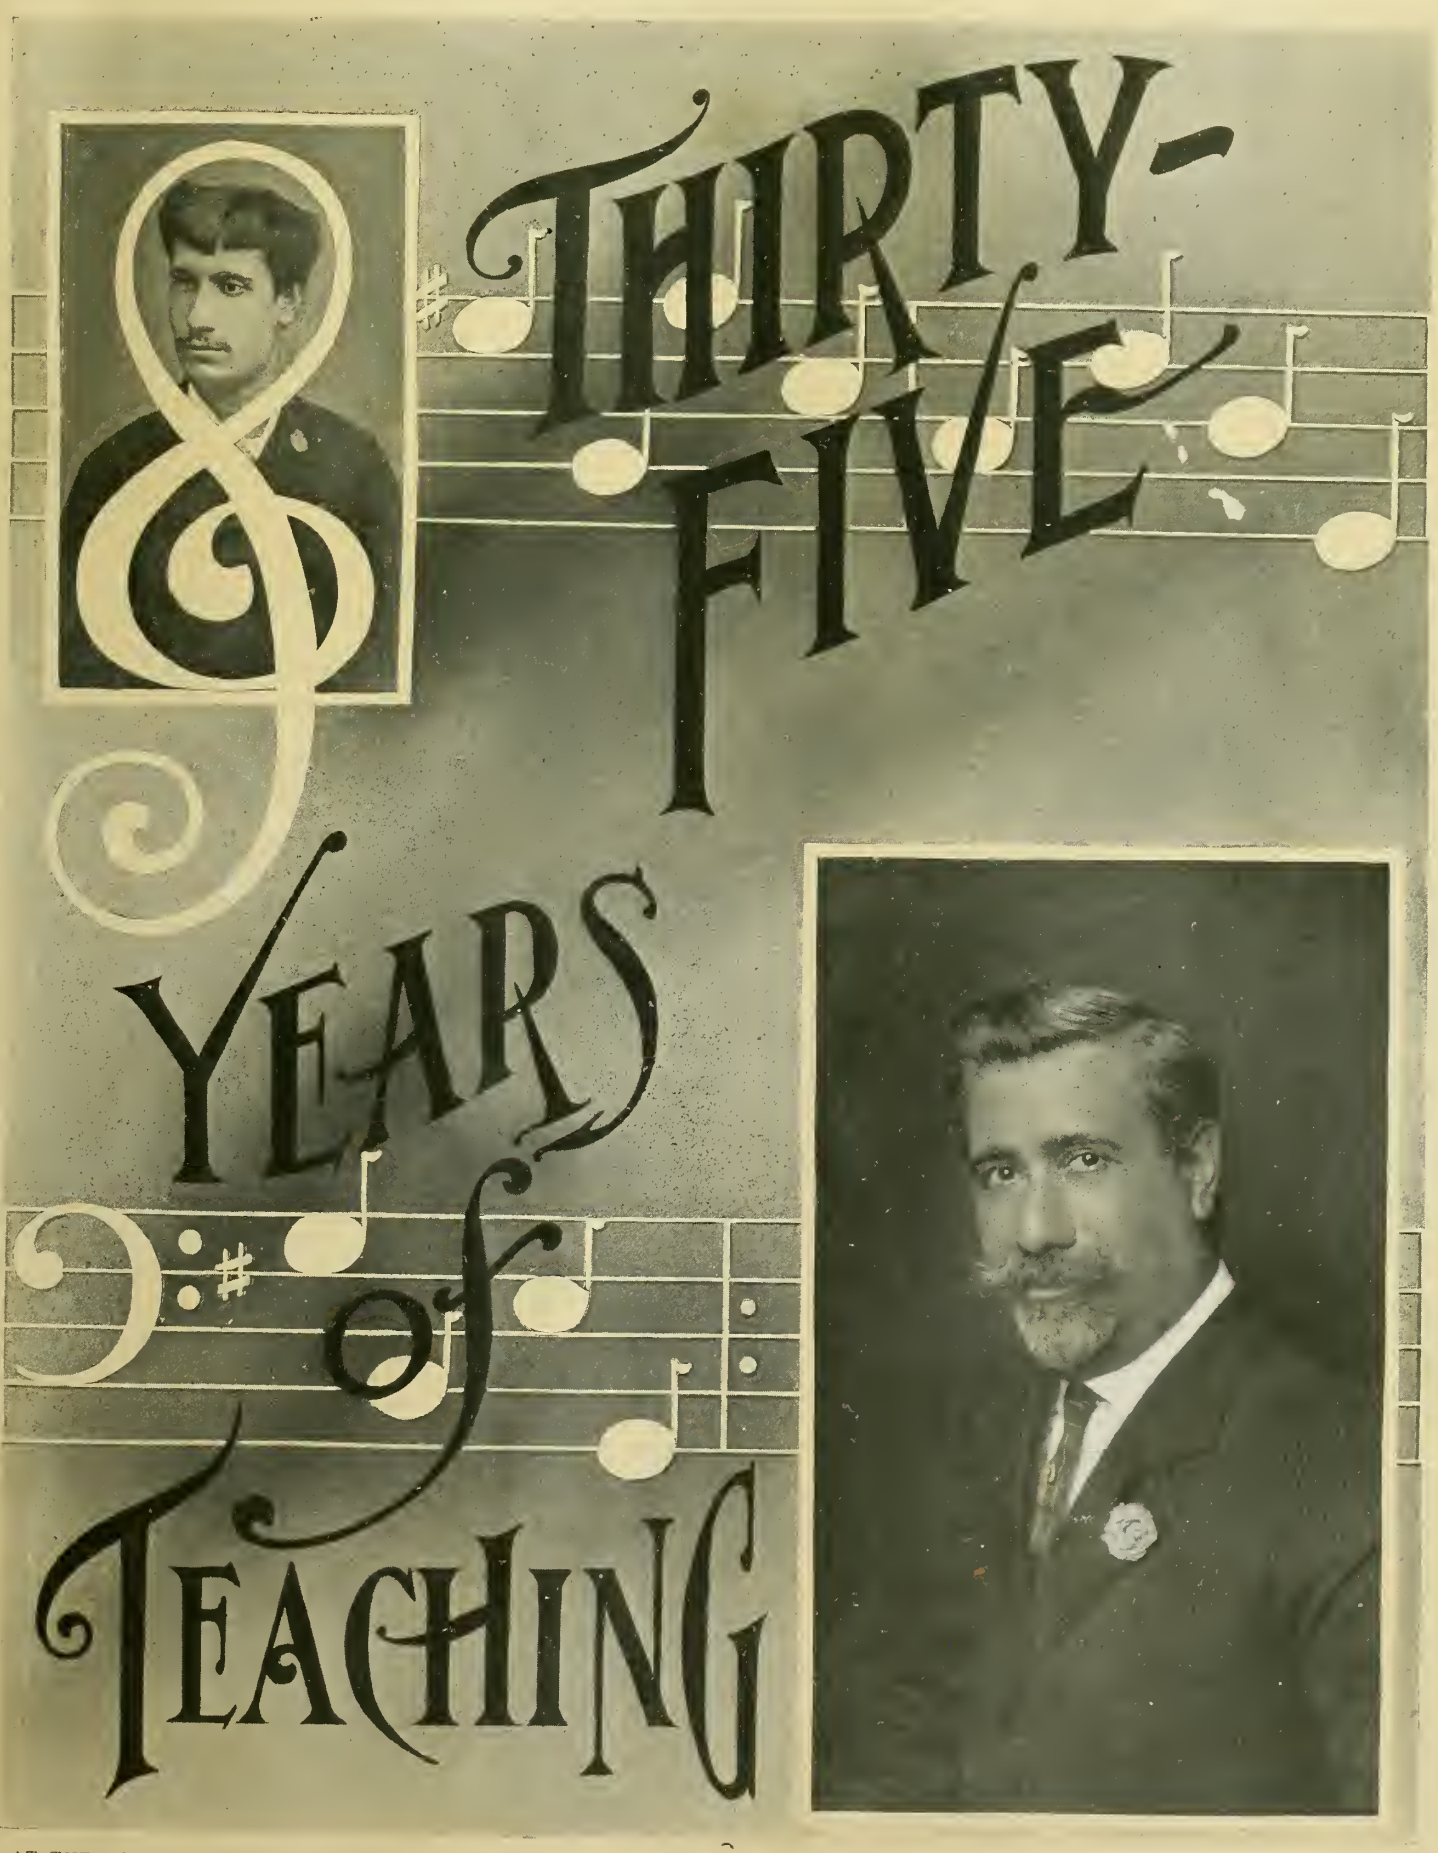
CONDUCTOR
PITTSBURGH FESTIVAL ORCHESTRA

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC in LEIPSIC
Own building with one large concert hall and two small halls, also fifty teaching rooms. Founded by F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy in 1843. Yearly attendance, 950 students of all countries. Students received at Easter and Michaelmas each year, but foreigners received at any time, in accordance with page 9 of the regulations.
The course of tuition includes every branch of musical instruction, namely: Piano, all stringed and wind instruments, organ, solo singing and thorough training for the opera, chamber music, orchestra, and sacred music, theory, composition, history of music, literature and æsthetics.
Prospectus in English or German sent gratis on application.
Director of THE ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC DR. ROENTSCH

CELENE LOVELAND
Pianist
4620 LAKE PARK AVE., CHICAGO
Phone, Kenwood 5871

HENRY P. SCHMITT
VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
Residence Studio: 203 W. 81st St., New York. Tel. Schuyler 9517



Commonwealth Hotel
OPPOSITE STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, MASS.
Offers room with hot and cold water for $1.00 per day and up, which includes free use of public shower baths.
Nothing to equal this in New England
Rooms with private baths for $1.50 per day and up; suites of two rooms and bath for $4.00 per day and up.
ABSOLUTELY FIREPROOF
Strictly a Temperance Hotel. Send for Booklet
STORER F. CRAFTS - - Gen'l Mgr.

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 6 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1794

AT THE AGE OF SIXTEEN.

GIORGIO M. SULLI

Prominent New York Vocal Instructor

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK.
Carnegie Hall, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

CLIFFORD DEMAREST, F. A. G. O.,
ORGANIST—COMPOSER.
Recitals Instruction.
Church of The Messiah, 34th St. & Park Av., N.Y.C.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
BOICE.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1077 Mad. Sq.

EUGENIE PAPPENHEIM,
THE CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Culture in All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101 W. 78th St., New York City.
Telephone: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
129 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.
Special Summer Course.

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise). Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

Miss EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
Will teach during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE.
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Ribeldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West, Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York.
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th St.

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Street
Complete musical education given to students from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR.
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT.
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMOND,
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Correct Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 6. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1794.

RESUMÉ OF MOSCOW'S LATE OPERA SEASON.

Three Opera Houses in the Ancient Russian City Give Excellent Performances—Table of Works Heard and Number of Representations—Russian Native Works Much in Evidence—A Comic Opera by Moussorgski.

Arbatte, Denesburg 32,
Moscow, July 7, 1914.

During the last musical season there was so much to report about our concerts, that I had rather to neglect the Opera. Now I will try to give a short record of what was done in the matter of operatic performances.

The Imperial Opera.

Our Imperial Opera stands in the first rank, having an array of fine singers, an excellent orchestra, a well trained chorus, and a rich repertoire of operas. The scenery always has been splendid, and the stage settings are done by illustrious painters, the administration at the Imperial Opera having large sums at its disposal for this purpose. However, we are mourning the loss of some of our beautiful stage settings which were ruined by a disastrous fire at the Opera some months ago, as I reported at the time to the Musical Courier. The loss cannot be repaired in less than a year. Korovin, a highly gifted painter, already is at work reproducing several of the burned pieces and other painters are about to do the same. Of course the repertoire of the Imperial Opera for the next season will be limited to a great extent.

A Rimsky-Korsakoff Novelty.

The novelty of last season was Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Tsar Saltan," an opera which had not yet been heard on the stage of the Imperial Opera, although a few years ago it was performed at Zimin's Private Opera with great success. The libretto is based on a native Russian fairy tale, told in a poem with beautiful verses by the famous Poushkin.

Rimsky-Korsakoff's aim was to create a delicate fairy atmosphere and in that he has succeeded. This work shows vividly all his customary facility in devising melodies quite Russian in character. Undeniably delightful, full of lyric freshness, and with an overflowing rhythmic gaiety, there is not a single air which does not captivate the fancy and stir the senses. At the same time there is no opportunity lost by the composer for the display of his skill in orchestration.

Other Performances.

After years of neglect the Imperial Opera revived Rossini's "Barber of Seville" and the performance was excellent,

VIEW OF KIEW AND THE DNIEPER.

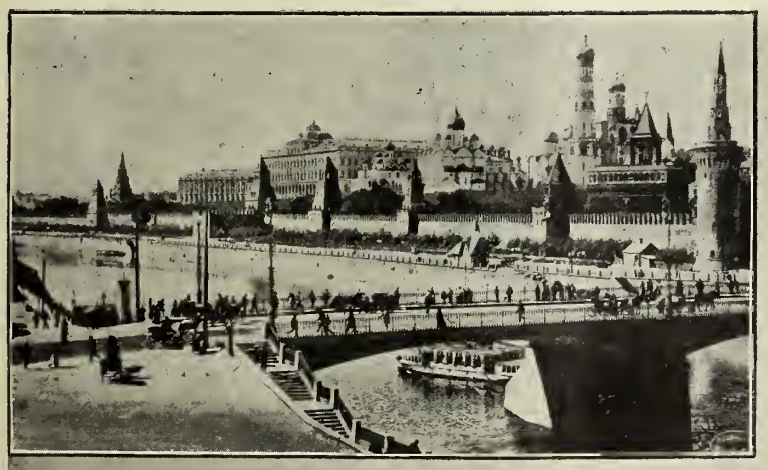
with Chaliapin impersonating Don Basilio, Mme. Neshdanowa as Rosini, her appearance, her fine singing and delightful acting helped her to score a triumph. Karakash was Figaro, Labinski as Count Almaviva, and Lossky as Bartolo.

On the occasion of the one hundredth anniversary of Wagner's birth, the "Ring" cycle was performed at the Imperial Opera and his "Tannhäuser" was renewed for the close of the season.

Last season 174 performances of twenty-nine operas took place, of which twelve (112 performances) were by Russian composers and seventeen (sixty-two performances) by foreign composers: eight French, six German and three Italian. Rimsky-Korsakoff ranked first on the list; his works were performed thirty-four times, those by Tschaikowsky twenty-eight times, those by Moussorgski seventeen times. All the other composers had to register from four to nine performances of their operas.

Some of the Singers.

Several singers at the Imperial Opera who for their exceptional singing and acting deserve special commendation are Chaliapin, Sobinow, Smirnow, Petrow, Karanash, Labinski, Losski, Bogdanowitsh, and Mmes. Neshdanowa, Goukowa, Balanowska, Dobrovolska, Hepanowa.



The conductors were W. Suck, a very experienced musician, Emil Cooper, a master conductor, and Fedorow and Ozep, very valuable younger musicians.

The Imperial Ballet.

Our lovely ballet performances in Moscow take place at the Imperial Opera and are on the same high level as those at St. Petersburg, where they have a Pavlowa and a Krasavina, while we have a Geltzer, a Mossolowa, a Fedorowa, a Coralli, and many others.

A novelty of the season was the ballet "Schubertiana," the music of which consisted of excerpts of compositions by Schubert. The subject of the ballet is dramatic and the music was appropriate to that which the dancers had to

THE KREMLIN.

A PARTIAL BIRDSEYE VIEW OF MOSCOW.

THE MOSCOW IMPERIAL OPERA.

THE CATHEDRAL OF THE ASSUMPTION, WHERE THE TSARS ARE CROWNED.

THE "TROIZKY" BRIDGE OVER THE NEVA, WITH THE FORTRESS OF ST. PETER AND ST. PAUL, WHERE POLITICAL PRISONERS ARE KEPT.

GENERAL VIEW, WITH THE DOME OF THE GREAT ISAAC CATHEDRAL LOOMING UP IN THE BACKGROUND.

illustrate. Mme. Geltzer did the chief role. She was delicious, and as light as an apparition.

Grieg's music formed the basis of another ballet, called "Love is Quick," with scenes on the beach of a Norwegian shore, depicting the love of youth among the sailor-peasants. Geltzer again played the chief role, impersonating a very young girl.

They had fifty-three ballet performances at the Imperial Opera, Tschaikowsky's "The Sleeping Beauty" was performed eleven times. Ballets with music by Glazounow, Rubinstein, Delibes, etc., had from four to nine performances each last season.

Zimin's Private Opera.

The Zimin performances had a cast of good singers, a first rate orchestra, an affective chorus, a well drilled ballet. The opening attraction was Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Mlada," a novelty here. A new opera by Glouchowzew was given for the first time. It bears the title "Nowadays," depicting the every day life of students and young people in Moscow. The libretto was Andrew's drama of deep tragedy. The opera is of a veristic kind, something like Charpentier's "Louise." The music has some interesting episodes, but on the whole it lacks inspiration.

After years of oblivion Tschaikowsky's opera "The Enchantress" was revived at Zimin's Private Opera. It was performed twelve times with much success. The composer's rich melodic endowment is felt in it and the music abounds also in beautiful harmonizations. the whole creating a thoroughly poetical atmosphere.

Mozart's "Don Juan," Massenet's "Thaïs" and Verdi's "Otello" were the operas given new settings at the Private Opera last season. The best singers in the institution are: Mmes. Petrova, Zvanzewa, Zakrewskaia, Drousiakina, Koshitz, Michaïlowa, and Messrs. Ossipow, Speranski, Botsharow, Damaew, Lebedew, Doubinski. Mr. Zimin invited some Italian celebrities for performances of Italian operas and thus we heard Battistini, Labia and others.

WHERE THE WARSAW PHILHARMONIC PLAYS.

Last season 231 performances of thirty-one operas took place at Zimin's Private Opera, ten by Russian composers, and twenty-two by foreign ones. Verdi stands first, as five of his operas were performed. The second on the list is Tschaikowsky, represented by four operas, which were given forty-two times, while Verdi's had twenty-five performances.

Zimin's Opera is an art institution of great importance in Moscow. We have had the advantage of becoming acquainted with new operas, as Mr. Zimin has not been slow to accept novelties of merit. He and Mr. Olenin, his manager in chief always are on the search for new things in musical art and never grow tired of striving towards perfection in the aim they have set for themselves.

Another Opera House.

A new theatre in Moscow calls itself "The Free Art Theatre," and the managers intend it as a home of the broadest kind for opera ballet, drama, pantomime, etc. They had Moussorgski's comic opera, "The Fair at Sorotshinks" for the opening of their enterprise. It is a work composed more than thirty-five years ago and long neglected. The existence of it was little known, as the manuscript was in the hands of Vladimir Stassow, a Russian illustrious writer on matters of art, who fought for the national art almost with sword in hand. He preserved the Moussorgski manuscripts carefully, which bore the inscription that it were to be published after Stassow's death.

The subject matter of the "Fair at Sorotshinks" was taken from a narrative of Gool, a Russian writer, who handled all the incongruities of Russia in a light satirical form. He was a kindred spirit of Moussorgski.

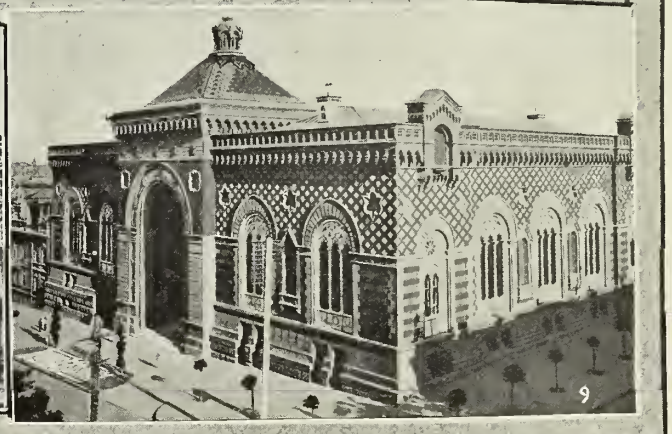
The music to the "Fair at Sorotshinks" is of a lyrical style with merry and lively scenes, producing a hilarious and merry effect. The types of uncultured people of the

THE ST. PETERSBURG IMPERIAL OPERA.

THE NEW ST. PETERSBURG CONSERVATORY.
A magnificent building, erected in 1893 by the government at an expense of two million roubles ($1,000,000).

NORAH DREWETT
THE FAMOUS PIANIST
SEASON 1914-15
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

HINSHAW
Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE
Berlin Wagner Ring Festival,
June 23rd to Aug. 21st
American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE
Management, R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.



SIGHTS AND SCENES ALONG THE VOLGA

DURING THE KUSSEWITZKY CONCERT TOUR, DESCRIBED IN ANOTHER PART OF THIS ISSUE BY THE SPECIAL MUSICAL COURIER REPRESENTATIVE.

(1) Monument of the Empress Catherine II at Rostow. (2) Odessa Harbor. (3) Near Saratow. (4) Gardens on the Sea Side of the Black Sea, at Odessa. (5) Theatre of the Commerce Club, Charkow. (6) Monument of Prince Vladimir at Kiew. (7) Rostow. (8) View of Saratow. (9) Bourse in Odessa. (10) Bargemen. (11) Sunday line-up before a drinking place in a Volga village. (12) Kussewitzky's guests landing in a Volga fishing boat. (13) Kiew monument of Bogdan Chmelnitzki, a hero of the Oukraina. (14) The Bourse at Charkow.

Helen Stanley, of the Century Opera Company, New York; George Hamlin and Marie Cavan, of the Hamburg Opera.

WELL KNOWN ARTISTS CAUGHT IN BERLIN BY THE CAMERA.
Rudolph Ganz, the noted Swiss pianist, and George Hamlin. Helen Stanley and George Hamlin.

Oukraina (South Russia) are very amusing and the conflicts of the comedy are of a naive kind.

Moussorgski was entirely objective, even epic in his compositions, and a thinker of deep pessimism. At the time when he was composing the "Khovantshina" (1875) the most gloomy opera known, he found relief in the music to the "Fair at Sorotshinks," which he wrote at the same time. The work left . . . unfinished, was completed later by Liadow, and Sachnowski, who fulfilled their task well, remaining true to the spirit and style of Moussorgski.

Other pieces performed at the Free Art Theatre were the operetta "La belle Héléne," the pantomimes, "The Veil of Pierette," and "The Yellow Coat," and Bizet's "L'Arlésienne." The orchestra, hidden from the audience, always sounded well under the conductorship of Konstantin Saradshew and Vladmir Retyd, both highly gifted musicians of a serious kind.

For next season the managers have decided to separate the staff and to give only dramas at this theatre, while opera performances will be given in another house, of which the chief musical force will be Konstantin Saradshew, the conductor. ELLEN VON TIDEBÖHL.

Elizabeth Kelso Patterson Back from Europe.

Elizabeth Kelso Patterson, the New York teacher of singing, returned on July 30 last, from a six weeks' trip abroad. The time was spent in London, Paris, Berlin and Dresden, where she has many musical friends, most of whom she met when she was before the public as a singer in these cities. Miss Patterson was greatly pleased in Dresden with the singing of Sanna von Rhyn, a soprano who is well known in Germany and should be heard in America. She found numerous letters awaiting her, asking for time for lessons for the coming season. Her resident studio at 257 West 104th street, New York, will be open for lessons on September 15, although she will be in the city on September 1 to make appointments and to try voices.

Nothing Too Good for Her.

Mrs. Newlygilt.—That's a pretty good lookin' one. Show me that.

The Piano Salesman—That's one of our finest instruments. I sold one just like it to Mrs. De Frazzle. Solid mahogany, seven and a half octaves.

Mrs. Newlygilt—Seven and a half? Send me one with eight.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

George Hamlin—"Our Foremost American Tenor."

BY FITZHUGH W. HAENSEL.

I was over at The Lambs the other day lunching with a friend and inasmuch as he is an actor we talked about plays and players, operas and opera singers. Among other things my friend said:

"I am a great booster for 'The Three Georges'—George Cohan, George Ade and George Hamlin. We have many pictures of this royal trio here in the club house. Each is a leader in his particular field. George Cohan made a million writing songs and plays; George Ade made a million writing 'Fables in Slang' and George Hamlin has made at least a million friends by his singing.

"You know," continued my friend the actor, "I believe George Hamlin is the greatest tenor America ever produced. I don't say this because he happens to own one of the finest theatres in this country, nor because all his folks have been identified with the show business, nor because he is a friend of mine, but because he has always made good. I first heard George as a church singer, later in oratorio, then as a lieder singer and finally in grand opera, and his 'forward march' proclaims him both an artist and a genius."

Every manager enjoys hearing people say nice things about the artists he is presenting to the public and it was especially pleasing to hear our foremost American tenor so warmly praised by a fellow clubman. The success attained by George Hamlin is due to his ability to work. I do not believe I know any one who enjoys work like he does. Possibly this is because his family did not seem to think much of the idea of having one of its members appearing as a professional—the managerial end of the business being more in their line.

John A. Hamlin, father of the tenor, was a hard headed business man and when his youngest son declared he intended to become a singer, parental opposition stalked across the stage. Hamlin pere mentioned something about having wasted considerable money trying to make the other Hamlin boys musicians. For a time it looked as if the parental demurrer was about to be sustained, but the youthful George had a will of his own. Also he was a good stage manager, for he entered his father's offices and took great interest in his father's business—but he studied music during his time off. I often wondered how he accomplished this, for his first musical attempt was with a cornet and cornet practice is hard to keep secret. But it is known that he became so proficient on the cornet that he played for the Sunday school of a big South Side church in Chicago. He also played the piano—rather well, too.

Along about the age of sixteen young Hamlin discovered he had a voice and with this discovery the piano and the cornet were cast forever into the discard. The dream of being a future Herbert Clark or a Paderewski came to a full stop. He would be a tenor, he decided, but being a wise youth, he kept his own counsel. His great hobby was to get hold of all the good songs and learn them, which was the beginning of his present great repertoire.

The coldest night of last February George Hamlin sailed for Europe and while I was sitting with him in the salon of the Kronprinzessin Cecilie he talked to me about his beginning as a singer.

"All through my early experience," began Mr. Hamlin, "I was trying to please my father by showing an interest in his business. I like business and I want to say right here that I believe every musician should be a business man or woman. I have no patience with these alleged 'artistic temperaments' who pretend they know nothing of business. I hate shams. I have noticed that these temperamental people who assume the grand air and try to impress every one with the fact that they are lacking in financial judgment usually exhibit splendid business sense when collecting their fee. Some of the most artistic of these must have the fee in hand before the temperamental stuff begins to unwind.

"Every one," continued Mr. Hamlin, "should do the thing he likes best. Art is the expression of a man's joy in his work. If he enjoys singing, let him sing—but he can be a business man, too. The mere fact that a man is a singer by profession need not stunt his business ability."

George Hamlin was born in Chicago long enough after the great Chicago fire to disqualify him eternally from attending the "old settlers' picnic," but the exact date does not matter as he is growing younger each year. His early youth was passed in the Western metropolis and when he was eighteen years old he entered Phillip's Andover Academy in Massachusetts. Here he made his debut as a singer, for he was selected as one of the first tenors for the glee club. After he graduated at the academy he returned to Chicago and was engaged as soloist by one of the big churches. Singing in church brought about in the natural order of events appearances in cantatas and oratorios, and as a result of this training the Hamlin oratorio and cantata repertoire numbers over a hundred.

Although George Hamlin had been almost raised in a theatre and knew every actor and actress that ever appeared in America he never had been "on the stage," nor had he ever taken part in any amateur theatricals. When he entered grand opera and made his first appearance in "Natoma" he found that although he had never had any stage training he had lived so long in the atmosphere of the theatre that he was an acting singer from the very start. There are plenty of actors who cannot sing and plenty of singers who cannot act, but this American tenor can both sing and act admirably.

One thing that makes George Hamlin so popular and successful is his sense of humor. He has a most delightful personality and no matter what happens he never has a "grouch." I am told there are singers who have cross-grained dispositions and who make all kinds of trouble for the local managements with whom they appear, but in all our experiences with Mr. Hamlin we have found that he has made one continuous procession of friends wherever he has been engaged throughout the United States and Canada.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York
NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915
STEINWAY PIANO USED

Advice from George Sweet.

New York, August 1, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Following my last letter to the MUSICAL COURIER I have received numerous communications requesting me to offer a comprehensive explanation of my ideas on correct enunciation, which I most cheerfully forward, trusting that the MUSICAL COURIER will accept and publish same for the benefit of the many young students who aspire to become artists.

To quote a portion of the paragraph in my preceding letter: "As singing is an idealized form of speech or a higher order of declamation (the tone being more beautiful than when speaking), we are naturally governed by the first rule in language, which is to pronounce properly." The question is often asked by the young student, "Why did the old masters of singing use 'ah' for the fundamental sound in their methods of tone placing?" Simply for the reason that they recognized that "ah" is the only natural sound heard when we come into the world and the last at time of death. Consequently, the pure, uninterrupted flow of the breath concentrated while passing through the vocal cords, causing them to vibrate; that vibration was termed "vocalized breath," or "una vocale" (or vowel), which we are taught is an open sound, a natural, direct sound, made without effort (or articulation), and in the words of Brown, the old grammarian, "A sound produced from the human vocal organs, without interruption by the tongue or lips." The basic principle of tone placing being that the vocal (or vowel) "ah" throws the throat open, naturally, to vocalize properly.

With the mother sound "ah" we have two articulations, viz., by the tongue and by the lips, one movement of each member, pronounced in the Oriental, Greek and Latin languages e (Eng.) as ch, i (Eng.) as ih, o (Eng.) as oh, u (Eng.) as ooh, direct and as exclamations.

In articulating eh, a (Eng.) the tongue is pressed forward, and ih, e (Eng.) brings the tongue farther forward to the front of the mouth, between the teeth. Oh, o (Eng.) and ooh, u (Eng.) are articulated by the risibles (the two facial muscles), bringing the upper lip toward the center of the face, the aperture (or mouth) being more contracted in ooh than in oh. We are then taught that the consonants through analyzing the word, con-sonant, sonant from suono, sound (in this sense the voice) or vocalized breath (vowel); con, a preposition, with; hence we get with sound. Anything with another would naturally be a helper, or better expressed in this case, an auxilliary articulation, which united with any of the five vocals (vowels) form what are termed syllables; the syllables combined form words or intelligible sounds, which express our thoughts as parts of speech.

In the English language there are no vowels; our so called vowels are diphthongs or double sounds, all being interrupted, as a is pronounced a-e; e, as e-e; i, as ah-e; o, as ooh; and u, as you. Hence the obvious reason why the English speaking people are the poorest linguists, owing to the fact that they are never taught the Latin sounds or the inflections of the foreign or continental languages. In our country the collegian is taught what is called Anglicized Latin or Greek, which cannot exist, and when he meets the forcigner, especially the Italian, where, even today, the Latin tongue is spoken by the priesthood as it was spoken in the Roman era, he finds his quotations, etc., from the classics absolutely unintelligible. For instance, caeli (the heavens) in our colleges is pronounced see-lie, and as the last vowel of the Latin diphthong pronounced the syllable, correctly pronounced cha-lee, and Cæsar, cha-zar (the letter c is pronounced as cha and only hard before a, o, u).

In enunciating, the average singer is taught to open the mouth very wide with every syllabilization, and cannot realize that he is not following the rule of articulating properly with the tongue and upper lip; otherwise, that which was intended by nature, and to better express it, quoting Shakespeare in the lines of Hamlet, when haranguing the players: "Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounce it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of you players do, I had as lief the town crier spoke my lines. . . . Suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature; for anything so overdone is from the purpose of playing; whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature."

Most of the actors and singers of today would do well to consider seriously the above quotation from "Hamlet," as it is certainly deplorable to witness the mouthings and facial contortions of the majority of players and singers, which make it absolutely impossible to render their performances intelligible. Yours very truly,

GEORGE SWEET.

Decreus and Tourret on Shipboard.

The accompanying picture was taken on board the steamship George Washington, May 16. In it are shown Camille

CAMILLE DECREUS AND ANDRE TOURRET EN ROUTE TO EUROPE.

Decreus, pianist, and Andre Tourret, violinist, who will appear in joint recital under the management of R. E. Johnston next season through the courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark.

Marcella Craft's Plans.

Advices from Milan state that Marcella Craft spent three days early in the month in that city on a visit to her old maestro of acting, Francesco Mottino, and left later for Paris. In October she will go to Munich to give a farewell concert, after which she goes to the United States to fill her engagement with the Chicago Opera.

Tietjens Marooned Here.

Paul Tietjens, the composer and pianist, who was to have sailed for Europe last week, is marooned in New York and has decided to stay here until the foreign war clouds roll by—or burst. Mr. Tietjens will do teaching and some comic opera work during his enforced New York sojourn.

California Composer Making a Tour.

Grace Adele Freebey, the California composer, has been in the East, and is now on a tour through the United States.

Thibaud in London.

One of Jacques Thibaud's most interesting engagements since his tour to America last season was an appearance in London, at which he played a program in part quite out of the ordinary. For his first number the French violinist played the Vivaldi-Nachez concerto in A minor, accompanied by a double string quartet and organ, the ensemble being conducted by Jackson Byles. Mr. Thibaud's second offering was the Chausson concerto in D major, a work calling for a string quartet accompaniment as well as piano. The concluding number following the Schumann fantasy was the Bach concerto in E major, again with double string quartet and organ accompaniment.

Thibaud followed this unique appearance with a recital which proved no less popular. The London Telegraph declared: "We can hardly recall an occasion when the spell of his grave and delicate art was more potently exercised." The Morning Post spoke of the violinist as "one of those sympathetic players who never fail to give pleasure to their hearers," while the Times stated: "Thibaud played with a wonderful amount of spirit and his usual delicate accuracy."

"The beauty of his tone is practically unrivaled," said the Pall Mall Gazette. The Globe concluded a highly commendatory criticism by declaring: "There is always room for an artist like Mr. Thibaud. His reading was perfect in its decision and refinement. His tone was seductively pure, and the chastened spirit of his interpretations showed the scholar and not the sentimentalist."

Thibaud's return to America under the management of Loudon Charlton is scheduled for early December. The violinist will go to the Pacific Coast and will be heard in the principal cities of the South in addition to filling return engagements in many places where he was heard last season.

Malkin Music School Activity.

After a brilliant season, which in its results exceeded the most sanguine hopes of its many well wishers, the Malkin Music School of New York is at present very busily occupied in completing arrangements for the coming year. Owing to the fact that last year's enrollment was so heavy and that the faculty was taxed to its utmost to satisfy the demands made upon its time, Mr. Malkin, who is spending the summer at Newport, R. I., has already added a number of well known teachers to his capable staff.

Judging by the results of the past season, Mr. Malkin's ambition to make his school an ideal institution is being realized. Instruction in the various departments was most efficiently rendered, and Mr. Malkin's spirit of indefatigable energy seemed to imbue all connected with the school. The feeling among the director and teachers as well as betwen the teachers and pupils was one of enthusiasm displayed in the work. A series of fifteen concerts was given at the school, pupils and teachers alternating each week. The parents of the pupils were kept in constant touch with the school, and at the close of the year each student who had been examined by the faculty at the June examination received a certificate bearing the marks obtained.

Arrangements have been made for the coming season for the accommodation and convenience of even a greater number of students than last year. Several additional features have been planned for the school and will be made public through the catalogue which will be issued very shortly.

Opera in Esperanto.

Grand opera in Esperanto will have the one great advantage of putting the whole audience on a common plane of ignorance.—Newark, N. J., Star.

WALTER PETZET.

THE XAVER SCHARWENKA

Master School of Piano Playing and Teachers' Seminary

Faculty: Director, Prof. Xaver Scharwenka, Court Pianist to the Emperor of Austria-Hungary; Assistant Director, Prof. Walter Petzet; Principal Assistants: Miss Martha Siebold, Miss Isolde Scharwenka.

THE MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING is in no way connected with the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory of Music, with which Prof. Xaver Scharwenka has severed his connection.

The new institution is a special school for pianoforte playing, and affords its pupils the opportunity to acquire a complete pianistic training for the concert stage, or to thoroughly equip themselves for the profession of piano instruction.

The first term begins September 1, 1914.

Any desired information, prospectus, etc., sent on application to

THE MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING
BLUMENTHALSTR. 17, BERLIN, W.

XAVER SCHARWENKA.

Tali Esen Morgan at Ocean Grove.

Ocean Grove, N. J., August 1, 1914.

Tali Esen Morgan is conducting a most successful musical season at Ocean Grove, N. J. The magnificent auditorium with its almost 10,000 seats has been filled time and time again. The Ocean Grove organ and its talented player, Clarence Reynolds, draws thousands daily to hear the recitals, as does also the famous Ocean Grove "Storm," pronounced to be the most wonderful and realistic organ piece ever put together. The fact that it is drawing thousands every day, and for the fourth year, all paying 25 or 15 cents admission, proves that it must be something unusual, to say the least.

The "popular" concerts every evening have been very well attended, better than ever before. Among the artists who have appeared may be mentioned Edna Fassett Sterling, Alice Louise Mertens, Mrs. George Reardon, Anna Ballard Lewis, Marie Seville, Lillian Sharpe Woerle, Martha Steele, Cecelia Joachim, Harvey Hindermyer, Horatio Rench, Donald Chalmers, Gilbert Wilson, George Reardon, Ida Divinoff, violinist; Arthur Parker, violinist, and several others.

Maximillian Pilzer, the violinist, created a most favorable impression at the concert a week ago. Dostal, the Bohemian tenor, created a sensation with his remarkably high voice and pure tenor quality. Orville Harrold drew a tremendous house last Saturday night and met with an ovation. He was recalled again and again, and gave altogether fifteen songs. He was assisted in the concert by Lydia Locke, soprano, and Carl H. Tollefsen, violinist, both artists being well received.

Next Saturday night, August 8, the annual Children's Music Festival will be held, when it is a foregone conclusion that every last seat in the house will be sold. This chorus has a thousand voices, and the singing is wonderful. Among the numbers will be the "Romeo and Juliet" waltz, the "Soldiers' Chorus" from "Faust," "The Lost Chord," and several of the songs from the latest operas. The big finale will be based on the war in Europe, and will be a most thrilling spectacle.

TALI ESEN MORGAN,
Director of Music at the Ocean Grove Auditorium.

Mendelssohn's "Elijah" will be given by the same chorus of a thousand voices that gave that wonderful production of "The Messiah" two weeks ago. The date is Saturday, August 15. The soloists will be David Bispham, Dan Beddoe, Myrtle Thornburgh and Alice Louise Mertens. The Pennsylvania Railroad will run special trains both morning and afternoon, leaving Jersey City at 8.18 and 1.40, Newark at 8.35 and 1.58, Elizabeth at 8.45 and 2.08. The round trip fare will be $1, or $1.50 for a combination ticket, which includes a dollar reserved seat to the performance. Mr. Morgan promises one of the greatest performances of the "Elijah" ever heard in this country.

Sousa and his band will give four concerts at Ocean Grove on Friday and Saturday, August 21 and 22. On the night of the 21st, the Asbury Park Carnival Queen, Titania XIV, will be crowned in the Auditorium.

The Children's Fairyland Pageant will be given on Wednesday night, August 26. This will be the most elaborate production ever given at Ocean Grove. and will close the season's concerts.

The Tali Esen Morgan Musical Bureau will be opened on September 1. Mr. Morgan has been contemplating this move for several years, but circumstances have prevented it up to this time. He is going to retire as a conductor and devote all his time and his energies to the musical bureau. He has already booked some of the best artists in this country to be under his management. For years he has been in close touch with the conductors, concert managers, organists, clubs, etc., of the United States, so that he is fully equipped to enter this branch of the musical business. He will not only book artists, but will take the active management of concerts. He will probably retain his leadership and management of the Ocean Grove summer concerts. Mr. Morgan will retain his present offices at the Hotel Gerard, 123 West Forty-fourth street, New York, for the present, but will later move to more commodious quarters.

YVONNE DE
TRÉVILLE
Coloratura Soprano
Grand Opera Prima Donna
NOW IN AMERICA
SEASON 1914-15 BOOKING
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals.
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

As "A tree is known by its fruit," so is a school known by its products—
THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC OF CINCINNATI
A school for professional training in all branches of the musical art and the drama. Superior advantages open to all students
Thirty-seventh Academic Year Opens September 3rd. Send for catalog. Address
THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC OF CINCINNATI, A. J. Gantvoort, Manager, CINCINNATI, OHIO

IMPERIAL ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC AND DRAMATIC ART IN VIENNA
School year begins September 20th. (Admission at other times only by special arrangement)
Magnificent new building, with finest, most thorough and most modern equipment of any musical institution in the world. Eighty-five eminent masters.
Regular Courses in All Branches of Vocal and Instrumental Music. Fee $60 to $120 per year.
Opera School with its Own Specially Equipped New Theater for Rehearsals and Performances. Fee $120 per year.
MASTERSCHOOL FOR PIANO: Prof. Leopold GODOWSKY. MASTERSCHOOL FOR VIOLIN: Prof. Otto ŠEVČIK
Fee for Each Masterschool $160 per year
For Further Information Apply to the Office of the IMPERIAL ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC - - - - Vienna, III., Lothringerstrasse 14

Madame OTTILIE METZGER
THE GREAT GERMAN CONTRALTO (Second American Tour)
and THEODOR LATTERMANN
THE FAMOUS BASS-BARITONE (First Appearance in America)
Who are now singing in the Hamburg Opera will arrive in America early in February
Opera :: Concert :: Oratorio
Management: Music League of America, Howard E. Potter, Business Manager
Aeolian Hall, New York

LAUSANNE NOTES.

Lausanne, Switzerland, July 28, 1914.

Arthur Mayer, baritone, of New York, is here for a rest and the study of languages. He has a repertoire of sixteen operas, in German.

I hear that J. D. (Giovanni) Sample has made his "audition" before the Ricordis in Milan and has been placed on their favored list. He will appear soon in "Otello" and has abandoned his intention to go to America this season. as he wants to devote another year to singing at various places in Italy.

Martin Richardson, tenor, an old pupil of Lombardi, sang recently at two concerts in London previous to leaving for America.

Mrs. George Earle Baker, of London, soprano, who was ill at Naples, has gone to London and will return to Sydney as soon as she is able to travel. She will make her home in the latter city, having retired from the stage.

Mrs. Van Dyke, who was here about ten days ago, has left. She is a soprano and engaged in active study while in Switzerland.

J. Allen.

Must Avoid Ragtime.

[From the New York Globe.]

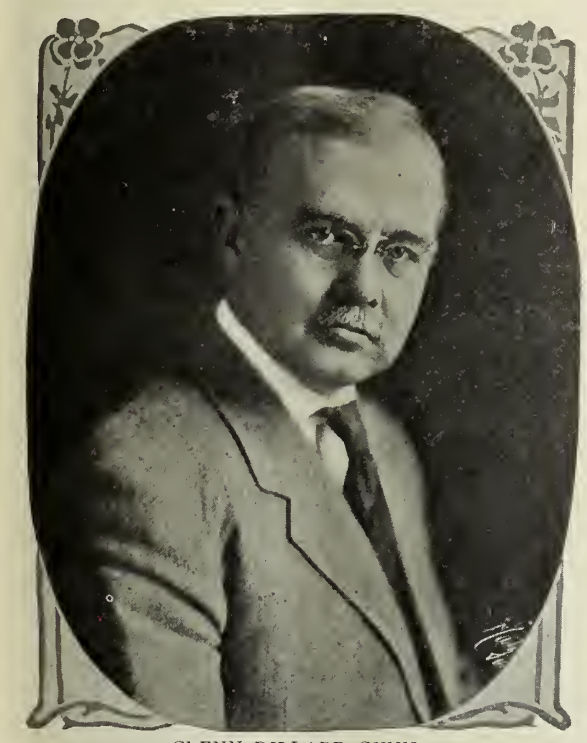
At the conference with principals of vacation playgrounds, held Saturday, August 1, Dr. Edward W. Stitt, superintendent of vacation schools and playgrounds, advised that the use of ragtime, whether as solo or chorus, be avoided.

The following songs were approved for singing in the playgrounds: "Annie Laurie," "Auld Lang Syne," "Old Oaken Bucket," "Home, Sweet Home," "Old Folks at Home," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Last Rose of Summer," "My Bonnie," "Old Black Joe," "Loch Lomond," "Sweet and Low," "Upidee," "Jingle Bells," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," "Juanita," "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," "Santa Lucia," "Arrow and Song," "Love's Old Sweet Song," "Robin Adair," "Slumber Boat," "America," "Star Spangled Banner," ,'Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," "Dixie" and "My Maryland."

James Liebling in Falmouth.

James Liebling, the cellist, who sailed on the Prinz Adalbert from Philadelphia, bound for Germany, where he intended to fill concert engagements next fall, is in Falmouth, England, the Prinz Adalbert having been turned aside by British cruisers and forced into an English port, where she is a prize of war. Mr. Liebling will proceed to London and thence return to America as soon as he can secure passage.

Vittorino Moratti Takes Vacation.



The distinguished singing teacher, Vittorino Moratti, of Berlin, is summering at the seashore. During his absence his affairs are being attended to by G. C. Weitzel at the Moratti studio, Motz strasse 53, Berlin, W., and all communications can be addressed to him until the latter part of August. Mr. Weitzel, like Moratti, was a pupil of the late G. B. Lamperti.

The Casino at Evian, Switzerland, employs a fine orchestra and the programs, which contain selections of the best class of music, are posted daily in all the hotels on the nearby lakes. Large audiences are in attendance.

Glenn Dillard Gunn's Artist-Pupils.

An interesting figure in the musical life of Chicago is Glenn Dillard Gunn, whose service to the art has been varied. As a pianist he has been heard in recital throughout the territory tributary to Chicago, also as soloist with many of the important orchestras. As a lecturer upon musical subjects his services have been in equal demand. For thirteen years Mr. Gunn has been one of the influential critics of the country, having served the Chicago Journal, the Chicago Inter Ocean and the Chicago Tribune as musical editor, retiring from the last named position this summer after five years of service.

Mr. Gunn made his debut as conductor of orchestra last season, when he gave two programs with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra devoted to American music. Such was the interest of the public that Orchestra Hall was sold out for both events, and he is able to announce a series of three concerts with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra for the coming season, which will be devoted to the encouragement of the American composers and the resident executive artists of Chicago.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN.

But it is as a teacher of artists that Mr. Gunn has made the most brilliant and enduring record. The following young pianists have gone forth from his studios in the Fine Arts Building during the past ten years, to win distinguished recognition in the concert halls of the country:

Sarah Suttle, who has studied with Mr. Gunn for the past nine years, has assisted Mme. Schumann-Heink as soloist on two tours; has appeared twice as soloist in the Campanini Sunday concerts given in the Chicago Auditorium by the forces of the Chicago Opera; has been heard with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra under Arthur Dunham and Glenn Dillard Gunn; with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and the Chicago Philharmonic Orchestra.

Moses Boguslawski, director of the piano department of the Kansas City Conservatory, prepared for that position with three years' study under Mr. Gunn, having previously studied two years with Rudolph Ganz. His talents and attainments are winning him a brilliant position among American pianists.

Prudence Neff, whose entire training has been received in Mr. Gunn's studios, is well established among Chicago pianists. She played the brilliant piano concerto by Felix Borowski for the first time at the second of Mr. Gunn's American concerts with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra last season; has been heard as soloist with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, the Russian Symphony Orchestra, and gained especial recognition as an ensemble player with such artists as Hugo Heermann, Ludwig Becker, Robert Ambrosius and the Felbers, father and son.

Mae Doelling was chosen to represent Chicago pianists at the biennial convention of the National Federation of Musical Clubs, held in Chicago, May, 1913. She was heard as soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in the first of Mr. Gunn's American programs last season. She has studied with John J. Hattstaedt, in Dresden, and with Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler. For the past three years she has coached with Mr. Gunn.

Martin Bruhl, who has done all his serious study in the Gunn studios, played 125 concerts last season, many of them return engagements, and is booked for a similar number next year.

Helen Desmond made her debut during the season 1912-13, playing the Saint-Saëns G minor concerto with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Gunn conducting. She is booked for 100 recitals for the coming season.

Belle Tannenbaum made her debut during the season 1912-13 with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Gunn conducting. She has supplemented her success with two recitals in the Fine Arts Theatre, winning enviable recognition from the Chicago press.

Mary Anderson was another successful debutante of the season 1912-13. After an admirably played recital in the Fine Arts Theatre, she was engaged for sixty concerts with the famous Paulist Choristers, of Chicago, an engagement which was renewed last season.

Among the successful students of former years may be mentioned: Edwin Schneider, accompanist to Mme. Gadski and John McCormack, and Charles Lurvey, accompanist to George Hamlin and assistant conductor of the Chicago Opera.

Mr. Gunn was born in Topeka, Kan., in 1874. He was educated chiefly in Leipsic, where he enjoyed a scholarship at the conservatory for five years and for three years was assistant to Prof. Robert Teichmuller. He went to Chicago in 1899 at the invitation of John J. Hattstaedt, president of the American Conservatory of Music. In 1901 he joined the faculty of the Chicago Musical College and was appointed lecturer in music of the University of Chicago extension. The latter position he still holds.

Mme. Hudson-Alexander Visits Cleveland.

Although certain snapshots which Mme. Hudson-Alexander has sent recently to her friends might lead some to infer that the soprano is summering in Africa, the fact remains that the pictures were taken in the Zoo, at Euclid Beach Park, near Cleveland, Ohio, where the singer is visiting relatives. It is the ostriches in which Mme. Hudson-Alexander is especially interested, and she has visited them on several occasions, not only for photographic purposes but to study the habits of the birds. For this purpose the keepers have extended special privileges to the singer.

MME. HUDSON-ALEXANDER VISITING THE OSTRICHES IN THE ZOO, NEAR CLEVELAND.

Mme. Hudson-Alexander's plans for next season include a long period of concertizing under the management of Loudon Charlton.

Key's Works.

[From the Newark, N. J., Star.]

"Did the author of 'The Star Spangled Banner' write any other poems? S. T. H."

The author of the celebrated song was Francis Scott Key, of Maryland, and he wrote quite a number of poems, which were collected and published in book form in 1857. He was the author of several sacred hymns, including the national Thanksgiving hymn, beginning "Before the Lord We Bow." This was written for the Fourth of July, 1832. He also wrote the hymns beginning, "Lord With Glowing Heart I'll Praise Thee," and "When Troubles, Wave on Wave, Assailed," and others. He died in 1843, while United States District Attorney at Washington. He should not be confounded with Philip Barton Key, who also became district attorney of Washington, and was killed in 1859.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
KUFSTEINER, ST. 6 BERLIN W., GERMANY

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 18

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher. Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent. For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

RUDOLF BERGER
FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

VAN YORX
THEO. ——— Tenor
Will teach throughout the Summer
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

BISPHAM
SEASON 1914-1915
For terms and dates apply to all managers
Personal Address
44 W. 44th Street - New York

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

WHITEHILL
BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera
Management:
THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
For Terms and Dates Address LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 West 34th Street, New York

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"He (Borwick) has won a popularity greater and sounder than that of any pianist who has visited these shores."—Melbourne Argus.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

WICHITA NOTES.

Wichita, Kan., August 1, 1914.

The present season here demands only music "con calore," and in consequence little of it (music) is in evidence. The major part of the musicians' activities is now focused on picnics, a few brave summer private musicales, and in quiet contemplation and laying plans for next season's opening work. Wichita has enabled Otto H. Tiede, of Kansas City, to publish a fine musicians' directory, the first ever gotten out. It shows a total of seventy-four piano teachers, which the Beacon blandly comments on as "not nearly so many, judging from the practice heard in every section of the city, as one would think we had." The directory, however, shows the local music colony to be amply large, a generous percentage of the teachers being of foreign and also highly acceptable American training, not a few with enviable reputations and, withal, a list of real live musicians, who have gradually forced Wichita to an acknowledged and forceful position in this part of the musical firmament. Not a few loudly heralded musicians have come (and gone), finding that competition with artists of established reputation and ample ability to back that reputation up, was too strong. The "weeding out" process has virtually passed, the ranks are well filled. It is again "the survival of the fittest."

The chautauqua season is on. Redpath-Horner circuit is furnishing the talent for Wichita. Surrounding towns, Wellington, Belle Plaine, Arkansas City, and Winfield, with its long established assembly, have been carrying on the work. Carrie Jacobs-Bond was the musical attraction at Winfield on July 19, the final day, and she gave one of her inimitable recitals of her own works, both songs and unaccompanied verses.

Bruno Kuehn, formerly at the first desk of the second violins of the Thomas Orchestra, and his company, was also an attraction on this course.

Louise Stevens, for four years head of the expression department in Wichita College of Music, resigned, and has returned to Chicago. She plans to study at the American Academy of Fine Arts in New York City next year.

Otto L. Fischer, head of the piano department of the W. C. of M., has gone to New York for his annual summer visit at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Brokaw leave this week for Chicago and points up the lake region. They return about September 1 for next year's work at Powers-Myers Conservatory.

The success of the reciprocity day program given by the Wichita Musical Club, the final program for this season, was so great that a similar program is to be given early in the fall, with only works by local composers. The following was the program presented, all the numbers except the cantata, being compositions by local musicians:

Ave Maria.....Mrs. Laura Dye Carpenter
In Springtime.....Mrs. Laura Dye Carpenter
(For violin and piano.)
Gordon Bradt and Margaret Bradt.
Absence.....Mrs. E. Higginson
A Mountain Vigil.....Robt. H. Just Marcia G. Higginson, soprano.
Humoresque (for piano).....Simon Buchalter
Baird Hamilton.
When Thou Art Near.....Mrs. Fode Stanley-Hatton
In My Garden.....Mrs. Fode Stanley-Hatton
Sing Good-Morrow.....Mrs. Fode Stanley-Hatton
Zelma Fisher, soprano.
Improvisation (for piano).....T. L. Krebs
T. L. Krebs.
Last Night and This.....Mrs. Laura Dye Carpenter
If You Were Mine.....Mrs. Laura Dye Carpenter
Florence Cubborn, soprano.
Song of Spring (cantata for women's voices).....Carl Busch
Wichita Musical Club.

Both Mr. Just and Simon Buchhalter were former Wichita musicians.

Jessie Clark, supervisor of music in the public schools of Wichita, has been in St. Paul and Minneapolis attending the National Teachers' Association meeting. She will spend the summer vacation with Leida Mills, of Portland, Ore., at some of the Minnesota resorts.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Ades are studying in Chicago this summer, having recently made the trip by automobile.

A midsummer musicale was given by Mrs. E. Higginson at her home on Seneca avenue, July 15. The program was given by Marcia Higginson, soprano; Miss Bradt, pianist, and Deane Moon, tenor. Miss Higginson sang the aria from "The Pearl Fishers," by Bizet, and a group of songs, "My Heart is in Bloom," by Brahms, and two modern songs. Her encores were written by Mrs. Higginson. Miss Bradt played Liebling's "Feu Follett," Stojowski's "Prelude," and a tocatta by Bojardi. Mr. Moon gave songs by Huhn, Liza Lehmann and Strauss, and was also heard with Miss Higginson in "Barcarolle," by Chamina.

The Country Club is giving programs every Friday morning, the numbers being largely by local amateur talent.

Mildred Nelson, a graduate in the certificate class in voice at the Power-Myers Conservatory, is studying with Mr. Clippinger's normal class in Chicago this summer. She will remain all summer taking regular voice work after the completion of the regular normal course.

RALPH BROKAW

Is the Concert Field Worth While?

"Indeed it is," emphatically answered Oscar Seagle when the above question was put to him. "I do not mean worth while in a money sense, though it is remunerative when artists are sincere concert artists. Notice that I say concert artists. The average opera singer is out of his element on the concert stage, and the public is slowly coming to a realization of this fact. In all that it means the concert is much more worth while than the opera field.

"Consider a well balanced program, and any of the outstanding operas. The singer may choose masterpiece after masterpiece from both old and new songs—yes, there are masterpieces among the modern ones; no matter how high his ideals, how wide his range of interest, he will find something to meet it. That something may be a mood or a story, but it will be complete in itself, and in order to present it directly to the public, every phase of the art of singing is called into play. Consider the contrasts, the climaxes, the refinements, the remarkable variety possible in a program arranged by an artist.

"On the other hand, opera never can attain the uniform excellence of a well constructed program. Dull spots are inevitable, and a singer must sacrifice his artistic feelings dozens of times in order to fill in between well constructed numbers that give the singer an opportunity to reveal himself—not display his voice, not merely satisfy his desire for the limelight, but truly to satisfy his desire to interpret great music. The broader vocal treatment necessary in opera is only one of the requirements for the concert stage, as the failure of opera singers in concert has proved, also the reinforcement of action and scenery habituates the singer to assistance he is lost without in recital. It is an artistic satisfaction to create a mood or scene alone, and there is no question that such satisfaction can be the result only of training to that end.

OSCAR SEAGLE, THE AMERICAN BARITONE, ON THE DOORSTEPS OF HIS SUMMER HOME, "THE NEW HOUSE," SUSSEX, ENGLAND.

"The public is learning this fact. There is more and more satisfaction in a fine program. There is a feeling on the part of persons who are interested only in a small way that it is a hardship to listen to one person a whole evening, but the genuine growth in music is causing the public to lost sight of the 'one person' and to look for its enjoyment in the music—to look for it in the same place the artist finds his satisfaction."

PART OF THE AMERICAN COLONY WITH OSCAR SEAGLE IN SUSSEX, ENGLAND, ON A TRIP TO ARUNDEL CASTLE.

Cincinnati College of Music.

The College of Music of Cincinnati has just issued its catalogue and prospectus for the thirty-seventh academic year, beginning September 3. The book is well prepared and bears a handsomely embossed cover, the pages being printed on a rich cameo tint. The various departments are set forth in a concise and authoritative way, while the advantages are described with becoming dignity. Especially noticeable is the fact that the list of certificate students in the last academic year was the largest in nineteen years. New halftones and up to date press notices of the recent artist series feature the publicity of the faculty. The executive committee of the board of trustees, consisting of Julius Fleischmann, president; L. A. Ault, vice-president; J. G. Schmidlapp, treasurer; Adolph Klein, secretary, and Frank R. Ellis, member, remain the same.

Three new artists appear in the faculty, in Emil Heermann, the eminent concertmaster of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, added to the violin department; Walter Gilewicz, the celebrated pianist, and Hans Schroeder, a noted German lieder singer and former operatic star, who will be added to the vocal corps. The clerical committee includes Revs. John F. Herget, F. L. Dorn, Hugo Eisenlohr, George A. Thayer, Charles E. Schenck, David McKinney, Louis G. Hoeck, Father A. Hemmersbach and Rabbi David Phillipson. Two new departments have also been announced, one for the teaching of the progressive series, which is a standardization of piano teaching indorsed by some of the world's leading pianistic masters, and a department for the practical training of piano teachers. The latter will be under the instruction of Albino Gorno, principal of the piano department and dean of the institution.

September 3 the College of Music will open its doors to what it is earnestly hoped will be another of its years of brilliant artistic activity. Plans already are afoot for another performance late in the fall of some standard work by the Springer Opera Club. Many encomiums were showered upon the student organization and its directors by the patrons of the notable presentation of "The Tales of Hoffmann," so that even greater acheivements are confidently expected. Walter Vaughan, Gretchen Morris and several other of the young singers whose talents were so illuminatingly displayed are expected by their teachers to return for further development, and music lovers may well expect another delightful presentation of the artistic efforts of locally trained talent calculated to offer infinite pleasure. The strides that have been made by the College Opera Club have been such as to excite keen admiration from its patrons and adds to the sanguine hopes held by loyal Cincinnatians that this is the city in which grand opera in English will receive encouragement and impetus for everlasting triumphs.

Arthur Burton Is a Busy Teacher.

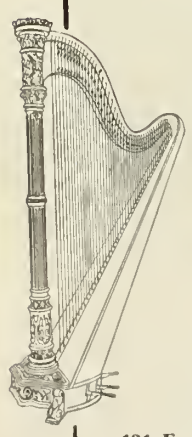
Arthur Burton, the well known vocal teacher of Chicago, will be out of town all during the month of August, taking

Photo by Dana Hull, Chicago.
ARTHUR BURTON.

a well needed rest. Mr. Burton has had a most successful season and the prospects for the coming season look very good. He will return to Chicago about the first week in September and will open his studio in the Fine Arts Building on September 8.

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKING
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED



MME. MARIE
RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

GEORGE
DOSTAL
DISTINGUISHED BOHEMIAN TENOR
First American Concert Tour Season 1914-1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, NEW YORK

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF
The Russian Violinist
In America 1914-15
Management
JOHANNA SHERRICK
Room 1007 200 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
DANIEL MAYER, London

Mabel McKinley
SOPRANO

Pupil of
ISADORE LUCKSTONE
Concert Recital
Oratorio
For open dates and other information, address
The Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

—"Such purity of tone has never before been attained."
So writes Zamara, acknowledged Greatest Living Harpist—of the WURLITZER
HARP

"Marvelous in Tone, Majestic in Appearance," says Marthage, Harpist of Sousa's Band.
The Wurlitzer Harp has the only spruce veneered Sounding Board, which gives it a pure, liquid, velvety tone all its own. Write for beautiful booklet.
THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY
121 E. FOURTH STREET, CINCINNATI, OHIO
Chicago - - 329-331 S. Wabash Street
New York - - 113-119 W. 40th Street

A. Buzzi-Peccia Abroad.

The eminent vocal teacher and composer, Signor A. Buzzi-Peccia, has arrived in Europe after a very brilliant artistic season in New York, to spend his summer vacation on the Lago Maggiore. M. Buzzi-Peccia is the teacher of many prominent artists. Alma Gluck, the famous American soprano, and Sophy Braslau, the successful young contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, are his last pupils before the public. Cecil Hart, a pupil with a beautiful mezzo soprano voice and with a very promising artistic future in grand opera; Clara Davis and Madge Me sler are all with him during the summer continuing their vocal study.

CECIL HART.

MR. BUZZI-PECCIA AND MAESTRO GIORDANO AT HIS VILLA FEDORA ON LAGO MAGGIORE DISCUSSING MME. SANS GENE.

Mr. Buzzi-Peccia is living at the Hotel des Iles Borromées, where he will remain until about September 20. On his way to Stresa he stopped in Milan on a visit to his personal friends Puccini, Giordano, Ricordi, Toscanini, Caruso and many other prominent artists.

MR. BUZZI-PECCIA AND MISS SOPHY BRASLAU, THE SUCCESSFUL YOUNG CONTRALTO OF THE METROPOLITAN.

Mr. Buzzi-Peccia will devote his time during the summer to composing a new opera, some songs and a symphonic poem. He expects to resume his teaching in New York at his studio, 33 West Sixty-seventh street, about the first week in October.

Our National Hymn?

Germans who can't get home are parading the streets of American cities singing "Die Wacht am Rhein." If Americans in German cities are doing any parading and singing their favorite air is probably "Home, Sweet Home."—Newark (N. J.) Star.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

Mme. GUERCIAS
OPERATIC SOPRANO
Spanish, Russian, French, German, Italian
AT PRESENT IN EUROPE
SEASON 1914-1915 IN AMERICA

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
after six years of operatic successes in Europe, will return to this country in September for Concert and Oratorio Engagements. :: :: :: :: ::
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

Three years with the late Putnam Griswold.
Former accompanist for Jadlowker of Berlin Royal Opera.
At present with Orville Harrold and George Dostal.
EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST and COACH
Address: 217 East 71st Street, New York City
Telephone 923 Lenox

MADAME
Artha Williston
Dramatic Soprano

First appearance this season at the Maine Music Festivals in October, singing Elijah
Management:
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

The Famous Prima Donna of the Paris Grand Opera
MLLE. ALICE VERLET
"With the exception of Mmes. Patti and Melba, no voice of exactly the same quality has been in this country for a long period. . . ."
—London Morning Post, March 22, 1909.
Will Tour the Season 1914-15 in U.S.A. and Canada and is now being booked for Concerts and Recitals.
By Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave. New York!

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG
Summer Course for Teachers, Amateurs and Professionals by these famous artists. TORONTO, CANADA.

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapolis, Minn.

The MEHAN Summer School for Teachers and Singers
July 7—Aug. 15. Appointments By Mail
Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 15
SUITE 70, CARNEGIE HALL, TEL. 5946 COLUMBUS

The Eminent Austrian Pianist
MME. MARIE VON UNSCHULD
Piano Recitals and Lectures on Technic by Motion Pictures
EUROPEAN CONCERT BUREAU, 1320 F St., Washington, D. C.

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
CELEBRATED IRISH TENOR
In America Entire Season 1914-15
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Personal Management: CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

Protest Against Lemare.

The Society of American Musicians has issued the following circular:

"Whereas, It has come to the knowledge of the Society of American Musicians that there is to be held in the city of San Francisco in the year 1915 an exhibition called 'the Panama-Pacific Exposition'; that in its many exhibits of American products there is to be a magnificent organ built by American builders, and that many concerts and recitals are to be given thereon; and,

"Whereas, The director of Liberal Arts has appointed to the post of director of music at this exposition an American, George W. Stewart, who has taken full charge thereof and appointed a foreign artist to give a large number of recitals thereon, virtually making him official organist of the exposition; and,

"Whereas, America can and does boast of a large number of talented and distinguished organists who would fill this place with honor; and,

"Whereas, This exposition is to celebrate the completion of a great American undertaking, the Panama Canal, we believe that in so far as possible Americans should have full charge of American exhibits; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we, the Society of American Musicians, do hereby protest against the appointment of a foreign artist to the position of official organist of this exposition, and that we use all honorable means to bring this matter to the attention of the proper authorities, appeal to their loyalty, patriotism and reason, that the action of Mr. Stewart be rescinded and that one of our own illustrious American organists be selected for this post; and be it further

"Resolved, That we call on all loyal and patriotic Americans for their support in this matter.

"Society of American Musicians,
"WALTER SPRY, President.
"WILLIAM BEARD, Secretary and Treasurer.

"Walter Spry, George Nelson Holt, Glenn D. Gunn, William Beard, Allen Spencer, Board of Directors."

On Board the Venezia.

The accompanying snapshot was taken on board the steamship Venezia a couple of weeks ago, when that boat was bound for Naples. It shows, from left to right, the captain of the Venezia, Mrs. Sametini and Leon Sametini, the well known violinist and head of the violin department at the Chicago Musical College. Mr. Sametini is dressed as an officer and is standing right behind the gun and carrying a long distance telescope.

THE SAMETINIS AND THE CAPTAIN EN ROUTE TO NAPLES.

Mr. Sametini will be back in America early in September, when he will resume his teaching at the Chicago Musical College and will also appear in many cities in recital. His tour is now being booked by Alma Voedisch, of Chicago.

Another Engagement for Horatio Connell.

Horatio Connell has been engaged for the fourth consecutive season to appear with the Philadelphia Orchestra, March 5 and 6. He will sing the bass role in Gustav Mahler's symphony and this occasion will be the symphony's first performance in America. For this event the orchestra will be increased to 125 musicians and will be augmented by a chorus of 1,000 voices.

Steinway

MASTER musicians, past and present, have achieved their greatest successes upon Steinway Pianos.

The Steinway of half a century ago was the preferred instrument of the "maestro," because of its mechanical perfection and its melodious sweetness, sonority and power of tone.

The Steinway of today is an even greater musical marvel—and every Steinway Piano is a Steinway in all the attributes implied by that name.

The name of the Steinway dealer nearest you, together with illustrated literature, will be sent upon request.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
Subway Express Station at the Door.

EDYTH WALKER

(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)

Dramatic Soprano

Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.

Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

The Sensation of the Year

CARL

FLESCH

The Great Hungarian Violinist

Second American Tour
January and February, 1915

Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE

SOPRANO

Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.

"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914

American Tour, March-May, 1915

OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English

Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

EFREM

ZIMBALIST

Celebrated Violinist

— Will return to —
AMERICA
Season 1914-1915

For Terms and Dates available
Apply
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th St., New York

STEINWAY PIANO

WASHINGTON MUSICIANS ARE PREPARING FOR ACTIVE SEASON.

The Summer Months Are Being Employed to Good Purpose—Personal Mention.

The Roydon Apartment,
Washington, D. C., July 31, 1914.

This week a music critic reports that the musicians remaining in town have settled into the "usual midsummer lethargy." If this same critic will study the situation closely she will find that the musicians who are remaining in town are very busy preparing for the fall and winter opera, concert tours, recitals, etc. One singer is working up songs for talking machine records.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING.

Up on the "hill" is Alice Eversman and her friend, Yelena von Sayn, preparing for a "Pan-American tour," to include Canada, the United States, Central and South America, a tour that is practically booked. These two remarkable women, Alice Eversman, prima donna of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, Montreal Opera Company, Grand Ducal Opera, Karlsruhe, and now engaged for appearances with the Century Opera Company, of New York, and Yelena von Sayn, violin virtuosa and considered by some Russia's foremost woman violinist, are living quietly here in Washington during the summer and working out a series of interesting and unusual concert recitals, which will be given from coast to coast during the coming season. Apropos the remark made to the writer by a young Washington voice student, to the effect that she "would not study with a teacher who kept her on tone work," Miss Eversman studied for three years just that very thing, which accounts for her well placed and equalized voice.

Then there is Gretchen Hood, whom some seem to think quite satisfied with her triumph this spring with the Aborn Opera Company. As a matter of fact, Miss Hood is deep in study under her teacher, Mrs. Goodhue, and if she follows the latter's advice will surely "arrive." Managers are keenly alert for good material, and Miss Hood has the satisfaction of knowing that her services are sought by some of the best in the country.

Marie von Unschuld is another musician seldom without opportunity to reveal her energy. After a tour of the West and Middle West this spring she has of late been heard in piano recital at Trinity College; she also gave her illustrated lecture with the assistance of her five year old daughter, Madelene, before the summer school for sisters at Trinity College. Mme. von Unschuld is now on a recital tour in Ohio and bookings are rapidly being made for the coming winter.

As for Helen Donohue DeYo, Washington's ever popular soprano, the constant demand for her services keeps right up throughout the summer. Mrs. De Yo's second recital at Hollins College, Hollins, Va., in May, resulted in a repetition of the enthusiasm and triumph occasioned by her first appearance. The Hollins Magazine has this to say of Mrs. DeYo's recital:

The recital of Helen Donohoe De Yo, on Wednesday, May 13, was a double pleasure to all members of the Hollins community who had heard this gifted singer here just one year ago. For, in addition to the immediate pleasure of hearing a naturally beautiful soprano voice, backed by temperament and magnetic stage presence, we had the satisfaction of noting the growth of an artist who is also a conscientious worker and student. Mrs. De Yo showed marked improvement in concentration and brilliance of tone, and in a certain richness and maturity of style. She has lost, however, none of the qualities which made her former recital such a delight to her audience here and in Roanoke. The following interesting program was given:

Vissi d'arte	Puccini
Widmung	Schumann
Ich grolle Nicht	Schumann
Im Mai	Schumann
Die Nacht	Strauss
Die Lorelei	Liszt
Adieu, Forets	Tschaikowsky
Romance	Debussy
Last Night I Heard the Nightingale	Salter
Soft-footed Snow	Sigurd Lie
A Spirit Flower	Campbell-Tipton
Unmindful of the Roses	Schneider
The Fairy Pipers	Brewer

Franceska Kaspar-Lawson is summering at the lovely home of her father, in the Blue Ridge, and getting in form for the winter's work, which, in her case, is a long list of new and reengagements for concerts and recitals. A fundamental principle of interpretation is to "sing mentally between rests," and this is what Mrs. Lawson does, the "rest" being between seasons. One has only to know the Kaspar-Lawson family to realize that there is a "musical atmosphere" right here in America. This is a clever family of travel, culture and unity of purpose.

Mildred Rider, a young teacher and constant student of the piano, is now in Boston for the summer. Miss Rider has studied the "Fletcher Method" in Boston and wonderful results have been obtained by her with her large class of young pupils.

Grace Mabel Cramer, soprano, and a pupil of Mary Cryder, made her debut as a public singer last week at

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist

SPALDING

Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST

Steinway Piano

THOMAS J. KELLY

Conductor Mendelssohn Choir.
VOCAL COACH
Lecture Recitals with Mrs. Kelly.
209 SOUTH 35th AVE., OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO

Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO

Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.

VOCAL STUDIO . 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller

VIOLINIST

In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING

Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC

128-130 East 58th Street

CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE

The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro violin.

CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR

SHATTUCK

The Distinguished American

PIANIST

In America Season 1914-15

Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

Steinway Piano Used

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN. 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street, New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-1915
Management: ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA
Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus
"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone, Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st. St., NEW YORK

a concert given in the Vienna Opera House. Two soloists from Baltimore assisted.

Mrs. Warner Gibbs, a well known and reliable singer of Washington, sails August 1 (if the war does not prevent) for Europe and will study in Paris while visiting friends near there.

The declared intention of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Torney Simon was to remain in Washington during the summer, but ill health of Mrs. Simon caused them to change their plans, and they sailed for Europe on the steamship Oskar II for Copenhagen, there to be the guests of an old friend, Sir Asgar Hamerik.

Elizabeth Reeside returns next week from Paris and other European cities, where she has appeared in opera and studied. Her appearance with the Boston Opera Company in Paris has caused comment, and Miss Reeside, after the season, studied with Oscar Seagle at his home, and from her mother, Mrs. Howard Reeside, the writer learns that a joint concert tour of the United States will be made by Miss Reeside and Mr. Seagle early this fall.

DEATH OF MRS. WILLIAM BRUCE KING.

Washington has suffered greatly this summer and spring through loss by death of several prominent musicians. The passing of Mrs. William Bruce King takes from our midst a woman of wide musical culture and experience and the effect will be far reaching, as Mrs. King was identified with the best music clubs and societies of the city. Mrs. King was formerly Edith E. Gilbert, of New York State. The services, which were held in the beautiful music room of the King home, on Nineteenth street, were most affecting and were opened by a violin solo by Roberta Allen, now musical director of the Friday Morning Music Club, who played Handel's "Largo" very beautifully. After the prayer by Rev. Dr. Pierce, Mrs. Lawson (nee Kaspar), an active member of the Friday Morning Club and an old personal friend of Mrs. King, sang "Come Unto Him," from "The Messiah," with exquisite purity and simplicity. Mrs. Henry A. Robbins (nee McCallum), treasurer of the Friday Morning Club for many years, accompanied Miss Allen and Mrs. Lawson. Many of Mrs. King's friends and summer neighbors at Bluemont came down to pay the last tribute to her. DICK ROOT.

Sickesz a Brilliant Pianist.

Jan Sickesz, the Dutch pianist, whose American tour is being awaited with keen interest, comes to this country heralded as one of the leading artists of the day. When only eighteen years of age, he won the first prize at the Royal Conservatory, Amsterdam. In Vienna, Sickesz devoted himself to a thorough training under the direction of Leschetizky. Since then he has been received enthusiastically in the leading cities of Holland, Sweden and Germany, and on numerous occasions has delighted members of the royal family of Austria by his brilliant playing. Sickesz scored a remarkable success at the concert with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra. The young virtuoso received tremendous applause after his rendition of the Saint Saëns concerto. He responded generously to many encores. His highly developed technic allows the combination of delicacy and poetic charm of interpretation without loss of fire and brilliancy.

If Not, Why Not?

Grand Hotel, Catskill Mts., N. Y., August 4, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

In the issue of the MUSICAL COURIER of July 29, I note that there is an article about Mme. Hassler-Fox, the American contralto, who appeared as soloist at one of my concerts at the Grand Hotel, Highmount, N. Y. In perusing said article I noted that I was designated as being assistant conductor of the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra. Permit me to state that I have not received that high honor, being only a humble member of the orchestra of the said opera house. I do not want an erroneous statement such as was published to go uncorrected, hence I would thank you if you would print this letter or the résumé thereof.

Very truly yours, SOL. ZAVELEFF.

Hamlin to Become a Pinkerton.

During the month of July, George Hamlin, tenor of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, appeared at Cortina, in the Austrian Tyrol, Munich, Nuremburg and Rothenberg. At present he is in Italy studying the role of Pinkerton in "Madame Butterfly," which he is to sing in German, in Berlin.

A Miller-Hamlin Recital.

Christine Miller, the contralto, and George Hamlin, tenor, are announced for a joint recital in Aeolian Hall early in February.

SOUSA AND HIS BAND
"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"
Office: 1 West 34th Street
Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH
CONCERT VIOLINIST
Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS
Hens Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory and is assisted by an able corps of teachers. Beadetson Nutzorg has also been added to the Conservatory faculty. For catalog address
MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO
Concert-Recital-Oratorio
Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN
America's Violinist
Season 1914-1915 Now Booking
Address:
THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York
Phone Murray Hill, 2239

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER
Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARY DENNISON GAILEY
VIOLINIST
Address, Russell Bridges, Empire Life Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Yolanda MERÖ Hungarian Pianist
STEINWAY PIANO USED
Under the exclusive management of CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, New York City

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.
Assisted by Gutia Casini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist
SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City
Baldwin Piano Used

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano
SARA HEINEMAN
Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume
In Europe During Summer
Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Baroness Evans
Von KLENNER
America's Representative of the
GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD
Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.
Tradition. Languages. Repertoire. Diction. Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY
of NEW YORK
1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915
JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor
SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.
TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South
Prospectus on application to
FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street, New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
Address for the Summer
29 Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, N. J.
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
— TENOR —
Akron - - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 W. 67th St. Tel.: Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
133 West 80th St. Tel. Schuyler 3786 New York City
Mr. Regneas will teach but 3 days weekly during July and August.
No interviews granted excepting by appointment.

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

Max Pauer's London Recitals.

The four recitals given in London this season by the distinguished pianist, Max Pauer, prove him to be among the few pianists who receive unanimous praise from press and public alike. His playing displays remarkable pianism from many points of view. He presents his interpretations in a manner invariably attractive to the connoisseur as well as to those of a less exacting sense of appreciation, for added to his deep musical feeling is a finely balanced sense of the intellectual and the beautiful expressed, through a wonderful command of technical resources, which latter accomplishment, however, is never allowed to become the sine qua non of anything he does. The following excerpts from the London press may be interesting reading to his many admirers:

Mr. Pauer's fine gifts and splendid technical powers were utilized to the full in admirable performances of Schubert's "Wanderer" fantasia and Beethoven's C minor variations.—The Observer, June 7, 1914.

The same estimable qualities were to be noticed in Max Pauer's playing at Bechstein Hall yesterday afternoon that have been so conspicuous upon previous occasions—that is to say, virility and tremendous power, much beauty of tone, and, above all, a sense of bigness generally. He can roar like a lion and coo like a dove, but his roaring is not purely physical, nor does his cooing become the monotonous exercise some make it.

His dynamic outbursts are the outcome of a dominating personality rather than a desire to astonish. He hit the piano some cruel blows in Schubert's "Wanderer" fantasie, but the effect of them was always logical, and seldom, if ever, unmusical. Peculiarity is often mistaken for individuality, and there was much in the reading of the work which struck us as new, not to say strange, but at no time did we feel inclined to deny the player the possession of big ideas and a no less big habit of expression. Other good things were Beethoven's variations in C minor and smaller pieces by Brahms, Reger, Rubinstein, etc.—The Evening Standard, June 7, 1914.

The last of Max Pauer's programs at Bechstein Hall yesterday afternoon gave us a wealth of fine works finely played. Beethoven's thirty-two variations in C minor becomes a wonderful piece of expression under his hands; it was alive from the sensitive staccato touch of the early numbers to the torrent of scale passages at the climax. Schubert's "Wanderer" fantasie gave him a great opportunity; to name only one point, the passage leading to the first entrance of the "Wanderer" theme was a remarkable piece of rhythmic control giving the feeling of prescience which led eloquently to the poetic slow movement.

A group of Brahms' pieces was equally interesting, though there were one or two wrong notes at the beginning of the rhapsody in G minor, and a mistake in the harmony of the intermezzo in E flat (op. 117, No. 1) showed that even Mr. Pauer's memory is not impeccable. Reger's variations and fugue on a theme by Bach, one of the finest of his works for the piano, was beautifully played; while one wondered at the strength of the technic in the "Martellato" variations, the clean contrapuntal playing in the fugue which reserved the climax to the last moment was the part which showed the highest musicianship.—The Times, June 6, 1914.

It was satisfactory to note that the attendance at Max Pauer's last piano recital at Bechstein Hall yesterday was better and represented genuine appreciation, since the free list, the usual factor in the size of an audience, was entirely suspended. His program was again of absorbing interest, taking cognizance of all schools of piano writing, from Schubert to Max Reger. The former was represented by his "Wanderer" fantasie, which has never been so convincingly played in recent years. Herr Pauer showed what a great work it is, for he revealed its meaning. Brahms was represented in the scheme by two of the rhapsodies, two of the intermezzi and the C major capriccio. Their interpretation was masterly, not merely in the representation of the rugged spirit, but in the conquest of the technical points in such a way as to show the construction clearly and unmistakably. The beauty of his "una corda" tone in the E flat intermezzo was nothing short of wonderful, more especially in comparison with the volume of tone heard elsewhere. His fine technic and power of displaying the details of the harmonic structure were shown in the Bach variations and fugue of Max Reger, and there were delicacy and charm in the other numbers. Herr Pauer shortly leaves London for a space, but on his return he should, on the ground of his musical as well as technical ability, have no difficulty in taking his place in the esteem of British musicians as the foremost pianist of the day. His reception yesterday was a ready and spontaneous recognition of his powers.—The Morning Post, June 6, 1914.

On two such recent occasions have the praises been sung in these columns of Max Pauer that it would savor of repetition to dwell upon his playing at the recital he gave in Bechstein Hall yesterday afternoon. This was the pianist's third appearance, and it was pleasant to note the presence of a far more numerous audience than on the previous occasion. Beginning with Beethoven's C minor variations, Mr. Pauer's program was confined very largely to the familiar, and not the least impressive performance he gave was that of Schubert's "Wanderer" fantasie—one of those things which only the truly elect among pianists ought ever to play. Clearly such a condition would be no bar to its performance at the hands of Mr. Pauer, and upon it he lavished his fine interpretative gifts and his great technical powers with complete success. His hearers were very enthusiastic.—Daily Telegraph, June 6, 1914.

Rather belatedly London amateurs have woke up to the fact that Prof. Max Pauer is a pianist of high distinction and there was a much larger audience at his third recital at Bechstein Hall on Friday afternoon than at the two which had preceded it. His program included Schubert's "Wanderer" fantasie, and his reading was big in outline and virile and feeling in expression. Beethoven's C minor variations and Max Reger's Bach variations and fugue gave further illustration of his masterly technic and authoritative interpretation. Sunday Times, June 7, 1914.

Max Pauer has set his face against the deadhead system, and as far as could be judged yesterday afternoon at Bechstein Hall, with wholly satisfactory results. In fact, the no pay-no play embargo

FLORYN OPERA PRODUCING CO., Inc.
1482 Broadway, Room 1105
Three Opera Bouffe Co's in repertoire
Applications in writing from Aspirants with good voices and talent will be considered

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 W. 34th St., New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall Professor of Choral Music Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

FLORENCE TRUMBULL
PIANISTE
Vorbereiterin (ASSISTANT) to Theodor Leschetizky
VIII Laudongasse 22 - - - - Vienna, Austria

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

HARRISON WALL JOHNSON
CONCERT PIANIST
Minneapolis

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana
GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULL
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Cla Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachman Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarc Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini ar other well-known singers of Grand Ope or Concerts. Musical Director of t Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teac ing during summer, Monday, Wedne day and Saturday only. Special term
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season f advanced pupils. Write for Circulars

JAN SICKESZ DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

VILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York Paraonal Raprasantative

FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Managamant: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

ILLIAN HERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE. ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
anagement of Miss Annie Friedberg. 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
his last Liederabend met the same unqualified success which at-nded his first recital. There is a radiance and warmth in his istic and intelligent delivery which affects his audience most hap-y.—Der Reichsanzeiger, Berlin.
Concert direction Wolff, Flottwellstr. 1, Berlin.
Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall, New York.
vailable for concerts in America, February to May, 1915

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
For Terms, Dates, etc., Address temporarily, care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtaay of Sanator and Mra W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

MANUEL
QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH
VIOLINIST
erican Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
51 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
ecognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the U.S.

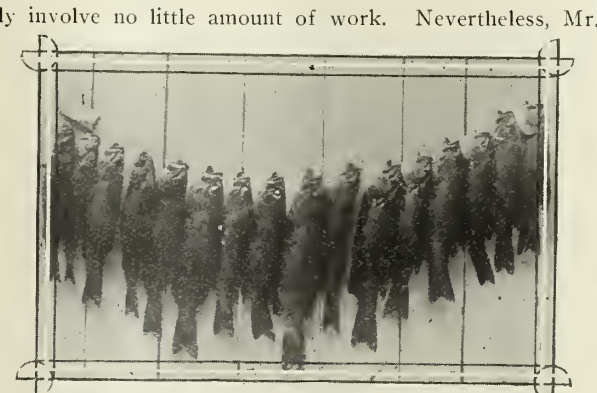
Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Special SUMMER COURSE for Teachers and Professionals. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR, 51 W. 76th St. N. Y.

seemed to have fired the public with the desire to hear Mr. Pauer, and there was a capital audience in consequence.

A remarkably powerful and highly individual performance of Schumann's "Wanderer" fantasie was a feature of the program, Mr. Pauer's playing being tempered as occasion demanded by a rare and charming reticence and great tonal beauty. Vivid as were some of the contrasts, they were never theatrical.

Mr. Pauer has a powerful personality, and he does not seek to suppress it.—Daily Express, June 6, 1914. (Advertisement.)

A Fisherman's Luck.



These are real fish, and all caught by a real fisherman. C. Mortimer Wiske, director for many years of the Paterson, N. J., annual music festival, and recently engaged to direct the music festival to be given at Newark, N. J., next spring, is not only a musician of national repute but is also a sportsman of no little prominence. At his camp in Maine, Mr. Wiske indulges in the numerous outdoor sports that are so common at a place of this sort. Fishing, of course, is his favorite summer pastime and his luck in this line is one of the sensations of this section of Maine.

A MORNING'S CATCH.
Picture taken on the landing in front of C. M. Wiske's camp.

Mr. Wiske is preparing for one of the busiest seasons he has ever encountered. Two music festivals must necessarily involve no little amount of work. Nevertheless, Mr.

A NEARER VIEW OF THE SAME FISH.

Wiske is thoroughly capable of handling even a still larger task, and with the coopcration of the two cities—Newark and Paterson—great things are to be expected next season.

Last Goodman Recital in Von Ende Summer Course

The last Wednesday afternoon recital at the von Ende School's summer course presented Lawrence Goodman in an interesting program which gave him ample opportunity to display his qualities as an artistic performer.

The Bach-Taussig toccata and fugue in D minor were played in a dignified, yet spirited manner, and Chopin's nocturne in D flat and polonaise, op. 53, formed a strikingly beautiful contrast. Schumann's "Warum" and Schumann-Taussig's "Contrabandiste" received a musicianly reading, and the final group, consisting of Olesen's "Butterflies," Sibelius' "Romanza" and the Appassionata etude of Liszt, brought the well attended and warmly appreciated recital to an effective close.

An Arrigo Serato Criticism

The following press criticism has just been received from Milan:

The first concert gave us an opportunity to hear the violinist, Serato, again, accompanied by Busoni. He played that wonderful Beethoven concerto which we heard him play last winter at the Augusteum, and again he was rewarded by clamorous applause and recalls. It was a complete, warm and fully deserved success and confirmed his famé as a violinist gifted with a perfect style and an exceptional mastery of technic and sentiment.—L'Arte Lirica, Milan. (Advertisement.)

John Rebarer's Concert, November 5.

John Rebarer, the well-known concert pianist, and Miss Marie Dentscher will give a joint recital on November 5 at Aeolian Hall, New York.

I am not saying that this "Francesca da Rimini" (Zandonai) is outrageously bad. On the contrary, it is distinguished by a sincerity of purpose and an excellence of technic which are all to the good. But it is none the less irredeemably dull.—London Truth.

THERE is a feeling of absolute security in owning

The
Knabe
The World's Best
Piano

Your interest is safeguarded in every particular. The surpassing excellence of Knabe tone quality, design, durability and workmanship is universally admitted.

KNABE PLAYER-PIANOS
combine all the beauties of Knabe tone with the highest possible efficiency of expression control—in every sense THE WORLD'S BEST.

Representatives throughout the world. Catalogs and information forwarded upon request. New York prices universal with freight and expenses added to outside points.

THE KNABE
The World's Best Piano

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - - New York
Cable address: Pegujar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1914.

No. 1794

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building,
Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 7. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Daveuny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dobbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Brydeu Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Genevc Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Elsenstuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY—
Miss. Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florlanigasse 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza dl Spagna.
BRUSSELS, BELGIUM—
Luella Anderson, 52 rue de l'Ermitage.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

What a concert of the Powers!

David Bispham will sing as a free lance this season in concerts and all-English lecture recitals, which means that all managers will book him, and he is represented by none of them in particular.

Louis Blumenberg, president of the Musical Courier Company, and Mr. and Mrs. John McCormack are in London after many hardships endured during the passage from Ostend, Belgium.

Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, was aboard the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, which was forced to put into port at Bar Harbor, Me., after vainly attempting to cross the Atlantic to Europe.

Antonia Sawyer will present the following artists during the season 1914-15: Julia Culp, Albert Spalding, Katharine Goodson, Emilio de Gogorza, Jan Sickesz, Cordelia Lee, Eleanor Spencer, Helene Koelling, Artha Williston and Angelo Cortese.

A cable received from Otto Goritz, the baritone, by New York friends, requests them to sublet his apartment here and to put his furniture and other belongings in storage, as he is eligible for military service in Germany and expects to be sent to the front.

Pittsburgh has abolished "Dot Leedle Cherman Band" as a street nuisance, beggary and needless noise. It is a step in the right direction, and New York should follow suit by prohibiting itinerant musicians from infesting the thoroughfares and courtyards of the metropolis.

A series of articles running in the New York Tribune and written by its music critic is called "The Last Days of Beethoven." We are afraid that the last days of Beethoven will come quickly if the critic is encouraged to go on, for more unqualified drivel rarely has been published.

Andreas Dippel, lately in Carlsbad, is said to have been drafted into the Austrian army. It is difficult to say in what manner his New York enterprise of giving a season of light opera will be affected. Fritz Kreisler is another musical personage who has been called upon to battle for Emperor Franz Joseph.

An important news item, which was suppressed by the censor and had to be supplied by our imagination in the same way that most war reports are furnished at present, is to the effect that a very popular number on the programs of the transatlantic liners is Mendelssohn's overture, "A Calm Sea and a Prosperous Voyage."

War clouds notwithstanding, Bayreuth announces that it will hold its usual Wagner festival in 1915, and as an additional attraction will break with its old custom of presenting only one other work beside "Parsifal" and the "Ring" cycle. Next summer's "extras" will include "Meistersinger" and "The Flying Dutchman."

About two-thirds of the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are in Europe at the present time. As the absentees nearly all are foreigners it is a serious question as to what would happen in Boston if the missing players are detained abroad until after the war is over. Dr. Muck finds himself in the same predicament as his marooned players. The other American orchestras are not in the same plight as that in Boston, for they employ a large proportion of native and regular resident players.

A cablegram has been received from Dr. William C. Carl, dated August 5, from Switzerland, where he expected to spend the summer, saying he "is very well." It is to be assumed, therefore, that Dr. Carl will finish his vacation in Switzerland, oblivious of the "horrid heads of war" which are raising their grim visages all about the little republic.

For sentimental reasons easily understood a great part of the musical world on this side of the Atlantic sympathizes with Germany and Austria in their present troubles. It is but natural that the lands of Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, Schubert, Haydn, Mozart, Schumann, Weber, Liszt, Gluck, Wagner, should win responsive sympathy from our followers of the tonal muse, especially those who spent their study years in Berlin, Vienna, Munich, Leipsic, etc.

In Chicago announcements crept into the papers to the effect that in France, Germany and Austria singers are exempt from military service and therefore "none of the male foreign singers of the Chicago Grand Opera Company would be compelled to join the flag of his nation." The Chicago dailies published the story in good faith, but evidently did not look into the matter very closely. It is a mistake to say that in the aforementioned countries singers are not required to do military service. They are, and why should they not be? Generally speaking, singers are in very good health, athletic (even if some of them have a little too much avoirdupois), and therefore they must be considered combatants. While it is to be hoped that the European war will not have any effect on the Chicago Opera Company, it is wrong for the papers in that city to print statements which are absolutely misleading. If the announcements were made from the press bureau of the Chicago Opera, the step is even more unwarranted.

The Detroit Orchestral Association and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra are in a flourishing condition for next season and each will give six concerts. It is understood that the executives of the organizations had their hands full to secure the necessary financial guarantees, but their perseverance and energy finally conquered the apathy of the Detroit business and financial representatives. As an instance of the lack of appreciation and culture with which the committee had to deal in some quarters, it need only be mentioned that Henry L. Ford, the multimillionaire automobile manufacturer, refused to contribute to an orchestral fund saying: "I wouldn't give you five cents for all the art in America." That is a dreadful sentiment and one with which many other Detroiters of wealth and refinement certainly are not in accord. It is the Henry L. Fords all over the country—and every city has them—who stand in the way of enabling the larger communities to obtain endowed permanent symphony orchestras. The solidarity of Detroit's musical interests is established, and the proof lies in the fact that Newton J. Corey is manager for the city's two orchestral institutions. However, without the support of the big financial and business interests, Detroit cannot hope to take a place musically with such cities, for instance, as Minneapolis, Cincinnati, St. Louis, San Francisco, St. Paul, etc. The guarantee fund of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra is only $15,000 for the season.

WAR MUSIC

BY

CLARENCE LUCAS

That famous comment made by one of the French generals concerning the charge of the Light Brigade may well be applied to military marches. "C'est magnifique," said the Frenchman, "mais ce n'est pas la guerre":—It is magnificent, but it is not war.

When the band in uniform swings through the streets with banners flying and brazen instruments resplendent in the sun, the feet of boys keep step to the resounding tunes and the dominating rhythm of the drums.

Young men see visions of a holiday parade with sisters, wives and sweethearts waving handkerchiefs, and their companions cheering them as they march home again behind the band with victory on their standards and medals on their breasts.

This is the tale the music tells; this the sentiment the old tunes rouse within the heart. Banners, uniforms, parades and music—these are for piping times of peace when > Grim visaged war hath smoothed his wrinkled front.

But even war itself is often made attractive by the poets. Othello says:

> Farewell the neighing steed and the shrill trump,
> The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
> The royal banner, and all quality,
> Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!

Shakespeare's words have here the spirit of the military march. They are music, and they stimulate the same emotions that the melodies and harmonies of music rouse. But England's greatest soldier, Wellington, had a different version of war. He saw no poetry in it, and he cared nothing at all for military bands and peace parades. The victor of Waterloo wrote in his dispatch: "Nothing except a battle lost can be half so melancholy as a battle won." He knew that when those invisible and leaden messengers of death began to whiz and whistle through the air the awful hour had come for music and festivity to cease.

That grim and terrible tragedy cannot be set to music. The horrors of the battlefield cannot be put on paper for an orchestra. Even the soldier in the firing line can hardly comprehend it; for it seems a kind of waking dream to him in which he does mechanically what he has been trained to do. When a whirring bullet hurtles through his brain or rips his heart apart he drops, and all is over. Victory and defeat are all the same to him. He answers no more the trumpet's summons to duty. And when the battered regiment returns with the proud, high step of conquerors, and the band plays old and familiar airs of home, there will be aching hearts among the cheering throngs, and many a streaming eye will look in vain for faces that are never to be beheld again.

What consolation will a military march bring then?

Or who can write or play the music that will soothe the agony of those who fall with ghastly wounds and lie unaided on the ground, with parched tongue stiff with thirst and every heart-beat thundering in their temples? What symphony can express the unutterable longing for the dear ones far away and for the touch of a gentle hand to ease the intolerable pain and close the staring eyes when the silent stars shall have faded into darkness and the interminable night becomes eternity?

And what do those rollicking songs of the sea amount to when the monster guns begin to bellow and belch their tons of steel? "A life on the ocean wave" is a capital song for sailors on shore. But when the cruiser starts to sink and the dreadnought's magazines blow up even the staunchest mariner may be excused if his manly bosom quivers and his thoughts fly homewards over the briny waves that are soon to be his watery shroud.

The jaunty crew of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pinafore" sing "We sail the ocean blue"—as if the ocean was a sunny lake and men-of-war were excursion steamers. And the concert basso in kid gloves and immaculate white linen sings a smooth ditty about the joys of being "Rocked in the cradle of the deep." His stage valor would quail before a current of air that might endanger the velvet of his larynx. What would he do on the deck of a gunboat smashing through the billows and scudding over the foam, with the hideous death song of machine guns shrieking overhead and the rhythm of exploding shells for a tremendous bass? The sweet voice of music has no place among these jarring sounds. It more becomes the rustic pipe of Tityrus lying in the beech tree's shade and singing of his darling Amaryllis. It may re-echo in the flowery vales of Arcady, but its small voice is silenced in the din of battle.

There is another scene, however, where music is in place.

When the vast cathedral opens its portals to receive the dead who fell in defense of those who stayed at home, the deep and solemn tones of the organ are a fitting requiem of peace and tranquil glory after the riotous discord of the fighting deck and battlefield. But the dead march is for the living to hear, not for those who sleep in their eternal slumber. It may perhaps bring consolation to the mourners and it may make serious those who merely came to see. It cannot thrill again the gallant men who marched away with banners and a band, with loved ones smiling through their tears, and comrades clasping their hands in silence when the last goodbye sticks in their throats.

But the greatest of death marches is a mockery at best.

C'est magnifique, mais ce n'est pas la guerre—it is not war.

AMERICA'S COMING SEASON.

The war clouds which are bursting in Europe and emptying their deadly contents over a terrified population find an answering echo of horror and of sympathy in this country, and musical circles are especially affected both because of the many Americans now abroad and because of the almost certain absence of a number of European artists who were expected to be part of our coming tonal season in this country.

There is no need for alarm, however, either as to the safety of neutrals now in Europe, or on account of conditions to come in our American musical affairs. Careful inquiry conducted by the MUSICAL COURIER during the past few days reveals only optimism in the ranks of American artists, teachers and managers. The places of the absent Europeans will be taken by artists now in this country and by others soon to return here from abroad. Everywhere there is hopefulness. The outlook is most promising. This is the moment for America to rally around the standards of its native musicians and break the spell of long indifference under which some of them have been suffering. While all announcements of the "musical independence of America" are childish and premature, the present moment seems likely to develop at least the self reliance and the vast local resources of our native music makers and music purveyors.

In order to sound the situation thoroughly, the MUSICAL COURIER sent a representative to all the New York managers for an expression of opinion, and despatched telegrams to many of the out of town managers. The results of our efforts are as follows:

R. E. Johnston, when questioned as to the possible effect of the present European war on music conditions in America for the coming season, waxed enthusiastic over the possibilities which will necessarily be open for the American artist in his own country as a direct result from the situation. Briefly, his views on the subject ran into this form: "Now is the time for Americans. I am for the American artist at every stage of the play. The whole sum and substance of the concert world for decades past, and especially so in the last few years, has been the matter of a name. I at present know of dozens of American artists in the concert field who are only getting a hundred dollars per engagement and are without a doubt much better than some of our European friends who get their thousand and more a night. There is not the least reason in the world why we should not use our own talent. America overranks all other countries in its mercantile productions and in every business way, and I myself don't see why it can't do the same in the artistic line of production also. It is safe to predict (that is, if the present state of warfare continues to exist in Europe say for three more months) that European musical activities will be seriously wounded, in fact killed for the next ten years to come. The awfulness of the situation is simply incomprehensible, and the resulting devastation must necessarily be so great that my aforesaid prediction of future musical conditions is bound to eventuate. As a natural result of this, there will be a general stampede to this country of European artists, and I expect to be engaging many of these same artists in francs, marks, shillings and florins as against dollars previously paid for their American engagements. I foresee American artists (in instances where they are really capable) stepping rightfully into their own positions, and I prophesy a general revision of the order which has so long made for the supremacy of foreign talent. Also the European artist will have a little more respect for the pursestrings of the American manager's pocketbook, and not demand a ten times greater fee here than the one awaiting him at home—a ridiculous state of affairs to which Americans have subjected themselves far too long. Of course, America now should take it upon herself to set about manufacturing its own artists, and for this purpose mainly a more serious condition of study is sadly needed. This is greatly aided abroad by what we call 'environment.' Nevertheless, with the marvelous accomplishments already existing in our country as ample proof of the remarkable versatility of our people, it can and will be a very simple matter to make our own 'environment.' With this accomplished it will be only a matter of time when America shall stand supreme in the artistic world."

F. W. Haensel, of the firm of Haensel & Jones, on being questioned as to the effect here of the all European war, said: "Grim visaged war always leaves its mark, and yet every one who believes in progress must needs hope for better things in the future. I believe that unless the war clouds of Europe are dissipated soon that America will be overrun with musicians during the coming season, and if this is the case the prices of some artists must tumble to their actual box office value. With the artists on our list there is not a single inflated value. People who want Slezak will pay for him, war or no war, as he is a bargain at his present selling figure, because he is a procurer of financial results that are well known. He should experience no difficulty in getting away from Europe, as he is court singer to the Emperor and can be granted a safe conduct at any time. He is due here on Christmas Day. Carl Flesch is in Holland, but as he is not to return until late in December I anticipate no trouble as to filling his dates. Margarete Matzenauer is in Italy, and as she is to make a number of phonograph records in the near future I am confident she will be among the early arrivals. George Hamlin and Arthur Shattuck are not expected in America until the first of the year, so they have plenty of time to put in their appearance. Paul Althouse cabled me August 7 that he would be here on time. Christine Miller is in Germany, but any one who knows Miss Miller at all knows that she will come home long before her first recital date, as she is a young woman of infinite resources. And so on all our artists can safely be accounted for. Of course if a large number of musicians are detained in Europe the artists of America who have previously been denied recognition will naturally come to the front, but I cannot conjure a situation which would keep world famed artists bottled up in Europe."

The Hanson agency, at present under the direction of Mrs. Lewis during the absence of M. H. Hanson (who, when last heard from, was being detained at Ostend, Belgium), viewed the situation in a very optimistic light. "We rest with the greatest assurance over the safe return of all our artists who now happen to be in the affected European war zone," said she, "and then, too, luckily enough, we have on our list many American artists, so any possible detention by the European governments of their subjects will not seriously affect our activities for the coming season. We think undoubtedly that the American artist will be benefited more or less by the conditions which are bound to arise from the European conflict, this depending, of course, on the real ability of the artist in question, but now is most assuredly his time, and we really expect to see many new names entering the temple of fame as America's own products ere the season reaches its close. In considering the present outlook as to the success of our coming musical season we can say that never before have the indications and conditions been in a more favorable form. The progress of arrangements both with the artists and the managers is continuing with marked steadiness, and thus far nothing has arisen which would intimate in the slightest manner that any unstableness exists in our country as a result of the European state of affairs."

The Wolfsohn Bureau seemed satisfied that nothing harmful to us possibly could grow out of the European imbroglio. The present bright outlook for the coming music season in America will be realized, says the Wolfsohns. One of the chief members of the firm added: "It is true that many of the prominent artists on our list now are marooned in various sections of the war clouded continents, but the splendid resourcefulness which invariably is constituted in the makeup of any great artist will succeed in overcoming any minor technicalities which might stand in their way, and we are positive that all our people will be on hand in good season for their opening engagements, most of which, at the earliest, do not come due until a month from now, anyway. All our signed contracts mean good American dollars to the artists possessing them, and presumably they are even more anxious to get back here than we are to have them. We see not the slightest reason whatever for any uneasiness concerning the future American music conditions and, if anything, we imagine that they will materially profit by the outcome of the issue. The present state of war cannot possibly continue through more than a very few months, and a speedy readjustment of affairs over there will soon take place; but be that as it may, more certain now than ever before are the chances of the American artist in cases where he has genuine ability to get into his rightful position and the odds will be slightly in his favor at that. Individually, our 1914-15 season promises to be a huge success, and at present it is impossible for us to see where the European situation of today can hinder its materialization in any way."

Antonia Sawyer states that business "never was as good nor prospects so bright as they are at the present time" and that her agency is busily preparing to handle one of the most strenuous season it ever has encountered. In voicing her views further on the subject she remarked: "Of course we experience some little uneasiness as to the present whereabouts of a few of our artists who are abroad, but feel confident that they all will manage to get transportation back to this country in ample time for the commencement of their respective tours. Whether our American musical activities at large will be affected by the deplorable state of affairs now existing abroad I really do not know, but should all our great artists who happen to be foreign citizens be compelled to remain in their respective countries I think that the result would not be very disastrous to our music welfare. Any such action would be quite out of the question though, for in Europe an artist when he does finally become recognized comes near to being idolized by the populace, and ideas of even endangering the lives of their favorite musicians would be the last thing thought of. As it is, the more prominent in this set of artists are held in high esteem by the different royal families, and a protected departure out of the afflicted countries will be assured in all cases, I am certain."

The Foster & David agency reports that they luckily (with but one exception) have the satisfaction of knowing that all their artists are already safe and sound here in America. The exception lies in the person of the young American violinist, Alexander Block, who when last heard from was still in Dresden, where he had been coaching with his former teacher, Leopold Auer. They also state, that from the present outlook, "the European situation can in no way interfere with musical activities in America during the coming season; in fact, it looks as though, if anything, America would be benefited musically in many ways."

Views in entire concordance with those expressed by the other New York managers were voiced also by Mrs. Sutorius, Walter Anderson, G. Dexter Richardson, Annie Friedberg, Loudon Charlton, L. M. Ruben, S. E. Macmillen and others.

Out of town orchestral and concert managers who could not be reached as they are away on vacation were K. L. Roberts (Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra), C. A. Ellis (he is in Europe), Ralph Edmunds (Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra) and W. A. Fritschy (Kansas City).

The other managers to whom the MUSICAL COURIER telegraphed wire as follows:

Chicago, August 8, 1914.

Editor Musical Courier, New York:

Eight million dollars spent this summer for Chautauqua talent combined with banner season and high prices for crops foretells record breaking season in Central West. Our advance outlook warrants increase of office and field force and addition of feature list of artists for Chautauqua for next summer. Will extend our territory to Northwest and to Southern States.

ERNEST BRIGGS,
For Briggs Musical Bureau.

Chicago, August 8, 1914.

To the Editor, Musical Courier:

All signs point toward best all-round musical season America has known. Many new substantial clubs and subsidized series have been organized, and the general demand is not only larger but also for higher grade artists. Do not anticipate any reaction account European belligerency. Musical horizon brighter and field of activity larger now than at any past period.

HARRY CULBERTSON.

Cincinnati, Ohio, August 9, 1914.

Editor Musical Courier:

College and conservatory anticipate largest enrollment in their history and smaller institutions will reflect same conditions. Symphony orchestra increases its number of concerts to forty-two extending to May 1. Clubs will have their usual seasons and plans are being perfected for series of Sunday afternoon concerts by visiting artists.

HERMAN THUMAN.

Editor Musical Courier: Detroit, August 8, 1914.

Honest treatment of the public by giving them the best available in music has had its effect wherever it has been practised. The outlook in Detroit and in Ohio, Indiana and outside territory never has been brighter. The sane policy of the MUSICAL COURIER is doing much to place music on a better basis throughout the country. JAMES E. DEVOE.

St. Louis, Mo., August 8, 1914.

Editor Musical Courier:

Hesitate to express an opinion upon outlook in American musical field during coming season. No one can tell to what extent conditions will be affected by European wars. We are much concerned as to whereabouts and safety of conductor Zach, who was last heard from in Vienna, July 23.

ARTHUR J. GAINES.

The Messrs. Aborn state that they do not anticipate much trouble on account of war conditions in assembling their leading artists for the coming season at the Century, beginning September 14. Most of the principals are Americans, and many of them are already in this country. When the situation began to look serious over a week ago cablegrams were sent to all Century Opera singers who happen to be in Europe instructing them to take passage on the first ship available to America. Replies to these messages indicate that the few Century artists who still are in Europe are in neutral countries and do not expect any trouble in reaching New York.

AMERICA'S HOST ABROAD.

Arranged alphabetically, this is as complete a list as it is possible to compile at this time of our native and resident musical personages now in Europe, most of them within the war zone itself. Included also are the names of some of the foreign artists who were expected here for American tours this season:

A

Arthur M. Abell, Mariska Aldrich, Luella Anderson, Arthur Alexander, J. Allen, Leonora Allen, Paul Althouse, Richard Aldrich, Cecil Ayres, Pasquale Amato, Paolo Ananian, Frances Alda.

B

Louis Blumenberg, Alexander Bloch, Hannah Butler, W. L. Blumenschein, Mrs. Marc A. Blumenberg, Birdice Blye, Alice L. Bryant, Mrs. Noah Brandt, Enid Brandt, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, Charles Bowes, Eddy Brown, Thuel Burnham, John Braun, Alice Bingham, Mrs. George Beck, Helen Blain, Lillian Blauvelt, Carlo Buonamici, Rudolf Berger, Carl Braun, Alessandro Bonci, Ferruccio Busoni, Willy Burmester, Amadeo Bassi, Lucrezia Bori.

C

Enrico Caruso, Julia Claussen, Cleofonte Campanini, Anna Case, Dr. William C. Carl, Gertrude F. Cowen, Shanna Cumming, Mr. and Mrs. King Clark, Arthur M. Curry, Claude Cunningham, Augusta Cottlow, Pauline Curley, Lucy Call, Grace Cole, Marian Clark, Kittie Cheatham, California University Glee Club, Gertrude Cleophas, Jane Noria-Centannini, Maria Cavan, Julia Culp, Florencio Constantino.

D

Frank Damrosch, Mildred Dilling, Laurette Duval, Vernon d'Arnalle, Adamo Didur, Charles Dalmores, Norah Drewett, Andreas Dippel, J. F. Delma-Heide, Jenny Dufau, Emmy Destinn.

E

Annie Ellermann, Albert Elkus, Emma Eames, Edwin Evans, Rudolph Engberg, C. A. Ellis.

F

George Fergusson, Truman Fassett, Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Benjamin Fabian, Geraldine Farrar, William Förster, Anna Fitzhugh, Carl Flesch, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, Flonzaley Quartet, Martha Falk-Mayer.

G

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Frank Gittelson, Louise Gunning, Leopold Godowsky, Katherine Golcher, Katharine Goodson, Esperanza Garrigue, Hedwig Glomb, Emily Gresser, Mary Garden, Paolo Gruppe, Emilio de Gogorza, Alma Gluck, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, Aristodemo Giorgini, Heinrich Gebhard, William J. Guard, Paolo Gallico, Albino Gorno, Johanna Gadski, Otto Goritz, Dinh Gilly, Elena Gerhardt.

H

Julia Hostater, Kathleen Howard, Victor Harris, David Hochstein, Ellis Clark Hammann, Sara Heineman, M. H. Hanson, W. H. Henderson, Sue Harvard, Margaret Huston, George Hamlin, Edwin Hughes, Ada Soder-Hueck, William Hinshaw, Edward Hargreave, Karleton Hackett, George Nelson Holt, Gustav Holmquist, Elmer G. Hoelzle, Edna ver Haar, Allen Hinckley, Genevieve Houghton, Ragnahild Holmquist, Alfred Hertz, Heinrich Hensel, Frieda Hempel, Marie Hertenstein, Josef Hofmann, Hans Himmer, Edna Hoff.

J

Sascha Jacobson, Anna Taylor Jones, Karl Jörn, Edward Johnson.

K

Grace Kerns, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Marie Kaiser, Louis Koemmenich, Earle G. Killeen, Sergei Kotlarsky, Morgan Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. Knupfer, Georgia Kober, Adele Krueger, Fritz Kreisler, Dr. Ernst Kunwald.

L

Vida Llewellyn, Felice Lyne, Albert Lindquist, Kathleen Lawlor, Leslie Loth, James Liebling, Cordelia Lee, Lucille Laurence, Marie White Longman, Josef Lhevinne, Tina Lerner, Georges Longy, Frank la Forge, Theodor Latterman.

M

Charles Henry Meltzer, Alice Garrigue Mott, Florence MacBeth, Zettali Martin, Adolph Muhlmann, Marguerite Melville, Beulah Munson, Alma Moodie, Francis Maclennan, Florence Easton Maclennan, Christine Miller, Riccardo Martin, Harry Munro, Marie Mohler, Francis Macmillen, Isolde Menges, L. H. Mudgett, Dr. Karl Muck, Ottilie Metzger, Lucien Muratore, Vanni Marcoux, Margarete Matzenauer, Andre Maquarre, Elisabeth Mack, Yolanda Mérö, Hans Merx, John McCormack.

N

F. Wight Neumann, Louise Nikita, Emma Nevada, Mignon Nevada, Hildegard Nash.

O

Luella Chilson Ohrman, Hendrikje Ohlsen, H. O. Osgood, W. B. Olds, Prof. Otto, Mrs. Charles Orchard, W. B. Olds, Margarete Ober, Emil Oberhoffer.

P

Elizabeth Kelso Patterson, Paul Petri, Carroll Badham Preyer, Louis Persinger, Mrs. Dolly Pattison, A. Buzzi-Peccia, Henry Perry, Daniel Protheroe, Eleanor Pochler, Harry Phillips, May Esther Peterson, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Lucille Peck, Eleanor Peocock, Kathleen Parlow, Giorgio Polacco.

Q

Alfred Quinn.

R

Titta Ruffo, Kate Rolla, Claude Reddish, Meta Reddisch, Leon Rains, Anita Rio, Max Rabinoff, Ettore Ruffo, Otto Roehrborn, Elizabeth Reeside, Léon Rothier, Henry Russell, Marie Rappold, Albert Reiss.

S

Helen Stanley, Gaston Sargent, Viola Gramm-Salzedo, Gladys Seward, Arnolde Stephenson, Leon Sametini, Carl Stasny, Wager Swayne, Irma Seydel, Louis Victor Saar, Arthur Shattuck, Kurt Schindler, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Ernest Schelling, Sigismund Stojowski, Philip Spooner, Leopold Stokowski, Olga Samaroff, Albert Stoessel, Paul Steindorff, Theodore Spiering, Oscar Saenger, Andrea de Segurola, James Sauvage, C. Wenham Smith, Ethel C. Smith, Pitts Sanborn, Oscar Seagle, Katherine Stevenson, Herman Sandby, Ella Spindler, Alexander Savine, Frank Steen, Edgar Stillman-Kelley, Eleanor Spencer, Louis Victor Saar, J. D. Sample, Leo Slezak, Mario Sammarco, Jan Sickesz, Arrigo Serato, Sevcik Quartet, Antonio Scotti, Max Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Otto T. Simon, Josef Etransky.

T

Louis Campbell-Tipton, Louise Gerard-Thiers, Della Thall, Adolph Tandler, Arturo Toscanini, Jacques Thibaud, Luisa Tetrazzini.

U

Otto Urack, Josef Urban, Jacques Urlus.

V

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Volpe, Daniel Visanska, Otto A. Voget, Edna ver Haar, Coenraad von Bos, Luisa Villani.

W

Felix Weingartner, Herbert Witherspoon, Helen Bixby Wetzel, Mrs. Stacey Williams, Edyth Walker, Charles L. Wagner, Howard Wells, Hermann Hans Wetzler, Clarence Whitehill, Marie Louise Wagner, Nancy White, G. C. Weitzel, Louise St. John Westervelt, Helen Warrum, Coral Wait, Carolina White, Priscilla White, Frank Waller, Howard Wells, Beatrice Wheeler, Herman Weil, Anton Witek, Vita Witek.

Y

Eugen Ysaye, S. Costantino Yon, Pietro A. Yon.

Z

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, Alice Zeppilli, Katherine Ziegler, Efrem Zimbalist.

R. E. JOHNSTON'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

R. E. Johnston's office announces, for the benefit of local managers and others who are undecided owing to the European situation, that his office can furnish the following artists, several of whom now are in America: Frances Alda, soprano; Marie Rappold, soprano; Mabel Garrison, soprano; Germaine Schnitzer, pianist; George Dostal, tenor; Louis Siegel, violinist; Frank la Forge, pianist; Ludwig Schmidt, violinist; Sousa and his band.

A CONCERT TOUR OF THE VOLGA.

By Arthur M. Abell, Special Representative of the Musical Courier on the Tour of the Volga Made by Sergei Kussewitzky and His Symphony Orchestra.

V.

[The pictures accompanying this article will be found on another page.—Editor.]

Samara is so situated on the left bank of the Volga that we could see practically the entire town on our approach. It is a much more modern place than Simbirsk or Kasan, and is the terminal of the great Trans-Siberian Railway, and an important commercial and industrial town. Vast grain stores are situated there. On the surrounding hills are the establishments for kumyss (mare's milk), which have become famous throughout Russia for their treatment of chest and lung complaints. Invalids come here from all parts of the country to take the cure and also to go into the steppes and live with the nomads. Samara originally was founded to guard the Russian frontier against the Calmucks, the Bashkirs and the Crimean Tartars. In a later article of this series I shall describe the Calmucks, whom we paid a visit at their settlement near Astrakhan. At present they are a peaceful, indolent, nomadic tribe, but in olden times they were very troublesome and a great menace to the advance of civilization in Russia.

Very interesting at all these towns along the Volga is the life of the harbor. I never saw so many river steamboats together as at Nijni-Novgorod. Nearly 100 big sidewheelers were moored along the banks of the Volga and Oka, for it was just the beginning of the shipping season. On the wharves of Nijni, Kasan and Samara were stored up huge quantities of dried fish in kegs, naphtha, hides, grain and other merchandise. At Kasan hundreds of wagons driven by Tartars were waiting along the banks of the river to carry the freight brought by the steamers to the town proper, five miles distant. As there are not wharves enough along the river banks to accommodate the steamers which are plying up and down, the boats moor alongside each other, and frequently our Imperator found as many as three other steamers at our landing. We simply lay alongside and crossed over all of these boats to the landing proper.

Of great interest was a visit to the station of the Siberian Railway, where we arrived just as an emigrant train pulled in. Such types of humanity as were here disclosed I have never seen before.

The journey from Samara to Vladivostok over the Siberian Railway in the ordinary Russian trains must be an exceedingly tedious undertaking, for the first class compartments are not as good as the second class in Germany, and most of the windows are hermetically sealed. Indeed, this is true of the windows of most of the homes in Russia, and the problem of getting sufficient air in winter must be a very serious one. We were not at all impressed by the Russian train service. Ordinary trains make about fifteen miles an hour and the fastest expresses do not run more than twenty-five. Later, after becoming more familiar with the Russian railway service, Mrs. Abell and I decided that if we ever went to the Far East it would not be via the Siberian Railway, but via the Suez Canal. Aside from its charming location on the banks of the river and a couple of beautiful churches, Samara offers little of interest.

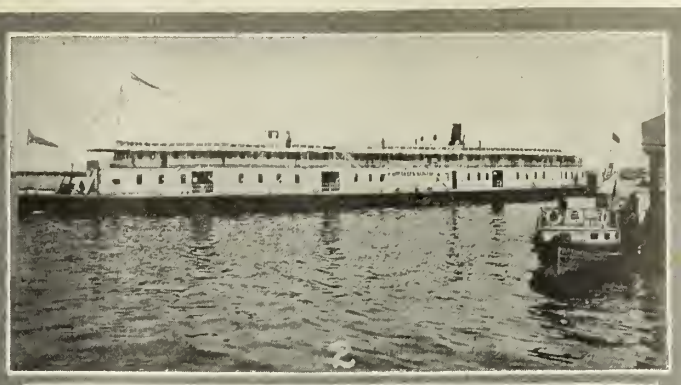
Samara numbers 100,000 people, being about the size of Nijni-Novgorod, so it was found to be necessary to give two concerts. This was the program of the first:

Eroica symphony ..... Beethoven
Concerto for violin in E major .....Bach
L. Zeitlin, first concertmaster of the orchestra, soloist.
Excerpts from the opera Chowanschena Anskaya, Moussorgski
Excerpts from the opera Sorotsch Yarmarka, Moussorgski
Symphony, Manfred, first movement .....Tschaikowsky
Spanish Rhapsody ..... Rimsky-Korsakow

Several of these numbers we had heard before, but the Bach concerto and the Moussorgski excerpts were performed on this evening for the first time during this tour. Zeitlin, the concertmaster of Kussewitzky's orchestra, gave a very fine rendition of the Bach concerto, proving that he is not only an admirable leader of the violins, but also an excellent soloist. He draws a beautiful tone, his technic is true and his attitude towards Bach was thoroughly classic. The two Moussorgski numbers are beautiful and effective, the second, in particular, being a very charming dance. Kussewitzky is a great Moussorgski enthusiast, and one could not possibly hear his music better interpreted than we heard it at Samara at this first concert. They were live, vivid renditions that he gave, and the Russian coloring which is such a characteristic feature of this composer's music was forcibly brought out.

The program of the second concert, the following evening, consisted of the Scriabine symphony, the prelude to "Parsifal," the Beethoven E flat concerto and Liszt's "Mazeppa." Despite the many intricacies of Scriabine's music, the public seemed to enjoy it immensely. Indeed, there were cries of "da capo" after each movement. Risler made a tremendous hit with the audience in this town and was tendered an unusual ovation. He played encores for half an hour and the public seemed in a mood to keep him playing all night.

From Samara to Saratow, where the next concert was given, is over 300 miles. For a time after leaving Samara the river is quite narrow and exceedingly swift. It turns first sharply to the south and then as sharply eastward, and continues in this direction for fully sixty miles. From Syzran, a town of 45,000 inhabitants, came numerous requests for a concert, so we stopped to inspect the place. The city proper affords little of interest, but it is picturesquely situated on a high bluff. Kussewitzky found the concert hall inadequate for his purpose, so the idea of playing there was abandoned. The river here flows south again, and from Syzran to the Caspian Sea it is never less than two miles wide. The right bank continues to be high, while the left is for the most part quite flat. Meanwhile, since turning to the south, spring had come quite suddenly and the verdant green of the banks was very refreshing.



Saratow, our next stopping place, is the largest city on the Volga, numbering 250,000 souls. It is a modern town, surrounded, as with an amphitheatre, by hills. There are some very fine buildings here, including a large new university and a fine big modern railway station. Some few of the streets in the center of the town are also well paved, but we found on taking a drive in the suburbs the same wretched conditions prevailing as in all the other cities—no pavements, primitive wooden houses, poor sanitary conditions and absolutely nothing in the way of modern comforts. The volume of water is as great at Saratow as it is at the mouth of the Volga, for from here on there are few tributaries, little rain and continual evaporation. On the left bank of the river, opposite Saratow, is a large German colony numbering 60,000 souls, all the descendants of a few settlers placed here by Catherine the Great. These colonists are still to be distinguished from their Russian neighbors by their religion, dress and language, most of them still speaking fairly good German. The settlement does not look very prosperous, however, and presented a bleak, cheerless appearance. We found Saratow—a Tartar name meaning "yellow hill"—the least interesting of any of the cities we had seen on the Volga. Musically, however, the town is more advanced than any of the others. Artists occasionally come from St. Petersburg and Moscow to give concerts here, and the city boasts of a flourishing conservatory. The founder and former director of this school of music, the only one at present existing along this mighty waterway, visited us on our steamer. He told us of the many difficulties he had, financial and otherwise, in establishing this school. It is now doing well, however, and is frequented by several hundred music students.

The municipal theatre, where two concerts were given, is a modern building, and so far as its exterior is concerned, it might be a Stadttheatre of any of the medium sized German towns. The interior arrangement, however, is somewhat different. Both concerts at Saratow were largely attended. Naturally the music students were out in full force and the audience as a whole was musically more intelligent and appreciative than in the other Volga cities. The programs were the same as those given at Samara. The orchestra was in splendid form on both evenings. Kussewitzky always had an electrifying effect upon his men. He reminds me more of Nikisch than does any other living conductor. The daily papers of Saratow wrote most glowing eulogies of Kussewitzky's conducting. In fact, the papers all along the route vied with each other in extolling this great apostle of Russian music.

Risler created a furore, and if he were to go to Saratow, or, in fact, any of the other Volga cities next season and give recitals, he would be sure of full houses. His great powers as an interpreter and his wonderful command of the piano surprised us more and more as the tour progressed, for he did almost no practising, yet he never missed a note. His technical infallibility is positively uncanny.

By the way, the present director of the Saratow Conservatory is Josef Slivinsky, the Polish pianist, who toured America some years ago. The conservatory has a beautiful, good sized concert hall. On his last tour of the Volga Kussewitzky gave his concert here, but this time, on account of the many demands for tickets, it was found necessary to give

1

2

3

4

5

7

6

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

SCENES AND SIGHTS ALONG THE VOLGA.

(1) The conservatory at Saratow—the only school of music on the river. (2) The sister ship of the "Imperator," which we passed at Samara. (3) The beautiful Greek Catholic Cathedral at Samara. (4) The fine new theatre at Samara, where the Kussewitzky concerts were given. (5) The busy wharf life at Saratow. (6) A train on the Siberian Railway. (7) Eduard Risler and A. M. Abell driving about town at Syzran, a small Russian place on the Volga, where no concert was given. (8) Syzran, a small town on the Volga that clamored for Kussewitzky concerts, but which had no suitable hall. (9) Kusscwitzky snapshotted while snapshotting. (10) The station of the Siberian Railway at Samara. (11) Principal business street of Saratow. (12) The great Alexander bridge over the Volga between Samara and Saratow. (13) The Jewish Synagogue at Samara—a rare sight in Russia. (14) M. and Mme. Kussewitzky and their guests on the deck of the "Imperator." (15) The Municipal Theatre at Saratow, which was crowded at both Kussewitzky concerts. (16) Peasant men and women unloading wood from a Volga towboat.

it in the large theatre. Several times during our journey down stream so called "wonder children" were brought to play for Kussewitzky, for the purpose of hearing his opinion and soliciting his financial aid; for it is well known in Russia that Mr. and Mrs. Kussewitzky spend many thousands of roubles annually in educating young musical talents. At Saratow an eleven year old violinist played for us De Beriot's G major concerto and several smaller pieces. He had not studied at the Saratow Conservatory, but had had private instruction from a violinist who looked almost exactly like an American Indian. Although he had been very badly taught, the child revealed such pronounced talent that Kussewitzky decided to have him sent to Moscow to study there at the conservatory.

We found several large music stores in Saratow, where all kinds of musical instruments were sold. The balalaika and the gussli are the two favorite instruments of provincial Russia. M. Andrejew, of St. Petersburg, did a great work for the country in reviving the balalaika. More than 1,000 years ago it was the favorite instrument of the Russian peasants, but after the introduction of Christianity it was pronounced by the priests an instrument of the devil, and the poor country people were forbidden to play it under penalty of death. For this reason it became practically obsolete. Andrejew not only resurrected it, but he perfected it and created a complete balalaika orchestra, by manufacturing altos, tenors and basses. The balalaika has something in common with the American banjo, although it is tuned differently and has only three strings. One hears in Russia some remarkable virtuosity on this instrument and on the gussli. The violin is not played to any great extent among the Russian peasants or among the poor inhabitants of the towns. The successes of violinists like Elman, Zimbalist and Heifetz have led many to think that genius for the instrument might be found in every Russian village. But these three artists and, in fact, nearly all those who have distinguished themselves on the violin, are Jews and not Russians at all in reality. The full-blooded Russian has hitherto revealed no special adaptability for the violin. With the balalaika, however, this is different. It is the national instrument of the people, and all of the best performers I have heard on the instrument were Russians.

[NOTE.—This article on the Kussewitzky Volga tour was received by the MUSICAL COURIER on Wednesday, August 5. The series is to be continued, but at the present moment it looks doubtful whether Mr. Abell will be able to forward mail from Berlin. Since the cutting of the German-Atlantic cable, near the Azores, no direct communication between the MUSICAL COURIER and its Berlin representative has been possible.—EDITOR MUSICAL COURIER.]

A POLACCO TRIBUTE.

Giorgio Polacco has been winning golden opinions this summer for his excellent baton work at Covent Garden. One of his admirers was Max Smith, critic of the New York Press, who is in Europe at present. In last Sunday's Press appeared the following Polacco appreciation, signed by Mr. Smith:

That Polacco has won many admirers in London is perfectly evident. Under his direction I recently heard a first-rate performance of "Falstaff"—clear cut, well balanced and finely worked out. Even the extremely difficult final fugue was sung without a single musical slip, without the slightest rhythmical disturbance—a result particularly surprising if one considers that only two members of the cast had sung Verdi's opera before and that rehearsals had been few.

What surprised me even more than his "Falstaff" was Giorgio Polacco's performance of "Louise." In listening to Charpentier's score, presented in a way that revealed a thousand and one delightful details which had not been brought to the surface in Hammerstein's and the Chicago Opera Company's production, I could not help regretting that Giulio Gatti-Casazza had not given "Louise" instead of "Julien" in the Metropolitan Opera House.

NOTIONS.

This photograph shows what American opportunities can do for a man.

This Bach is more expert at counter display than counterpoint. He is also more of an organizer than an organist. Had he remained in Leipsic he might have no more money in his pocket than the other Bach had—J. S. Bach is meant.

It does not necessarily follow that an American composer with counterpoint, but without other means of support, can make a department store succeed in Leipsic—not by a bargain list!

A department store is an American institution, and Bach is to be congratulated for finding a better paying job than writing organ fugues and unaccompanied sonatas for violin alone.

If the other Bach—that is to say, Johann Sebastian—had come to New York in his day it is safe to say he would not have been a great composer.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Those were Colonial and Puritan times. New York was not quite as rigid and frigid as New England, but the baleful blight on art and music was felt throughout the colonies. The Puritan preachers thought that Quakers should be destroyed as heretics. When Bach was a boy the gentle folk of Massachusetts were hanging witches and those who had devils. Boston, Mass., was certainly no place for the B minor mass. It was a judicious move on the part of J. S. B. to stay where he was.

One composer Bach is enough, however. The other Bach did right in departing from the service of the muses and serving the masses with a department store. Musicians pin their faith to Bach, but they may have faith in the other Bach's pins.

MYRNA SHARLOW'S EXCITING VOYAGE.

Myrna Sharlow, the singer who went abroad with the Boston Opera Company last spring and has been appearing since then in Paris and at Covent Garden, London, returned to New York last week on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. Miss Sharlow tells a most interesting story of her adventures on the homeward trip, which was accomplished with constant fear on the captain's part that the ship would be captured by enemies. At one time a French cruiser was within fifteen miles of the liner. That vessel made a quick detour, and running as far south as Florida, managed to elude its pursuer. During the entire voyage shutters were kept over the port holes at night, and the passengers had no idea whether they were to be landed in New York, Halifax or Havana. As Miss Sharlow went abroad on the Lapland on the occasion of the memorable crush of persons which resulted in the injury of many in the crowd at the pier, she feels that her sea trips seem destined to be eventful. The artist is none the worse for her exciting experiences and tells the MUSICAL COURIER that she is delighted to have escaped from the perils of Europe and to be here for the fulfillment of her American engagements next fall and winter.

ATLANTA'S BACKSLIDING.

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta (Ga.) Musical Association board of directors, it transpired that the organization had not been successful in raising a fund sufficient to induce Mortimer Wilson, the orchestral leader, to reconsider his resignation. It developed that there were no further funds in sight, and that the association would continue upon a curtailed basis, employ a local man as conductor, and cut down the strings and otherwise reduce the number of players. Furthermore, it was decided to limit the character of the programs to a lighter vein and to feature a prominent soloist at each concert with piano accompaniment (while the orchestra sit with instruments in their laps, one presumes).

It is difficult to believe that a cultured city like Atlanta is content to let such musical conditions prevail. What with the example set by a score of other cities and the general advancement made by Atlanta in other lines, it seems that after listening for two and a half years to the best that could be done with the material on hand, the community ought to have some pride in sustaining a standard.

An Atlanta music lover reports that it was due to Mr. Wilson's being asked repeatedly by the board to place on his programs (which were already as light as dignity would permit) such dessert pieces as "Pinafore" and works by Suppé, etc., that the conductor decided their ideals and his to be in disharmony, and "seeing no reason for prolonging the agony, sang his swan song."

Mortimer Wilson, however, has done the Atlanta association and the musical community there a valuable service, and he can take satisfaction in knowing that at some future time his work will bear artistic fruit. During his Southern sojourn he has been able between programs to write two violin and piano sonatas, a symphony and some smaller works, so his time was well spent.

MARCELLA CRAFT ARRIVES.

Marcella Craft, soprano of the Royal Opera, Munich, arrived in New York on Monday on the steamship New York and is at the Hotel Biltmore. After her final performance in Munich in "Madama Butterfly," on June 26, Miss Craft went to Paris expecting to remain there about six weeks, but on the advice of her manager, M. H. Hanson, who was with her in Paris, she decided to take the first steamer to the United States on which she could secure passage. Her concert tour of America (which is her first) will open in November on the Pacific Coast. Miss Craft said that she doubts whether most of the artists now in Europe will be able to leave there before the war is over. She obtained passage only with the greatest difficulty and at an exorbitant rate.

STILLMAN KELLEY IN LONDON.

Edgar Stillman Kelley has reached London from Ostend. It will be good news to his many American friends to know that he is safe in the English capital.

CONSOLATION FOR BUFFALO

It will be remembered that last spring, or in March, to be exact, the editor of the MUSICAL COURIER paid a visit to Buffalo, N. Y., where he spent a short time in the study of local musical conditions. His observations were not complimentary to Buffalo, a city of wealth and professed enterprise, and his published comments in the MUSICAL COURIER disappointed the musicians, the musical public and the newspapers of Buffalo. Letters of protest were sent to the MUSICAL COURIER, and with the sense of fairness which this journal always exhibits, were printed in these columns. Some of the letters and some of the articles in the Buffalo newspapers resented the fact that three or four pages of MUSICAL COURIER space were devoted to Pittsburgh—a city greatly envied by Buffalo for its commercial and artistic superiority—and contained pictures of the musicians whose work received well merited enthusiastic discussion. One of the imputations made public in several quarters by disgruntled Buffalonians was to the effect that the MUSICAL COURIER had received pay for the publication of the pictures of the Pittsburgh musicians and for the space devoted to the articles about them.

A Buffalo woman, formerly connected there with musical matters, wrote to a prominent Pittsburgh vocal instructor as follows:

Buffalo, N. Y.

DEAR ———.—If you still read the MUSICAL COURIER you may have noticed the attitude toward Buffalo, which has caused some controversy and the publication of protests on page 22 of last week's edition of the paper. Also, that Mr. Liebling refutes the accusation that Pittsburgh musicians paid for their pictures in the recent Pittsburgh article.

Furthermore, he challenges the writer of the protest to prove that the pictures were paid for. As you are the only Pittsburgher with whom I am acquainted, I am writing to ask what arrangement was made.

Parties here wished me to try to learn how Mr. Liebling consented to publish pictures free (?) of charge. That is not the usual policy of that journal. Was there not some plan suggested by which the musicians paid, either by a new subscription, a renewal, or a promised "ad"? There is money involved, as you will see, if you read the article "Buffalo Up In Arms." Buffalo claims only to be a manufacturing center; its slogan, "Buffalo Means Business." Music is a diversion; its concerts patronized and sustained by wealthy people; but we have hundreds of musicians, composers and earnest students, none of whom care about advertising in a New York paper, and the lack of patronage for the MUSICAL COURIER causes that paper to jeer at our finely equipped musicians and teachers.

You will greatly oblige me if you can spare the time to let me know if the Pittsburgh musicians did not give some guarantee of patronage, even if it were to be later on.

Wishing you every success, I remain,

Very truly,

——— ———.

To the foregoing letter the recipient replied as attached:

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 1, 1914.

DEAR ———.—The conference between Mr. Liebling and myself occupied but a few minutes and was chiefly taken up with conversation about Emil Liebling, of Chicago, recently deceased, an uncle of Mr. Liebling, of the MUSICAL COURIER, and an old friend of mine.

During our conversation there was no suggestion of any kind as to an advertisement or a renewal or consideration of any nature; indeed I did not know until the close of our interview the object of Mr. Liebling's visit to Pittsburgh. I have not talked with any of the musicians of Pittsburgh whose pictures appeared and therefore can only speak for myself.

Cordially yours,

——— ———.

After the Pittsburgh pedagogue forwarded to the MUSICAL COURIER the letter he had received from Buffalo and his reply thereto, the Musical Courier Company commissioned J. Albert Riker to send to all the Pittsburgh musicians whose pictures had appeared in Mr. Liebling's article the appended letter:

New York, May 9, 1914.

DEAR ———.—We have received from Buffalo an intimation to the effect that it is believed by some musicians of that city the pictures of Pittsburgh musicians, which appeared in Mr. Liebling's editorial, following his visit to the latter city, must have been paid for.

I would appreciate your answering by return mail this question (it can be answered either "Yes" or "No"): Were you asked to pay for the appearance of your picture, inserted in Mr. Liebling's editorial, following his visit in your city, which was published in the MUSICAL COURIER, issue of April 8?

The pictures were published as a compliment, and, as in your case, there was no charge to any one.

With kind regards, I am,

Sincerely,

J. ALBERT RIKER.

In due time the following replies were received, and they are reproduced herewith in their entirety:

DEAR MR. RIKER.—Answering, in behalf of Anthony Jawelak, your question of recent date, I wish to say that the publication of the boy's picture in the MUSICAL COURIER of April 8, was not paid for. In fact, the appearance of the "cut" came as a surprise to him and to me. I may say, incidentally, that no money has ever been paid by Jawelak, or for him, for any "write up" or "cut" that has appeared in the MUSICAL COURIER at any time. Whether or not he inserted his "card" in the advertising columns, he has always been given more than was bargained for.

With kindest regards to you and Mr. Liebling, I am,

Yours, CASPAR P. KOCH.

May 18, 1914.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—To your question, I answer unqualifiedly, No. JAMES STEPHEN MARTIN.

May 12, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER.—No, I was not even told that my picture would appear in the Pittsburgh editorial of Mr. Liebling. The picture and the article both were a surprise, for which I have meant to write my thanks. Nothing of "payment" was even mentioned. I shall call to express my thanks to you and Mr. Liebling in person.

Cordially yours, CHRISTINE MILLER.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER.—The MUSICAL COURIER is even better than ever. This number was especially appreciated by us of the cult on account of the large space you gave us in publishing our photographs and the large amount of letter press space you gave us as well. Every one with whom I have spoken is delighted and very appreciative of the MUSICAL COURIER'S generosity.

We were not asked to pay for the appearance of our pictures, for which reason we are enthusiastic over the MUSICAL COURIER'S scheme of advertising music and the musicians in the different localities.

With very kind regards to Mr. Liebling and yourself,

Yours faithfully,

FRANK MILTON HUNTER.

May 11, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER.—The question you ask, "Were you asked to pay for the appearance of your picture in Mr. Liebling's editorial?" can be answered by me with a most positive "No, I was not," and further, I was somewhat surprised to see so many pictures of our prominent musicians in your paper following his visit and can account for it no other way than by the fact that your able editor, having met with such a cordial and hearty reception by our people that the manager of the MUSICAL COURIER wished to return the compliment in the way of a surprise by inserting pictures of our leading artists.

As one of my friends remarked, "It pays to be progressive rather than 'grouchy.'"

With kind regards, I am sincerely yours,

WALTER C. EARNEST.

May 14, 1914.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—I was not asked to pay for the appearance of my picture in the recent Pittsburgh article in the MUSICAL COURIER, and its appearance was a complete surprise to me, and so far as I know there have been absolutely no financial arrangements whatever in regard to the Pittsburgh article in the MUSICAL COURIER.

Thanking both Mr. Liebling and yourself for the many pleasant things said about Pittsburgh musicians and myself,

Yours very truly,

CHARLES N. BOYD.

May 11, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER.—I most certainly did not pay anything for the picture of myself which appeared with Pittsburgh musicians; in fact, it was as much of a surprise to me as to all the others who were included, and a source of much gratification.

I have nothing but the highest appreciation for the MUSICAL COURIER in all their dealings with me as an advertiser, and even before I became an advertiser. I have much to be thankful for in the way of publicity you gave me.

With cordial good wishes,

ZOE FULTON.

May 12, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER.—I did not pay for the appearance of my picture in Mr. Liebling's editorial of Pittsburgh; in fact, the article and picture were a delightful surprise, for which I wish to express my appreciation.

Sincerely yours, CARL BERNTHALER.

May 13, 1914.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—I am hastening to answer that my picture, published among Pittsburgh musicians in the MUSICAL COURIER, was there through the courtesy of the MUSICAL COURIER and was not paid for.

Believe me, sincerely,

ANNE GRIFFITHS.

May 11, 1914.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—I neither paid for my photo in your paper, nor the article. Yours sincerely,

GERALDINE DAMON.

May 16, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER—It gives me pleasure to state for the benefit of any whom it may concern that the cost of the "Pittsburgh Page," so far as I know, was absolutely nothing. It was a complete surprise to me, and one which I thoroughly appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER.

May 18, 1914.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—Was I asked to pay for the appearance of my picture in Mr. Liebling's editorial on Pittsburgh? Most certainly not. I think, perhaps, that I was more surprised than any one else to see it in the MUSICAL COURIER. I am, very truly yours,

ROSE LEADER.

May 21, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER.—No. I was not asked to pay for the appearance of my picture in Mr. Liebling's editorial.

Sincerely yours,

SUE HARVARD.

May 12, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER.—Father (Joseph H. Gittings) requests me to say that he knew absolutely nothing about his picture appearing in Mr. Liebling's editorial, and that it was a great surprise to him when he saw it. So far as to any pay for the appearance of the picture, I can positively say "NO."

With kind regards, I am respectfully yours,

MAUD J. GITTINGS.

May 12, 1914.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—I was Not asked to pay for the appearance of my picture in Mr. Liebling's editorial.

I am, with best wishes, yours very truly,

ALBERT D. LIEFELD.

May 11, 1914.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—Positively, "NO!"

Sincerely yours, W. R. GARDNER.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—Both Romaine Smith-Russell and myself wish to thank the MUSICAL COURIER for its generosity in using our pictures in the issue of April 8. It was certainly very good of Mr. Liebling to extend such a favor to us.

It was a complete surprise and we were not asked to pay a cent.

Again I thank you and Mr. Liebling for the kindness.

Truly yours, DALLMEYER RUSSELL.

May 13, 1914.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—In regard to the Pittsburgh issue of the COURIER, would say that Mrs. Davenny, J. Warren Erb and I were not asked to pay for pictures in issue; in fact, did not know that they were to appear until we received the paper.

Sincerely, HOLLIS EDISON DAVENNY.

May 13, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER.—It was with pleasure and surprise to me that my picture appeared in the April 8 issue of the MUSICAL COURIER. As it was entirely complimentary, I wish to thank Mr. Liebling and Mr. Riker for their great kindness, Yours most sincerely, MARTHA S. STEELE.

May 27, 1914.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—I WAS NOT!

Sincerely yours, RICHARD KNOTTS.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—Regarding the inserting of my photograph, I can only say "No." I did not pay to have it put in. Very sincerely.

REBECCA DAVIDSON.

May 11, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER.—The picture of my daughter, Hazel Lucille Peck, was not paid for. I am sure nothing could be farther from the truth and am at a loss to know where such a story could originate.

Trusting your Buffalo friends may be convinced of the error, and wishing you continued success,

I remain, sincerely, VERNON W. PECK.

May 11, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. RIKER.—I certainly did not pay the MUSICAL COURIER one cent for the insertion of my picture in the "Pittsburgh" number.

Very sincerely, MAY MARSHALL COBB.

May 12, 1914.

DEAR MR. RIKER.—NO. I was not asked to pay for the appearance of my picture.

Very sincerely, EDITH HARRIS SCOTT.

We trust that Buffalo now will rest easy and instead of wasting its time in assailing Pittsburgh, devote some of its fine energy to accomplishing things worth while in music—sufficiently worth while, in fact, to merit a future page in the MUSICAL COURIER as achieved by the Pittsburgh musicians.

EDITOR OF THE MUSICAL COURIER.

IS IT TO LAUGH?

We were called up over the telephone one morning last week and "called down" through it, or by it, for talking about ourselves and Shakespeare and Milton in the same breath in a squib called "Pizzicato con fuoco" in our last issue. When it comes to breath, however, we consider ourselves vastly superior to Shakespeare or any other dead man who has been without that useful commodity for years.

It may have been the fear that we might be sent to the front as war correspondents which caused our usual easy humor to be lacking in its customary illuminating sparkle. We thought that our reference to devil's trills and cat's fugues was sufficient to show that we meant to be frivolous, even though our attempt should appear tragic. We expect to be informed that Wilhelmj is dead at present. Perhaps some one will rush in to tell us who Alberto Bachmann is. Now, if any one feels disposed to spread the name and the fame of Alberto Bachmann, a violinist of France and an international writer on music, let him go to some of the papers that have not kept abreast with the times. The MUSICAL COURIER had a full page cover picture of this artist and a biographical sketch of him as long ago as December 10, 1913. What we really want to know is: Do they mean Ysaye when they talk about the King of the Belgians in these latest war reports? At any rate, we do not know him—never even heard of him. We also have been asked by an American composer to find out if songs with German harmonies and English lyrics are contraband?

Dresden's Royal Conservatory had 463 pupils last season, which is not much when compared with the registration of some of the American and Canadian schools of music.

HIGHER MUSICAL EDUCATION.

In this country, where every endeavor lays itself open to instant severe competition and therefore must be more or less commercialized in order to "make it pay," the music teachers and conservatories often have been forced to compromise with conscience and to give music pupils the kind of instruction many of them desire instead of the kind they ought to have.

It is reassuring to know that in proportion to the growing general culture of America there has been a corresponding improvement in the standards set by music teachers and music schools, and through the associations formed by professionals much incompetence and even quackery was done away with, for the worthy teacher, in maintaining a rigid high standard and being supported by similar action among his colleagues, soon made the community realize the difference between thoroughness and superficiality, no matter how attractive the latter might be made to appear at first blush.

However, while much has been accomplished toward elevating the standards and requirements in music teaching, and even legislation has been suggested as a permanent safeguard against the depredations of the poorly equipped musical pedagogue, some of our leading educators feel that the music schools have not done everything that is possible in arousing a desire for complete tonal education on the part of the students. As Herwegh von Ende, head of the von Ende School of Music, said in a recent address:

"At various times this past year we have read about the standardization of teaching methods, of efforts to secure governmental legislation, etc. Would we not reach our goal sooner by beginning with the standardization of our own teaching methods, and not to wait until legislation is secured for our successors, admirable and helpful as that legislation undoubtedly might be? If all our institutions and private instructors would begin their reforms at home instead of preaching what they themselves do not practice, it would not require many years to see a marked improvement. In two generations we could boast of possessing a real standard of musical instruction, but if we persist in continuing to regard musical education—musical art—as incapable of taking a firm stand and adjust existing evils by constant compromise, we are not alone hindering our educational and artistic progress, but also are responsible for fostering an attitude toward musical education and musical educators in this country that will require many generations to overcome."

Those are excellent thoughts, well expressed, especially the idea that although the uprising against questionable teaching is late in coming, no more time should be lost in following the right course. Those educators who have no regulated teaching standards should each and individually take the much discussed step in advance at once without further talk about it. Without thorough musical education no real music can be produced. Every music teacher should say to himself: "Is my musical education backed by fundamental solidity of knowledge?" If it is not he should set about immediately to rectify the condition.

Musical education should command the same respect as that enjoyed by other branches of learning; the musical profession should stand in the scheme of the world's culture as high as other dignified callings; and graduation from a musical institution should mean as much to music as graduation from a university means to general education. At present there often is a compromise somewhere. The pianist who excels merely as a pianist frequently is graduated without being able to lay claim to thorough musicianship; likewise the violinist, the singer, the cellist, and even the composer.

There are certain well understood requirements that make up the qualities of a thoroughly equipped musician, and it seems only just that a musician who has not mastered those requirements should not be given a diploma of graduation. Mr. von Ende, as a warrant of his earnestness in the matter, has compiled a new schedule of requirements which hereafter will be in force at his music school, and the list of studies and manner of their application will be published by him in the MUSICAL COURIER, beginning with this issue. On another page will be found the first of the series, which should prove to be of unusual interest to teachers and students, as showing how high the obligatory requirements are to be made at the von Ende School of Music in connection with the issuance of diplomas. If all those music schools which now are too lax in their requirements will combine with the von Ende institution to set and maintain the high standard of study as outlined by that institution there can be no question of an immediate striking and general improvement in the standard of music teaching in our conservatories throughout the country. In particular, the New England Conservatory (Boston) and the Peabody Institute (Baltimore) are advised to study the von Ende schedules closely.

BELGIUM IN MUSIC.

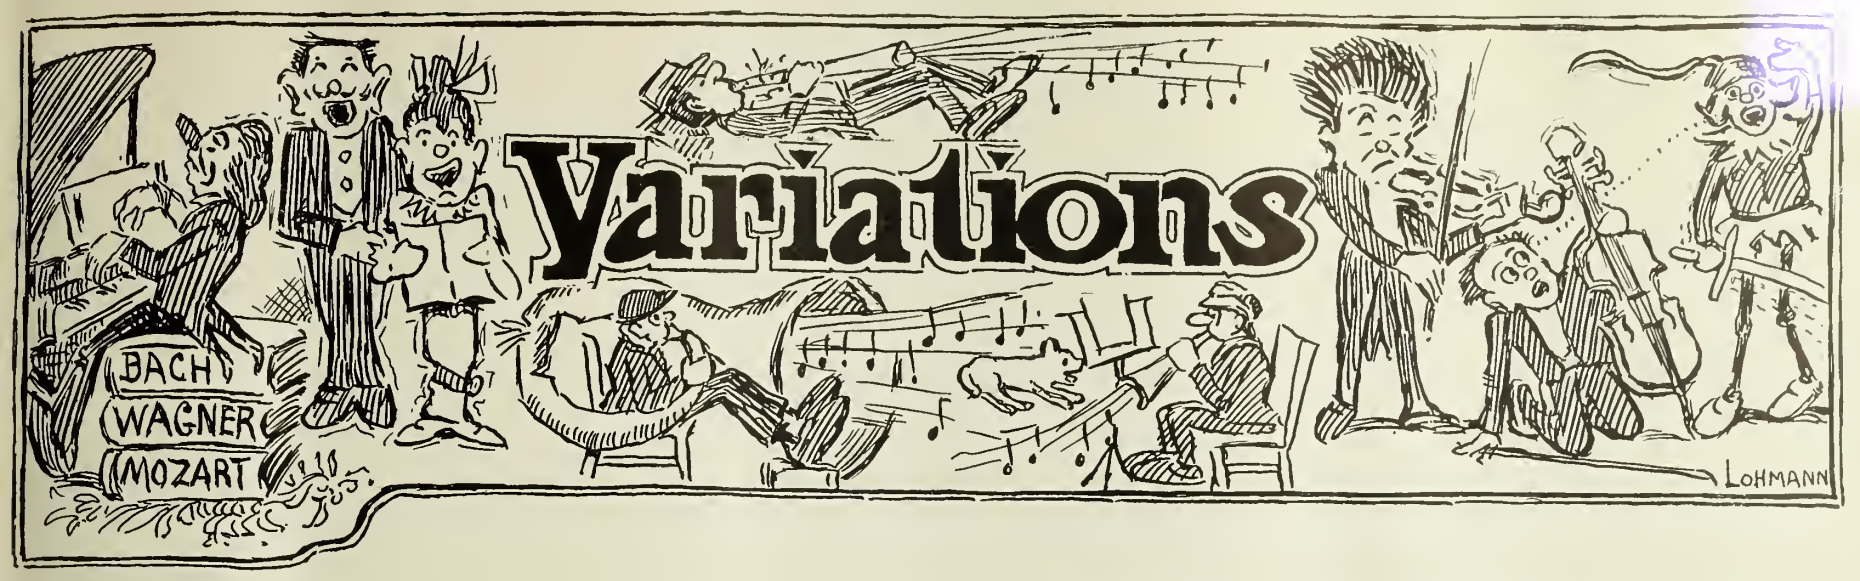
The little kingdom of Belgium, which at the present moment is fighting so desperately for its life, was part of the possessions of the House of Hapsburg as long ago as 1477. In 1555 it passed with Holland under the sway of the Spanish throne. Holland threw off the Spanish yoke in 1568, and in 1596 Belgium freed herself.

The list of Flemish, Dutch and Belgian artists is long and illustrious. Such names as Rembrandt and Ruysdael, of Holland, and Rubens and Van Dyck, of Flanders, are alone sufficient to place the painters of the Netherlands on a plane with the composers of Germany.

In music the Netherlands have played an important part. The Flemish polyphonic writers are credited with having taught Europe how to compose, although the early school of Flanders has left no composition of importance. From 1370 to 1430 is the first period of the Flemish school of music, and the fourth school came to an end about 1596.

Dufoy, of Chimay, went to Rome in 1380 and became a member of the Papal Choir. Adrian Willaert was the founder of the Venetian school, and Orlando di Lassus was one of the greatest musicians of his time.

In more modern times Belgium has given the world the composers Grétry, born at Liege in 1741, and César Franck, born in the same old famous city in 1822.



César Thomson, born in 1857 at Liege; Henri Vieuxtemps, born in 1820 at Verviers; Ovide Musin, born in 1854 near Liege, and Eugène Ysaye, born in 1858 at Liege, make a pretty good quartet of violinists for so small a country.

How strange is the irony of fate that the greatest musical nation of the world should find it necessary to attack Liege, the greatest producer of Belgian musicians!

And all this fighting, too, is in Brabant, where the lovely Elsa lived and was wooed by the Knight of the Swan, Lohengrin.

From these same lowlands came the progenitors of Ludwig van Beethoven. We are living in historic times today, and the schoolboys of the future will read about these wars. The map of Europe will then be colored after a different pattern from the one we now pore over.

Current hotel registers in Salsomaggiore, Italy, show the names as guests of Emma Eames, Emilio de Gogorza, Titta Ruffo, Riccardo Martin, Leopold Mugnone and Enrico Caruso.

ilver Threads.

In the New York Times of August 8, enough space was aken from the war news to print an article of world-wide mportance. It was called "Why Hair Grows Grey," and laborated a scientific explanation as to the effect on bristle f air, drying of pigment, etc. We read the treatise with special interest, because last week we discovered our own rst grey hair and wondered whether it signified the approach of autumn in the season of our existence. We had iagnosed the solitary sprout as a manifest of our mental gony because—Conductors play Bruckner.

Novelists write about music.

Schönberg writes against music.

"Madame Butterfly" is heard more often than "Carmen."

Some critics handle the subject of German and Italian nusic as though the question involved the heavyweight onal championship.

American newspapers give more space to the death of a treet fiddler than to the birth of a new symphony.

People telephone to the MUSICAL COURIER offices asking vhether Caruso or Borwick is greater, whether Spalding lays cello also, why a score of "The Spring Maid" is more xpensive than that of Brahms' first symphony, when Garilowitsch had his hair cut short, and what Busoni played s his second encore at Fargo, N. D., four years ago.

A Wilde Shot.

James L. Ford, the precious literary critic, refers to Oscar Vilde (in the New York Herald of August 8) as "the famus Irish charlatan." Why admit his fame, James?

What's What?

The following appeared in the Portland (Ore.) Journal f August 2, 1914:

"Voice instruction given for real estate, piano, furniture, lentistry, or what. H-989, Journal."

They Roast Well.

The discoverer of the famous sign, "Grand Opera and Music," may be interested to read the caption over an article in the New York Sun: "Austria-Hungary Home of Good Music and Good Food."

Discovered.

From the Smart Set comes this rugged estimate of an ancient and more or less honorable calling:

"Of all the beaux arts, whether graphic, symbolic or onal, the American has his doubts and suspicions, holding hem to be enervating and effeminate, and their practitionrs no better than they should be.

"For example, the notion that a grown man, sound in vind and with hair on his chest, should make a living playng the piano is to him a horror and an abomination. Such ricks are for milksops and scoundrels. Even that fellow vho dallies with the keys for the mere fun of it, and without open claim to applause and reward, is one who purues perilously a corrupting vice. Taking one day with another, he clings faithfully to his theory that piano playing s a saccharine and unmanly pastime, fit only for women nd machines, and to be abandoned even by a woman, if he would be thought wholly decent, after her first child."

How It Is Viewed Elsewhere.

F. T. Marinetti, the head of the Futurist movement in taly, sends to this department a manifesto directed against English art, in which he says that he admires it passionately but wishes to cure it of "that most grave of all naladies—passéism."

In order to understand what "Passéism" is, one must now the things Signor Marinetti objects to in English art, nd some of them are: "The worship of tradition, the onservatism of academies, the commercial acquiescence f English artists, the effeminacy of their art and their omplete absorption toward a purely decorative sense, the essimistic, sceptical, and narrow views of the English ublic, who stupidly adore the pretty-pretty, the commonplace, the soft, sweet, and mediocre, the sickly revivals of medievalism, the Garden Cities with their curfews and artificial battlements, the Maypole Morris dancers, Aestheticism, Oscar Wilde, the Pre-Raphaelites, Neoprimitives and Paris, the perverted snob who ignores or despises all English daring, originality and invention, but welcomes eagerly all foreign originality and daring, the indifference of the King, the State, and the politicians toward all arts, the English notion that art is a useless pastime, only fit for women and schoolgirls, that artists are poor deluded fools to be pitied and protected, and art a ridiculous complaint, a mere topic for table talk, the universal right of the ignorant to discuss and decide upon all questions of art, the old grotesque ideal of genius—drunken, filthy, ragged, outcast, drunkenness the synonym of art, Chelsea the Montmartre of London, the Post-Rossettis with long hair under the sombrero, and other passéist filth, the sentimentality with which they load their pictures—to compensate, perhaps, for the utter lack of sentimentality in their life, pioneers suffering from arrested development, from success or from despair, pioneers sitting snug on their tight little islands, or vegetating in their oases, refusing to resume the march, the pioneers who say, 'We love progress, but not yours,' the wearied pioneers who say, 'Post-impressionism is all right, but it must not go further than deliberate naïveté' (Gauguin), and the mania for immortality (a masterpiece must disappear with its author; immortality in art is a disgrace)."

It appears, then, that English music and English music making are all right, for Signor Marinetti says nothing specific against it. On, then, with the oratorio, the ballad concerts, the children's fiddle orchestras of 3,500 players, and Sir Edward Elgar's formidable lucubrations.

Musical War Notes.

Caruso has offered, in the event that Italy clashes with Austria, to don his famous (and unforgettable) Faust costume and sally forth single handed to frighten the foe.

What Russia really is afraid of losing is her caviar crop.

Opera in German will not be sung in England, France or Russia; opera in French and Russian will not be sung in Germany or Austria; the fate of opera in Italian remains doubtful as yet; and opera in English—but pshaw! where is opera in English sung at any time?

One point which agitates us considerably is the attitude of Costa Rica. It is the only country which so far has not shown signs of declaring war against Germany.

It is said that Ysaye, the Belgian, enraged when he heard of the German attack on Liege, at once murdered the Beethoven concerto.

The English troops marching to the strains of Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance" are reported to be moving backward.

Clarence Lucas, censoring his own war messages, sends us these thoughts:

"The Peace Palace at The Hague is said to be too small

HABITS OF COMPOSERS, III: BEETHOVEN HAD THE HABIT OF BEING DEAF AND OF DYING IN 1827. HIS AURAL AFFLICTION WOULD BE RATHER A BLESSING WERE HE ALIVE NOW.

for the present concert of Europe. It had better be called Carnage Hall.

"All the nations of Europe are up in the air at present fighting in gasbags and aeroplanes. When will the 'Flying Dutchman' join in the chorus?

"Travelers on the continent of Europe will be less likely to lose their baggage if they travel by one of the trunk lines."

We are curious to know what will happen when Toscanini attempts to direct the German orchestra at the Metropolitan next winter.

A cablegram which, singularly enough, passed the censorship lines, informs "Variations" that both Germany and France protest against the appearance on neutral American concert programs of the Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria."

The war has made the New York Times dizzy. In its issue of August 8, that enterprising journal says: "Arthur Nikisch, the leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is in Europe without funds."

The French are importing from America 200,000 Singer sewing machines with which to hem the Belgian border.

A German chorister from the Metropolitan writes to a friend that he never again will eat French peas and Italian olives, or drink Russian vodka and English ale.

This is the time for the English and Germans to write new national anthems and finally to divorce themselves from the tune they have shared in common so long. Suppose a German band played "Heil Dir" at the same time that an English band performed "God Save the King." How could either nation have the heart to fire on the other?

A friend of ours calls Servia's little Balkan ally, the Mountednegroes.

American composers should declare a permanent moratorium.

Siegfried Herz writes from Toronto: "Poor European artists! In place of piano, pencil, brush and chisel, they now are busying themselves with gun, rifle, sabre and bayonet. It is sad beyond words."

Near the Forty-second street subway station a newsboy urchin was crying out war extras last Thursday containing news (later denied) of the loss of nineteen warships by the Germans. The youngster gravely droned the cry: "Here y'are, here y'are, your war extry! War extry! Kaiser loses nineteen boats! Nineteen boats lost by Kaiser! Better luck next time! Here y'are, here y'are."

LEONARD LIEBLING.

Emil J. Polak, Accompanist and Coach.

Prominent among authoritative accompanists and coaches of Greater New York stands the young American pianist and composer, Emil J. Polak, who has been prominently identified with the American concert world for the past several years. Polak's earlier music studies were accomplished in New York City. Thereafter he was enrolled for a period of four years at the Conservatory of Music at Prague, where he won marked honors both in the piano and composition classes. Following his graduation from the conservatory the next two years were spent in concertizing throughout Europe. During this tour he was heard in one hundred different European cities, and everywhere accredited with rare musicianly qualities and fine talent, gifts that later led to his selection and appointment to the post of principal coach for the Royal Opera at Prague.

After his return to America Mr. Polak's services were accordingly much sought after in this country, especially by the operatic artists, as his knowledge and wide experience in the operatic work increased his pianistic value. His work with the late Putnam Griswold during the last three years before that lamented American basso's demise brought him into worthy recognition throughout America. In 1910, by special request from the Journalist Society of Prague, he was invited to return there and conduct an orchestral performance of his "Symphonic Poem" and several song numbers. This guest appearance at Prague proved to be one of the most successful periods in the young man's career thus far, and was an experience well worthy of pride on the part of a young American artist.

A recent example of Mr. Polak's splendid work was witness on Saturday evening, August 1, at the Auditorium in Ocean Grove, N. J., when Orville Harrold, the tenor, appeared in recital, and the Polak accompaniments were furnished in a flawless manner, and all from memory. On the Friday evening previous to this, in the same hall, a similar performance was heard, when he accompanied the prominent Bohemian tenor, George Dostal.

The report that Atlantic City tangoed to the tune of "Onward, Christian Soldiers" suggests a necessity for the revision of the words. This, perhaps:

Tango, Christian soldiers;
Tango as to war;
With the Vernon Castles
Gliding on before.

—Puck.

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

John Church Company.

"La Favorita Tango," a piano solo, by Charles Willeby, is a well written and really melodious dance with a good deal of Spanish character in it. The Tango dance is in the same rhythm as the famous Habanera from "Carmen."

"Harlequinade," a piano solo, by G. P. Centanini, reminds one at first of Grieg's "Butterflies." But the resemblance is only in the rhythmical figures and not in the melody. This charming composition is by no means easy; it is well worth the study of the better class of amateurs and advanced students. It ought also to have considerable vogue among teachers.

Two piano compositions by A. Walter Kramer, "Rhapsody," "Valse Triste," are additions to this composer's growing list of works in small forms. The second one is sad and simple, and the first one is bright and more difficult to play.

"Elves at Play," an easy teaching piece in the nature of an etude, is the name of a little piano composition by Edward A. Mueller. Its principal phrase is like the first theme of Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" overture.

"Scenes de Valse," three pieces for the piano, "Aveu," "Coquetterie," "Rêve Réalisé," by Reginald de Koven, op. 369. These works are all characterized by that melodious ease and unforced harmonic manner so long associated with the music of Reginald de Koven. They are likewise well within the powers of most of the good amateur pianists of the day, and they are edited with more than usual care. There is hardly a phase, or even a note, that is devoid of an expression mark of some sort.

Two compositions for the piano, "Picciola," "Pandora's Imps," by Ruth Vincent, are melodiously simple, straightforward, and unpretentious pieces for young pianists. There is no atmosphere to puzzle them or subtlety to comprehend. But this music has a pleasing surface and is playable.

Organ Music—"Grand Cœur Militaire," by G. H. Federlein; "Serenade," by C. Demarest; "Concert Prelude in D Minor," by A. Walter Kramer; "Finale in B Flat," by Frederick Maxson; "Canon in B Minor," by R. Schumann; "Gavotte," by G. B. Martini; "Meditation," by Th. Bubeck; "Berceuse" and "A Song of Joy," by G. Waring Stebbins, and "Marche Nuptiale," by Ethelbert Nevin. The new additions to the list are the last four. Th. Bubeck's "Meditation" has some impassioned and powerful moments which are unusual in a meditation, but the musical value of the passages justifies the experiment. The "Song of Joy" and "Berceuse," by G. Waring Stebbins, are both good organ music which will surely find its way to the programs of recitalists. Ethelbert Nevin's "Marche Nuptiale" is a slender work without the strength and pomp of marches in general, but it has the charm and sweetness which were Nevin's birthright.

"A Dreaming Rose," a song, with words by Alfred Hyatt and music by Victor Harris, could hardly be more simple and direct. It is full of tenderness and genuine feeling and is very vocal.

"Mignonne," a song, with French words and an English translation, by F. H. Martens, and with music by M Wagniere Horton, has much to recommend it, for it is not complicated or far fetched. The accompaniment is attractive and the voice melody has a lilt that is altogether pleasing. If the time signature had been 9-8 instead of 3-4 it would not have been necessary to mark so many triplets.

"Sérénade Créole," a song, with words by Frederick H. Martens and music by Reginald de Koven, is fully worthy of the reputation of the authors. The composer has long been known as one of the most fertile and melodious of American composers, and there seems to be no sign of exhaustion after more than twenty-five years of incessant output.

"Lovely Katie," a song, by Harry Rowe Shelley, is a pleasant and graceful waltz setting of an Irish ballad, in which the composer has made no forced attempts to write Irish music.

"Mother o' Mine," a song, with words by Rudyard Kipling and music by Arthur Claassen, has a good deal of the tragic sentiment of the poem in the music, but not enough of its bitterness to kill the sweetness of the melodies and smoothly flowing harmonies. The poem can hardly be called attractive from a musical point of view, but the composer has succeeded in making a satisfactory song nevertheless.

Antonia Sawyer's Attractive Artists.

Antonia Sawyer will present the following artists during the season 1914-1915: Julia Culp, the world's famous lieder singer and the exceptional demands from all over the country for this great artist necessitates her returning to America the early part of November, while heretofore her season did not begin until January. Coenraad von Bos will be her accompanist as usual.

Albert Spalding, after a successful tour abroad, is also under this management. Mr. Spalding will be heard in several joint recitals with Mme. Culp in New York and other large cities. Mr. Spalding's tour will begin early in November. His first appearance will be in recital November 11 in Carnegie Hall, after which he will go as far south as New Orleans and west to the Coast. Andre Benoist will be Mr. Spalding's accompanist.

Katharine Goodson, pianist, returns to America January 1, and will have a long tour, playing with many of the leading symphony orchestras in all the prominent cities.

Emilio de Gogorza, baritone, will open his tour in Maine. He will sing at the Maine festival concerts in both Bangor and Portland. Emma Eames, Mr. de Gogorza's distinguished wife, will make but two appearances this season, one at Portland and one at Bangor in connection with the Maine festivals. This prima donna will sing the first note in the new auditorium in Portland, the construction of which is now being completed.

Jan Sikesz, the Dutch pianist, will return in October to fill a number of bookings throughout the Middle West. Later Mr. Sikesz will make an extended tour through the South and Canada.

Cordelia Lee, violinist, who is at present in Russia, will begin her American tour at the Maine festival also. This talented artist has been spending her summer abroad preparing extensive repertoire.

Eleanor Spencer, pianist, whose fine reputation has made her an artist to be warmly welcomed, will be heard with several symphony orchestras.

Helene Koelling, colorature soprano, is considered a strong attraction by the Sawyer management. This artist is being booked throughout the country, and will be heard in recital the early part of the season.

Artha Williston, dramatic soprano, will begin the season at the Maine festivals. Mme. Williston will sing in "Elijah" both at Bangor and Portland. She will appear on the same program with John McCormack in Springfield later.

Angelo Cortese, harpist, well known in the South, is also an added attraction to the Sawyer management.

Secured the Interview.

A new method of securing news seems inadvertently to have been discovered by a London newspaper man, who recently called upon Mme. Melba with the object of unearthing some facts about a projected Australian tour.

The diva, seldom disposed to loquacity or profound self-revelation under the circumstances of an interview, had little or nothing to say on this occasion, particularly as the details of the tour had not yet been arranged. But at this juncture the reporter was abruptly provided with matter for a paragraph, at least, of the sort of news designated as of "human interest" in journalistic circles on this side of the water. The unusual scrivener had—whether by chance or with a purpose is not made clear—brought his seven year old son with him. So the prima donna, who is described as "passionately fond of children," after refusing to satisfy the professional curiosity of her interrogator, presently launched into a chat with the youngster who declared with naive bluntness that he was "not old enough to go to the opera to hear you sing." Whereat the diva took the hint, sat down at the piano and sang "Caro Nome." Must father pay you for the song?" queried the boy. Father did not have to, and the London paper which published the account headed it "Melba Refuses Fee."—Exchange.

Liege is to dedicate a Cesar Franck statue very soon.

Cadman on "Rag-time."

To the Musical Courier:

Some weeks ago you brought forward a very interesting curiosity in that example of "ragtime" culled from Frederick Keel's collection of "Elizabethan Love Songs."

The example may well keep company with its sisters and brothers in syncopated rhythm (otherwise ragtime, since you, classic MUSICAL COURIER, use this term yourself), as, for instance, those of Oriental, early Occidental, traditional Celtic, primitive African, and primitive American—otherwise Indian.

How can a student of comparative folksong be blind to the fact that the "soil-element"—for want of a better term—dominates true folk melodies, incidentally giving birth to a co-ordinating syncopation? There are, of course, exceptions, and I shall include in this category the old French, German and Italian folksongs, with a few English examples thrown in; but I speak of those infant forms of folksong, those of a more primitive contour—with regard to my contention of related "soil-element" and syncopation. An examination of hundreds of American Indian songs of various tribal origin and comparison with Hindu, Chinese, Moorish, Australasian, early English and Celtic, Scandinavian, and Slavic songs gives rise to a conviction that the underlying principle of human musical expression, regardless of age or evolution, is subjectively the same.

It is the objective form which alters, and that aided by intellect and human ingenuity. One may find the soul of music in these exotics of musical expression, as he may find it in the more evolved forms culminating with the modern school, although we regret many of the moderns have lost sight of this vitalizing principle.

Did you ever stop to think that "soul" and "soil," though etymologically at variance, are singularly, philosophically, related? The most vital music, the music which has come down through the past three centuries, and which is accorded a place of honor, is tinged with a simple folk-element, and this in turn by syncopation or almost syncopation. The present Broadway ragtime is dangerously (?) near to corroborating my contention, although highbrow brethren will scoff at this.

Please remember that underneath all the inanity, the asininity of most of the Broadway output, the elemental emotional appeal, is found the germ of a national expression. It may be quite embryonic, quite crude, quite primitive, but it is obviously pregnant and needs but intelligent guidance to lead it to fruition and development.

So far as the writer is concerned, the study of aboriginal songs has brought with it the firm conviction that syncopation is a dominant and therefore dynamic concomitant in the development of a healthy national music. This does not in any way mean that in order to have an unmistakable American music it is necessary to insert literally Indian, Negro, Creole or idealized ragtime tunes, nor is it necessary to have syncopated rhythms in every single composition turned out. Such a procedure would be absurd; it would make us a laughing stock. There are many ways, many forms of employing these dynamics, and it remains for future composers to find them.

I am not sufficiently bold, sufficiently erudite to compound a recipe for the use of my brother composers, so that all we can hope to do is to work out the problem each in our own way.

The question of ethnological relationship is not argued for or against. What is implied is that the beginnings of a healthy, red-corpuscled American music may be achieved by employing certain idealized and dignified forms of syncopation, coupled with a proper sense of balance and sanity in the creation of such music. The restless energy and indomitable will of America is somehow symbolized in terms of an intelligent syncopation, and this statement is not made in any jingoistic spirit either.

Such a musical form will, of course, be merely the inception and not the solution. A few American composers have consciously or unconsciously cast certain large orchestral and chamber works in this pattern and have achieved a relative success. Why not experiment still further?

With anticipation of your own views of this question, which seem pertinent at this time, I am

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES WAKEFIELD CADMAN.

Drake, Colorado, July 25.

Eleanor Spencer's Popularity.

"When a young artist has captured the critical publics of Berlin and New York she may be proclaimed as one who has arrived." Eleanor Spencer, the noted American pianist, is one of a very few performers among her sex who has gradually advanced to the foremost ranks. Last season was her first in America, after her seven years abroad. Through her recitals in New York and Boston she leaped at once bound to solid fame and her manager, as might have been expected, was interviewed concerning dates for the season of 1914-15. Bookings have been closed with the New York Philharmonic Society, at Carnegie Hall, New York; with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, in Cincinnati, and with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. Miss Spencer has likewise been engaged for several prominent club concerts.

Miss Spencer's European triumphs include appearances with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra (three concerts), under the direction of Dr. Ernst Kunwald; with the London Symphony Orchestra, under Arthur Nikisch; the Brighton (England) Orchestra (three concerts); the Gewerbehaus Symphony Orchestra of Dresden (three concerts); the Amsterdam (Holland) Instrumenten Verein; the Blüthner Orchestra of Berlin; the Cologne Orchestra, under Steinbach; the Munich Concert Verein Orchestra; Queen's Hall Orchestra, in London, under Sir Henry Wood.

The intellectual and emotional qualities are wonderfully combined in Eleanor Spencer's art; that accounts for the strong impression she has made upon the most critical audiences in America and Europe. In playing the works of Bach, Beethoven and Brahms, there is rare masculine breadth in Miss Spencer's playing, and in the romantic music of Chopin, Schumann and Mendelssohn one is entranced by the poetry of her performance. Miss Spencer is one of the great women pianists of today, and the fact that she is an American has not diminished the value of her name.

ILLINOIS MUSIC TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION OFFERS PRIZE.

Contest Open to American and Naturalized Composers Resident in the United States.

One of the first and foremost among American organizations to encourage and foster native born talent among musicians has been the Illinois Music Teachers' Association. For nearly thirty years this body of the leading musicians of the State of Illinois have neglected no opportunity to exploit the work of Illinois composers, as well as those by other American writers. A feature of every yearly convention has been a concert devoted exclusively to works by Americans.

Now that the Panama-Pacific Exposition will be held in San Francisco in 1915 the I. M. T. A. has found a larger scope for its aims in that direction and has instituted a prize contest open to the American and naturalized composers resident in the United States. The particulars, terms and conditions of this contest will be found below.

The Illinois Music Teachers' Association offers a prize of $500 for the best orchestral composition in large form—symphony, fantasie or suite—by an American composer, native born, or naturalized, under the following conditions:

1. The orchestral work entered in the contest must be a new composition, never before played in public.

2. Scores must be accompanied by complete parts for symphony orchestra.

3. The association reserves right for public performance of the successful composition in Chicago during April, 1915, at the Centralia convention in May, and at San Francisco, as often as the conductors of the Exposition Orchestra desire to give it a pubic hearing—otherwise the work is to remain the property of the composer.

4. The association also reserves the right to select for public performance at the Chicago concert, and for 1915 convention, any of the other compositions entered in contest.

5. All compositions to be handed to the chairman of the prize contest committee on or before March 1, 1915.

6. Those intending to enter compositions in competition should notify the president of the Illinois Music Teachers' Association at earliest date.

All requests for further information should be addressed to Glenn Dillard Gunn, chairman, Fine Arts Building, Chicago, or E. R. Lederman, president, Centralia, Ill. The committee is as follows:

Glenn Dillard Gunn, chairman.
Edgar Nelson.
Thomas M. McBurney.
Maurice Rosenfeld.
Adolph Weidig.
Walter Spry.

David Bispham's Plans.

David Bispham, the distinguished American baritone, will sing as a free lance this season in concerts and all-English lecture recitals. There will be distinct periods which he will devote entirely to concertizing. The managers, all of whom will book Mr. Bispham, will be advised of these periods, so that he will be able to apportion his time in his different fields of endeavor.

Last season was Mr. Bispham's most successful one, he being far busier than in any previous one in his wonderful career. He sang in a great many concerts in the intervals of his vaudeville engagements and he will do the same this year.

Nature's Orchestra.

From the maples in front of the house you hear [illegible] through the long hours of the afternoon the strident song of the cicada, which continues until the sun goes down and through the mellow twilight. His last notes are invaded by the cheerful chant of the cricket, a sundown chorister, whose melody continues through the night, to cease only when "the sun in russet mantle clad walks o'er the dew of yon eastern hill."

To these has been added a new musician, whose first notes have just been heard, and whose monotonous repertoire will be with us each night until the first frost. This performer is the tree toad or tree frog. He deserves an annual notice quite as much as the robin. Though he never molts a feather, he sings, as does no bird in this latitude, all night long, and may be called the Hoosier nightingale, says the Indianapolis News.

Step out into the backyard and try to locate him. When you stand beneath the plum tree you are certain that he is in the apple tree a dozen steps away. You stand under the apple tree and his music comes from the cherry tree. One more remove and you cannot tell where he is; he seems to be everywhere. He is, indeed, a ventriloquist. If you chance to determine the tree in which he may be and place your hand upon the trunk his music ceases.

Neither cicada nor cricket is a vocalist. They are instrumentalists. The cricket and the cicada are fiddlers. The cicada carries his musical apparatus at the base of the abdomen, the cricket makes his music by rubbing the border of one front wing against a horny ridge or file on the under surface of the other. Other fiddlers need to rosin their bows, but the cricket among fiddlers seems to be in a class by himself, and is not disturbed by any fluctuations in the rosin market.

The name cicada means "tree cricket." The insect, in its perfect state, lives but a few weeks. Its eggs are laid by the female in slits cut in the bark of live twigs, and it is, say naturalists who have studied the insect, by cutting these slits and not by feeding on the foliage that the cicadas cause injury to trees. The young, which are hatched in about six weeks, do not feed on the green leaves, but drop to the ground and burrow down to the roots of the tree, where they live by sucking the juices of the roots for nearly seventeen years. The cicada then crawls up out of the ground, molts for the last time, and then we hear him in the tree tops. It is thus the longest lived of insects, requiring seventeen years for development. The eggs are eaten by ants and other insects and the larvæ are devoured by birds, especially woodpeckers, and by toads, frogs and other reptiles. There are some broods of cicadas that mature in thirteen years.

The tree toad or tree frog attains a length of two inches and is green, gray or brown above, with irregular dark blotches and yellow below. His croaks or trills are not sounds of revelry, he belongs to no musicians' union, and frequently works for hours and hours overtime.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Carl Flesch's Plans.

War has changed the concert plans of Carl Flesch, the eminent Hungarian violinist, who was booked for an extended European tour, prior to his American season, which was announced for the months of January and February, 1915.

Owing to the fact that probably at least three of the noted violinists will be engaged in military duty, Carl Flesch, who is a citizen of Holland, will come to America early in October for the entire season. Although Flesch is a Hungarian by birth, he became a citizen of Holland during his residence in Amsterdam.

A cablegram from Flesch states that he and his entire family are at Zandzoort, Holland, having a delightful summer holiday beyond the war zone.

A Wonderful Drummer.

Probably the most remarkable drummer who ever lived was Jean Henri, the famous tambour major of the Emperor Napoleon. One of his feats was to play on fifteen different toned drums at the same time in so soft and harmonious a manner that instead of the deafening uproar that might have been expected the effect was that of a novel and complete instrument. In playing he passed from one drum to the other with such wonderful quickness that the eyes of the spectators could hardly follow the movement of his hands and body.—Mt. Vernon, Ohio, Daily Banner.

Nothing Doing.

"Madame, the musicians want something more to drink."

"Certainly not! Do they think they are paid to make the bottles dance?"—Le Rire.

Bogert a Talented Motorist.

Walter L. Bogert is back in New York although not for long. His recent invasion of the New England States proved such a satisfactory one that he is to try part of it again. In his own automobile this well known New York vocal instructor traveled 1,640 miles without a puncture. "What you can do once, you can do again," is his motto—hence the second trip.

WALTER L. BOGERT.

On his way north, Mr. Bogert took the inland route, traveling via Hartford, Conn.; Brattleboro, Vt., thence through the Green Mountains to Bennington, Vt., and from there to Saratoga Springs, N. Y., where he attended the New York State Music Teachers' Convention, held in June.

After the convention, Mr. Bogert toured across the Green Mountains again, on over the White Mountains to Gorham, N. H., thence to Belgrade Lakes, Me., on through Augusta, Me., Bangor, Me., thence down to Kennebunkport, Me., thence over to Provincetown, near Cape Cod, and from there took the south shore route to Music Colonly, R. I.

During his tour Mr. Bogert met many well known musicians, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Percy, at Plymouth; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Rogers, at Saunderstown, R. I.; Carolyn Beebe, at Mystic, Conn., and the numerous members of Music Colony.

Mr. Bogert will motor to Peterboro, N. H., on August 17, to attend the MacDowell Festival, which is to take place August 19-23.

Perception of Music.

Perception of musical sounds appears to be a very uncertain power. In the observations on sound of Dr. Marage, as told to the French Academy, it was decided to change a faulty piano after a certain musical performance, and of twenty musicians who requested to be present at the repetition of the same program, all noted the superiority of the new instrument. But it hapened that, for some unknown reason, the piano had not been changed. Suggestion had much to do with the musical effects, and it is inferred that critics may be often influenced by the special disposition and condition of their auditory nerves.—Columbia, S. C., State.

Spalding Tells When to Get Rid of Theories.

Whenever Albert Spalding, the celebrated violinist, is asked to give his opinion on any phase of his art, or concerning any other subject of human interest, one is certain to get a clear statement from this intellectual and gifted artist. Mr. Spalding quite evidently is not given to theorizing about schools of music. In speaking with a friend not long ago, he said:

ALBERT SPALDING AND HIS ACCOMPANIST, ANDRE BENOIST.

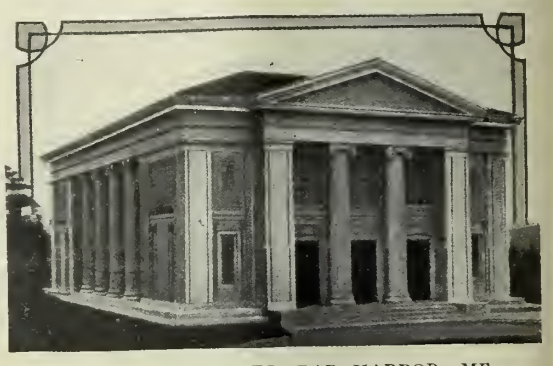
"One spends the first eight or ten years of study, learning the rules of music, technical, phrasing, tonal, interpretative, etc., but the rest of one's life must be spent in learning the exceptions. The last time I was in Russia, which was the past winter, I had the pleasure of being invited to a dinner at the home of Professor Leopold Auer, where Glazounow, the composer, and Mengelberg, the Amsterdam musical director, were among the guests. On this rare occasion, I was privileged to hear these distinguished men, including the host, discuss music in a way that resulted in an explosion of many of the the-ories—theories to which they themselves dedicated many years.

"Theories are the stumbling of the analyst. And, as a theory to be practicable has to be limited to the scope of the human being's narrow vision—and to exclude the possibility of the imagination—the artist always rejects them from the moment that they cease being counsellors and seek a more usurping position on the mind. The-ories are the scaffoldings, by the aid of which the House of Art should be built, and that are to be destroyed (or discarded) with the fulfillment of the mason work."

American Song Writers.



The American song writer is rapidly coming into his own. Several distinguished foreign artists have lately added numerous songs of American origin to their repertoires, while many of our own artists have long given practical proof of their appreciation of the work of their colleagues.

It will be recalled that Mme. Nordica rarely sang a program on which songs of American composition did not figure; and so representative a singer as George Hamlin has, from the beginning of his career, given the stanchest support to the American composer. An interested glance at some of Hamlin's back programs discloses the following names: Horatio Parker, Jessie Gaynor, Frederick Root, Dudley Buck, Walter Spry, Frederic Beale, W. G. Hammond, Beardsley Van Der Water, John West, Victor Harris, James H. Rogers, Ethelbert Nevin, Walter Morse Rummel, Henry Hadley, George Chadwick, Arthur Nevin, Winter Watts, Margaret Ruthven Lang, Charles Fonteyn Manney, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, Louis Campbell-Tipton, Walter Damrosch, Carl Busch, Ernest Kroeger, W. W. Gilchrist, Gena Branscombe, Grace Wassall, Arthur Foote, Clayton Johns, Sidney Homer, George Colburn, Holwell Atkinson, William Arms Fisher, Eleanor Everest Freer, Clough-Leiter, G. A. Grant-Schaefer, William R. Chapman, Mary Turner Salter, John Alden Carpenter, John Palmer, Frederic Ayres, etc.

Francis Rogers Sings at Bar Harbor.

Accompanying this article is a picture of the unique Building of Arts at Bar Harbor, Me. At this hall, Francis Rogers, baritone, and Edward Morris, pianist, gave a concert on the afternoon of August 1. Mr. Rogers' excellent voice was heard to good advantage and his audience was delighted with his selections. To designate any particular number as being better sung than the rest, would be to do Mr. Rogers an injustice, for each was sung with excellent diction and thoughtful interpretation. This was his part of the program:

Das Veilchen	Mozart
Die Ehre Gottes	Beethoven
Ein Ton	Cornelius
Aufenthalt	Schubert
L'Amour de moi	Old French
Castle Song	Old French
Since First We Met	Rubinstein
Cradle Song of the Peasant	Moussorgsky
Love Song of the Idiot	Moussorgsky

BUILDING OF ARTS, BAR HARBOR, ME.

Sylvelin	Sinding
The Fairy Pipers	Brewer
Border Ballad (Scott)	Cowen

Mr. Morris was heard in five Chopin numbers and the Bach-Busoni prelude and fugue in D major.

Precision in Music Terms on Increase.

After studying for seven years to learn why music teachers ought to call a beat a "beat," a note a "note" and not designate a "pulse group" as a "measure," the committee on terminology of the department of music of the N. E. A. made its report this morning.

"There has been a great change of attitude during the past few years among professional people with whom I have come in contact regarding the importance of precise and systematic statement about the various phenomena of music," said Charles I. Rice, chairman, director of music in the public schools of Worcester, Mass., who presented the report.

"Some practical people have been trying it, and find that the singing of their classes is in no wise impaired. On the contrary, they have found that logical, consistent statement has given the pupils a far clearer knowledge, and a firmer grasp of the subject.—St. Paul, Minn., Dispatch, July 7, 1914.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N.W.

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
BECHSTEIN HALL STUDIOS, LONDON
Private address, 40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON

IRMA SEYDEL
European Tour, July, 1914—Jan. 1915
American Tour, after Feb. 1, 1915
Address THEODORE SEYDEL, 70 Westland Ave., Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies
In London Until July 28,1914
Address Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDEN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

DAVID

BISPHAM

will sing

as a Free Lance

this season

in Concerts

and

All-English

Lecture-

Recitals

BISPHAM

In the Concert Field this Season

BOOKED BY ALL MANAGERS

CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall	HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall	HANSON, 437 5th Avenue	R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway	WOLFSOHN, 1 W. 34th Street

(And Others)

NEW YORK

A NUMBER OF CHICAGO MUSICIANS ARE IN EUROPE.

Frederick Stock's Premature Return on the Steamship Kronprinzessin Cecilie—Conductor of Chicago Symphony Orchestra Lands at Bar Harbor Instead of in Europe—Current Brevities.

Chicago, Ill., August 8, 1914.

Among the many Chicago teachers and singers who have journeyed this year to Europe may be mentioned the names of Hanna Butler, soprano; Karleton Hackett, head of the vocal department at the American Conservatory of Music and critic on the Chicago Evening Post; Louise St. John Westervelt, soprano and conductor of the Columbia Chorus; Leonora Allen, soprano; Albert Lindquist, tenor; Gustav Holmquist, basso; Rudolph Engberg, baritone; Adolf Muhlmann, Ettore Ruffo and Mr. and Mrs. Knupfer, all teachers at the Chicago Musical College; Georgia Kober, pianist and president of the Sherwood Music School; Della Thal, pianist; Daniel Protheroe, conductor of the Irish Choral Society; Otto Roehrborn, violinist and member of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and the Beethoven Trio; Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler; George Hamlin; Vida Llewellyn; Leon Sametini, head of the violin department at the Chicago Musical College; Mrs. Stacey Williams, vocal teacher, and Katherine Stevenson, soprano.

Frederick Stock's Premature Return.

Frederick Stock, who sailed on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie for Germany, was one of the most surprised parties on the boat when informed by the captain that they would land in Bar Harbor, Me. Mr. Stock will return to Chicago very shortly and will have to wait a year or so before going abroad again to get novelties for the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Probably Mr. Stock's new material will have to come from his own output. As he is a prolific writer, Stock numbers should be inscribed on the programs this winter with more frequency than heretofore; only once or twice during the season is the public given a chance to hear one of his foremost compositions.

Evelyn Hopper in Chicago.

Evelyn Hopper, the well known Omaha manager, soprano, and for several years the correspondent for the Musical Courier, has been in Chicago for the last three weeks. Miss Hopper left for her home last Sunday. Miss Hopper will, as usual, present excellent artists in her Omaha course, which this year will include Busoni, Kreisler, Gerville-Reache, George Hamlin and Mme. Schumann-Heink.

A representative of the Musical Courier informed Miss Hopper that during his tour around the country last fall Leonard Liebling, editor in chief of the Musical Courier, was very sorry to have missed meeting her in her home city, but after traveling in vain in a taxicab for many miles through muddy streets, he was obliged finally to return reluctantly to the station to catch a train, thus being deprived of a rare pleasure. Miss Hopper answered that she, too, was very sorry, but said that the studios in Omaha are out of convenient reach from downtown, but that this season she would locate nearer to the center of the city. She was informed by the writer that next fall she would probably be visited and her views would form part of an article to be devoted to Omaha and its musicians.

Tenneys to Give Operetta.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lee Tenney will present next season an interesting novelty to their audiences in the form of a one act operetta, "Clarissa's Rival." The libretto is by Josephine Trott and the music by Eric Delamarter. The operetta is thirty minutes long and will comprise the second half of the program.

A. J. Gantvoort Passes Through Chicago.

A. J. Gantvoort, the popular and successful director of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, was one of the callers at this office during the week. Mr. Gantvoort is enjoying a well deserved vacation and passed through Chicago on his way to Muskegon, where he will spend two weeks fishing. Mr. Gantvoort left Cincinnati the latter part of July and stopped several days in Mackinac Island, where he visited his daughters. The astute director will be back at his desk at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music about August 20 to get ready for the free scholarship examination which will take place at school on September 1, and the partial scholarship examination, which will be passed on September 2. On September 3 the school will open and Mr. Gantvoort hopes for a big season.

Chicago Composer a Bride.

Helena M. Bingham, a Chicago composer, was married on July 10 to Warren Edgar Burton. Mr. and Mrs. Burton will be at home after December 1, in Monarch, Col.

Mary Lindsay Oliver's Vacation.

Mary Lindsay Oliver, the well known impresaria and instructor, of Moline, Ill., is enjoying her summer vacation at Crystal Lake, Ill., where she is resting, yet practising for her programs during this coming season. Daily she can be seen horseback riding on the road. Several pupils wanted to go to her summer home with her, but she had to decline and only accepted two vocal students, who were so persistent in their eagerness to remain with Miss Oliver that she acceded to their desires.

Since going to Crystal Lake Mr. and Mrs. Heniot Levy have rented a cottage and they, too, are enjoying their summer in that beautiful Illinois spot.

Vocal Department of the Von Ende School of Music.

The selection of a faculty for vocal instruction is a task requiring judgment both penetrating and discriminating. No instrument is as delicate as the voice. No teacher is taxed with greater responsibility than the voice builder. To have enlisted in the singing department of his school four artists and teachers representing distinctly different styles of singing, is a matter upon which Herwegh von Ende, director of the von Ende School of Music, New York, is to be congratulated. Such a faculty makes for a wise and generous eclecticism, for that application of the personal equation which is one of the essential features of all modern education.

Mme. Adrienne Remenyi-von Ende, whose exquisitely beautiful soprano and artistic interpretations are remembered by many music lovers who heard her concertize with her father, the late Eduard Remenyi, one of the most famous violinists of his time, has had an extraordinary opportunity for study and makes her pupils profit by it. Among her teachers was Edmond Duverney, late director of the opera class at the Paris Conservatoire, and among the distinguished musicians who warmly appreciated her talent were Ambroise Thomas, Bernard, Gounod, Godard and Massenet. Thus equipped she came to the United States to appear with her father on the concert stages of all the larger cities, and a few years later settled in New York to devote herself to teaching.

The results which Mme. von Ende has achieved in voice placing, voice culture, in the correction of defects and in the development of the musicianly qualities of her pupils, have amazed many an audience at the recitals and concerts of the school. Students who have left her studio to enter upon engagement in concert, church and opera have been so highly commented upon for their mastery of vocal technic, their diction, style and interpretation, that her reputation has spread far over the country. Mme. von Ende is considered a teacher of rare conscientiousness and honesty, and her work never fails to appeal to the serious and intelligent student who knows that thorough artistic development is not a rapid, forcing process, but a slow and gradual growth.

Beatrice McCue, the contralto, who is a familiar and much appreciated figure on the concert stage of New York, and has extensively and successfully sung under the management of Haensel & Jones throughout the country, has been associated with the school for several seasons and will continue her teaching.

A new acquisition is Alfred Ilma, formerly of the Hammerstein Opera Company. He is the possessor of a rich and sympathetic baritone, and of a repertoire of eighty-four operas and a large number of songs in five languages. Mr. Ilma is a kin to King Menelik, was born in Mt. Lebanon, and educated in the musical centers of Europe. He has had an extraordinarily successful career in concert and opera throughout Europe, South America and this country

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Mrs. STACY WILLIAMS Voice Production :: Repertoire ::
In Europe June 15 to September 15
For information, prospectus, etc., address
Mrs. Williams, 405-406 Kimball Hall - Chicago, Ill.

Lucille STEVENSON (TEWKSBURY) SOPRANO
Address: 4438 Berkeley Avenue Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
Consisting of
OPERA, LECTURE RECITALS AND MELODRAMES and
THE CHICAGO PIANO QUARTETTE
Henriette Weber, piano; Fritz Itte, violin;
Carl Klammsteiner, cello; A. Van Der Voort, viola.
Specializing in Opera Programs.
Arrangements with Distinguished American Singers as Soloists
FOR TERMS AND DATES ADDRESS MISS H. WEBER
Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill., Phone Harrison 4868-4869

MARION GREEN BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

MR. and MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
Voice Production.
STUDIOS: 518-528 FINE ARTS BUILDING, CHICAGO
Public Recitals for Pupils, Fine Arts Theatre
Preparation for Oratorio, Opera, Concert, in English, French, German, Italian Public Opera Performances fo Pupils, Studebaker Theatre

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President

SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rive-King, Guy Herbert Woodard, Grace Stewart Potter, Mee Julia Riley, Herold von Mickwitz, Frenk B. Webster, Eleanor Smith, Ernest D. Todd, Mme. Justine Wegener, Edgar A. Nelson, Edward Dvorek, Adelaide G. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

and has been favorably received by musical critics of Berlin, Paris and wherever he has appeared.

The latest addition to the faculty is Henri La Bonte, the eminent tenor and accomplished pianist. Mr. La Bonte is of French descent, but of rarely cosmopolitan training, having studied with the famous Sbriglia in Paris, Hugo Heinz in London and other noted teachers in Berlin. Mr. La Bonte has an enormous repertoire of English, German, French and Italian songs, the artistic interpretation of which has earned for him the reputation as an artist of rare distinction.

The cooperation of such forces, along with the high standards inaugurated by the school in its schedule of work and final tests for graduation, is likely to insure to vocal students rare opportunities of training—professional or otherwise.

Louise Gartrelle Returns to Chicago.

Louise Gartrelle, soprano, who has just returned to Chicago after an extensive stay in Europe, where she studied under Jean de Reszke, and later under Gabriel Lapiere,

LOUISE GARTRELLE.

will, this year, appear in many concerts and recitals throughout the Middle West.

Mrs. Gartrelle, with her husband, left Chicago last week for a month's motor tour and upon her return to Chicago she will make her first appearance, since her return to this country, at a private recital.

Carrie Louise Dunning and Her Class.

Carrie Louise Dunning, the eminent teacher and exponent of the Dunning System of Music Study for Beginners, is shown in the accompanying picture, together with the members of her Portland, Ore., class. This class, which closed the end of July, was composed of Colleen Foster, Anna D. Campbell, Lulu M. Keller, Alice R. Fischer, Bernice Hill, Josephine Burnham, Frances Waldo, Emma McConaughy, Harriette Smith, Leslie Smith, Clara Lewis, and Louise Prentiss. Mrs. Dunning is most enthusiastic over the progress made by this class.

On Monday of this week (August 10) Mrs. Dunning opened her Chicago class, which will be continued for practically a month, after which she will be in New York, her large class in this city to begin work on September 18. Music circles of New York will be glad to hear of Mrs. Dunning's return from the Far West where she has been for some time.

Patti in Paris.

Baron and Baroness Cederstrom (nee Adelina Patti) are in Paris, trying to return to their home at Craig-y-Nos, Wales.

Anna Case Vacationing.

Anna Case is touring Switzerland and the Italian lakes, far from the seat of war.

Just Practicing.

"Son, you mustn't carve your name on the piano. Another such episode and I'll punish you severely."

"Dad, how can you expect me to carve my name in the temple of fame when you won't let me get any practice?"—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

GIORGIO M. SULLI PRESENTS HIS IDEAS ON CORRECT SINGING.

Well Known New York Vocal Instructor Discusses His Theories and Practices—"The Art of Singing Must Be Absolutely Individual."

During these summer days, Giorgio M. Sulli, the well known vocal teacher of New York, is busy at his studio in the Metropolitan Opera House Building. Maestro Sulli is a gentleman of the old school, although this does not signify by any means that Mr. Sulli is old—far from it. His ideas and activities are those of a vigorous young man.

Recently a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER called for a little chat at his charming studio and was fortunate enough to chance upon a period between classes, when the eminent maestro was at liberty to give him a few moments of his valuable time. This representative was very much interested in a picture which he chanced to see in the studio, and he asked Mr. Sulli who the subject was. (This picture is reproduced on the cover of this issue.)

"That," answered Mr. Sulli, "is myself, and that picture was taken the day I was appointed assistant to Prof. Alfonso Guercia, of the Royal Conservatory of Naples, Italy. That was in 1880, when I was still in my teens and a student at that temple of music for piano, singing and composition. This shows me in the official dress of the students who attend the Italian conservatories. I had charge of a class of more than thirty pupils, both men and women, and it was my duty to teach and coach them on the day preceding that on which they received their lesson from Professor Guercia. As I gave them lessons three days a week, that kept me busy for three years, during which time I had an excellent opportunity to study human voices, a subject which offers extremely interesting investigation."

"But did you not devote many years to conducting orchestras in various grand opera companies?"

"Oh, yes. I have conducted in many opera houses of Italy, Spain, Austria and South America, my repertoire including over fifty operas. But wherever I went I found there were always applicants for singing lessons, so I may truthfully say that I have been teaching the art of singing for thirty-five years without interruption."

"With such a long and varied experience what method of singing have you decided upon as being the best suited to the voice, and have you published a method?" was asked of Mr. Sulli.

"How absurd!" replied Mr. Sulli. "I do not believe in methods. The art of singing must be absolutely individual. In fact, I tell my pupils at the time of their first lesson that I shall not endeavor to teach their voices, but, instead, my object will be to cultivate their mind, so that they can guide the movements of those muscles which are called for in the production of singing, and carefully observe what feelings they experience, and finally my task will be to train their own ear that they may become the most critical judge of their own merits. Many students take but one lesson a week, but even if they take three a week or more every day, they are left alone all the remainder of the day, and what could they do in their work, if they were not positive they were right?"

"So you do not believe that a standard method of singing can ever be established so that all teachers will use it?"

"No! Most emphatically no! As in painting and sculpture, one can follow the general lines, but it is only as individuality marks out certain ones that the artist becomes predominant. A great poet once said, 'Variety is the spice of life,' and truly this saying is nowhere proven to better advantage than in the realm of art. Busoni does not play exactly like Carreño, and Kubelik differs from Elman, although in both cases the instrument is the same; yet we enjoy hearing them both. Therefore, you must see what an immense difference there is in singing where the instrument is an invisible one, the sounds of which are produced by the good and intelligent use of those particular muscles called for in phonation, and which are not only guided by the mind, but must depend almost on one's own sensibility. In fact, I try to get my pupils to express their emotions, i. e., joy, sadness, terror, horror, hatred, love, disgust, kindness, etc., so that their feelings may be transmitted to their audience.

"A modern singer," continued Mr. Sulli, "cannot hope to make a pronounced success unless he is endowed with an extraordinary power of personal magnetism and an equal amount of intelligence which enables him to express these feelings and pathological emotions, presumed to have been felt by the personage he presents to the audience. Caruso's voice is such a wonderful one, not alone because his vocal organs are perfect, but because he has a great and generous heart as well as a voice which is rich with expressions of emotion. When, after a fair trial, I notice in any of my pupils the absence of those artistic qualities which make up the artist and am convinced that I am unable to develop their temperament, I frankly suggest to them the advisability of discarding the idea of studying for grand opera, and if the voice is a good one, I suggest that they concentrate their endeavors in the field of concert, recital, church singing, etc."

"Do you mean in substance that many of the disappointments experienced by some of our singers are due to the lack of frankness and honesty on the part of their teachers?"

"I certainly do. For the love of money many a teacher creates ambitions in the souls of students who have not a single quality to promise even the return of the money they spend during the period, while they are having their voice cultivated. It is a shame, for many of them make tremendous sacrifices in order to pay their teachers.

"Frequently," continued Mr. Sulli, "I have students call on me to examine their voices when I feel that the blame should all be put at the door of the teacher. To cite only one instance. At present there is a young lady studying with me who previously studied for two years under the direction of a teacher who had sung at the Metropolitan

CARRIE LOUISE DUNNING AND MEMBERS OF HER PORTLAND, ORE., CLASS WHO ARE STUDYING "THE DUNNING SYSTEM" FOR PIANO TEACHERS.
Mrs. Dunning is seated third from the left.

Arrigo Serato

Italy's Greatest VIOLINIST

First American Coast-to-Coast Tour

UNDER THE EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT OF

Annie Friedberg, Metropolitan Opera House Building, 1425 Broadway, New York.

KNABE PIANO USED

Opera House for many seasons in Italian opera. With him this girl studied the aria from 'Rigoletto,' using a score which, by mistake, is printed with D sharp instead of B natural. Well, she was never corrected in that error, which simply goes to show that the teacher did not care enough for himself to give that for which he was paid. So while he was getting her money, he kept encouraging her to try for an operatic career, and allowed her to use her voice in falsetto only, singing flat most of the time, because she did not know how to breathe correctly. He never alluded to a psychological effect during all these lessons; he never told her how to express her emotions; he never even told her how to stand correctly. Just think of it! Never, in two years of study!

"I could relate many cases similar to this, did time permit, and could also tell you of teachers who make their pupils learn the roles of old operas without the usual cuts and traditional cadences and special effects, so that when this pupil is engaged to sing, he notices how much time he has lost in learning useless music, and then he must spend more time and more money learning how the part is sung according to custom."

"What is your opinion about having opera sung in English in our country?" was the next question put to Mr. Sulli.

"One year before the Association for the Promotion of Opera in English was started, I sent out circulars, promoting an association of American singers with the idea of giving grand opera in English, but I did not receive the encouragement I expected, and was forced to abandon my project. I am a firm believer in the idea that we will eventually come to that. Opera is one of the best means for the education of a nation, but in order to make that education thorough, it is necessary to understand the words, especially because of the fact that darkness reigns during the performance, and hence one cannot follow the libretto. In France they sing the works of Wagner and the Italian operas in French; in Italy the works of foreign composers are sung in Italian; and the same is true in Germany. Why should America, which is the country which spends the most for music, have opera in a foreign tongue? Only a few opera houses, like the Metropolitan, for instance, can afford to engage cosmopolitan singers, for that costs money. But should this great idea of opera in the vernacular be carried out, we could then give our native singers an opportunity to become truly great artists."

"Do you think it possible for a law to be passed, making it necessary for vocal teachers to obtain a license from the Government or the State, similar to that which a physician is required to obtain?"

"I do wish that something of the kind could be arranged, but I am equally sure it will never happen. About fifteen years ago I proposed, through the press, practically the same thing to the Italian Government, stating that the prevailing condition of decay which was seen in the art of singing was due principally to the many fake teachers. I even went to Rome and had long talks with the Minister of Public Instruction, who, at that time, was Signor Baccelli, and while he admitted that I was right, he also said that professionals of fine arts are free to teach as they wish, and the only way to prove their real value is through their pupils. I agree with him, although a good pupil is not the real proof of a clever teacher, because, as I said before, a student can do a good deal for himself if he is intelligent, sensitive and is possessed of a strong, vivid, artistic temperament."

Before the caller could launch another question, he was interrupted by the ringing of the Japanese bell, which announced that the next pupil had been prompt in putting in her appearance for the lesson. Mr. Sulli invited his visitor to stay and witness that he put into practice those theories about which he had been speaking, as well as ardently preaching their cause.

Carl Bernthaler's Success.

Reports from Pittsburgh say that the series of concerts being given there by the Festival Orchestra is more popular than ever before. This organization, under the intelligent direction of Carl Bernthaler, has been playing to immense crowds who gather on the Schenley lawn to listen to programs full of interest and variety. Mr. Bernthaler comes in for his full meed of praise, and is indeed to be congratulated upon the success with which he has thus far met and a continuance of which is practically assured.

Teachers' Travels.

Mme. Sembrich recently spent a week at Lausanne, Switzerland, where she was followed by most of her pupils.

They Flung All Right.

Wonite Stanz—When I'm acting I throw my personality at the audience.

De Roads—Then I'll bet they have their fling.—New York Globe.

Carl Friedberg

THE POET AT THE PIANO

In America

October-January, 1915

Exclusive Management:

ANNIE FRIEDBERG, Metropolitan Opera House, Building, 1425 Broadway, New York.

BALDWIN PIANO USED

WITH A VIEW TO MAINTAINING THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE STANDARD OF MUSICAL EXCELLENCE AND THOROUGHNESS

THE von ENDE SCHOOL OF MUSIC OF NEW YORK CITY

has inaugurated the following schedule of work together with stringent final tests for certificates and diplomas.

VOICE DEPARTMENT

SCHEDULE OF WORK REQUIRED IN THE REGULAR DEPARTMENT OF THE PRESCRIBED COURSE FOR SINGING

Grade.	Principal Subject.	Secondary Study.	Theory.	Supplementary Theory.	Lectures and Hist. Mus.	Languages.	Opera Work.	Church Work.	Diction. Style. Interpretation.
I.	Voice.	Piano.	1st Year, Harmony (3 terms).	Elements of Theory, Rhythm, Solfeggio.	Literary and Art Lectures and Mus. Hist.	Italian.	Opera Chorus	Protestant, Catholic, Hebrew services.	English Diction. French Diction. Style. Interpretation.
II.	Voice.	Piano.	2d Year, Harmony (3 terms).	Ear Training.	Literary and Art Lectures and Mus. Hist.	Italian, French.	Opera Chorus	Protestant, Catholic, Hebrew services.	English Diction. French Diction. Style. Interpretation.
III.	Voice.	Piano.		Musical Form.	Literary and Art Lectures.	Italian, German, French.	Opera Chorus and Class (Solo parts).	Protestant, Catholic, Hebrew services.	English Diction. French and German Diction. Style. Interpretation.
IV.	Voice.	Piano.				French, German.	Opera Class, Solo Parts, Stage Dep.	Oratorio.	French and German Diction. Style. Interpretation.
V.	Voice	Piano.				German.	Opera Class, Solo Parts, Stage Dep.	Oratorio.	German Diction. Style. Interpretation.

THE FINAL TEST FOR CERTIFICATES. (SINGING)

The final test for certificates of the Regular Department for singers of the Prescribed Course requires the musicianly performance, including perfect vocal mastery, diction, style and interpretation of an Italian and French aria, several German and French songs, a sight reading test, an average of ninety per cent. in the theoretical work, a condensed transcript of the principal points of the libretto as well as musical content of three complete operas, and one oratorio to be selected from the repertoire studied the past season, these transcripts to be made from memory during the final examination. An average attendance record of ninety per cent. at Lectures, Classes and Recitals of the school as assigned.

SCHEDULE OF WORK REQUIRED IN THE ARTISTS' AND TEACHERS' DEPT. OF THE PRESCRIBED COURSE FOR SINGERS

Grade.	Principal Subject.	Theory. Pedagogy.	Languages.	Opera Work.	Church Work	Diction. Style. Interpretation.
VI.	Voice Repertoire.	Harmonic Analysis (Grade III).	French, German, Italian.	Opera Class, Operatic Repertoire, Stage Dep.	Oratorio.	English Diction. French and German Diction. Style. Interpretation.
VII.	Voice Repertoire.	Pedagogy.	French, German, Italian.	Opera Class, Operatic Repertoire, Stage Dep.	Oratorio.	English Diction. French and German Diction, Style. Interpretation.
VIII.	Voice Repertoire.	Pedagogy.	French, German, Italian.	Opera Class, Operatic Repertoire, Stage Dep.	Oratorio.	English Diction. French and German Diction, Style. Interpretation.

THE FINAL TEST FOR DIPLOMA OF GRADUATION. (SINGING)

The final test for a diploma of graduation of the artists' and teachers' department for singers of the Prescribed Course requires a musicianly performance, including perfect vocal mastery, diction, style and interpretation, of an entire song recital consisting of Italian, French, German and English compositions, as well as a performance of a complete operatic role, including stage deportment, and an oratorio, to be selected from the repertoire studied during the past season. A condensed transcript of the principal points of the libretto and musical content of five complete operas selected from the students' operatic repertoire, but not including the three operas used in securing the Certificate of the Regular Department. These transcripts to be made from memory during the final examination. An average of ninety per cent. in the theoretical work and an attendance record at Lectures, Classes and Recitals as assigned of ninety per cent.

Copyright, 1914, Herwegh von Ende.

Christine Miller Charms Her Hearers.

Christine Miller, the well known American contralto, received the appended press criticism, one of many, following her recent appearance in Erie, Pa.:

Tuesday evening Christine Miller delighted a large and representative audience at Masonic Hall, when she gave the third program of the Artists' Course, arranged by Eva McCoy. Her program was a notable one in its arrangement, in the presentation of great names and in the numbers given that were new. The first group of songs, with the Bach and Handel numbers, followed by the infectious joyousness of the "Come, Lasses and Lads" (seventeenth century) and the "Green Bushes" (sixteenth century), closing with the verse from Shakespeare, was a most effective grouping of old masters, possessing also the merit of novelty. Miss Miller charmed her audience with her singing of them, and seemed very pleased with the lovely bouquet of gorgeous pink roses that came to her, and rested for the remainder of the evening on the piano to gladden the eyes of the people. The German songs, by Gustave Mahler, included a wide range of sentiment. The singing of them was made more delightful by the brief explanation of the themes which Miss Miller gave. In her greatest number, "Adieu, Forets" (from "Jeanne d'Arc") she gave a powerful interpretation. The group of Indian songs, new—which Miss Miller made more interesting by her introductory remarks—were very beautiful and brought more of an impression of the music of the Indian melodies than we are accustomed to associate with their musical productions. Miss Miller sang with some of her best interpretations the song by one of our most popular local composers, Albert Dowling, Jr., whose works are always marked by their grace and fine inspiration. The song, "God's Smile," is dedicated to Miss Miller, and the ovation given it was for singer and song. Her closing numbers included one from an old Japanese text. This singer, who has been heard in Erie for three successive seasons, and each one bringing her more recognition and deeper appreciation, increased her hold upon the people in her concert of last evening. She was encored with enthusiasm after each appearance and was very generous in responding.—The Erie Daily Times, March 25, 1914. (Advertisement.)

Nelle Bryant Busy.

Nelle Bryant, the charming young dramatic soprano, until recently the prima donna of Stadt Theatre, Ulm, Germany, was heard not long ago in a musicale at the home of Mrs. Benjamin J. Buckingham, in the Bryn Mawr Highlands, Chicago. As usual, Miss Bryant captivated the hearts of her listeners with her winning personality and her supreme vocal art. She is a most satisfying singer. Her interpretation of German lieder is really ideal.

Miss Bryant is among the few who possess much power and dramatic fire, and who can also sing so beautifully those tender, pathetic little gems that pull the heartstrings and cause the tears to start.

In nothing was she heard to better advantage, however, than in the aria from "Cavalleria Rusticanna. It is not surprising that Miss Bryant is especially at home in the opera, as she has the voice, figure and temperament combined, and whether she chooses to continue in opera or not, her arias will always be a delight on any concert program.

Automobiling in London.

The accompanying snapshot was taken in front of Julia Claussen's home in London. Those in the machine are: Rudolph Engberg, the Chicago baritone, who is seated just beyond the chauffeur, and in the rear seat, holding the little dog, is Mrs. Spoor, Mr. Engberg's sister; in the center is Rosa Raisa, prima donna of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, and Julia Claussen, contralto, with the same organization.

WELL KNOWN OPERA STARS SNAPPED IN LONDON.

Stokowski Leads in Munich.

Leopold Stokowski was scheduled to lead an orchestral concert at Munich August 11. The program included Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, No. 3; Brahms' first symphony in C minor, and Berlioz's overture to "Benvenuto Cellini." The soloists were Olga Samaroff in the Schumann piano concerto, and Mme. Charles Cahier, in three songs by Wagner, "Im Treibhaus," "Träume" and "Schmerzen."

A Bruckner monument is to be erected at Linz.

Carl Friedberg's Coming Tour.

Carl Friedberg, the distinguished German pianist, who will arrive in America for a three months' tour, early in October, will not only be heard with the majority of orchestras and in recitals throughout the country, but will also be assisting artist to some of the leading chamber music organizations.

Friedberg keenly enjoys playing chamber music and frequently assists the noted string quartets in Europe, such as the famous Bohemian Quartet Rose in Vienna, the Fitzner and others. Friedberg was the founder of the famous Frankfurt Trio with Rebner and Hegar and has toured with that organization all over Europe. He will bring with him some new chamber music compositions, all of them unknown to American concert goers.

New York Military Band at Columbia.

Students of the summer session at Columbia University heard the last concert of the season to be given by the New York Military Band, Edwin Franko Goldman, conductor, when this excellent organization performed the following program on August 4:

Marche Militaire Francaise, from Algerian Suite.....Saint-Saëns
Overture, Merry Wives of Windsor.....Nicolai
Barcarolle from Tales of Hoffmann.....Offenbach
Excerpts from Lohengrin.....Wagner
Waltz, Artists' Life.....Strauss
La Lisonjera .....Chaminade
Fantasie, The Pirates of Penzance.....Sullivan
Ode to the Sun, from Iris.....Mascagni
Parade Militaire (characteristic).....Massenet
Grand International Fantasie.....Tobani

Zoellner Quartet to Remain in America.

Although the members of the Zoellner Quartet had anticipated an European trip last June, two contracts, made last February, have been the means of holding the quartet here all summer. Now that war conditions in Europe are likely to prohibit such a tour, the Zoellner Quartet has postponed its trip indefinitely and will remain in this country.

On June 26 last the quartet gave a concert at the summer school of Wooster University, Wooster, Ohio, and on July 2 it was heard at the County Music Teachers' Convention, at Garnarville, Iowa.

LOUIS BLUMENBERG IN OSTEND.

Ostend, Belgium, July 28, 1914.

There is considerable interest taken in music here. At the Kursaal, Director León Rinskopf gives an interesting program nightly with a large orchestra. Among the distinguished soloists last week Mme. Matzenauer scored a great success; her husband, Ferrari-Fontana, also was appreciated. They sang last Saturday evening and I was present at the hotel Sunday morning when M. Rinskopf tried to persuade them to remain over for another concert, but they could not be induced to do so, as their previous arrangements interfered.

Titta Ruffo sings here on August 10.

At the Theatre Royale a well attended symphony concert is given every Friday afternoon by the same orchestra as the one at the Kursaal.

The soloist last Friday was Georges Enesco, who played the Brahms violin concerto. It was with some surprise and pleasure that I found Leopold Godowsky in the audience, and with him was Louis Sigel, the violinist, who will make his American debut this coming autumn under the management of R. E. Johnston.

Arthur Nikisch and Elena Gerhardt (who will go to the United States again this season) were among other artists greeted.

At the Kursaal last night I came across Giorgini, the tenor, Carolina White and Longone, all recently of the Chicago Opera Company. They are here for a performance of "Tosca."

Edgar Stillman Kelley, the American composer, fresh from his triumph at Altenburg, is here. He has found a quiet temporary home where he is finishing some of his works. Mr. Kelley also is preparing some essays which will appear in the MUSICAL COURIER, and it is needless to say that his articles will be thoroughly interesting.

While very few Americans are in Ostend, the various European countries are well represented. It is to be regretted that in the United States we have no summer resorts that offer any really first class musical diversion. While we Americans spend large sums of money on music, yet the entertainments are crowded into a few winter months, whereas here in Europe high class concerts and soloists can be heard in all the better summer places. At our resorts we are regaled with "ragtime," even though some of the hotels print advertisements containing the alluring announcement that they have a "symphony orchestra," when there are in reality only from three to five performers and in very few cases more than that number.

It is nothing to be proud of that in Greater New York we cannot maintain a fine orchestra from May to October. Since the days of Anton Seidl, when he gave those interesting concerts at Brighton Beach, there has been no good music given at any resort near the metropolis.

Although Nahan Franko, I hear, is drawing great crowds to his Central Park concerts, yet those entertainments are free. There ought to be some hall in or near New York where Franko could provide a fine program at a reasonable admission. Among the thousands of stay at homes there certainly must be enough educated people who can appreciate art. LOUIS BLUMENBERG.

[The foregoing article was written by Mr. Blumenberg before the outbreak of war in Europe. He now is in London and will return to America shortly—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

"The Messiah" Sung at Columbia.

Under the efficient direction of Walter Henry Hall, the University Chorus of Columbia University, New York, gave its annual "Messiah" performance on August 6. The soloists were Agnes Alsop Ward, soprano; Mme. Benedict-Jones, contralto; Dan Beddoe, tenor, and T. Foster Why, bass noble. The work of Mr. Beddoe was, as usual, on an elevated plane and replete with serious thought. Suffice to say that his singing was excellent and much enjoyed by his many admirers.

Of unusual merit were the interpretations of T. Foster Why. This is the second time within six months that he has sung with this organization, and it is easy enough to see why he is a favorite.

The work of the chorus was up to its usual high standard and enthusiastically received by the immense audience, which not only filled the chapel in which the oratorio was given, but overflowed into the grounds surrounding it and some were to be seen in the windows of adjacent buildings, listening to this great work of Handel.

Saenger Studio Soprano's Success in the West.

Another coloratura soprano from Oscar Saenger's New York studio has made good in the West, where she is located at present. Irene Audrey, who as Irene Kelly Williams, made her debut in San Francisco recently as soloist with the Philharmonic Orchestra, aroused great enthusiasm with her unusual voice and charming stage manner. She also sang at a concert before an audience of four thousand music lovers whom she won with her first number, the waltz song from "Romeo and Juliet," which displayed her art at its best. Miss Audrey has accepted some prima donna roles in light opera, which work has been arranged so that it will not interfere with her concert engagements.

Dostal at Ocean Grove.

George Dostal, the Bohemian tenor who now is being heard for the first time in America, promises soon to make for himself an enviable reputation. Mr. Dostal appeared at Ocean Grove, N. J., during the week of July 25, and, according to Tali Esen Morgan, who engaged him, scored one of the most brilliant successes yet recorded at the popular resort by a new artist. Two of his appearances, of the eight which comprised the Ocean Grove engagement, were made as soloist with the United States Marine Band. Dostal has taken a prominent part in Italian opera abroad for three years previous to his return to America. The range of his fine lyric voice, which includes E and even F sharp in alt, enables him to give original settings to many of the older French and Italian arias, and which are frequently subjected to transposition. He also possesses remarkable voice control and coloring ability, a prolonged dimuendo and a sustained, powerful cresendo.

Mr. Dostal was received with great enthusiasm by the large audiences who heard him at Ocean Grove and at

GEORGE DOSTAL,
Bohemian tenor.

each concert had to respond to encores many of which latter had to be repeated as they were, as a rule, well known English ballads that appealed especially to his admirers. Although Dostal is Bohemian, he was born in America. His musical education was gained altogether in Italy. He not only sings, but speaks fluently German, French, Italian, Bohemian and English, and above all, his singing in English is such that every one can easily understand every word. His manager, R. E. Johnston, places great confidence in him, and many important engagements in this country already have been booked for his 1914-1915 season.

Irma Seydel in Europe.

A recent communication from Mrs. Seydel, mother of Irma Seydel, the noted young violinist, who is at present in Germany, contains the information that Miss Seydel played her sixth engagement with the Cologne Orchestra on July 23 and met with great success. She was engaged to appear again with this orchestra on August 7 and was to have played at two of their winter concerts. On July 19, Miss Seydel was heard with the Royal Orchestra at Sondershausen with her usual success.

Mrs. Seydel further states that Miss Seydel's tour was booked up to January 12, but, of course, now, owing to the war, they do not see what else they can do except return to America as soon as they can get a steamer.

Sokoloff with the Music League.

The Music League of America has secured through Johanna Sherrick, the distinguished young Russian violinist, Nikolai Sokoloff, as one of their leading artists for a number of important engagements.

Fanning at Beverly, Mass.

Cecil Fanning and his accompanist, H. B. Turpin, gave the musical program which marked the opening of Mrs. R. W. Evans' new music room at Beverly, Mass., on Saturday afternoon, July 29. The affair, which was one of the important society events of the present summer season, was attended by many of the foremost members of the North Shore elite, and Mr. Fanning, who is a great favorite in this circle, was received with pronounced enthusiasm. Enthusiastic comment was aroused by his singing of Heine's version of "Die Lorelei," by Liszt, in which number the baritone's splendid artistic resources are given full play. Also the group of old English and French songs were especially well received, calling forth three encore numbers. Fanning's art and success seem to be ever on the increase. His voice at present is in superb condition and the versatility of the artist, always in evidence, seems also to have broadened greatly.

The program in full was as follows:

Le Cor (de Vigny)	A. Flegier
Romance (Bouget)	Debussy
Air from Herodiade	Massenet
Niemand hat's Gesehn	Loewe
Die Lorelei (Heine)	Liszt
Le Cycle du Vin	Old French
Les Belles Manieres	Old French
To Mary	Maude Valery White
Dame Durden	Old English
'Tis Not in Seeking (Sill)	Percy Lee Atherton
Little Boy Blue (Eugene Fields)	Ethelbert Nevin
A Fairy Love Song (Ella-Higginson)	Charles Willeby
The Last Leaf (Oliver Wendell Holmes)	Sidney Homer

Artha Williston Engaged for Maine Festival.

When Rossini was asked what he considered the greatest requisite for a singer, the composer of "William Tell," "The Barber of Seville" and "The Stabat Mater," replied with moving earnestness: "First, voice; second, voice, and third and last, voice."

It is due first of all to the beauty of her voice that Mrs. Artha Williston, who has been engaged to sing at the coming Maine Festival, has enjoyed popularity in New England, a section where her singing first attracted notice. Critics have declared that she possesses one of the loveliest voices heard in recent years, a beautiful soprano, with the unusual range and flexibility that allows the widest latitude as to styles of singing.

Mrs. Williston is a graduate of Holyoke, Mass., College. With her liberal education, musical tastes and lovely voice, the American concert stage has been enriched by another artist, who is certain to adorn the profession.

Mrs. Newkirk's Active Summer.

The studio of Lillian Sherwood Newkirk has been very active this summer. Mrs. Newkirk has taught every day but Saturday all summer, having students from eleven different States. Many of these singers go to Norwalk, Conn., for the summer class, taking cottages or boarding. Clara Marie Jaeger is to be with Mrs. Newkirk all of September after the 10th, as is also Freda Williams, of Indianapolis, who expects to study in New York all next season. Miss Jaeger, it will be remembered, is one of Mrs. Newkirk's pupils who, having studied many seasons with her, was in Paris last winter perfecting her French. Mrs. Newkirk will leave in her motor for the Adirondacks and Maine in two weeks, to enjoy a well-earned rest of three weeks, and will resume work at 1425 Broadway, New York, her new studio, on September 30.

Louise Jansen-Wylie in Maine.

Louise Jansen-Wylie, the well known soprano, is spending the month of August at Ogunquit, Maine. Mme. Wylie is an enthusiastic swimmer and each day from eleven until twelve o'clock can be found battling with the breakers as they roll in on the rocky coast. After the ocean dip follows luncheon and an hour on the piazza, then Mme. Wylie writes, "the real work of the day begins, for I am working on new songs with my coach for my tour of the West this fall."

Mme. Wylie has been engaged as soloist for one of the six concerts of the Wichita Symphony Orchestra. Other soloists are Maud Powell, Louise Barnolt, of the Montreal Opera Company, and Andrea Sarto, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Norah Drewett in Viareggio.

Norah Drewett sends greetings from Viareggio, Italy, and says: "Best greetings from the seaside! Puccini is just now here in his villa. Titto Ruffo is staying at the hotel next door, Eleanora Duse at another one. But we are idling delightfully. Yours,

"NORAH DREWETT."

ORGANISTS' CONVENTION.

Seventh Annual Series of Programs Given at Ocean Grove and Asbury Park.

The seventh annual convention of the National Association of Organists was held at Ocean Grove and Asbury Park, N. J., August 5 to August 12. The national headquarters were at the North End Hotel, Ocean Grove, the recitals and lectures at the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Asbury Park. President Dr. J. Christopher Marks being forced to be absent, Homer N. Bartlett acted as chairman in his place. Several of the members of the executive and other committees were also obliged to be absent, much to the regret of the members of the Association who gathered at this convention.

A representative of the MUSICAL COURIER was told "that the arrangement had not proven satisfactory this year, as the Methodist Church in which the meetings were held was out of the way and difficult to reach and too far from the North End Hotel, which was used as the headquarters." It was learned from other sources that only a very few of the visiting members of the Association stopped at the North End Hotel, and that there was not the same cohesion this year among members as in former years when the convention was held at the Auditorium in Ocean Grove. At the business meeting on Saturday morning, about sixty members of the Association were present in all. It is believed that the Association comprises a total membership of between twelve and fifteen hundred.

The program was as follows:

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 5.

2.30 P. M.

Convention called to order by the president, Dr. J. Christopher Marks.

Address by the president.

In the absence of Dr. Marks, a short address was delivered by Mr. Bartlett, who then read the president's address.

4.00 P. M.

Organ recital by Mary Chappell Fisher, of Rochester, N. Y.

This was an error on the program, as Mrs. Fisher gave her recital on the following day, her place being taken by Richard Keys Biggs, who proved to be a very remarkable organist with a splendid conception of the tone-color possibilities of the instrument.

8.00 P. M.

General reception in the sun parlor, North End Hotel.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 6.

10.00 A. M.

"The Mental Study and Reading of Music," Henry Harding, of Freehold, N. J.

"The Organist as the Leader of Musical Effort in the Smaller Towns," Roscoe Huff, Williamsport, Pa.

3.00 P. M.

"The Anthem: Its History and Development," William D. Armstrong, Alton, Ill.

"The Calling of the Organist," Arthur Scott Brook, New York City.

4.00 P. M.

Organ recital by Frederick Schlieder, Mus.Bach., official representative of the American Guild of Organists, was scheduled, but Mr. Schlieder was unable to be present, owing to a death in his family, and his place was taken by Clifford Demarest, F.A.G.O., organist of the Church of the Messiah, New York.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 7.

10.00 A. M.

"The Two Rs in Organ Playing—Rhythm and Registration," Arthur H. Turner, Springfield, Mass.

Debate: "The Concert Organist—Program Making—Orchestral Attributes of the Organ," introduced by Dr. Edward Young Mason.

3.00 P. M.

"The Organist's Literary Field," Dr. William A. Wolf, Lancaster, Pa.

"Random Thoughts on Organ Playing," William Moss, Providence, R. I.

Organ recital by Francis Cuyler van Dyck, Jr.

8.00 P. M.

Lawn party at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Bruce S. Keator, Asbury Park.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 8.

10.00 A. M.

Business meeting. Reports of national secretary and national treasurer. Reports of State presidents. Report of committee on constitution and by-laws.

8.00 P. M.

Children's festival, Auditorium, under the direction of Tali Esen Morgan.

SUNDAY EVENING, AUGUST 9.

The cantata, "The Christ Child" (Hawley), was given by the choir of the church under the direction of the composer, the organist being Mrs. Bruce S. Keator. The soloists were Ethel Crane, soprano; Mary Jordan, contralto: Dan Beddoe, tenor; Donald Chalmers, baritone.

MONDAY, AUGUST 10—PHILADELPHIA DAY.

10.00 A. M.

"The Chorus Choir—A True Missionary Adjunct," J. Henry Francis, Charleston, W. Va.

"The Material Welfare of Organists in Our Country," James Francis Cooke, Philadelphia, Pa.

3.00 P. M.

"Organists' Clubs as a Factor in the National Association," Dr. John McE. Ward, Philadelphia, Pa.

4.00 P. M.

Organ recital, Henry S. Fry, Philadelphia, Pa., official representative of the Organ Players' Club of Philadelphia; assisted by John Jay Joyce, basso cantante.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 11.

10.00 A. M.

"A Visit to the Choir Room of Southwark Cathedral, London, in the Year 1908," A Madeley Richardson, M.A., Mus.Doc. (Oxon), F.R.G.O.; assisted by Mary, Hester and Elfrida Richardson.

3.00 P. M.

Report of nominating committee, and election of officers for the ensuing year.

4.00 P. M.

Organ recital, Carl Rupprecht, Chicago, Ill.

7.30 P. M.

Reception and annual banquet, North End Hotel.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12.

10.00 A. M.

General meeting for various purposes.

Closing exercises.

The most successful portion of this program was the cantata, "The Christ Child," given on Sunday evening. It was excellently given by the choir of the church, which developed a good quality of tone and was well supported by the organ.

Of the soloists, Mary Jordan's excellent contralto was greatly enjoyed. Dan Beddoe in the tenor part was in his usual splendid form and created great effect with the opening solo, "The Voice of Him That Crieth in the Wilderness," "Hail Thou That Are Highly Favored Among Women," and the various incidental solo parts in Part II. Donald Chalmers' magnificent bass-baritone proved wonderfully convincing in the opening bass recitative, "The People That Walked in Darkness Have Seen a Great Light," and in the later solos, "Behold a King," "Fear Not," and the incidental solos in Part II. The power and sonority of his voice and the excellence of his interpretations caused considerable favorable comment.

Much expectation was felt for the address of Dr. A. Madeley Richardson on "A Visit to the Choir Room of Southwark Cathedral, London, in the year 1908," and it is to be regretted that this address was given too late in the week for a notice of it to be included in this issue of the MUSICAL COURIER.

Yvonne de Treville Discusses War.

"How do you do this lovely day, Mlle. de Treville," said a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER, meeting that charming artist not long ago and wondering at the anxious look on her face, "the war is in Europe, you are in America, so why do you worry?"

"Ah, yes," replied Yvonne de Treville, "the war may be in Europe and I am very glad it is not in America, but I cannot help thinking about my home in Brussels which is filled with priceless souvenirs of my European appearances, and I have passed many an anxious hour fearing that it may become a prey to the army of the invaders."

Photo by Frank Scott Clark.
YVONNE DE TREVILLE.

"Then your sympathies are naturally with Belgium at this crisis."

"Of course, my first anxiety is for Belgium and the great and brave monarch who is at the head of affairs in that little country; but my interests are cruelly divided, for I have sung in all of the countries now at war and have appeared before the crowned heads who are now leading the various armies.

"While the present King was Crown Prince of Belgium, he was a frequent visitor at the Royal Opera, much more so than his uncle, King Leopold, who only cared for the 'music of cannon balls.' When I went to Ostende to sing, my first auditors were the present King and Queen of the Belgians. The latter is particularly devoted to music and personally directs the music lessons of her children.

"'The Kaiser,' as the Americans call him, was in Cologne at the time I sang the role of Mimi at the festival performances there, and in referring to my diary of that time, I find my recorded impression to be that of a 'real war-lord.'

"I have often sung at Vienna and at St. Petersburg, and have thus had ample opportunity to compare the personalities of the valiant old Emperor Franz Josef, and of the retiring Czar," continued Mlle. de Treville.

"Don't you think 'retiring' is a peculiar adjective to use in describing the Czar?"

"Not at all, quite the contrary," protested Mlle. de Treville, "Indeed, it is applicable to more than one royal personage. The present King of Sweden is actually easily embarrassed in ordinary social life, although when a question of state arises, he is the strong and self possessed monarch.

"Apropos of Austria," she added, "I have many friends who are commanding battalions in the Austrian army. Among these is General Schemua, whose return from Mostar, Herzegovina, to join the Austrian Cabinet was like a triumphal progress, so devoted are all his soldiers to him. During my visit to Dalmatia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, my party was feted and most kindly treated by the generals and their families. One of my most delightful recollections is of singing without any accompaniment, there being no piano, on board a cruiser, to General von Hortstein, his officers, and the men of the fleet guarding Cattaro, that beautiful port of the five bays, now horribly desecrated by war and bloodshed."

"Have you met the rulers of any of the Balkan States?"

"Yes, King Nicholas of Montenegro, who, as you know, is the father of the present Queen of Italy, has a delightfully democratic mode of holding his court out of doors, a sort of informal, free for all affair, which is really charming.

"Then, too, the King of Roumania signally honored me by presenting to me the gold medal of Benemerito during my last visit to Bucharest."

"Is not that honor conferred only upon officers for bravery on the field of battle?" was asked with some surprise.

"Yes, but there are a few women who have received it, as I am in a position to vouchsafe," said Mlle. de Treville modestly.

"And," she continued, "although I sympathize with each and all of them, I cannot help thinking of my home in Brussels, where I have a remarkable collection of folksongs of all nations, many of these songs being in manuscript. Should the war be concentrated on the field of Waterloo, as it is feared, Brussels, which is but a pleasant automobile excursion from there, will certainly suffer. Should such a thing happen, music would sustain an immense loss in the possible sacking of the Conservatoire de Musique with its wonderful collection of old musical instruments, many of them dating as far back as the sixteenth century. These instruments are still used in the Conservatoire concerts and have been played upon by such great artists as César Thomson, Eugen Ysaye and others, while professors at the Conservatoire. I have often been a soloist at these concerts under the baton of Gevaert.

"Another notable temple of music at Brussels is the Theatre Royal de la Monnaie, the royal opera house, which was the scene of the performances of several Wagner operas before the Paris premieres. Only recently I was prima donna there, and, indeed, I was to have sung there the beginning of September at the gala performances in honor of the Italian sovereigns," she ended with a sigh.

"Well, Mlle. de Treville, you have indeed much to think of that is harassing, but all this may be useless work, so try to think what an excellent season you are going to have over here and how fortunate you are to be on this side of the Atlantic. Many musicians in Europe would give much to be in America now, even if they did have to sacrifice a great deal."

A Letter from Hans Merx.

The MUSICAL COURIER is in receipt of the following letter, which is so characteristic of the many received and so pathetic in its ignorance of the impending troubles, that it is herewith published in full:

Steamer "Berlin,"
July 22, 1914.

To the MUSICAL COURIER:

I left on the Steamer "Berlin" for Europe after a most successful series of five recitals at the Catholic Summer School, Cliff Haven, at Lake Champlain. I intend having my first recital of German lieder in London on July 26. Will also sing for the Columbia Phonograph Company there. On August 2, I am booked for my first recital in Cologne (Germany). Will do a good deal of concertizing there in cities and health resorts like Cologne, Aix la Chapelle, Dusseldorf, Bern, Coblenz, Wiesbaden, Ems, Neuenahr and also in Amsterdam (Holland), returning to America next season.

Yours truly,
HANS MERX.

This letter was postmarked in London July 27.

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4. rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Soul professor de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi 151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST 35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI.) Paris

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Studio: 10 Rue Herran, Paris

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS (especially for opera students)
French and English Readings America, October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

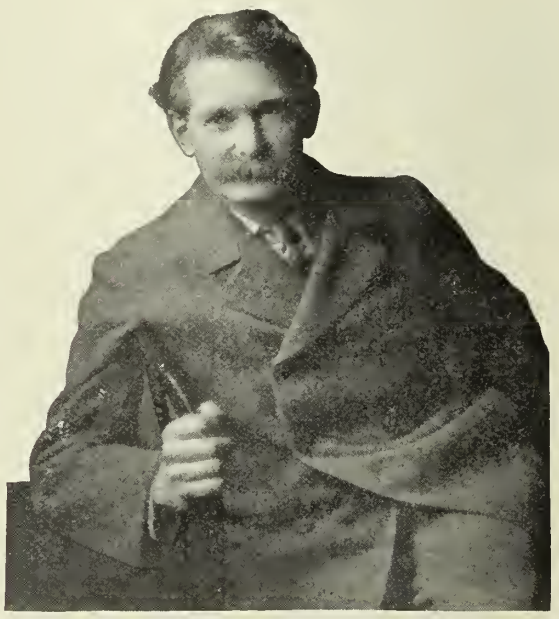
DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées), Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English.

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
61 Avenue Niel - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
Mme. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris



American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

Some Borwick Biography.

Leonard Borwick was born in 1868 at Walthamstow, near London, in the county of Essex. He showed great musical aptitude at a very early age, and as his talent developed, and brought him into wider notice, signal marks of favor and encouragement were bestowed on the child by such distinguished musicians as Mme. Norman-Neruda and Piatti, who played with him when he was only eight years old.

After his schooldays in England were over, his training as pianist was undertaken by the illustrious Mme. Schumann, widow of the great composer, and for six years he remained her pupil at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt-on-the-Main. The advantage of such a thorough schooling in the piano method derived from her father, Friedrich Wieck, was apparent enough; but it is probable that so young a man would but dimly realize, at the time, the great influences working within him for afterlife through the association and intercourse he enjoyed, during all those years, with so pure souled an artist, and with a character so truly venerable and lofty as that enshrined in the presence and personality of Clara Schumann.

Young Borwick's successes at the conservatory were so outstanding that, in view of the eminence he was likely to achieve as an offspring of one of the chief educational institutions of their city, the Museums-Gesellschaft in Frankfurt decided that his formal entry into public life should be made under their auspices. At their hands, then, the young English student received not only his first public engagement, but the rare—if not, indeed, the unique—distinction of a "first appearance" with the society's famous symphony orchestra in Beethoven's E flat concerto.

LEONARD BORWICK.

This was followed quickly by engagements in London, where, after making his debut with Schumann's concerto at the Philharmonic Society, Borwick played, at one of the Richter series of concerts, Brahms' opus 15 in D minor. At a performance of the same concerto in Vienna—Richter again conducting—the composer himself was present, and the words are worth quoting that the great master wrote on a postcard,* at the concert, to his lifelong friend, Mme. Schumann:

"I write in a state of great delight to say that Borwick played admirably, with a fine freedom, warmth, energy, passion—everything that could be wished for, in short. But I couldn't help thinking how much the goodness and beauty of it all were due to his teacher! Honestly, it couldn't have been better or finer, and you needn't hesitate to believe whatever your friends report on the subject."

That was on February 22, 1891; and no more searching ordeal could have awaited a musician at the threshold of his career. In Vienna, fittingly—the famed centre of music in the past, and the home, at that hour, of the great genius who now, so to speak, stood sponsor for the young Englishman—the trial by fire had been undergone. The strain had been withstood. The metal showed no flaw. Tested by the master craftsman of the age, the product was declared to be well and truly tempered to the great service of musical art.

Leonard Borwick retains a singular hold on the affections of his first public—that of music loving Germany—as many glowing press tributes show which have been reprinted from time to time in the MUSICAL COURIER.

For the rest, it may be added that no less warmth of appreciation has attended his appearances in France, England, America, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Australasia, and submitting himself again to the judgment of audiences in this country Borwick's course will be watched with warm sympathy and interest by not a few friends and admirers in foreign lands besides those in his English home, who, mindful of the great tradition he inherits and of his own innate qualities of musicianship, wish their countryman Godspeed on his path to new conquests over seas.

*Given, later, to Mr. Borwick by Mme. Schumann. The text may also be found in Litzmann's Life of Clara Schumann, Breitkopf & Härtel, Leipsic.

Some More Larkin-Weber Engagements.

The Larkin-Weber recitals will be heard next season in the artists' course at Keokuk, Ia., under the auspices of the Woman's Club of Kenilworth, Ill.; the Woman's Club of Riverside, Ill., and the Amateur Musical Club of Peoria, Ill.

Man at Desk—Why do you claim a trombone player is less of a bore than a pianist?

Man in Chair—He is, because he doesn't get the chance. He doesn't find a trombone in every home he visits.—New York Globe.

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care Paris Office, Musical Courier)

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Devereli, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe.

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

CHARLES W. CLARK
AMERICAN TOUQ
SEASON 1914-15
BARITONE
Dr. Frederick Clark, Personal Representative
12 Rue Leonard de Vinci, :: PARIS

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Mrs. John W. Nichols, the talented pianist of New York, has been reengaged for a concert at Columbia University, March 19, 1915. Earlier in the season she appears in a joint recital with her husband, the tenor, at the university. A beautiful "Waltz Caprice," for piano, has just been dedicated to Mrs. Nichols by Frank E. Ward, the New York composer and organist. Mrs. Nichols has a large class of pupils this summer at the University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt. This artist pair gave their second recital there July 31, a program of two dozen songs and piano compositions making a fine variety.

A. Hellberg was reelected president of the Houston, Tex., Saengerbund at the annual election.

A library of organ music was recently placed on the shelves of the Kansas City, Mo., public library, which is available to all organists who have library privileges. Among the books are works by Carl, Dubois, Guilmant, Mendelssohn, etc.

A piano recital, in which twenty-eight pupils took part, showed careful training and reflected credit on their teacher, Miss Sidels, of Petersburg, Va. Medals for excellency were awarded to Dorothy Allen and Elsie Cizek.

Berta Mills, soprano, appeared in a recital in her home city, St. Joseph, Mo., after an absence of four years in Paris, where she has been studying.

Flora Howell Bruner, first soprano; Louise de Salle Rath, second soprano, and Pearl Hossack Whitcomb, contralto, are known as the Lorelei Trio. Assisted by Frances Buckland, pianist, they were heard recently at Berkeley, Cal. These musicians are well known in San Francisco.

A delightful program was given at the dedication service of the organ recently installed in a church in Evansville, Ind. Louise Fischer, of Oxford College, has been selected as the organist.

Selections from the works of Verdi, Puccini, Bizet, Donizetti, Mascagni, etc., were sung by the advanced pupils of John T. Hand, tenor, of the Italian School of Art, Salt Lake City, Utah. The accompaniments were satisfactorily rendered by Professor McClellan.

Lumley, Ont., music students did well in the recent examinations, among those taking honors being Maggie Habkirk, Myrtle Kyckman and Rossie and Gladys Broadfoot.

Under the able direction of William H. Stacy, the choir of the First Methodist Church of Austin, Tex., has been presenting a series of Sunday night concerts. These concerts have been greatly enjoyed and largely attended.

At the home of Addie R. Covell, in Bedford, Mass., her pupils were heard recently in a song recital, among the participants being Sara Lewis, Grace T. Buchell, Ethel M. Pemberton, Alice P. Grenache, Marguerite E. Habicht and Helen D. Stafford. The program included selections from the works of Bemberg, Debussy, Chaminade, Lehmann, Spross, Schumann, Liszt, etc.

Warren D. Allen, organist, and Mrs. Allen, vocalist, recently gave a recital at Berkeley, Cal.

For the first time in a number of years, Boone, Ia., is enjoying Sunday afternoon concerts in the park.

Hans Sittig, cellist, and his sister, Gretchen, violinist, are two interesting children, who recently gave a recital at Utica, N. Y. Their father, Prof. Frederick Sittig, played their accompaniments. The work of the little ones was very commendable.

Frances Cullen Moffett, who has been instructor of piano at the Athens School, University of Chattanooga, Tenn., has gone to Indianapolis, Ind., where she intends to teach and at the same time continue her studies. What is one city's loss is the other's gain.

Moose Jaw, Saskatoon, has been selected as the venue for next year's Provincial musical festival, and naturally local interest in matters musical has been greatly accelerated.

Mrs. George N. Walker presented in a piano recital Vera Fraser, of Dallas, Tex. She was assisted by her brother, Leo Fraser, and a younger sister, Louise Fraser.

Residents of Florence, S. C., were treated to an excellent organ recital by Prof. Paul de Launey, of Columbia, S. C., his program being varied and full of interest to the musical Florentines.

Agnes McManus, of Ottawa, Canada, was the winner of a gold medal in the piano examinations of the Dominion College of Music.

Geneva College Glee Club was heard in concert at Topeka, Kan., where they scored a decided success.

A special committee composed of Frank H. Blackledge, John F. White and Frank W. Olin, has been appointed to arouse interest among the business men of Indianapolis, Ind., in the work of the Indianapolis Orchestra Association and the People's Chorus.

Pupils of Elsie Johnson, teacher of piano, at Worcester, Mass., were heard recently in recital, assisted by Christina L. Davis, reader.

Mrs. Edward Wells Collins sang recently with the Denver Philharmonic Orchestra. She was heard in an aria by Debussy and a composition by Landon Ronald.

Bennie Jones, a pupil of James Stephen Martin, the well known vocal teacher, of Pittsburgh, sang at the open air church concert of the First Baptist Church in Pittsburgh.

Under the direction of Prof. Robert Hentschel, the orchestra of Grand Rapids, Mich., gave an interesting concert at John Ball Park.

Ellen A. Kennedy, piano teacher, of Worcester, Mass., presented a number of her pupils in recital at her studio. Reno M. Flardo, soprano soloist, was a delightful addition to the program.

Mrs. Brabason Rutherford was the assisting artist at the recital in Pittsburgh, Pa., of the pupils of Matilda Orr Hays.

Assisted by students from the Wilbur-Leland Dramatic studio, the pupils of Louise Gertrude Crook were heard in recital, at Sacramento, Cal. The program was well selected and of interest to all.

Edward Everett Adams, of Lowell, Mass., was heard in recital at his studios. Margaret McDonough, Maerose C. O'Neil, Idola DuBay, Mary H. Cherry, A. Mildred Ware, Germanine E. O'Leary, Edmund A. Preston and David C. Boyle were pupils who assisted to make the occasion a most enjoyable one.

Demonstrating her worth for the honor of attaining the highest average in music examination in the seventh grade, section B, Marguerite B. Reilly, a student at the parochial school at Allentown, Pa., was heard in a rendition of Weber's "Invitation a la Valse." Other prize winners were Anna Coyle, Florentia Kimmet, Nellie Bickel, Rachel Ihm and Marie McDermott.

Vocal pupils of Carolyn Kiel-Staff, soprano, were heard in an interesting musicale at Worcester, Mass.

Class pins were awarded Ruth Johnson, Annazelle Monroe, Bernice Atterbery, Edythe and Halle Wilmans and Marjorie Robinson, of Dallas, Texas, by their piano teacher, Annie Gregg Caldwell, for excellent practice. Selections from the works of Saint-Saëns, Schiller, Beethoven, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Nevin, Verdi, Donizetti, Paderewski, Chopin, Mascagni, Liszt, etc., were performed.

A recital was given recently in Springfield, Mass., by the pupils from the piano classes of Ellen M. Donohoe.

Assisted by Althea Talbott, soprano; W. E. Grinner and Paul Bindley, baritones, a dozen pupils of Anna M. St. John were heard at the Studio Building, Kansas City, Mo.

Maple Grove is a little town in Barry County, Mich., which boasts an excellent church choir, the director of which has held that position for fifty-eight years. This gentleman, Close R. Palmer, is now seventy-eight years of age, and he was chosen to lead the choir when he was but nineteen, at at time when the church was built of logs and people carried their guns to the meeting house to be prepared for any attack by the Indians.

Arthur Howard, Ralph Bezanson, Earl Cottle and Fred Hansell, who make up the male quartet, and William Goodwin, violinist, and Alfred Haughton, cornetist, by their musical offerings add to the interest of the services at one of the prominent churches of Brockton, Mass.

C. P. Garrett, of Los Angeles, Cal., gave a very interesting program on the new organ of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Riverside, Cal.

At a dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish at Newport, R. I., recently, the modern dances were interpreted to the music of a soloist. This odd accompaniment was furnished by Victor Irving Fisher, tenor, of New York.

Prof. B. W. Merrill, of the musical department of the college, Waterloo, Ga., gave a recital at which a number of his pupils appeared.

Under the direction of Bert A. Dole, the male chorus of a prominent Cleveland, Ohio, church gave a most enjoyable concert. This chorus is made up of twenty-one members.

George Root's cantata, "Bethlehem," was given recently by the pupils of Heber Coleman, of Pasadena, Cal., assisted by a number of other musicians. Piano accompaniments were furnished by Golda Morr.

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pi
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

At Green Mountain Falls, Col.

The accompanying picture taken at the Willis summer cottage, at Green Mountain Falls, Col., shows, from left to right: Wilhelm Schmidt, Mrs. Persinger, Mrs. Willit Willis and Alma Voedisch, the Chicago manager. Miss Voedisch is booking her artists on the Coast and in the West.

AT THE WILLIS SUMMER COTTAGE, GREEN MOUNTAIN FALLS, COL.

Renie C. Boice Combines Work and Pleasure

Renie C. Boice, the well-known New York vocal teacher, is at Stewartsville, N. J., visiting her niece on a fruit farm, where, surrounded by plum, peach, apple and pear trees, so laden with fruit that their limbs almost touch the ground, she is enjoying the beautiful scenery of this section of New Jersey. Motor rides have proved an additional attraction and many interesting spots have been visited, including Pocono and the famous Delaware Water Gap.

After a short visit recently in Metuchen, N. J., Mrs. Boice returned to Asbury Park, N. J., where she has opened a studio for the summer. Both Mr. and Mrs. Boice will leave very soon for a trip through the Wyoming (Pa.) valley, where they will visit Kingston, Wilkesbarre, Pittsburgh, Scranton, and the surrounding country.

Early in October, Mrs. Boice will go to Maine to attend the music festivals there. Florence Anderson Otis, one of her pupils, will sing. Mrs. Otis is now in New Hampshire taking a much needed rest and preparing for the numerous engagements booked for next season.

Katherine Bickford Self and Jessie Rowe Lockitt, both pupils of Mrs. Boice, are spending their vacations together in Maine. They also have numerous engagements for the fall.

Grace Douglas Bell is in Pleasantville, N. Y., but will be heard in Brooklyn on Sundays during August.

Pupils from the Boice studios in New York recently gave a well attended concert at the Ocean Grove Auditorium; nearly three thousand persons, it is said, were present. Mrs. Boice anticipates a very busy season, beginning early in the fall.

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave. New York

KATHARINE COODSON
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
KNABE PIANO

Articles of general musical interest, with or without pictures, will be examined by the Musical Courier if sent on approval, accompanied by stamped envelope for the return of the manuscript. In the event of its acceptance, such matter will be paid for at space rates. Address all manuscripts to The Musical Courier Company, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, Southeast corner of Thirty-ninth Street.

Jenny Dufau's Coming Concert Tour.

Jenny Dufau, who will sail for America on September 18, will open her American concert tour under the management of Harry Culbertson, October 2. Miss Dufau is already booked for thirty-four concerts and song recitals before the holidays.

Miss Dufau's annual New York recital will be given in January, and after her operatic engagements in January and February, she will open her spring concert tour. Her Chicago recital will be given in November. Most of the engagements for the coming season are song recitals, assisted at the piano by Charles Lurvey, but in several instances Miss Dufau will appear in joint recitals with Maud Powell, and at Columbus, Ohio, she will appear jointly with Katharine Goodson, the English pianist.

For her Texas engagements Miss Dufau will have the assistance of Hugo Kortschak, the former assistant concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. The coming season promises to be the busiest of Miss Dufau's career.

Lavoie-Herz Dates.

Djane Lavoie-Herz, the Canadian pianist (under contract with M. H. Hanson to tour Canada and the United States this season) will begin her series of appearances at Toronto, October 6; Hamilton, October 14, and London, Ontario, October 16. There are other Canadian concerts between those dates and immediately after will follow the opening of the Lavoie-Herz tournée on this side of the border line. The distinguished pianist is in excellent trim and is adding constantly to her already unusually large repertoire.

Clarence Eddy's Summer Activities.

Clarence Eddy, the noted organist, is spending most of his summer in the country near Ossining, N. Y. He has been touring this week through Massachusetts, stopping at Allston and his native town, Greenfield. On September 3 and 4, Mr. Eddy will dedicate the large four manual organ in the First Baptist Church at Syracuse, N. Y., Mrs. Eddy assisting him in the second recital. On September 10, Mr. and Mrs. Eddy will give a joint recital at Lawrence, L. I.

Hanna Butler in Lucerne.

Hanna Butler, the Chicago soprano, is shown in the accompanying snapshot, on top of the Rigi Mountains of Lucerne, where Mrs. Butler was escorted by Mr. and Mrs. Hull. From there Mrs. Butler intended to go to the Italian

HANNA BUTLER ON TOP OF RIGI MOUNTAIN, LUCERNE, SWITZERLAND.

Lakes, from whence she thought she would motor back to Paris with her pupil, Mary Harris.

Under the present cloudy conditions, the whereabouts of Mrs. Butler are unknown and her plans must necessarily have been altered to fit circumstances.

Cincinnati Band Troubles.

The strike of the American Federation of Musicians, in Cincinnati, is at an end and the local association has won over the non-association members. The trouble started when the Board of Park Commissioners awarded the First Regiment Band (a non-union organization) six park concerts. The association took up the matter and decided that the association players either furnish all the concerts or none. The Park Board insisted that the First Regiment Band be allowed to play six concerts. The consequence was that the non-association bands were awarded all the concerts. The Eden Park concerts were given out by the directors of the Schmidlapp Fund, and John C. Weber was awarded the contract and his band was the only association band permitted to play. The concert season began and the music furnished by the non-association bands was so poor that the Board of Park Commissioners cancelled all contracts with non-association bands and awarded all concerts to association bands led by Esberger, Hahn, Weber and Hefer.

George Everett Returns Safely.

George Everett, the accomplished and successful American baritone, returned to America last week from Europe, after a series of impressive appearances with the Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies this summer. Mr. Everett, while he still is under contract with the Boston Opera, has been approached since his return with tempting offers to go into comic opera, but up to the present moment has withstood the alluring inducements.

A Second Kubelik.

Jan Kubelik announces that his son, born a few months ago, already "reveals distinct traces of talent for the violin." Hully gee, Jan, you're stringin' us.—Newark, N. J., Star.

OBITUARY.

Henry R. Austin.

Henry Ritchie Austin, a teacher of music, with a studio at 1336 Greene avenue, Brooklyn, died on July 30, in the Cancer Hospital, Manhattan, following an operation for cancer of the throat. He was born in Greensborough, N. C., forty-one years ago, and had been a resident of Brooklyn for twenty-one years. He is survived by his mother, his stepfather, Frederick J. Deverall, who is connected with the Brooklyn Park Department, and two brothers. Harold Percy Austin, who is in the Hospital Corps stationed at Fort Hamilton, and Ernest Austin, of Sacramento, Cal.

VAUDEVILLE SKETCHES

VAUDEVILLE sketches, and monologues written and coached. Musical acts a specialty. Openings secured. Mr. JIM LONDON, 20 E. Jackson Bl., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED

WANTED—There is a splendid opportunity for a good piano, violin or singing teacher to connect with a musical institution of the highest standing in one of the leading cities of the United States by investing moderate sum in the institution. Only men or women of superior ability, culture and refinement considered. Steady income assured to the proper persons. All communications confidential. Send photo, credentials, telephone number and complete particulars to "Cooperative Opportunity," care of MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

PIANIST of reputation desires a position as accompanist in a studio, on tour or in chamber music. Pianos furnished free by a leading piano house. Address "PIANIST," care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

WALTER SPRY
Piano Lecture-Recitals
Address Fine Arts Bldg. Chicago

EDW. RECHLIN CONCERT ORGANIST
Pupil Guilmant and Widor
Accompanist to Leading Artists
16 East 88th Street Tel. 3300 Lenox

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

DAVID H. Phone
SCHRYVER
Voice Production, Diction, Sight Reading, etc:
76 Rodney St., (20th Year) Brooklyn, N. Y.

Vocal Studio and Opera School (Italian Method)
KARL SCHNEIDER
PHILADELPHIA: 1705 Chestnut St., October to May
MUENCHEN, Germany: 9 Friedrich Str., June to Sept. 15

SARTO
Bass-Baritone
(Late Metropolitan Opera Company)
Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th Street, - New York

EMMA NAGEL SOPRANO
SEASON 1914-15
Management, WALTER ANDERSON, - New York

WALTER ANDERSON ANNOUNCES
LOUISE VAN OGLE
(Now Touring Russia) in Illustrated
"TALKS ON MODERN OPERAS"
Assisted by EMMA NAGEL, Soprano
Western Tour, January-February, 1915
Address 171 West 57th Street - - - New York

Morse - Rummel
VIOLINIST
Endorsed by Nikisch, Damrosch, Ysaye, Godowsky
DIRECTION - Walter Anderson, 171 West 57th Street - NEW YORK

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 7 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1795

ELEANOR HAZZARD PEOCOCK

American Lieder Singer

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK.
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

CLIFFORD DEMAREST, F. A. G. O.,
ORGANIST—COMPOSER.
Recitals Instruction.
Church of The Messiah, 34th St. & Park Ave., N.Y.C.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training. Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Acolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
B O I C E.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

EUGENIE PAPPENHEIM,
THE CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Culture in All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101 W. 78th St., New York City.
Telephone: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3067 Tremont

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 We 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7408 Bryant. New York.
Special Summer Course.

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5460 J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

Miss EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 90th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
Will teach during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUE,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss GENEVIEVE BISBEE.
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring We Summer 1914.
347 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New Yor
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE F
VIOLIN PLAYING. PIANO A
VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d St
Complete musical education given to stud from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Director

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New Yo

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CH
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composit
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALB
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIS
Nine years of succe sful teaching and concer in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a l number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New Yor
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 182 mond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMON
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Cor Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREEN
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of S
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 7. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1795.

[In the accompanying article, the Musical Courier for once departs from its usual custom and prints a story, a fantastic piece of fiction, called "A Musician's Dream." The reason for its publication may be found in the story itself, a delightfully conceived and splendidly executed bit of musical fooling, not without a moral of a convincing kind. The author of the notion is Florizel von Reuter. Under the name of "Florizel" he toured America as a violin prodigy, but now has ripened not only into a matured artist whose performances are winning high praise in Europe, but appears also to have developed literary powers which should encourage him to cultivate the pen as assiduously as he is wielding the bow.]

A MUSICIAN'S DREAM.

A Musical Fantasy, Presented with Apologies to Those Mentioned Therein.

WRITTEN FOR THE MUSICAL COURIER BY FLORIZEL VON REUTER.

Introduction.

Dr. Richard Strauss' day had been a busy one, and he elt quite worn out when at last he found himself free to etire to rest.

He had risen early that morning and had spent several edious hours in the final proof correcting of his great ew operatic production, the anticipation of which was rovoking such a hubbub in the musical world. The ini- ial performance of the doctor's latest achievement was o take place during the coming month; rehearsals took lace thick and fast, and excitement reigned supreme. All the high priced seats had been sold a year before, and fter many postponements the date for the performance eemed to be securely fixed. There was no doubt in the inds of all interested that the day of Strauss' fifth great peratic triumph was at hand.

A few particulars regarding the new work may not be miss. A special opera house had been constructed in Dresden (this being one of Strauss' latest conditions— e., a new opera house for each premiere), the new build- ng being a triumph of architecture and warranted fire- roof, earthquake proof and Strauss proof.

Four great orchestras had been engaged to reinforce the small" band of 110 which comprised the regular Dresden Opera phalanx.

The Berlin Philharmonic, the Queen's Hall organization (London), the Colonne Orchestra (Paris) and the Vienna Musikverein, each under its respective chief, were com- ng to assist their Dresden colleagues in the execution of he new Strauss work.

The orchestral pit was built to accommodate five hun- red men and descended in tiers to a depth of fifty feet elow the parterre, thereby permitting the most ingenious and novel graduations of sound to issue from the mighty orchestral army.

Four principal conductors and six subconductors were in charge of the five united orchestras. Arthur Nikisch, Gabriel Pierné, Ernst von Schuch, Sir Henry Wood and Ferdinand Loewe each had his respective orchestra to look after, while such musicians as Karl Muck, Leo Blech, Karl Panzner, Toscanini, Mancinelli and Frederick Stock were also important factors in the drilling of this valiant garrison.

It was rumored that Fritz Steinbach and Camille Chevillard, highly indignant at not having been offered posts of honor, had been loud in expressions of disapproval and had engaged passage for South America forthwith, so that they might under no conditions be likely to hear anything of the mighty din which it was expected the performance would bring forth.

It had even been noised abroad that Strauss himself, mounted upon a pedestal high above the other conductors, intended to marshal his orchestral forces, as a sort of demigod or musical Napoleon; but this rumor had been swallowed with a pinch of salt. However, every one knew that Strauss had realized the dream of Berlioz; even the twenty pianos (to be played upon by Bauer, Borwick, Paderewski, Godowski, Sauer, Lhevinne, Bachaus and other great pianists) and the thirty harps being included in the monster orchestra he had scored for in his latest masterpiece.

The public had not seen the interior of the gigantic new theatre, nor did any one know the name or nature of the work to be produced, but all this merely served to whet the public curiosity, especially as it was rumored that the cost of production was estimated at $3,500,000, and that four great prima donnas had been engaged for the principal role, Strauss having written a part that ranged from contralto to coloratura and necessitated a change of singer after each act.

All the best seats had been bought by the world's famous millionaires, the only people who could afford to pay the fabulous prices demanded for stalls and boxes at the premiere.

To the best of these money kings music was little more than a noise, but they were desirous of having their names handed down to posterity for having cheerfully paid the $2,500 demanded for each parterre seat.

People were already standing in line for the cheaper seats, whole families in turns, the men at night, the women by day.

Small wonder, therefore, that the provoker of all this excitement should feel some slight pride over the commotion for which the creation of his brain was responsible.

To return to his day's doings, he had, after dinner, received a visit from his publishers, who brought him the latest royalties of his former operas.

The sum due him unfortunately did not exceed $250,000, and the great man almost burst into tears, for it looked as if there might be a decline in the drawing power of his masterpieces; but his publishers reassured him by telling him that the entire musical world was saving up to make the pilgrimage to Dresden, every seat for the first hundred performances, excepting those in the top gallery, having been sold long ago.

The doctor then gave audience to his lawyers, who came to confer with him about a case to be brought against a young composer who had recently written a theme alleged to resemble one of Strauss' own.

Later in the afternoon he visited the instrument factory, where his two new instruments, the hullabulloolatone and the discordanzia were in process of manufacture.

VALSE-HUMORESQUE.

He spent the evening with the ten conductors previously mentioned, in whose company he partook of so much Münchener beer that it is just possible his brain was slightly befogged and his head inclined to swim when he parted from his genial colleagues and turned his steps toward his bedroom. This may account for the strange experiences he underwent that night, or again there may be quite a different explanation for those curious adventures which wrought such an impression upon him and seemed destined greatly to influence his future compositions.

Dr. Strauss Has Visitors.

It seemed to Strauss that he could not have been asleep very long before an incessant hum of voices, apparently proceeding from the adjoining room, awoke him.

Angry that his well earned slumber should be disturbed, he sprang up, uttering a string of good German expletives, and prepared to annihilate the peace breakers.

The door communicating with the next room stood ajar, and he could see that the place was brilliantly illuminated.

Peeping through the crack he perceived, to his great surprise, that the room was much larger than he had thought, and considerable changes in the placing of the furniture had been made. But most surprising of all was the large number of persons gathered together there in earnest discussion.

Who were they? Surely he knew those faces. Had they not been familiar to him since his earliest student days? Was he dead and in a world of shades? There before him, apparently in flesh and blood, were the mighty, world-famed musicians of the past. That stately and portly elderly gentleman, with his magnificent powdered wig bore the features of the pioneer of music, Johann Sebastian Bach.

Seated near him was another of much the same build, whom Strauss immediately recognized to be Handel.

With curiosity and interest he eagerly scanned the many faces and was able to place nearly all of them.

That splendid leonine head, those piercing eyes and the scowling brow could belong to none other than Beethoven. Talking to him was a genial looking old gentleman, with thick hair and a massive chin, who, of course, was Wagner.

Haydn and Mozart also were present and several Italian musicians, Rossini and Bellini were among them.

The door at the farther end of the chamber opened, and Schubert and Verdi sauntered in, arm in arm.

The doctor trembled with excitement. He who had lorded it over all other living composers felt himself overawed in the presence of those mighty dead, in comparison with whose musical achievements his own dwindled into insignificance. What were these great men assembled for? Had not their appearance something to do with himself? He would wait and see before going in to greet them.

J. S. Bach Speaks His Mind.

The musicians had been chatting most amicably, but Bach, who was seated at a large table, suddenly rapped sharply with a gavel, whereupon there was immediately silence.

"Gentlemen, are we all here?" he asked. Haydn replied that all those invited to the private counsel had arrived, but a great many lesser celebrities of all kinds were outside, clamoring for admission. There also were a King and Countess among them, inquiring for Wagner and Beethoven, concluded Haydn.

"It is well," said Bach pompously; we will have need of them all ere long. Beloved colleagues," he continued, "as I have been unanimously elected president of this distinguished gathering, an honor, however, which I would gladly yield to my illustrious contemporary (here he bowed courteously to Handel, who tried to look becomingly modest and unconscious), I shall proceed to state clearly and concisely what has called us together.

"In the interests of music, we who have labored, each in his own individual way, to lift to the greatest heights that glorious art which we represent, do still continue to take a lively interest in the doings of our successors, and always have kept ourselves informed, by ways known to us, of their progress in the field of art, of their strivings for fame, their successes, their disappointments, and of their ultimate triumphs or undeserved failures.

"Handel and I, being two of the oldest occupants of this our heavenly abode, have welcomed you all in turn to our ranks, made you members of our holy brotherhood, and congratulated you upon your earthly achievements; and you have joined the circle of watchers over the destinies of musicians yet unborn or still in the cradle. We all have some claim upon one another's admiration. Although our work often differs so totally in style that we can never agree in all things, yet are we linked together by one bond and we belong to one great family, the most noble and divine of all art families. I, for one, heartily admire the ingenuity and perseverance of our illustrious colleague, Richard Wagner, and am inclined to believe that had I lived many years later his ideas might have been mine (here Wagner looked rather dubious), as we were both revolutionists in our way. I also congratulate my esteemed neighbor, Handel, for the excellent manner in which he followed my principles and carried out my systems (here Handel looked displeased at this reflection upon his own creative powers) and I compliment dear Haydn upon that happy little idea of his, the 'Sonata Form.'"

"That 'little' idea certainly was not inspired by your music, mein lieber Bach," muttered Haydn, a trifle ungratefully.

Rossini whispered to Bellini: "The same fault in his conversation as in his music, tedious, too elaborate and long drawn out."

"I now arrive at the principal subject," continued Bach, "this somewhat lengthy introduction being quite in the style of our dear friend, Beethoven. You shall now hear the reason for our rendezvous."

"Gott sei Dank," ejaculated a fat old gentleman who occupied a huge armchair in a corner, and was the possessor of a large and rather untidy white beard.

"Cheer up, Johannes," whispered Schubert encouragingly. "The others are going to be let in directly, and I caught a glimpse of your dear chum, Joseph, as I came through the ante-chamber."

This information seemed to please the old gentleman immensely, for he smiled and shut his eyes, while he lay back comfortably in his big armchair, and prepared to listen patiently to the proceedings.

Strauss Hears Little Good of Himself.

"For several years," Bach went on, "the world has been humming and seething with interest in a certain individual whose name we are all familiar with. This musician's name has been, so to speak, a theme with innumerable variations, such as several of the present company were exceedingly fond of." (At this point Beethoven and Brahms pretended not to be listening, and Handel, from whom Brahms had borrowed a theme for the purpose of making an endless string of variations on it, winked at the latter gentleman, who smiled genially and shut his eyes again.)

"By means familiar to us," resumed the speaker, "we have many of us been present in spirit during the various performances of this composer's works. Gentlemen, you will all have divined to whom I refer, namely—Richard Strauss."

(The listener at the door shivered with excitement and gratification.)

Wagner now arose and craved permission to make a few remarks, and this being graciously accorded by the president, he addressed the company as follows:

"I must admit, gentlemen, that upon hearing the earlier orchestral works of the composer in question I was favorably impressed. He seemed to be a man who understood my methods and knew how to make use of them. Breadth of idea and great orchestral resource were his; in short, he seemed thoroughly qualified to be my successor."

"My dear sir," interrupted Rossini petulantly, "I never could make head or tail out of anything he ever wrote. Frightful noise and horrible discords, nothing else."

"Caro Rossini," retorted Wagner stiffly, "his style in his earlier works too closely resembles mine to allow such a remark on your part to be in good taste."

Rossini shrugged his huge shoulders and the two rivals darted anything but pleasant glances at each other, but Beethoven, with great presence of mind, called out: "O Freunde, nicht diese Töne!" whereupon the two composers consented to be appeased. Wagner then continued his discourse.

"It was not until 'Don Juan,' 'Tod und Verklärung' and 'Till Eulenspiegel' were old favorites and 'Zarathustra' and 'Don Quixote' were presented that I began to be disappointed. The man was not quite fulfilling my expectations. The prodigious science and orchestral command were still there, but he seemed to be using them to less noble purposes.

"You all know that in my lifetime money and success never were my chief considerations. I labored to ennoble art, to uplift the drama, revise the totally insufficient and unnatural opera form (some commotion and energetic signs of dissent occurred among the Italian section of the committee during this oration).

"I determined to make my music 'the music of the future' and I succeeded, as you all know."

"Unfortunately for my operas, you did," muttered Bellini, sulkily.

"Now my suspicions regarding Strauss are practically confirmed," Wagner continued; "I greatly fear he is too commercial and calculating to be absolutely sincere in his art."

"I quite agree with you," interrupted Beethoven, who had been eagerly awaiting a chance to speak. "Descriptive music I always approved of, my symphonies being the proof. I feel that you, dear confrere, were my legitimate successor. You paid my music proper tribute, and your performance of my 'Ninth' in London has seldom been equaled, the fact of my having been just behind you on the conductor's platform, though you knew it not, doubtless inspiring you."

(Here Wagner must needs clasp Beethoven warmly by the hand, to the ill-concealed impatience of some of the company.)

"But when that daring and misguided musician, Strauss, begins to degrade the ideas coined from my 'Pastorale,' and introduces into his work sounds of Nature calculated to resemble the braying of asses, the bleating of sheep and the screaming of peacocks, then I withdraw my approval."

Here Bach again took the floor, saying: "Still, the culminating indignity to art was not reached until 'Salome' and 'Elektra' were produced and the 'Domestic' symphony was a familiar concert number.

"In this last perpetration the composer not only debases the noble art of fugue by a howling, screaming cacophony, but also drags from its time honored slumber that lovely instrument which we ancient composers alone understood. I refer to the oboe d'amore. 'Salome' and 'Elektra' are crowning insults to music as I, Johann Sebastian Bach, understand it," he continued, working himself into a fit of indignation, "and yet he is not satisfied in his desire to attract public notice and amass wealth. He must needs drop from the heights of ultra-modern music, the last word in Wagnerian music-drama, to the depths of comic opera, in which he deliberately encroaches upon the territory of our esteemed brother, Johann Strauss, who will presently be here to speak for himself. 'Rosenkavalier' is a medley of Viennese waltzes à la Johann Strauss, and yet people are eagerly flocking to hear it. My masses, my cantatas are neglected; that noble work, 'Fidelio,' from our dear friend Beethoven's pen, is in some cities almost forgotten; this Richard the Second, as he is pleased to style himself, is coining money and storing up wealth to an extent that we, in our lifetime, never dreamed of."

All present now became greatly excited. Wagner danced around the room shouting: "He abuses my methods, he degrades the art of dissonances, he dares to call himself Richard the Second!"

"Keep calm, my dear sir," remonstrated Bach. "He has indeed done all this and even much more. Now he is about to produce another of his extravagances. It is not to be tolerated. In the interests of Art, and also in his own interest, it is necessary that we make an attempt to bring him back to the right path, that we open his eyes to

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicag
KIMBALL PIANO USED

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKING
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USEL

Season 1914-1915
October to May (inclusive)

Francis MACMILLEN

Violinist

To my clients and patrons:

Despite the war in Europe, which in all probability will upset the plans of many European artists who had arranged to come to America during the season 1914-1915, Mr. Macmillen, through the State Department in Washington, has been assured by the German War Department that he, as an American, will be permitted to leave Germany at any time he may choose. He is at present in Dresden. In order that all local managers and clubs throughout the United States and Canada may be assured of the services of at least one violinist of the first rank during the coming season, I suggest that now is the time to contract for Mr. Macmillen. While his list of bookings are numerous, some dates are still open. Terms for these remaining appearances will be furnished on application.

Very sincerely yours, S. E. Macmillen,

220 West Forty-Second Street, New York City

his mistakes. We are here to pass judgment upon him, in the hope that he may mend his evil ways."

"Hear, hear!" shouted every one.

"Gentlemen, the jury is without, and awaits our call. Let us appoint our lawyers and agree upon the accusations before sending for the accused, who is near at hand."

The Lawyers.

Doctor Strauss would fain have fled from the room, as he watched the ominous preparations for his discomfiture, but he saw no way of exit except through the tribunal chamber. He could only stand still and await with some anxiety the result of the company's deliberations.

"With the permission of all present," announced Bach, "I will retain my position as president and judge, it being more fitting to the dignity of the 'Father of Music.' Let those who desire to accuse forthwith submit their plaints."

An excited argument now began, each composer having grievances of his own; but finally it was decided that Beethoven and Wagner were most fitted to be principal accusers, on the ground that their music had been the most offended by the accused.

Haydn and Mozart emphatically refused to join actively in the proceeding, saying that Strauss' music had absolutely nothing in common with theirs; therefore their rights had not been infringed upon. Mozart furthermore stated that the accused had always professed to a great admiration for his music and he, Mozart, would not take any active part in Strauss' condemnation.

Bach, therefore, appointed him clerk of the court, and Haydn consented to act as usher. Strauss fervently blessed these two distinguished ghosts for their forbearance. He had enough accusers as it was.

To everybody's surprise, Verdi insisted upon handing in an accusation. "As you know," he explained, "it has often been said of Strauss that he has an extremely lyrical tendency, and from the heights of musical extravagance and unmelodious chaos often swoops down to an almost Italian melody, which, in my opinion, he has no right to do, the two adverse styles not mixing well together. I desire to argue this point with him."

The question now arose as to who should present the cases of the three official plaintiffs.

Wagner and Beethoven, energetic and impulsive as in life, wished to do most of the talking themselves, but the judge refused to permit them to try their own cases.

Some one suggested Brahms, who was fast asleep in his corner, but this proposal was overruled, that great man being considered too heavy and slow for such a spirited procedure. A man of Hebraic features, who hitherto had remained silent, though attentively following the proceedings, now arose and signified his willingness to try the case, with counsel from Handel.

"Just the man," exclaimed several. "Let Mendelssohn undertake it." He was, therefore, appointed chief prosecuting attorney and was seen to shoot a humorous glance of triumph at Wagner, author of the pamphlet "Judaism in Music."

"Stop," cried Bach, loudly; "we must be fair in all things. Who will defend the accused?" His eagle eye searched the room as he spoke.

"Not I," announced Rossini.

"Nor I," chimed in Bellini.

"Nor I," boomed out Brahms, waking up.

"Come, come, this will never do," said Bach in perplexity, scratching his head.

"Aren't there any other learned theorists here to whom we could apply? How about Nietzsche? I hear he is outside, asking to be allowed to report this meeting."

"No good," replied Handel, shaking his head. "He's never forgiven Strauss for 'Zarathustra.'"

"There is no help for it, then," said Bach. "The prisoner will have to plead his own case, unless a defender can be found immediately."

The unfortunate "prisoner," listening anxiously behind the door, felt his heart sink into the region of his boots (or where his boots would have been, if he had been dressed), as he waited for a defender to offer himself.

Of all these distinguished people, would not one say a good word for him? Was it mere jealousy, blind ignorance or crabbed pedantry which made them all hate him?

At this moment Mozart, who had left the room a short time ago, returned, dragging with him another Semitic individual.

"Behold, a counselor for the defense!" cried he.

"Good evening, Herr Meyerbeer," said the judge; "are you willing to undertake the task of endeavoring to present Dr. Richard Strauss' misdeeds in a less unfavorable light?"

Meyerbeer, for it was he, smiled somewhat superciliously, shrugged his shoulders, and asked: "Who are the plaintiffs?"

"Wagner, Beethoven and Verdi are accusing, and the prosecuting attorney is our friend Mendelssohn," answered the president.

"We are sure to have some fun, then," returned Meyerbeer, with hauteur. "Well, so be it. I never did get on with Wagner, while Strauss and I certainly have many points in common. In fact, he comes nearer approaching my music than any one else since my time. I like the way he uses the bass drum, cymbals and triangle."

"Idiot," growled Strauss, disgustedly.

"That settles the matter, then," said Bach. "Let the jury be summoned."

V.

The Jury. The Audience. The Trial.

Now it seemed to the culprit that the room became much larger and took on the aspect of a court room. There were tiers of seats for the public; the box where he, as accused, was soon to stand; the twelve chairs for the jury, and the dais and desk for the judge. The door was thrown wide open and the twelve jurymen filed solemnly in.

Strauss knew them all. They represented the music of six great nations.

The foreman was Schumann, and he was followed by Weber, Gluck, Palestrina, Donizetti, Gounod, Rameau, Byrde, Purcell, Tschaikowsky and Grieg.

They took their seats amid an impressive silence.

A great mass of spectators were packed together densely behind the barricade. Every musician who ever had lived seemed to be there, and also there were a number of people whom history associates with the lives and emotions of the great musicians. An old man, with long white hair and a face besprinkled with warts, rushed up to Wagner and embraced him tenderly.

The Celebrated American Baritone

WILLIAM

HINSHAW

(Metropolitan Opera Company)

Specially engaged to sing Wotan and Wanderer in the Berlin Wagner Ring Festival June 23rd to August 21st, 1914

In America December to June

Concert Direction R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

Sitting in a private box, in great state, was the melancholy King Ludwig of Bavaria, evidently present on Wagner's account.

The pale, sad Minna Wagner smiled reproachfully but sweetly at her erstwhile husband, while the beautiful Mathilde Wesendonck eagerly sought the gaze of her Tristan. In sharp contrast to these loving faces was the scowling mien of Dr. Edward Hanslick, greatest of anti-Wagnerites.

Wilhelmj, Schroeder-Devrient, Carolsfeld and many others who recalled the first Bayreuth triumphs were present.

Beethoven also had friends in the audience. Gazing longingly and lovingly at him was the intense young Countess Teresa of Brunswick, beautiful as she had been when they first met, and the great man shed a silent tear as he surreptitiously blew her a kiss. His old friends, the Breunings, also waved to him.

There was Chopin, and by his side Georges Sand. Brahms spied an old friend and hastened to greet his lifelong comrade, Joseph Joachim, who had entered the hall with Halir.

Conductors hobnobbed together. Hans von Bülow, Anton Seidl and Theodore Thomas seemed to be on very good terms, and had beckoned Mahler and Mottl to join them.

Pianists were arguing together. Rubinstein and Clara Schumann were eagerly arguing on interpretation; Mac-Dowell, who had been looking rather lonesome, was buttonholed by Tausig.

Scores of violinists were there—Spohr, Vieuxtemps, Wieniawski, etc. Sarasate had hunted up Paganini, and the two technicians babbled endlessly about harmonics and pizzicati.

Many who had been enemies in life now chatted in perfect friendship.

Today all seemed banded together against one man, and he alone was alive among this host of dead, the dead who sat in judgment upon him; or was he also dead?

* * * * * *

Now four trumpeters, posted in a gallery above, blared out the famous C major fanfare from "Lohengrin."

Mozart, in his capacity of clerk of the court, read in a loud, clear voice: "Beethoven, Wagner, Verdi, versus Richard Strauss."

Thereupon a hum of expectation arose, and the jury sat up attentively.

"Let the accused appear!" commanded the judge. As by an invisible power Strauss felt himself urged forward. The door was flung open and he knew that his time had come. Luckily for him, he perceived that in some mysterious manner his clothes had suddenly draped his person (which almost proves that this story is no dream!), so he felt less compunction in stepping into public view, yet, as he realized that all eyes were focused upon him, his knees trembled a trifle.

He, the King of Modern Music, the Prince of Discords, the revolutionist, the most daring and successful of all living composers, felt as insignificant as the veriest amateur before that mighty assembly.

"Salome" and "Elektra" never had seemed so worthless to him as now, when he found himself in the presence of all the composers who ever had lived.

He began to ask himself what he was in comparison with all those gathered together to judge him. What had he done save follow in their footsteps? Theirs the true glory, the credit. How ill could the field of art have spared one of his accusers, yet would he himself be greatly missed?

Doubtless he underestimated his own truly great powers in this disconcerting moment, but he who had so long seen fortune smile upon him could well afford an instant of humility.

Mendelssohn now opened the case for the prosecution by reading the accusations. They were three in number:

I. Putting the sacred art of music to commercial use.

II. Abusing the art of descriptive music as set forth by Beethoven and Wagner.

III. Combining Italian lyricism with Strauss fanaticism, to the detriment of both.

Some difficulty was experienced in keeping the plaintiffs, Beethoven and Wagner, from interrupting the proceedings constantly, the judge, in his laudable desire for fair play, having to call them to order frequently.

Meyerbeer, as defending lawyer, scored several clever hits against the offensive gentlemen, but the sympathy of the audience was clearly with the plaintiffs. Strauss, from his position in the prisoner's box, was able to observe the strange scene. He noticed that the court reporter, who sat just below him, was the poet-philosopher Nietsche, Wagner's estwhile disciple and later denunciator. Goethe and Schiller were writing at a side table, as if preparing a journalistic account of the proceedings, and near them sat Molière, who was busily employed in sketching a caricature of Strauss.

The composer, Lully, who was not far from his collaborator of former times, leaned over and whispered something to Molière, something detrimental to the fame of Strauss' "Ariadne," but greatly in favor of his own long forgotten "Ariadne"; but Molière smiled, shook his head and replied cooly that he wished Strauss and he had been contemporaries, so that they might have written the "Bourgeois Gentilhomme" together, and left Hoffmannsthal out of the proceedings.

In this curious trial there were no witnesses. Each plaintiff was interrogated in turn, and gave his evidence with deadly directness.

The scores of "Salome" and "Elektra" were produced as pieces of damning proof. They were eagerly and solemnly examined by the jury, many of whom were manifestly horrified by the eccentricities of the music, notably such old fogies as Byrde, Purcell and Palestrina. Weber, who in "Freischütz" had tried his hand with some success at descriptive music, was rather impressed by the marvelous orchestration; but the majority could make neither head nor tail of it. Meyerbeer pointed out that Purcell, Rameau and the other old masters could scarcely condemn Strauss in these modern times for his use of fifths and false resolutions, as there was a man in Paris,

NORAH DREWETT THE FAMOUS PIANIST

SEASON 1914-15

Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York

STEINWAY PIANO USED

WITH A VIEW TO MAINTAINING THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE STANDARD OF MUSICAL EXCELLENCE AND THOROUGHNESS

THE von ENDE SCHOOL OF MUSIC OF NEW YORK CITY

has inaugurated the following schedule of work together with stringent final tests for certificates and diplomas

PIANO DEPARTMENT

SCHEDULE OF WORK REQUIRED IN THE REGULAR DEPARTMENT OF THE PRESCRIBED COURSE FOR PIANO

Class.	Principal Subject.	Theory.	Supplementary Theory.	Lectures. History of Music.	Chamber Music.	Choral Practice.
I.	Piano.	First Year Harmony (3 terms).	Elements of Theory. Rhythm. Solfeggio.	Literary and Art Lectures. Musical History.	Violin and Piano Sonatas: Haydn, Haendel, Bach, Mozart.	Opera Chorus. Oratorio.
II.	Piano.	Second Year Harmony (3 terms).	Ear Training.	Literary and Art Lectures. Musical History.	Trios: Haydn, Mozart, Mendelssohn.	Opera Chorus. Oratorio.
III.	Piano.	Harmonic Analysis (1 term). Counterpoint (2 terms).	Musical Form.	Literary and Art Lectures.	Sonatas: Beethoven, Schumann, Brahms.	Opera Chorus. Oratorio.
IV.	Piano.	Counterpoint (3 terms).		Literary and Art Lectures.	Trios—Quartets: Beethoven, Schumann, Brahms, Schubert.
V.	Piano.				Modern Chamber Music.

THE FINAL TEST FOR CERTIFICATES. (PIANO)

The final test for certificates of the Regular Department for pianists of the Prescribed Course requires the musicianly performance of extracts of Bach's "Well-tempered Clavichord," Beethoven's earlier Sonatas, various compositions of Schumann, Chopin, Brahms. An average of ninety per cent. in the theoretical work, a good performance of chamber-music work selected from the repertoire studied during the past year, and ninety per cent. attendance record at Lectures, Classes and Recitals of the school as assigned.

SCHEDULE OF WORK REQUIRED IN THE ARTISTS AND TEACHERS DEPARTMENT OF THE PRESCRIBED COURSE FOR THE PIANO

Class.	Principal Subject.	Theory.	Chamber Music.	Score Reading and Conducting. Pedagogy.
V.		Counterpoint (1 term). Canon and Fugue (2 terms).		Pedagogy.
VI.	Piano. Advanced Repertoire.	Composition and Orchestration.	Chamber Music in relation to forms studied in composition class.	Pedagogy.
VII.	Piano. Advanced Repertoire.	Composition and Orchestration.	Chamber Music in relation to forms studied in composition class.	Score Reading and Conducting.
VIII.	Piano. Advanced Repertoire.	Composition and Orchestration.	Chamber Music in relation to forms studied in composition class.	Score Reading and Conducting.

THE FINAL TEST FOR DIPLOMA OF GRADUATION. (PIANO)

The final test for a diploma of graduation of the Artists' and Teachers' Department for pianists of the Prescribed Course, requires a musicianly performance of either the Schumann C minor or E flat Beethoven, Brahms, Tschaikowsky, Chopin, Saint-Saëns or Mozart (D) concertos; a complete recital program embracing the classical and modern artists repertoire. A chamber-music work to be selected from the repertoire studied during the past season, an average of ninety per cent. in theoretical work, a test in score reading and conducting, and an attendance record at Lectures, Classes and Recitals of ninety per cent. at the school as assigned.

Copyright, 1914, Herwegh von Ende.

by the name of Debussy, who even outdid Strauss in that respect. The jurymen, Grieg and Tschaikowsky, nodded approvingly, and a voice from the public—that of Hector Berlioz—was heard to exclaim, "Hear, hear!" to the great disgust of Bach, who called the room to order.

Meyerbeer then endeavored to prove that Wagner himself was a great lover of dissonances, and therefore unfitted to accuse Strauss, but the president overruled this.

Further excitement now was caused by the hurried and noisy entrance of an individual who was waving a bulky score.

"You are late, sir" said Bach, "and the trial is already in progress. Take your seat."

"Not before I've shown the jury this score," cried the intruder, holding it up. Lo—upon the title page was graven the name, "Der Rosenkavalier."

"'Der Rosenkavalier,' indeed," grumbled the newcomer. "If he had called it 'Die Fledermaus' it would have been more to the point. Look at this waltz, gentlemen, and see if it isn't another Johann Strauss waltz, only not so good. Did he not laughingly say that he was imitating his Viennese cousin? How dare he make money with my waltzes?"

The entire public now rose up, carried away by excitement. Liszt was heard to shout that it was a "howling shame." In vain the judge pounded on his desk. All talked at once, all lifted up denouncing arms, which pointed at the solitary man in the box, the cause of it all.

He could almost have found it in him to exult over the turmoil he was creating in the spirit world, had he not feared the ultimate outcome of all this excitement.

"Jealous fools," he muttered to himself, while Meyerbeer was vainly trying to make himself heard, shrieking: 'I object to this intrusion; give my client a chance."

The trumpeters in the gallery started up the theme of the street broil in "Meistersinger."

Finally order was restored and the judge fined Johann Strauss $2.50 for contempt of court.

The trial now proceeded, but things went from bad to worse for Strauss, and he gave himself up for lost.

Meyerbeer never had been a favorite with his colleagues —especially Wagner having every cause to dislike him— and although he spoke with great pompousness, his words were like his music, they did not reach the hearts of their hearers.

Presently Strauss heard himself called upon to address the court. All the illustrious company listened eagerly.

His courage returned to him and he spoke with dignity: "I know not how to answer the numerous accusations brought against me by the court. Let me try, however, to present my point of view. It seems that in your eyes I have been guilty of many lapses from the path of genuine art. Perhaps there is truth in what you say, for it is certainly not easy in the present age to be absolutely deaf to the voice of ambition and commerce, to sacrifice one's desire for wealth and fame at the shrine of pure art. Many think that the day of sincerity in art—be it painting, literature or music—is passed, and I have only followed the path which thousands are treading daily.

"My superior powers have enabled me to outdistance all others, and I have arrived at the pinnacle of my fame at an age when many of you present were in your time practically unknown. I do not wish to extol my own merits, neither do I desire to excuse myself; I merely state facts.

"That I am the greatest living composer is perhaps true, but that does not imply that I consider myself the superior of the distinguished company before me. I realize that I owe everything to my predecessors and it deeply grieves me that you are all in arms against me, for I would rather merit your esteem than bask in the plaudits of the common horde. I can neither plead guilty nor not guilty to the charges laid upon me. I have composed for the twentieth century and certainly have done all I could to attract the public eye. If these are crimes against art, then sentence me.

"I am highly honored that you should have so interested yourselves in my behalf, and I will ponder deeply over this experience. Gentlemen, I await your verdict."

He could not bring himself to appeal for mercy.

The judge ordered the jury to retire.

They had been absent but a short time when Schumann returned, bringing a verdict of guilty under extenuating circumstances.

Weber, Grieg and Tschaikowsky had voted in favor of the prisoner. It remained for the judge to pronounce sentence.

"Dr. Richard Strauss," he began, in deeply impressive tones, putting on a black cap as he spoke, "we are a merciful and a just court, and only we desire that you profit by what you have heard today, as we are fully convinced of your great merits. It is the decree of the court that you write no more musical absurdities. Let this new work which you are about to inflict upon a long suffering public be the last of what we consider to be gigantic musical swindles. Rather turn to work worthy of your genius. Follow the path upon which you first started and never forget that the approval of those who, though invisible, are ever near you, should be more to a true genius than the unenlightened plaudits of the masses. We cannot compel you to observe our decree, but should you persist in your evil ways you will be denied admittance into our glorious ranks when your earthly days are numbered, and you will forfeit the title of greatness which you will otherwise receive, and which, we are convinced, will then live after you."

The doctor heaved a sigh of relief. "The court is merciful," he said. "I thank the judge and I shall ever bear in mind his parting words. Let those who hear my future works be struck with admiration and pleasure rather than curiosity and astonishment."

Aftermath.

The facial expressions of all present had changed. Wagner and Beethoven were smiling, and extended their hands to their late adversary. Mendelssohn and Meyerbeer were laughing together. Brahms immediately went off to sleep again and started snoring. Schubert was seen to be scribbling on a sheet of foolscap a new theme, evidently destined for a heavenly chorus. The faces of the spectators became indistinct. Liszt, Ludwig of Bavaria, the Countess Teresa, the many musicians, faded away. Bach, Beethoven, Haydn and Mozart all became blurred and the whole scene confused and dim.

Upon the far wall of the courtroom appeared in letters of fire the "Fate" motive from Beethoven's fifth symphony.

Far away a choir sang part of a Bach cantata and deep toned bells in the distance tolled the familiar four note chime from "Parsifal."

A sharp and harsh muted trumpet call broke in upon the mystic tones and dispelled the illusion. Strauss recognized it instantly and sprang out of bed with a theme from "Salome" ringing in his ears.

The motive had called him back from the world of shades.

It was morning and he was still alive.

He rushed to the door.

There, where Bach and Beethoven, in company with hundreds of others, had sat in judgment upon him, were emptiness and silence.

All the incident of the strange night remained clear in his mind.

Here he had stood and listened to the denunciations of his work. There had sat the judge, the accusers, the jurors. Almost he could hear again the sonorous voice of Bach.

"I suppose," he muttered, after long thought, "that the new opera will have to go on—but, Donnerwetter! I shall bear in mind the warning which my distinguished colleagues saw fit to convey to me. My next work will be something very different, or my name is not Richard Strauss."

Whether he kept this resolution remains to be seen.

Kelly Activity in Omaha.

Among the American musicians who are quite satisfied to be in the United States this summer are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Kelly, of Omaha, Neb. This couple goes abroad almost every summer, and last year they spent four months in Europe, dividing the time between London, Munich,

THOMAS J. KELLY.

Vienna and Berlin, after a fortnight at the famous Curragh Camp, County Kildare, Ireland, where Mr. Kelly's brother is a chaplain in the army, and at a beautiful seaside place in County Wicklow. In Berlin the Kellys met some very interesting people outside of the American colony as well as in it and were the recipients of many courtesies, professional and otherwise. As they did not return to this country till late their season was necessarily shorter than usual, so they decided to prolong it into the summer. The weather in Omaha has been pleasant and so the artist pair spent the summer there, playing golf, doing some teaching, and for the rest, taking things easy.

Their being in Omaha was taken advantage of by several former pupils who happen to be in the vicinity at their homes and who are engaged in schools and other musical work elsewhere. One serious student who worked very earnestly during her stay in Omaha is now in Honolulu, Mrs. Captain Stone, and of her Mr. Kelly said recently: "She has a glorious voice and is possessed of brains and temperament as well. She has studied a great deal before she came to Omaha and left for her home keenly appreciative of the work she had done this summer."

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly gave their folksong program in Lincoln, Neb., and their "Anthology of Song," beginning with the twelfth century and ending with the eighteenth, and an epilogue in prospect of the nineteenth, before the Tuesday Musical Club of Omaha. This was in three programs, and Mr. Kelly delivered a running commentary, making each song a living human document, and not illustrations of a dry lecture recital.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly will leave the First Methodist Church of Omaha this fall and take charge of the music at St. Mary's Avenue Congregational Church, one of the best known churches of the West. They will have only one service on Sunday and a few musical vesper services during the season. The church is so situated that the evening service has been abandoned as a public worship service. This will be the second time that a Kelly choir has furnished the music for this church, Mr. and Mrs. Kelly and choir having been there for four years before going to the Methodist Church for the second time.

The Mendelssohn Choir of Omaha started in seven years ago to try to improve local musical conditions; it met with opposition, as was to be expected, but it rehearsed seriously and with a purpose, which was to produce and present beautiful choral singing, regardless of whether any one ever heard it or not. There was no promise of a concert at any future time; and naturally this brought to the membership only those who were seriously in earnest and enthusiastic about the possibilities of choral singing. For two whole seasons the Mendelssohn Choir of Omaha, under Mr. Kelly's direction, worked without any public appearance, labored with enunciation, phrasing, true diction, tone quality, and gave a concert of unaccompanied singing at the end of the second season assisted by John Forsell, the Swedish baritone, who was then in America. It created a sensation.

Five years ago the Mendelssohn Choir of Omaha entered into a contract with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra (then the Theodore Thomas Orchestra) for a period of five years, giving three concerts each year in the spring. This coming April will close the five year series and Mr. Kelly is planning an interesting set of programs, to consist of the works, or parts of works, and special choral numbers which proved most popular during the preceding four years. Other works will be taken up for study in view of the future. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly are continually adding to their repertoire of interesting programs of various types and now are working up one entitled "Occasional Songs," or songs written on or about certain occasions; it brings a novel idea to the recital field and shows not only research but good judgment in the research.

Mr. Kelly gave several lectures last season, notably one before the Ministerial Union of Omaha, which presented some unorthodox but practical ideas under the caption, "Some Thoughts on Hymns." It provoked quite a bit of discussion pro and con, and the lecturer was the recipient of a very enthusiastic letter from the union.

Von Stein Recital.

On July 2 the von Stein Academy of Music, Los Angeles, Cal., gave its 357th students' recital at the Gamut auditorium. This was the occasion of the sixteenth semi-annual award of the Grand Prize, it having been the custom of this institution, since its inception, to give such a prize. Director Heinrich von Stein reports that he was greatly pleased with the showing made by the pupils before a crowded and enthusiastic house.

This was the program:

Ensemble for strings—
Arietta ..... Roht. Fuchs
Reverie ..... Robt. Fuchs
Scherzo ..... Robt. Fuchs
Misses Sprague, Rappaport and Baker, Messrs. Hellauer, Hall, Loring, Geissinger, Stockwell, Marker and Barnes.

Piano—
Gypsy Dance ..... Dutton
Hubert Tucker, class of Miss R. Mitchell.

Walzer ..... Rheinhold
Raymond Martin, class of Miss L. Carroll.

Minuet ..... Newton
Myrtle von Stein, class of Miss R. Mitchell.

Spinning Wheel ..... Dutton
Hazel von Stein, class of H. Hilburg.

Brilliants ..... Orth
Miguel Echezarreta, class of V. Nemechek.

Sonatina ..... Clementi
Beulah Whittington, class of Miss Mitchell.

Violin, Romance sans Paroles ..... Van Goens
Frances Sprague, class of Mr. Webster.

Voice, Calm as the Night ..... Bohm
Rebecca Christiansen, class of Mr. Welker.

Violin, Canzona ..... Bohm
Roderick Loring, class of Mr. Webster.

Piano—
Idyl Impromptu ..... Moore
Ruth Whittington, class of Mr. Hilburg.

Tarantella ..... Gurlitt
Mildred Dean, class of Mr. Hilburg.

Shadow Dance ..... MacDowell
Hazel Yoho, class of Mr. von Stein.

Fasching schwank ..... Schumann
Hazel Hammerton, class of Mr. von Stein.

Polish Dance ..... Scharwenka
Laura Tallman, class of Mr. von Stein.

Fantasie Impromptu, C sharp minor ..... Chopin
Perpetuum mobile, from sonata in C ..... Weber
Master Dorsey Whittington, class of Mr. von Stein.

Grillen ..... Schumann
Théme originale et Variations ..... Tschaikowsky
Reta Mitchell, class of Mr. von Stein.

Valse, C sharp minor ..... Chopin
Etude, C minor ..... Chopin
Caprice Espagnole ..... Moszkowsky
Loretta Payson, class of Mr. von Stein.

Award of prize medals.
Director Heinrich von Stein.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Nana Genovese in Charming Recital.

Nana Genovese, the well known Italian mezzo-soprano, was heard recently in a brilliant song recital at the home of Mrs. J. Paterno, Rumson, N. J. Her program consisted of arias and songs, principally Italian and French, and also included some of Cadman's songs in English, "Moon of Roses," "Dandelions" and "At Twilight Time," also a "Slumber Song," by H. C. Gilmour, and "In My Garden," by Liddle. Her numbers were deeply appreciated, while her beautiful voice and clear enunciation made her delivery highly interesting. Mme. Genovese has at all times perfect control of her rich mezzo voice and she interprets with rare art the different composers' works. The whole program was exceedingly pleasing and the singer won special favor through her group of English songs, which charmed her audience.

Some comments on Nana Genovese's art follow:

In Mme. Genovese we met an artist with a voice of unexpected beauty, a voice whose full resonance charmed the ears as few voices can. The broad melodies of some of her songs showed the richness of her tones and made it delightful to listen. All the character songs were given in great skill so that with a mere occasional glance of the English text one knew exactly what was coming. Although

NANA GENOVESE
After her first morning musical, which was a brilliant success.

Italian, her English enunciation is especially commendable and does not show the slightest accent. Her program was highly interesting through the variety and put together very artistic. Numerous encores had to be given in answer to the spontaneous applause.—Red Bank (N. J.), Press.

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York
NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915
STEINWAY PIANO USED

Von Ende School Piano Department.

"It is one of the most common fallacies encountered in the educational world," said Herwegh von Ende recently to a MUSICAL COURIER representative, "that any one method is the royal road to knowledge and success. Few are the schools that found their policy on the fact that, as there are many ways that lead to Rome, so there are many manners and methods that lead to artistic excellence, provided the students and the teacher have a fair degree of innate ability, the one to receive, the other to impart, and both are conscientiously concerned about doing their best. Moreover, if European tradition is to reign supreme in musical education, no policy could be wiser than to employ a fair percentage of instructors born and bred in Europe, and thus to relieve American students from the necessity of going abroad—especially in the present state of things.

"In both respects the von Ende School of Music is pursuing what I consider a commendable course, being eclectic in the matter of methods, and both European and American in the makeup of its faculty. This is particularly evident from the list of instructors in the piano department. All the great pianists and piano pedagogues of the present are represented by pupils; there are among those teachers men and women who studied with Liszt, Paderewski, Busoni, Godowsky, Lhevinne and Leschetizky, whose very name works like magic upon the aspiring pianist. But there are also men in that faculty who have not vowed allegiance to any one master and method, but who have absorbed many influences and devised their own system."

Continued Mr. von Ende: "Hans van den Burg, coming from the people that gave the world its first great masters of church music, the Dutch, studied with Dutch and German masters, and is a man of that broad cosmopolitan culture which is the flower of eclecticism. His ability in bringing out the students' individuality and leading them to understand and interpret the works of the great composers in a musicianly manner has been frequently commented upon in the recitals given by his pupils. No doubt not a few of them will some time rival his famous pupils abroad, among them Felix White, of London, and Marcuzzi, of Florence. Mr. van den Burg has an enviable reputation in his country as pianist, conductor and composer, and it is to be hoped that his works will be heard in New York soon.

"Albert Ross Parsons, the philosopher and scholar among American piano pedagogues, a man of universal vision and practically familiar with all piano methods and all piano literature, is chiefly concerned in developing musical individualities. In the many years of his experience as a teacher, Mr. Parsons has turned out not a few artist teachers of pronounced personality. Lewis M. Hubbard, who studied at the Royal Hochschule in Berlin and has been a pupil of Xaver Scharwenka and Franz Liszt, is another force to be reckoned with in any faculty, having been director of the Lachmund Conservatory, which has recently been taken over by the von Ende School. Lawrence Goodman has the distinction of being endorsed by Lhevinne, and has also proved his high standing as musician both as a brilliant pianist and as a conscientious instructor. Louis Stillman, the author of 'Concentration and Technic,' is also favorably known as a pedagogue.

"Sigismund Stojowski, the Polish pianist and composer," said Mr. von Ende, "has a reputation which attracts students from all over the country. Pianist, composer and teacher of exceptional qualities, the classes which he conducts at the school and which tend to sharpen in the students the faculty of criticism, have been particularly successful, and the individual pupils of Mr. Stojowski that have been heard in recitals have displayed abilities that do him honor. Mr. Stojowski is assisted by Elise Conrad, his former pupil, who conducts her technical work according to his principles and prepares pupils who are technically insufficiently equipped to study with him, for entrance into the masters' class in repertoire. Miss Conrad is an expert in her line and has conducted many teachers' classes.

"The special representative of Leschetizky," concluded Mr. von Ende, "is Jean Marie Mattoon, who for eight years was a pupil and teacher under the great piano pedagogue. She is not only intimately familiar with his artistic ideals, but has had years of experience in applying them to the pupils in her charge. She not only prepares students for public appearance, but also to become teachers. A representative of Godowsky has been recently added to the faculty in the person of Maurice Lichtman, who was Godowsky's assistant in Vienna and very favorably introduced himself to an appreciative audience at one of the last recitals of the von Ende School."

Helene Koelling "A Mozart Singer Par Excellence."

Salzburg is the home of Mozart. Here one finds the true lover of all that is best both in music and interpretation. It is the Mecca of all Mozart singers, but none need expect recognition except the truly great.

HELENE KOELLING.

Among the many who have appeared there is Mme. Koelling. She came unheralded and unknown, therefore the warm and spontaneous approval with which she was received is all the more notable. The following excerpts from the press of Salzburg indicate the standing of Mme. Koelling as a Mozart singer in Mozart's own town, often called the cradle of bel canto. Mme. Koelling ma[illegible] proud of her accomplishment as a true interpr[illegible] best there is in music that appeals to those who l[illegible] volume less but beauty more,

From the Salzburger Volksblatt the following is quoted:

Mme. Koelling is a most charming and exceedingly talented artist of rare ability. Grace and charm are not only revealed in her personality, but also in her singing. Her perfect technic and the beautiful quality of her voice aroused great admiration. In her singing of Mozart her great ability was clearly shown.

The Salzburger Tagblatt had this to say:

Mme. Koelling is a most interesting and talented artist—a Mozart singer "par excellence." She has the true classic style which fits her absolutely for the Mozart roles. Mme. Koelling's technic is phenomenal. She combines absolute purity of tone with the greatest facility in even the highest registers. (Advertisement.)

Borwick in Sydney.

Leonard Borwick continues to score striking successes in Australasia. One of the latest of his notices to arrive here is that from the Sydney Sun, of June 2, and it reads as follows:

There was nothing wrong with the audience that greeted Leonard Borwick last night at the Concordia Hall except that it was too hig for the premises.

Leonard Borwick is a pianist in whose proof armor of art it would be difficult for the most captious critic to pick a hole. There is much poetic fervor in the man, and he has such a fine sense of proportion that it is impossible to sit unmoved while he is giving speech to his instrument. He is anything but a showy player. He does not rattle the ivories with a heavy left, nor does he deliver ponderous blows with his right. He just sits down and plays with a perfect technic—a technic that is always a means to an end. From the beginning he becomes wrapt in the musical message he is delivering, his phrasing and rhythmical and expressive accentuation are faultless, and throughout there is the fine flavor of a high musical mentality.

He opened his evening's work with the Bach organ prelude in E flat arranged for the piano by himself. It was entirely grateful from a pianistic point of view. The rendition was a marvel of technic, and expressive in daintiness of phrasing and accentuation. In the Schumann group there were some delightful readings. The massive chords in the opening of the novelette in F were delivered with masterly incisiveness, while the vigorous accents in the coda came to the ear with the most compelling effect. The beautiful "Herberge," from the "Forest Scenes," was exquisitely restful and poetic, and very sweetly the birds sang their mystic song in "Vogel als Prophet." The square cut "Study in Canon Form" had all the romance of the days of silks and satins, swords and plumed hats, while the toccata in C major was played with the niceness of tonal balance. Schubert's impromptu, A flat, one of the daintiest renditions of the evening, opened the final section of the program. Scriahin's prelude and nocturne, for left hand alone, demonstrated that should the artist have the misfortune to lose one of his hands he would still be a pianist of remarkable attainments. The nocturne, with its sustained thrill before the codetta, was so well liked that the artist, usually so reserved in the matter of granting encores, was obliged to repeat it. Liszt's "Soirée de Vienne," based on some of Schubert's waltz melodies, brought the program to a close.

Mr. Davison Vacationing.

From B. M. Davison, of the White-Smith music publishing firm, comes a Hyamnis, Mass., post card showing a cool view of the Cape Cod Canal, and announcing: "The Pageant of Cape Cod," to take place on the banks of the new waterway, August 15, 17, 18, 19.

Old Woman (buying a parrot)—S'pose you 'aven't got one with any Caruso records, 'ave you?—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

AMERICAN TOUR—NOVEMBER—MAY 1914—1915

WILLY BURMESTER
THE GREAT GERMAN VIOLINIST

Mr. Burmester will make his First Orchestral Appearance next season, November 6th, with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, playing the Paganini Concerto No. 1.

Other Orchestral Engagements are with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

STEINWAY PIANO USED

For dates and terms apply to CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN. 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau. 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street, New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-1915
Management: ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA
Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus
"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone, Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st. St., NEW YORK
Resume Teaching October 1st.

Flonzaley and Schoenberg.

A good sized book of anecdotes might be written about the Flonzaley Quartet's experiences with the Schoenberg quartet, which proved such an interesting feature of the organization's repertoire of last season. The Flonzaley members tell how difficult it was for them to practice the work in peace, and as its technical difficulties were well nigh appalling, much practice was necessarily required. In Chicago, for instance, at a hotel whose guests had never before raised the slightest objection to the quartet's rehearsal—looking upon it, indeed, as a decided treat—there was such a pounding on walls and dropping of shoes on the floor above when the Schoenberg work was tackled that for the time being the composition was abandoned. And this same experience was encountered in other cities where the Flonzaleys attempted to practice.

Nor were the members wholly free to practise without interruption in Lausanne, where they have a summer house built out in the woods solely for the privacy afforded there. For they had not counted on the comments that would be made by their three dogs, the only "persons" admitted to these important sessions. These dogs had been trained to listen to the quartet's ordinary rehearsing without a whine, but the moment that Schoenberg was attempted the four footed critics set up such a howling that they had to be ejected from the room.

Later, when the Flonzaleys were playing at Mannheim, the management actually begged the musicians not to give the Schoenberg piece, declaring that if the work were retained on the program the management would not be responsible for the consequences. This fear was occasioned by the fact that the works of Schoenberg had frequently been greeted with catcalls and interruptions when offered at various German cities. The Flonzaleys got around the difficulty by playing the work as an extra at the end.

Angelo Cortese a Brilliant Harpist.

Angelo Cortese, who is now known to his adopted country as one of America's greatest harpists, was born in the little hill town of Marsicovetere, near Naples, Italy. Perhaps by reason of this environment of his native country he comes naturally by that elusive something, "temperament."

ANGELO CORTESE.

Some one once said, technic without temperament is commonplace; temperament with technic is rare. Angelo Cortese possesses both temperament and technic.

He was reared in an atmosphere of music, his father, brothers and entire family being notable musicians. He was a student under the great master harpist, Alfonso Hasselmans, of the Paris Conservatory, who proclaimed Mr. Cortese "a truly great artist." The critics, press and public agree with this. There seems to be no intricate, technical flight that he cannot essay with ease. The exquisite beauty and delicate finish of his musicianship, added to masterly vigor, make Angelo Cortese a performer of unusual charm and distinction.

To the skill of the musician has been added the sympathy of the man, and Mr. Cortese plays with the artistry of one who loves his instrument, which responds with perfect sympathy and understanding.

Mr. Cortese has had wide experience as a soloist, both here and abroad. His repertoire is very extensive, and his unique and varied programs always satisfy the public.

SOUSA AND HIS BAND
"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"
Office: 1 West 34th Street
Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH
CONCERT VIOLINIST
Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue. New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS
Hans Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory and is assisted by an able corps of teachers. Bendetson Netzorg has also been added to the Conservatory faculty. For catalog address
MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO
Concert-Recital-Oratorio
Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN
America's Violinist
Season 1914-1915 Now Booking
Address:
THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York
Phone Murray Hill, 2239

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER
Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 2058

MARY DENNISON GAILEY
VIOLINIST
Address, Russell Bridges, Empire Life Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Yolanda MERÖ Hungarian Pianist
STEINWAY PIANO USED
Under the exclusive management of CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, New York City

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.
Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist
SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City
Baldwin Piano Used

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano
SARA HEINEMAN
Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume
In Europe During Summer
Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Baroness Evans
Von KLENNER
America's Representative of the
GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD
Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.
Tradition. Languages. Repertoire. Diction. Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY
of NEW YORK
1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915
JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor

SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.

TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South

Prospectus on application to
FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

BAERNSTEIN-REGNEAS' FALL SEASON.

On account of the European war, which not only may keep Americans from going abroad to study for at least twelve months, but necessitates the return of American students to their native soil, as well as obliging those foreigners, who are in the midst of their preparations for professional careers to seek instruction and coaching in this country, the coming season of this prominent vocal instructor will break even the records he has established. From the Regneas studios each year go forth numerous singers into the fields of concert, oratorio, opera and church work, in addition to many who establish themselves in their home towns, as instructors, or who accept positions in colleges and other institutions of learning as voice teachers. The field of activities of these various singers is not confined to this country alone, inasmuch as in different opera houses in Europe there are artists engaged who have equipped themselves under this master.

It will be no simple problem for Baernstein-Regneas to take care of the vast number of new pupils who are now applying for time during the coming season in addition to his large class who reserved their time at the close of last season. Under these pressing conditions Mr. Regneas will be obliged to allot time to new students in the order of their application, and that work is now going on at his studio, 133 West Eightieth street, one of the most spacious in New York City.

Although in this and various other magazines there have been published from time to time many interesting incidents in the career of this well known instructor and artist there seems to be ever a new "by-path" which has been little traversed.

This week the MUSICAL COURIER reproduces Baernstein-Regneas' photograph as Hans Sachs in Wagner's "Meistersinger von Nürnberg." This role of roles found its first English rendition by Baernstein-Regneas, who was also the first American singer to portray this role on any stage. It is interesting to hear how this artist acquired, in nineteen days, the words and music of this lengthy part. Not yet having been abroad, he surrounded himself with photos of the quaint and ancient city of Nürnberg, of Hans Sachs himself, of his verses (which he invariably wrote on the soles of shoes, when returning them to their owners after repairs had been made, for Hans Sachs was by trade a shoemaker as well as an eminent mediæval poet), exhaustive reading of literature appertaining to this time; all these methods did the ambitious and conscientious artist use to fill himself with the atmosphere of the role and thus equip himself for the first English New York performances of this great work.

JOSEPH BAERNSTEIN-REGNEAS AS HANS SACHS.

The other members of the cast were artists now prominent in the musical world.

Mephisto in Gounod's "Faust" was Baernstein-Regneas' first operatic role, Hans Sachs was the second. There then followed in quick succession some forty-odd operas, the acquiring and sing of which developed young Regneas into the excellent instructor he has become, and enables him to equip singers for the difficult and serious profession of the "opera singer." The one thing above all others to which Baernstein-Regneas attributes his success as a singer of opera is the fact that before he attempted it he acquired a correct and sure vocal technic, which he put into practical use in his church and concert work, covering a period of more than seven years.

During this term of concert singing, there was hardly a singing club, oratorio society or orchestra of note with which Baernstein-Regneas did not appear. He was looked upon as one of America's foremost soloists, and his services were sought for the most important musical festivals throughout the country. He acquired all the standard oratorios, and no one is better equipped than he with all the best traditions of these works.

It was as a singer of songs that Baernstein-Regneas visited almost every city in the Union, and his programs were models which aroused the admiration and approval of public and critics, so that the return of this artist each season was marked with ever increasing enthusiasm. Thus the ties between himself and the conductor or manager became even more firm, and in many instances developed into a deep personal friendship. With this vast experience (as it is only through the actual doing that one acquires mastery of his art), conscientiousness in the extreme, an unusual capacity for concentration and application, patience, courage, independence and a deep understanding of and sympathy with the difficulties with which all students must contend, Joseph Baernstein-Regneas is one of the most prominent figures in the vocal world.

Frieda Hempel's London Success.

George Cecil, musical critic of the Morning Advertiser, London, England, sent the following laudatory press notice to Annie Friedberg, of New York, saying that he believed it might be of interest to show the world how wonderful Frieda Hempel's success was at Drury Lane, June 8, 1914, in "The Magic Flute."

The review in the Morning Advertiser was as follows:

Saturday night's special performance of "The Magic Flute" had a peculiar interest for those who flocked to Drury Lane. At the first representation it was found that the stupendously exacting air occurring in the second act, and the almost equally difficult one preceding it, did not receive full justice from the "coloratura" soprano of the occasion, while the singer who succeeded her a few evenings later failed lamentably in the "staccato" passages leading to the upper F natural. Sir Joseph Beecham, however, is an impressario who does not know the meaning of the word "defeat." So, searching the musical world for an artist who could be depended upon to do credit to his selection, he engaged Frieda Hempel, whose almost unequalled execution of runs, trills, turns, and so forth, has made her name a household one in circles where the art of singing is understood. Fortunately, Fraulein Hempel even more than came up to expectation, everyone who was present admitting that a finer rendering of the music would have been well nigh impossible, the flexibility of the singer's warm, even voice, and the extreme neatness and accuracy of her work being a revelation to those who were unacquainted with these attainments.

The Observer, by the way, laments the sorrowful fact that Fraulein Hempel has not been heard more frequently in London, referring to a former visit when she "played Eva in the 'Meistersinger.'" It may interest our contemporary . . . to learn that during the memorable season in question, besides singing Eva, she appeared in "Hansel und Gretel" and "Die Lustige Weiber von Windsor."

Three Songs Dedicated to Marie Morrisey.

Three songs by Sanford Ashley Pette have been dedicated to Marie Morrisey, and will be used by the contralto on her recital programs this coming season. Mme. Morrisey is having a busy summer, dividing her time between week end outings, motor trips and sundry engagements at points on the New Jersey coast. Her next engagement is with the Allenhurst Club on August 9. The contralto's Aeolian Hall recital is scheduled for Monday evening, November 9.

Katherine Noack Fique Rock Cod Fishing.

On the reverse side of the card upon which is printed the accompanying picture, this message is inscribed:

KATHERINE NOACK FIQUE'S SUCCESSFUL "CATCH."

"Greetings to the MUSICAL COURIER from Carl and Katherine Noack Fiqué, Astican, Mount Desert Island, Me. Katherine Noack Fiqué 'rock cod' fishing. August, 1914. Photo by Carl Fiqué."

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

Madame Helene Koelling

COLORATURA SOPRANO
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management, Antonia Sawyer: 1425 Broadway, N. Y. City

RUDOLF BERGER
FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

EDYTH WALKER

(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)

Dramatic Soprano

Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.

Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

The Sensation of the Year

CARL

FLESCH

The Great Hungarian Violinist

Second American Tour
January and February, 1915

Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE

SOPRANO

Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.

"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914

American Tour, March-May, 1915

OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English

Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

EFREM

ZIMBALIST

Celebrated Violinist

— Will return to —
AMERICA
Season 1914-1915

For Terms and Dates available
Apply
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th St., New York

STEINWAY PIANO

Stuart-Strine Maine Tour.

Robert Patterson Strine, the Philadelphia impresario, accompanied by Mrs. Strine, his son Robert, Jr., and John Thompson, the young American pianist, is starting for a short Maine tour by motor. Mr. Thompson, who is an enthusiastic motorist as well as a brilliant pianist, will take his turn at the wheel. Upon their arrival in Maine they will be joined by Marion Stuart, the coloratura soprano, who with Mr. Thompson will give their first concert at the Kennebunk River Club, Kennebunkport, Me., under the auspices of the club, among the members of which are Booth Tarkington, the famous author; Abbott Graves, the American artist, and other prominent Americans who make up the summer colony there. The tour further includes appearances at Wiscassett, Rockland, Camden, Portsmouth, N. H.; York Harbor, Bar Harbor and other points in Maine. The appearance of these artists at Bar Harbor is by special arrangements with leading members of the summer colony at this fashionable resort, and will be in conjunction with the symphony concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra players at the Building of Arts, a most beautiful structure strictly devoted to music and patronized by the members of Bar Harbor's exclusive set.

Mr. Thompson's achievements as a pianist are still fresh in the minds of the concert goers, including his sensational appearance at Aeolian Hall, New York, at which time he earned the unqualified endorsement of the leading New York critics, and also later appearances in London, where he was acclaimed one of the sensations of the season and classed as one of the leading pianists of the day. Marion Stuart, a native of Maine, and well known in that State by reason of her family and social connections, is making her American debut after appearances in drawing rooms of London and Paris. Her studies were pursued under the direction of Sbriglia, of Paris, and Mme. Ashforth, of New York.

Artha Williston a Sympathetic Singer.

That Artha Williston is successful in winning appreciation by the beauty of her voice, her excellent singing, and her sympathetic personality is shown by the following press comments:

MRS. ARTHA WILLISTON.

Mrs. Williston has a lovely, clear, rich, sympathetic voice.—Holyoke Evening Telegram.

Mrs. Williston's beautiful voice gave pleasure to all.—Springfield Union.

Mrs. Williston delighted the audience with one of the sweetest renditions of "Elsa's Dream," by Wagner, that has ever been heard in this city.—Springfield News.

Mrs. Williston gave a noble interpretation of her songs.—The Boston Transcript.

People of Elmwood had the pleasure of hearing Mme. Artha Williston's singing. Her exquisite voice was a delight to the large audience. The full glory of her voice was shown in her first selection, "Elsa's Dream."—Springfield Republican. (Advertisement.)

David Robinson Returns from Honeymoon.

David Robinson, the well known violin virtuoso, and Sadie Goldstein, pianist, who were married on June 28, have just returned to New York from their honeymoon trip.

Why are the songs of Liszt so seldom heard in our concert halls? Because they are not only difficult to interpret, but also to play.—New York Evening Post.

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist

SPALDING

Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST

Steinway Piano

THOMAS J. KELLY

Conductor Mendelssohn Choir.
VOCAL COACH
Lecture Recitals with Mrs. Kelly
209 SOUTH 35th AVE., OMAHA, NEBRASK

Mme.
DE VERE-SAPIO

Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO
SAPIO

Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.

VOCAL STUDIO - 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N.

Ellen Keller

VIOLINIST

In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKI

Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York C

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC

128-130 East 58th Street

CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCK

The college has for its object the universal higher education in branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.

CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR

SHATTUCK

The Distinguished American

PIANIST

In America Season 1914-15

Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

Steinway Piano Used

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG
Summer Course for Teachers, Amateurs and Professionals by these famous artists. TORONTO, CANADA.

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapolis, Minn.

The MEHAN Summer School for Teachers and Singers
July 7—Aug. 15. Appointments By Mail
Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 15
SUITE 70, CARNEGIE HALL. TEL. 5946 COLUMBUS

The Eminent Austrian Pianist
MME. MARIE VON UNSCHULD
Piano Recitals and Lectures on Technic by Motion Pictures
EUROPEAN CONCERT BUREAU, 1320 F St., Washington, D. C.

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
CELEBRATED IRISH TENOR
In America Entire Season 1914-15
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Personal Management: CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

BUSY TIMES FOR SOUSA.

A New Opera, "The Irish Dragoon"—Other New Works—Several Important Additions to His Band—Sousa's Great Capacity for Work.

"One of the greatest blessings that can be vouchsafed to a human being is a capacity for work," says John Philip Sousa.

And Sousa himself demonstrated the fact that he possessed that capacity in convincing form on many occasions while on his tour of the world with his band. The force of the demonstrations is clearly manifest when one stops to consider that during the world tour, involving fourteen months of steady playing, two concerts daily, Sousa missed only one day's concert—that at Ballarat, Australia, where he was seized with a chill of such aggravated character that his physician enforced complete relaxation and rest for the day. In spite of two concerts daily and their unremitting exactions, Sousa during that tour proved his unlimited capacity for work by composing his now famous suite, "Tales of a Traveler," three parts, fully orchestrated; making several arrangements of band numbers, etc., in addition to accepting innumerable invitations to social events, official and civil.

This summer Mr. Sousa has been unusually busy at his new home on Manhasset Bay. He has nearly completed, in conjunction with Joseph Herbert, a new opera, the title of which is "The Irish Dragoon"; a new suite, "Impressions at the Movies," in which he musically describes certain moving picture scenes. He has written a new march, "The Lambs," which is dedicated to his fellow members of the Lambs Club, and has also arranged a number of pieces for his band. He has imported all the latest and best things by the standard European writers. His audiences at Willow Grove during the Sousa engagement of twenty-two days there, and the two weeks at the Pittsburgh Exposition, as well as the succeeding Sousa tour westward and return to the East, will have opportunity to hear many novelties.

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA.

The personnel of the band is enhanced by the addition of Adolph Bertram, late solo oboeist of the Metropolitan Opera, New York; Maurice van Praag, late first horn of the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra; Richard McCann, a popular New York cornet soloist, and Frank Simon, of Cincinnati, a leading cornet soloist of the West. These are the newcomers in the band, the old and noted stars remaining, among whom are Herbert L. Clarke, the cornet virtuoso; Joseph Norrito, the clarinetist; J. J. Perfetto, Ralph Corey, Louis Fritze, Arthur Storch, Oscar Modess, and other artists composing the famous organization.

This season will be an unusually busy one for Sousa's Band, for outside of the usual engagements at Willow Grove, Pittsburgh Exposition, etc., a tour to the Western coast is assured, which includes a protracted engagement at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco and return eastward by way of the Canadian Northwestern regions. The year will mark the longest tour Sousa's Band has made since 1912—on the return from the great world's tour.

The Worse?

Hocus—It must be a terrible thing for an opera singer to realize he is losing his voice.

Pocus—It's more terrible when he doesn't realize it.—Judge.

STEINWAY

Steinway Skill Experience and Ability Alone Can Produce a Piano of Steinway Merit

TO attain the world-popularity of the Steinway was possible only by superior merit. This merit consists in the unsurpassed qualities of tone and workmanship. These are the distinctive features in the Steinway of to-day. The first Steinway Piano was the result of an art ideal. Through four generations this ideal has been upheld and maintained, to the end that proficiency has become a tradition in the Steinway factories and that the Steinways are recognized everywhere as past masters in their craft.

Purchase a Steinway and you possess the world's greatest piano—perfect in tone and workmanship.

Write for illustrated literature about the Steinway Piano and name of the Steinway dealer nearest you.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

JENNY DUFAU IN ALSATIAN COSTUME. TAKEN RECENTLY AT SAULURES.
x Custom House and Route de France Frontier.

Jenny Dufau Cables.

Jenny Dufau, soprano of the Chicago and Boston Grand Opera Companies, has cabled to Dr. P. Stoppani, professor at the University of Chicago, as follows:

All safe. House full soldiers. Everything spoiled. Moritz killed while crossing. Secured passage Swedish, Italian, Dutch lines.

The accompanying picture shows Miss Dufau in her Alsatian costume. The little village of Saulures, where Miss Dufau's father is one of the most prominent inhabitants, is seen in the distance with the factory of Mr. Dufau in the foreground. The cross shows the custom house and the dot the frontier, where in trying to cross to France, young Moritz and several of his friends were killed. In order not to cancel any of her contracts, Miss Dufau has secured passage on three lines, and she will be one of the earliest singers to return to America.

Mme. Von Klenner at Chautauqua.

Many readers of the MUSICAL COURIER who have spent their summer days at Point Chautauqua, and perhaps especially those who have studied there in the summer school of Katherine Evans von Klenner, will be interested to know of the continued success of this gifted teacher of the Garcia method. Mme. von Klenner had almost determined not to do any teaching this year, but she found upon her arrival at Point Chautauqua, July 1, a large class awaiting her, and she could not refuse them.

Among her pupils are: Edna Bauber Brewer, contralto, Rochester, N. Y.; Carmina Jackson, soprano, St. Louis; Rodger Wakefield, tenor, Missouri; Sherman Kimball, tenor, Jamestown; Elizabeth Brown, Kansas City; Mary Grace Downing, soprano, Texas; Minnie Brown, soprano, Greenville, Pa.; Agnes Kearns, soprano, Dubois, Pa.; Lee H. Barnes, tenor, Oil City, Pa.; Philip Kearns, tenor, Dubois, Pa.; Cherubina Christopher, contralto, Greenville, Pa.; Olivia Thomas, soprano, Pennsylvania; Eliza A. Fassett, soprano, Franklin, Pa.; James G. Kerwood, basso, North Carolina; William J. Downes, tenor, New York; Frances K. Black, contralto, Canada; Regna Ahlstrom, soprano, Jamestown; Elizabeth Kefer, soprano, New York; Josephine R. Smith, contralto, Mississippi; David A. Thomas, tenor, Syracuse, and Karl A. Brewer, bass, Rochester, N. Y.

Each Tuesday afternoon a recital has been given in the new Studio Hall. The season will close on August 20 and soon after that Mme. von Klenner, who has been forced to give up her proposed European trip, will probably take a rest at one of the Atlantic coast resorts.

An article in the Jamestown Evening Journal, of August 3, states that a concert was given on Saturday evening, August 1, at the studio of Mme. von Klenner, at Point Chautauqua, and that this concert was in every way a wonderful success. This paper continued: "Everything combines to make Point Chautauqua an ideal locality for the student of music. The Von Klenner studios are magnificently situated on a high elevation, overlooking the entire northern half of the lake, a scene of peace and pastoral beauty seldom surpassed on this continent."

The concert was followed by a minstrel show which was also greatly enjoyed.

SAN ANTONIO NOTES.

San Antonio, August 14, 1914.

The Tuesday Musical Club will present next season, among others, Ferruccio Busoni, pianist, and Louise Homer, contralto. Besides these attractions the club will give the annual organ recital and an "Old Folks' Concert." The officers elected for the year were: Mrs. Eli Hertzberg, life president; Mrs. W. M. Wolf, vice-president; Marguerite Guinn, treasurer; Zulime Herff, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Stanley Winters, recording secretary.

The San Antonio Musical Club will present next season Fritz Kreisler, violinist, and Yvonne de Treville, soprano.

Oscar J. Fox, organist and teacher, will present in recital Oscar Seagle, baritone, and Florence Hinkle, soprano.

H. W. B. Barnes, organist of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, is beginning rehearsals for "The Messiah," to be given some time near Christmas.

Arthur Claassen has come to San Antonio. He has charge of the Beethoven Männerchor and other German singing societies.

In May, 1916, the State Saengerfest will be held here. C. H. Mueller is president. Mr. Mueller is prominently identified with the German singing societies, having a fine baritone voice.

MRS. STANLEY WINTERS.

Caroline Hudson-Alexander Praised.

The appended press criticisms were published following the successful appearance in Schenectady, N. Y., on February 26 last, of Caroline Hudson-Alexander, who sang Verdi's "Requiem" before an enthusiastic audience:

